State elections bring several contested races

Several names new to Anderson County will enter political contests

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA - The races for Kansas state and federal legislative seats are set now, after a flurry of last-minute filings last week.

Because of a delay in redrawing legislative districts - a panel of federal judges took over drawing the maps after a stalemate in the legislature - candidates had only a few days to learn where they fit in the new district maps. The new maps were released Friday, June 8, and the filing deadline was the following Monday, June 11.

The new districts brought several changes to Anderson County. The entire county now sits within the 12th Senate District. Most of the county, minus a chunk of the southeast section that includes Kincaid and Lone Elm, now sits within the 5th House District currently represented by Bill Feuerborn, D-Garnett. The new maps dropped three legislators from Anderson County, including Sens. Jeff King and Pat Apple and Rep. Bill Otto. The maps also leave the 12th Senate District and the 4th House District (the section that includes Lone Elm and Kincaid) without a sitting legislator.

Those who have filed for positions that represent Anderson County include:

12th District Senate

- Denise Cassells, Mound City, has filed as a Democrat. She manages her husband's construction business and is an internet blogger on political issues.

- John C. Coen, Wellsville, has filed as a Republican. He is a farmer and banker.

- Caryn Tyson, Parker, has filed as a Republican. She was the previous 4th District House Representative.

5th District House

- Kevin Jones, Republican, is from Wellsville. He is a Realtor and spent five-and-a-half years with the U.S. Army and eight years as a pastor.

- Bill Feuerborn, Democrat, is from Garnett and has served as the 5th District Representative since 1995. He is a retired businessman.

4th District House

- Shirley J. Palmer of Fort Scott is filing as a Democrat. She previously represented the 4th District but was ousted by Caryn Tyson.

- Arlyn Briggs, Kincaid, has filed as a Republican but told area media he will not be actively pursuing a candidacy.

- Lynne D. O'Harah, Uniontown, also has filed as 'Contempt and disbelief'

Sisters of dead girl say justice, not county medical costs, should determine if woman should stay in jail

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - "Do people think they can kill someone in Anderson County and if they have medical problems then they can just get out of jail?"

The frustration is clear in the voice of Candy Frye, an Oklahoma woman whose 13 year-old sister, Mary Jane Robertson, died after her aunt crashed the vehicle she was driving in southern Anderson County back in May 2010.

The teenager's aunt, Connie McCormick, 46 of Chanute, was originally charged with second degree murder and driving under the influence after the 8:14 a.m. crash, but eventually pleaded to a charge of vehicular homicide after a

List considers churches as public shelter options

Only 3 churches have basements; most can offer after-storm help

GARNETT - Plans continue in the city of Garnett to ask churches and firefighters to establish a public storm shelter system for those in the city that may find themselves unprotected in the event of a tornado or other weather emergency.

Public Safety Officer Pat Tate has been compiling a list of local churches to see which ones could be used as a storm shelter or evacuation center after a public emergency. He's still working with churches to determine if any could be used as a public shelter, and plans to

State OKs southbound turn lane near school

State to fund cost of engineering study, construction of lane

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - State transportation officials have agreed to build a southbound turn lane at the new Garnett Elementary School on U.S. 59 in the northernmost part of the city.

As part of construction of the new elementary school, a northbound turn lane already