Plea deal: Mom guilty of baby's murder

Baby's grandfather recalls events that led to murder charge

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

BURLINGTON — Jack Geisler always wanted what was best for Karen Bailey.

When she wanted to meet “a nice guy,” he introduced her to his son. When she was pregnant with his grandson, Geisler and his family welcomed her into their fold.

And when she wanted to dispose of her newborn baby boy's body, Geisler convinced her to trust him.

Even now, as Bailey, 23, of LeRoy, is facing more than 13 years in prison for the baby's murder, Geisler wants what's best for the young woman.

Bailey

“I hope the system gives her the help she needs,” Geisler said.

Bailey pleaded no contest Friday to second degree murder and aggravated child endangerment as part of a plea agreement reached by prosecutors and her defense attorney, Forrest Lowry of Ottawa. As part of the agreement, prosecutors and Lowry will ask the judge to impose the maximum sentence — a total of 161 months in prison, or just more than 13 years. She's expected to be sentenced to 157 months for the murder charge, and four months for child endangerment. Prosecutors and Lowry will ask that the sentences run consecutively, which means they will be served after each other, for a total 161 months. Sentencing is scheduled for July 5.

“This case represents human tragedy in every respect,” Coffey County Attorney Doug Witteman said. “Under the facts presented, both I and Assistant Attorney General Lee Davidson believe the pleas ... represent an accurate application of the law to the specific facts. This, coupled with an agreement to request the court impose the maximum penalty under the law, moves this case one more step toward closure for the extended members of the infant victim's families.”

Bailey was accused of letting her newborn baby die hours after giving birth. According to court records and previous news reports, she gave birth to the baby April 2, kept him in a box in her car and checked on him until he died several hours later. She initially told several conflicting stories about what happened to the baby, saying it was stillborn, but an autopsy report showed the baby was born alive.

Geisler, who is still haunted by his role in the grisly tragedy, was the first person to suspect something awful had happened to his newborn grandson.

He met Bailey because she

The Fox Hunter

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 06-05-2012 / Dane Hicks

Anderson County Attorney Fred Campbell trapped this baby fox, one of three he captured on three consecutive nights after the critters began eating his geese. Campbell thinks at least one adult remains, but he is skeptical that it will be caught.

Baby foxes trapped in Goose v. Fox case

County attorney takes on foxes after they attack his geese; catches 3 babies

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Anderson County Attorney Fred Campbell can add something new to his resume — Fox Hunter.

Campbell, who lives within the city limits of Garnett on Park Road, recently trapped three baby foxes in three consecutive nights after he discovered animals had been eating his geese. He obtained traps from the City of Garnett and was able to capture three live baby foxes, but at least one adult fox remains on the loose.

The problem began after Campbell decided to raise 10 baby geese. He had geese several years ago and enjoyed them, but the geese died off about a couple years ago. There were several factors that may have contributed to the loss of his original geese, such as pond erosion and the city spraying chemicals on his land, but it's also possible that the remaining geese were eaten by foxes or coyotes.

Local election picture emerges

Longtime commissioner bows out; 4 file for his Dist. 2 seat, 3 for Dist. 1

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Four people are vying for the chance to take over Dudley Feuerborn's 2nd District County Commission seat, after the longtime commissioner decided not to seek reelection in the upcoming November elections.

The 2012 race includes a former county commissioner, the son of a longtime commissioner and two political newcomers who have been active on City of Garnett committees.

The local election picture became clear at noon Friday when the filing deadline for local races passed. Numerous county commission candidates will require primary elections in August for two county commission seats. The top vote-getter in those primaries will advance to a general election contest. In the general election in November, there will be four contested local races — the two county commission seats and races for sheriff and county attorney. Three local races are

City bans coach after fight at ball complex

Rec director declines to press charges after shoving incident

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A girls 14 & Under softball coach was ejected from a Garnett Recreation Department game last week for unruly behavior and will be prohibited from attending city recreation events for at least the next year.

It was an unusual incident but a reminder about approprate behavior at sporting and other public events, Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin said.

Last week's incident involved a coach who approached an umpire with a dispute during a game Wednesday evening, May 30. The coach's behavior included profanity-laced yelling that disrupted the game and upset spectators, Martin said. The coach's son also stepped into the dispute, and there was a physical altercation when the

DMV customers patient with system issues

Problems continue but county treasurer says wait time remains low

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Continued problems with the state's new motor vehicle registration system has translated to longer waits for customers at the Anderson County Treasurer's Office, but most people seem to be taking it in stride, County Treasurer Dena McDaniel said.

The Kansas Department of Revenue launched a new statewide system for titling and registering vehicles the first week of May. The system replaces a 1980s-era model and was long overdue, McDaniel said. It replaced three aging mainframe systems used for driver licensing, motor vehicle titling and registration, and inventory management. It was launched in two phases with the first phase affecting vehicles and the second for driver licensing and other state-issued identification cards and permits. The second phase will be later this year.

But even as the system launched, McDaniel knew there would be problems. In addition to a “huge learning curve” for

Groups work to bring memorial to courthouse lawn

VFW, American Legion take over plans to build vets memorial

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Garnett American Legion and VFW officials hope they can get the ball rolling on a plan to build a veterans memorial on the lawn of the Anderson County Courthouse.

VFW Commander Steve Newland calls the memorial “a well-kept secret.” Plans for the memorial have been in the works for a couple of years, and commissioners added a line item in the budget to allow for it. The idea of a memorial grew out of construction on the county jail, when its architect said he could design a memorial for the courthouse lawn. But that's about as far as the memorial has gotten.

Now, Newland and Ken Miller of the American Legion say they're going to make the project a priority. Monday, the designer of a veterans memorial in Osawatimie visited the men and commissioners to look at the site. The memorial would be located on the southwest part of the courthouse lawn.

Newland said it's still too early to know what the memo-

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

Roger Herman Crome, the seventh child of John and Cordelia (Filly) Crome, entered this world on August 17, 1921. He was brother to Wilfred, Hermine, Gladys, Melba, John and Bernice. Roger received God's grace through the waters of Holy Baptism on August 28, 1921, as the first person baptized at the current St. John Lutheran Church in Aliceville. He confirmed his faith on April 8, 1934, at St. John, and continued in his faith and membership in the Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod for his entire lifetime.

Following his graduation from Westphalia High School, Roger attended Kansas State University for one semester. This was enough to instill in him a love for all things purple and white, and he was a life-long fan of Wildcat athletics.

On May 29, 1942, Roger enlisted in the United States Marine Corps. He served his country honorably in the Pacific theatre of World War II, fighting in the battles for Guadalcanal, Saipan, Tinian and Tarawa. Although he was discharged in 1946, Roger honored the creed, "Semper Fidelis" throughout his life and often stated, "Once a Marine, always a Marine."

On June 15, 1947, Roger joined Bernita Becker in marriage at St. John. They lived their entire married life in the Aliceville area, with the last 51 years being on their farm on the east side of Aliceville. While maintaining the farm, Roger also worked on the Missouri Pacific railroad, concrete construction with Don Conroy construction of Topeka, and with the Coffey County road and bridge crew.

Until his later years, Roger enjoyed bowling and could be found at the Coffey Bowl on Tuesday nights bowling on the late league. For many years, Roger coached various local men's softball teams and had an enduring love for the game of baseball. He enjoyed following the Kansas City Royals through good times and bad. He also faithfully kept his brackets up-to-date every year during "March Madness".

Roger was "Daddy" to nine children: Alan (Jean), Centennial, CO; Cathi (Phil) Temple, Aliceville; Stan (Mary), Madison; Cindy (Bill) Hill, Waverly; Marcie (Tommy) Vargas, Winfield; Lucy (Curtis) Kettler, Paola; Mari (Richard) Townsend, Burlington; Owen (Kathryn), Aliceville; and Randy (Kathy), Topeka.

Roger joined his savior on May 25, 2012, at the age of 90 years, 9 months and 8 days. He spent his final days at the Life Care Center of Burlington. He was preceded in death by his parents, brothers and sisters, and one granddaughter, Caryn Temple. His memory will be honored with sincere joy by his wife, children, 26 grandchildren, 27 great-grandchildren, numerous nieces and nephews, and countless other family and friends.

Funeral services were Thursday, May 31, 2012, at St. John Lutheran Church in Aliceville. Burial with military honors followed at St. John Cemetery.

Memorial contributions to "LCMS Ministry to the Armed Forces", "Lutheran Hour Ministries" or "St. John Lutheran Church" may be sent in care of Jones Funeral Home, P.O. Box 277, Burlington, KS 66839.

rial would look like or how much it would cost. He said he believes commissioners want to keep the cost between $40,000 to $50,000. So far, the VFW and American Legion have about $7,000 to be used for the memorial.

Commissioners have said they want any memorial to include the names of all Anderson County veterans. That could include not only veterans who lived in the county when they enlisted, but also anyone who was a veteran and lived in the county when they died. It's an ambitious endeavor, and it's very likely that someone will be left off the list and that could cause hurt feelings. It's possible that organizers can come up with some sort of compromise, such as asking family members of veterans to contribute.

"We just want to get the ball rolling," Newland said.

son shoved Recreation Director Brad Yeubanks. Another parent called police, but Yeubanks decided not to file a complaint. No charges were filed.

City officials including Yeubanks, Martin and Zoning Administrator Herb Waring later decided to ban the offenders from all city recreation events for at least one year. After that, they will consider allowing the coach and son to attend events.

Most ball games and other recreational events go smoothly with no major problems, Martin said. She and Waring recalled the last time police had to be called to a game likely was more than 30 years ago.

"It was a very unfortunate situation," Martin said. "Brad handled himself very professionally. I had several calls from parents commending him for the way he acted."

Recreation programs like organized youth sports are meant to teach skills - not only the physical skills needed for the sport but also teamwork and interpersonal skills, Martin said. It's important for parents to remember that and try to handle disputes in the proper way, she said. Parents and other spectators should speak to others in a respectful way and avoid profanity, she said.

"There's a right way and a wrong way. If (someone) has problems with things that happen, visit with Brad. If they're not satisfied they can visit with Herb and if it's warranted he will bring it to my attention," Martin said.

Martin said incidents are examined on a case-by-case basis. Not every incident will result in the offenders being banned from events, but that is one option for the city.

The city recreation program does not have a method for screening coaches, and it sometimes is difficult to find people willing to volunteer as coaches. For the team involved in last week's incident, two fathers of players on the team offered to coach for the remainder of the season.

staff, the system had several bugs and work-arounds even as it went live. She and other DMV officials across the state warned customers to expect delays.

Now, about a month into the new system, their concerns about delays proved to be well-founded. The statewide system developed a prolonged shutdown May 21, and Anderson County staff continue to have problems with its printers. Some old records weren't converted, so staff must recreate titles before they can process the paperwork. Some customers had to be sent away with papers verifying registration attempts, rather than registration papers.

While some DMV offices reported wait times of several hours, customers at the Anderson County Treasurer's Office likely will face a maximum wait of about 20 minutes, McDaniel said. Wait times typically increase on the last day of the month, as some people wait until the last minute to renew their tags.

McDaniel said customers have been very patient and understanding.

"They've been great. Our customers are really amazing," McDaniel said. "They may just take a look at our faces and decide we can't take anymore (stress), but I'm sure they all know about the system problems."

McDaniel anticipates the new program will continue to have bugs and problems for about a year until most records have made it through the system.

This time, Campbell started with several varieties of geese in early April and raised them as chicks. When the weather warmed and the geese were old enough, he turned them loose in an enclosure with a chicken house.

It didn't take long before he discovered two geese that had been killed sometime overnight. After that, he kept the geese penned in the chicken house at night and only let them roam during the day. But that didn't stop the foxes. One day, he noticed another missing goose and while hunting for it, he saw a bushy red tail disappear into the bushes. He chased it until he found the dead goose. The fox circled around and came back for his kill, but ran when he saw Campbell.

"It was a really pretty red fox," he said.

The next day, his wife also saw the fox chase a goose during the middle of the day. The goose died from its injuries.

Now that Campbell had a good idea who the enemy was, he planned a counter attack. Even armed with the city's traps, however, Campbell knew it was unlikely he would catch the offender. The traps weren't big enough to hold such a large animal, and foxes are notoriously difficult to trap.

He was surprised, then, that he caught three baby foxes on three consecutive nights. The animals were turned over to the city's animal control officer.

Since then, Campbell hasn't caught any more foxes but he has lost one more goose. He's keeping a close eye on his remaining geese and hopes they will survive. He wants to wait and see how these geese fare before deciding if he'll continue to try to raise geese.

"They're very expensive fox food," he said.

Crowded commission races show people care about leading community

Remember the old days when nobody but the incumbent would run for a seat on the Anderson County Commission? There were lots of years when all one needed to do to update the county rolodex was to change the date.

But this year things are different. This year, for the first time in at least a quarter century, there will be primaries in both general election county commission positions.

In both the third and second district seats, Republicans will be contesting each other in August to determine who faces a lone Democrat in November. Does political party make any difference in Anderson County elections? None.

Party affiliation locally serves only as a delineator, much the same as district boundaries do. Local issues are rarely political in nature until it gets to the point of drawing state senate/representative and congressional district boundaries, and most people would just as soon have it that way, even those who profess slave-like devotion to the precepts of either national political party.

It's just as well, and its signified in the fact that Democrats usually win local county office races even though Anderson County leans heavily Republican if you read the voter registration rolls. So although national media are telling us to expect a "Republican Year" as voters nationwide repudiate a sluggish economy and with it the president who has failed to restart that engine, does that have anything to do with so many Anderson County Republicans filing for office?

Doubtful. If there is a wind of change blowing, it's blowing primarily from Garnett City Hall, where two newly elected commissioners in two years and a host of city subcommittee activities have encouraged a couple of political newcomers to aim for a county seat. Also motivating that cause is the lack of a county tax sale, which city officials have been requesting for several years in order to get some delinquent city properties back on the tax rolls, and the belief that the county's been dragging its feet in that regard. Others in the Republican pool have espoused traditional issues, like cost containment, development and road maintenance.

It's interesting however to note that other than anxiety over a tax sale, there's not a real burning issue driving contestants to the polls. Issues surrounding the Anderson County Jail, opened in 2009, may be apparent but haven't been much in the forefront of public conversation for some time now.

Maybe it's a fluke, but overall it's a good thing. People should be interested in local issues and in participating, whether by voicing their opinions or running for office or simply showing up to the polls to vote. More hats thrown in the ring mean more people think leading our county through its issues is important, and that's a good thing.

EDITORIAL

by Dane Hicks, PUBLISHER

Who wants to re-elect these guys?

They're back home now, the members of the Legislature, and it's going to be an interesting summer listening to lawmakers as they describe what they did this year and try to convince us to re-elect them to another term.

The big issue, of course, is that gigantic income tax cut that was passed and signed into law dropping tax rates for all Kansans—and eliminating most income taxes for many small businesses in the state.

Nobody doesn't want a tax cut, but it will be interesting to see whether there is any mention of the effect of that cut on state revenues...which is basically the money that the state spends on things like schools, roads, salaries, welfare and Medicaid for the poor, maintenance of parks and such—and even restaurant and grocery store inspections.

Yes, look for state government to shrink, and the tax money the state spends on the things it does for us that we really don't think about much to shrink, too. Not sure that there's going to be much talk about that, because tax cuts are the sweet spot for campaigning for re-election.

And, yes, the tax cuts sound good. But the concept that walks hand-in-hand with those tax cuts is that lower taxes on businesses means that businesses will prosper and hire more workers so there will be even more revenue for the state—from income and sales taxes—to spend on those things we expect the state to provide for us.

That'll be the interesting part of the conversation because businesses aren't social service agencies; they exist to make a profit for their owners.

If you owned a small business and saw your tax bill drop substantially, would you hire another worker? And not just that son-in-law you'd have to hire anyway to keep the family happy?

That hiring is the key to making the tax cut work, and so far, we haven't seen many hands rise when we ask that question.

Because, practically, no business should ever hire an employee who can't make the business more money. Businesses that intend to hire more workers just because they pay less taxes are, well, not quite businesses, are they?

Now, this tax cut could work if businesses find more customers with more money to spend (because their customers' taxes are lower) and need more employees to meet that consumer demand and yield more profits for the business owner.

It's that part of the equation that isn't proven yet. If it works, this business tax cut turns out to be an excellent idea, and whoever thought it up probably can walk on water.

But, if those business owners decide, say, to take a cruise or trade up to a Buick, rather than hire more workers...then it doesn't work.

That's the part of the equation that we're interested in seeing how candidates for the Legislature deal with. Because if those tax cuts cause state revenues to shrink to a level where lawmakers can't provide us that aid to schools, or money for smooth highways, or meat inspection, well, about mid-term, we're not going to be happy, are we?

It may be an interesting campaign... watching candidates figure out how to convince us that the second part of that tax cut will work out in a way we'll like.

As commander of Garnett's Veterans of Foreign Wars Post I wish to give a big thank you to the City of Garnett and the city workers for the way the cemetery looked on Memorial Day. The Avenue of Flags was magnificent. Arlington could not have looked any better. We did not have to take a backseat to anyone. Of course there was the usual uproar over the Confederate Flag. Please folks, a soldier of the Confederate States of America is lying at rest in our cemetery as well as veterans of the War of Independence, ergo the 1776 flags. Let's put an end to this nit picking nonsense. Again to the City and its workers, well done.

Mrs. (deleted), please take your son and your trailer trash mouth and actions back to Westphalia and leave them there and keep them off the Garnett softball fields. I'm sure your daughter really appreciates your actions in front of the public and her friends and peers like that. You should be ashamed of yourself.

Yes, I'm just calling to say I think the Jerry Springer show at the Garnett softball diamond tonight was in extremely poor taste. If you're going to act that way you have no business coaching girls softball or anything else. Thank you.

What is this I hear about out of town girls running for Kincaid Fair Queen? It is against the rules and they're ineligible.

Leviticus was written for a specific group of Jews who were under captivity. Their concept of God was distorted by the pagan beliefs of the Egyptians. I neither support nor condone gay marriage, but I do believe in the saving grace of Jesus Christ. Have you not read the new testament? It's people like you who give Christianity a bad name.

Just curious when the city's going to take care of the dead cat that's been sitting on Maple between 7th and 8th. It's been there since last Wednesday.

Cawker City has the ball of twine. Mitchell, S.D., has the Corn Palace. Neither one is any place you'd ever want to go except for the novelty. Since Superman is from Smallville, Ks., Garnett should rename itself to Smallville one day a year and have an annual Superman festival. Think of all the publicity and Superman fans out there for generations! Come on city fathers, up, up and away.

Hi, I just wanted to say to the gay hater quoting Leviticus that you're going to have to find a better justification for taking someone's rights away than Leviticus. Leviticus instructs the followers to sacrifice goats for the sins of the people. Not a good time to be a goat I guess. Do we still do that, or do we think that's a little, I don't know, out there? Blasphemy punished by death, but who determines if its blasphemy or just asking a question? Women can be stoned for having sex. You're right, there are people who live by Leviticus. They're called al Qaeda and the Taliban.

Zen and the art of fly fishing

BY DANE HICKS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

Some guys like fishing, and then some guys like fishing trips. And I have to admit the "trip" part of my first-ever fly fishing adventure sounded like the coolest part—at least at the outset.

Why? Well, frankly, I'm not all that "zen" about fishing. I mean, I love to fish - as long as they're biting and I've got a comfortable place to sit and a bag of Skittles and plenty of my favorite beverage and it's not too hot and it's not too cold.

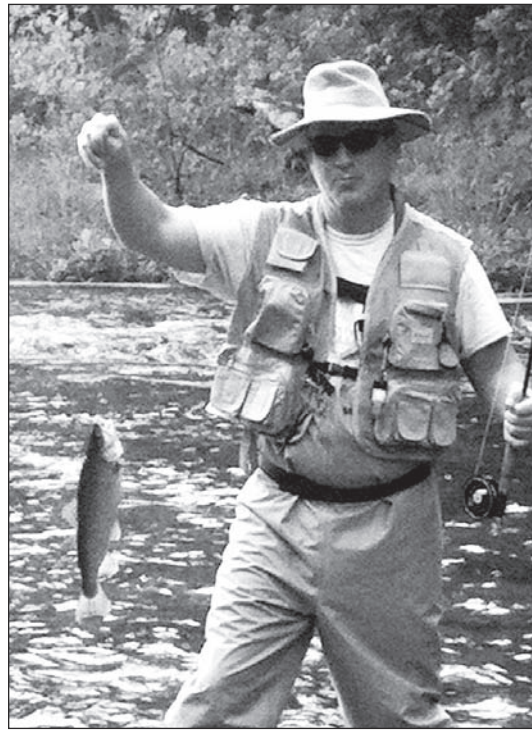

But I've been known to forgo even those luxuries if the company is right - and recently three of my buddies from high school made the perfect recipe for a trout fishing trip down in the Ozarks at Montauk State Park on the Current River. It turned out to be one of the most fun, least productive fishing trips I've ever taken.

I've been spoiled by having a great fishing pond 40 yards off my patio where, if the fish aren't biting, I'm only a few steps away from air conditioning and Laverne & Shirley reruns. In short, fishing hasn't traditionally been much of a challenge for me, and me and fishing were both quite happy with that.

Which is why I was amazed that on my first fly fishing trip I became one of those guys who could literally fish for hours... yes, I mean hours, without catching anything—and not even cuss about it.

Probably there are fly fishermen out there reading this and probably I'll misstate something, so please bear with my novice analysis, but fly fishing isn't like any other kind of fishing.

If I was a little more of a hippie, I'd say it's more like meditation or something. There's the rhythm of feeding out the fly line as you cast; when you do it right you get a precise, crisp loop of fly line that meets its full extension just as the fly hits the water. If your arm gets tired, you're doing it wrong. Concentrate. Don't waste motion. Not like heaving a spinner rig out into the lake to see how close to a log you can get it. It's like the difference between ballet and having some kind of seizure. Think. Concentrate. Feel it.

Now, go get your line unsnagged from that tree limb.

In short, fly fishing draws you in, without struggle or complaint or ruckus; what ordinarily turns to boredom in a few minutes of casting your line without a nibble turns into a focused, cerebral exercise of subtle intensity and concentration. You know how it's supposed to look, and you work your mind and your arm, cast after cast, constantly re-evaluating and analyzing each unraveling sinew of brightly-colored line. It's like doing a crossword puzzle while you knit an afghan and swing at curve balls.

My buddy Robert lives out in Virginia and got bitten by the fly fishing bug 15 years ago. Since then he's spent a fortune on rods and tackle and trips - Smoky Mountains, Montana, Wyoming - some of the best fly fishing in the country - all of it with an addict's pursuit of that sweetest of highs.

"Every now and then," he said, "you have that perfect cast, and the fly lands exactly where you want it and the way you want it. You look through that clear water and you see that fish turn toward your fly, and you just know he's gonna do it. He hits it and you fight him all the way in. And that's what it's all about."

He was right. The only fish I caught in three days came at my fly with a vengeance. He was a brown trout, too small to keep - Montauk is a Blue Ribbon Trout Stream; only artificial bait, single hook with an 18-inch keeper limit - but he fought like a trooper.

If not for him, I think I'd have still had a good time. Robert and I discussed how time just melts away on the river; cast, cast, tie a new fly on a hair's width "tippet" line, move to a new spot, cast some more - and in no time three hours have gone by. The fly fisherman's protocol also dictates that if you can see another fisherman on the river, you're fishing too close to him. So most of the time you're fishing alone in the quiet, knee-to-waist deep in the water, with only the sound of running river and occasional fish or beaver or muskrat. You start to realize whether you're there or not, this is the way it is here. And boy, have you been missing it.

Sure, I've been on trips where I've eaten more fish, but I have a feeling next time will be better.

I'll bring a box of Cheez-its just in case.

BABY...

worked with his wife, Vickie, at a convenience store in Iola. Geisler introduced her to his son, Chris, when he was home from a deployment with the U.S. Army. The fateful romance quickly developed into a pregnancy, but Chris Geisler was deployed through most of the pregnancy. Geisler and his wife became closer to Bailey during that time, and he considered her a friend. Her three young children began to call him "Papa Jack."

Still, there were issues that should have caused concern, he said. Those issues became more clear in hindsight. For example, Bailey always was vague about her residence and her family. He later learned she had a criminal history related to drug use, and even though she still lived with her parents and her children, she did not actually have custody of her children. It was revealed in court that she was afraid of the consequences with her family if she were to get pregnant again, so she hid the pregnancy from her parents. She also was upset that Chris Geisler couldn't leave the Army more quickly.

Geisler and his wife realized there was a problem April 2, when they suspected she was in labor. She was working at the convenience store, and Geisler confronted her. At one point, he used his vehicle to block her car into a parking stall. Bailey became "verbally abusive" and confrontational, so he allowed her to leave.

Geisler sent her a series of text messages. Eventually, she called and told him, "I'm OK. I'm fine," but did not say if the baby had been born. About four hours later, she called and told him she really needed to speak with Chris Geisler, who was deployed. Geisler couldn't reach his son.

The next day, Bailey called Geisler and told him the baby was stillborn at Coffey County Hospital. Geisler pressed her for more information, asking to see the baby's body. She said the hospital hadn't released the body, but eventually agreed to send him a text with a photograph she said had been taken at the hospital.

In the photo, baby Benjamin Edward Riggs-Geisler, looked like a healthy newborn. His cheeks were rosy pink and his mouth was slightly open, though his eyes were closed. Geisler's wife, however, noticed something a little odd. Instead of hospital blankets, the baby was wrapped in Bailey's work jacket. They recognized the logo of the convenience store on the jacket.

Geisler called Coffey County Hospital, asking to see his grandson's body. A staff member said she couldn't give out patient information, but no babies had been born at the hospital in recent days. She suggested he call police.

Instead, Geisler pressed Bailey for more information. Eventually, she told him she gave birth in her vehicle on the side of the road, but insisted the baby was stillborn. She was afraid she would be in trouble, and wanted to dispose of the body.

"I'm not going to let you throw this baby out for the wolves," Geisler said he told her. "I want him to have a proper burial."

Geisler asked her to let him help. He convinced her he would take the body and bury it. She agreed to meet near Colony.

On his way to the meeting, Geisler called 911.

Colony City Marshal Bill Goodell saw Geisler's vehicle and spoke with him before Bailey arrived. Goodell told Geisler he would be waiting about a quarter mile away, out of sight.

When Bailey arrived, Geisler approached her car and asked, "Are you playing a joke on me?"

"If you want the baby, he's in the hatchback," she said.

"Is this a joke?" he asked again, but approached the back of the car.

In the hatchback, he found a blue-green plastic storage box, "a tote box, like you get at Wal-Mart," he described it. Geisler opened the lid and "that god-awful decomposition smell" wafted toward him. The baby was inside. He no longer looked healthy and pink. His eyes were sunken into his head and the skin hung loose.

Geisler took the tote box and Bailey left so quickly "she almost ran me over." Geisler drove to Goodell's vehicle, and gave him the box.

Later, Geisler learned the baby likely was alive more than nine hours. That knowledge has motivated him to take a stand against child abuse.

"Whether you beat a baby or smother it, to me it's just as abusive to let it lay there and suffer until it died. No love. No hugs. Just suffering," he said.

Geisler was an active part of the prosecution's case, testifying for the state during a preliminary hearing. He plans to give a statement during the sentencing, but isn't sure what he'll say. Eventually, he hopes to communicate with Bailey, if she allows it.

He is satisfied with the plea agreement.

"If her stories are true (about being scared to reveal her pregnancy), then it's fair judgment," Geisler said.

"There was justice served for Ben. She'll serve her time and maybe she'll get the help she needs."

uncontested - county clerk, treasurer and register of deeds.

It's not yet known how state election races, on the other hand, will shake out. Because legislators couldn't agree on a redistricting plan to determine new boundaries for senate and house districts and the issue was turned over to the courts to decide, the election filing deadline for those races was pushed to June 11.

A summary of election races includes:

County Commission District 1

Three people have filed for the seat currently held by long-time commissioner Eugene Highberger, a Democrat. He is running to retain his seat. Because there are no other Democratic challengers, he will advance to the general election in November. An August primary will decide who Highberger faces from the Republican party, which has two challengers: David Leitch and Pat Callahan.

Leitch is a retired physician. Callahan said he decided to run for office because of his interactions with neighbor Ray Harden, a former county engineer who Callahan said served as a good example of what someone can accomplish in local politics. Callahan owns four trucks that haul products like ethanol and other fuels, and he also farms with about 90 head of cattle. He said he is most interested in improving the county's roads.

County Commission District 2

Democrat Jerry Howarter will advance to the general election. A primary is needed to decide among three Republican candidates: Ken Miller, Scott Rogers and Bill Craig. All four candidates filed within the last few days of the filing deadline.

Howarter has been close to the 2nd District County Commission seat most of his life. His father represented the district for 24 years until he was succeeded by Feuerborn. Howarter also is Feuerborn's neighbor, and said he decided to run for the seat when he learned Feuerborn would not pursue re-election.

Howarter is a retired teacher who coached, taught wood-working, drafting and driver's ed for 31 years. More recently, he has served on the county's zoning commission, which he said whet his appetite for political service.

Miller moved to Garnett in 2008 and established a detailing business, KDS Auto Detailing, in downtown Garnett with his son and daughter. He grew up in Spring Hill and lived in various states, including service in the U.S. Navy from 1985 to 1998. Since moving to Garnett, Miller has been active in community service groups such as the car club and the city's branding and imaging committee and is the current chairman of the Creative Business Partnership committee. He also is part of the Garnett American Legion.

Rogers has been active in a variety of community organizations, such as the city's tourism board and the hospital's foundation board. He helped the city get the ball rolling on the recent branding and imaging campaign. He attends the First Christian Church. Rogers does maintenance and yard work as well as painting for various businesses, such as Golden Heights, Patriots Bank and the Kirk House, as well as for private residences. He said he decided to run for the commission because he wants to encourage people to work together in a positive way.

Craig represented the 2nd District from 2001 to 2004. He defeated Feuerborn for the post by a narrow margin in 2000, but lost a re-election bid to Feuerborn four years later. He said he decided not to challenge Feuerborn, his first cousin, in the last election because of family issues but is running now that Feuerborn is out of the race. Craig said the four years he served on the commission were four of the best years of his life, and he would bring experience to the position.

Craig retired from GSSB in 1998 after 35 years. He continues to serve on the bank's board and also serves on numerous committees in the local area and region, including the Southeast Kansas Regional Planning Commission Loan Advisory Committee, the Fourth Judicial District Executive Committee for Community Corrections, economic development initiatives for Anderson County and Garnett, and is a former USD 365 school board member.

Sheriff

Sitting sheriff Jeff Hupp is being challenged by Vern Valentine, who until recently was a longtime detective in the sheriff's department. Hupp created controversy last month when he fired Valentine because he filed for sheriff against him.

Hupp has served as sheriff for about a year, filling the unexpired term of Scot Brownrigg, who left the post to pursue other interests. Hupp changed his political affiliation to Democrat in order to be selected sheriff by county Democrats. He agreed at the time to run for re-election as a Democrat and to establish a residence in Garnett; he also has a residence in Richmond and is a retired KBI agent and longtime law enforcement officer.

Valentine worked for the sheriff's department for about 16 years until he was fired by Hupp in April, just a couple weeks after he filed for sheriff. Valentine did not contest the firing because the courts had established a precedent for allowing an elected official to fire someone in his office who was challenging him in the election.

County Attorney

Incumbent Fred Campbell is being challenged by two people. One is Brandon Jones, who lives in Ottawa and serves as Osage County Attorney. He filed for the position in both Osage and Anderson counties and said he plans to split his time between the two counties if elected. Campbell also will appear on the ballot in multiple counties; he was nominated by the Libertarian Party to appear on the ballot in each of the four counties that make up the Fourth Judicial District - Anderson, Osage, Coffey and Franklin. Also running for county attorney is Kathleen Neff, a defense attorney from Osage County who said she is running only in Anderson County.

Because each of the candidates represents a different party, the three likely will advance to the general election.

Uncontested Races

Three county department heads are running unopposed. Barring a successful write-in challenge, it's likely they will retain their seats. They are: Phyllis Gettler, Anderson County Clerk; Dena McDaniel, Anderson County Treasurer; and Sandra Baugher, Anderson County Register of Deeds.

State Election Races

All incumbents in senate and house districts that include Anderson County have filed to retain their seats. That includes Sen. Pat Apple, R-Louisburg, representing Senate District 12, and Sen. Jeff King, R-Independence, who represents Senate District 15. So far, they are running unopposed but the filing deadline has not yet passed. Apple's district represents most of Anderson County, except for the southwest part of the county covered by King's district.

Rep. Bill Feuerborn, D-Garnett, will face a Democratic challenger from Ottawa. Stanley Wiles, a former attorney, has filed to face Feuerborn in the 5th District.

Rep. Bill Otto, R-LeRoy, also will face a challenger in the primary election. Arlyn Briggs of Kincaid has challenged Otto for his 9th District seat.

The primary election has been scheduled for Aug. 7. But because the courts have taken over the redistricting plan, it's possible the court could decide to postpone the primary election.

The general election is scheduled for Nov. 6.

God said 'Whom shall I send?'

In Isaiah 6:1 we read of a vision that Isaiah had of the Lord. Isaiah said "In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord seated on a throne high and exalted, and the train of his robe filled the temple.

Isaiah is in the presence of the Lord and he hears the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send? And who will go for us?" And I (Isaiah) said, "Here am I. Send me." (Isaiah 6:8)

Some people seem to think that the call of God is for a few select people. Nothing could be further from the truth. God's call is for everyone. It is not reasonable to think God would place us on earth to ignore him and to serve ourselves. Unfortunately that seems to be the norm today. We are consumed with ourselves, our successes or failures dominate our life to such an extent they sometimes dictate our behavior.

Oswald Chambers author of the book "My Utmost for His Highest" states, "The call of

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

God is not just for a select few but for everyone. Whether I hear God's call or not depends on my spiritual attitude." If we constantly live our life based on circumstances how could we ever hear the call of God. God does not create he circumstances that affect our life we do that when we leave out of our decision processes.

I wish I could say I am in perfect step with God but I can't. We must never forget the ultimate purpose of any person called by God is to glorify God himself. This is the way the non-believing person is changed. I don't believe today we need more preachers or churches or sermons as badly as we need people living out the Christian life. If someone cannot see there is something different about you or me because we are part of the family of God why would they have any interest in becoming part of our family.

If we go back to Isaiah 6:8, God asks the question, "Who shall I send? And who will go for us?" You notice he didn't say Isaiah you go. He doesn't force his will on anyone. If God had people working grudgingly for him he just as well close up shop because he would not have any converts.

The late Adrian Rogers, pastor and teacher told this story. He had a friend named Al Cross who had been an alcoholic and through a series of events Al Cross found Jesus Christ and he changed his life. Al Cross began to pray for another man and he went to see this man. Dr. Rogers said that after Cross had visited this man he went to see him and the man invited him in. Dr. Rogers told the man directly he was there to talk to the man about receiving Jesus Christ as his Savior. The man said, "If I thought Jesus Christ could do for me what he did for Al Cross I'd accept him in a minute." The man received Jesus and went on to win others to Christ.

What was it that changed this man? It wasn't a sermon, but he saw in the heart and life of Al Cross, a man he knew, the power of God which he could neither explain or ignore.

What we need today is people living transformed lives. Lives that exhibit the love of Jesus Christ. That is what will change people. This takes us back to the opening scripture. God said, "Whom shall I send? Who will go for us? Will you be like Isaiah and say, "Here I am, send me."

Library to discuss book about Afghan women

The Garnett Public Library will hold a book discussion on Wednesday, June 27, 2012 at 7 p.m. "Kabul Beauty School" by Deborah Rodriguez was the title chosen. The discussion will be led by Jane Feuerborn. Soon after the fall of the Taliban, in 2001, Deborah Rodriguez went to Afghanistan as part of a group offering humanitarian aid to this war-torn nation. Surrounded by men and women whose skills - as doctors, nurses, and therapists - seemed eminently more practical than her own, Rodriguez, a hairdresser and mother of two from Michigan, despaired of being of any real use. Yet she soon found she had a gift for befriending Afghans, and once her profession became known she was eagerly sought out by Westerners desperate for a good haircut and by Afghan women, who have a long and proud tradition of running their own beauty salons. Thus an idea was born. Books are available for checkout at the library. The discussions are typically held the fourth Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Archer Room at the library. Notification is posted in case of cancellation.

Museums and memorials

The question of the week. Museums and memorials - are they for the living or the dead?

Memorials come in unlimited forms - names on plaques, brick walkways, walls, buildings, bridges, roadways; checkmarks on helmets; notches on gun handles; flowers on graves and other pertinent locations, etc. Memorials are mostly for individuals but frequently for corporations, athletic competitions, wars and significant events in history.

Most recently thousands of people died in the tsunami. Millions of people didn't know a single one of them, but their hearts were touched and they sent help in the form of money, clothing, supplies and prayers in their memory. When Johnny Carson died, everybody knew about him. Johnny did not wish to be memorialized. After all, he already had his star on the walk in Hollywood, but those who loved him gave great public tributes as memorials. So, generations die, but what they made, strived for and achieved or lost are here today and gone tomorrow if not collected and preserved in some way.

This is where museums come into the picture. A mystery writer once wrote "a museum is a celebration of death. Dead peoples' lives, the objects they made, the things they thought important, their clothes, their houses, their daily comforts, their arts, etc. etc.

"No, a museum is about life. It's about the individual life, how it was lived. It's about the corporate life of the times, men and women organizing their societies. No one with any human curiosity can dislike a museum."

With these lofty thoughts in mind, I urge you to visit our wonderful museum. No, not just visit it, but contribute your ideas about how we can do a better job of memorializing the people and events of our area.

Surely, among you readers of my column, there is someone who will step forward to help with this most important work. What a great personal memorial you can make - not through huge donations of money or valuable objects, but with your ideas and time.

Perhaps hardest hit of any businesses in Garnett during a major hailstorm in June 1982 was the greenhouse. Nearly all of the glass panels on the north slopes of the houses were broken and most of the fiberglass panels were also damaged.

1982: Devastating hail storm rocks Garnett

June 11, 2002

Less than one year after 40 people were arrested at a cockfight near Kincaid, Kansas governor Bill Graves signed into law a ban on cockfighting. The new legislation was praised by the Humane Society of the United States, who have cited a July 22, 2001, cockfighting incident in Anderson County in their campaign to ban the sport. Although last year's cockfight bust netted 40 arrests, no charges were ever filed in the incident. Kansas was one of just six states with no statute specifically addressing cockfighting.

A law requiring businesses to track registration of kegs of beer or cereal malt beverage may not have much of an impact on local underage drinking when it goes into effect July 1, say area retailers and a recently graduated teenager. Retailers say they don't sell many kegs and have already been keeping track of people that are buying them, while a teen said local keg patties are infrequent.

The City of Garnett may have to postpone or scale back some of its local improvement projects and other capital expenditures this year due to a reduction in interest income of some $100,000 rooted in lower earned rates on its financial investments.

The City of Garnett is awaiting a report from an architectural firm on the decaying status of Garnett's Hotel Richard at the northeast corner of Oak and Fourth streets. Foot traffic was blocked from the sidewalk around the base of the building last month after safety concerns were raised that falling pieces of the building might injure passersby.

In terms of time, Monday morning's storm didn't last very long, only five minutes or so. In terms of effect it was one of the most monetarily damaging storms that has ever hit Garnett. The culprit was the hail storm which threw baseball and golfball sized chunks of ice from the sky at about 5:30 a.m. Insurance agents say the damage total may exceed that of the windstorm of 1974. The most severe damage was experienced in and around Garnett. The storm was localized within a few miles of the boundaries of Garnett. Nine planes at the airport experienced severe damage. Two of them will probably be listed as total losses.

At a regular meeting of the Garnett City commission Wednesday night, the commission continued its work on the Cedar Creek Reservoir. The commission wants a standardized set of guidelines to make land acquisition as easy a task as possible.

A man named Valentine who was running a railroad motor on the Missouri Pacific was injured when the machine jumped the track. The division superintendent was a passenger but was not injured. Valentine was taken to Westphalia and cared for by Dr. Simmons.

The contest given last night at the opera house by the graduates from the township schools was one of the best county contests ever given here. The graduates were younger than usual, but they showed application and training. Furthermore, they were self-possessed and really seemed at home on the platform.

The annual Memorial service was held at Colony Cemetery May 28. A color guard, a firing squad and the playing of taps were included in the program. The avenue of flags was flown.
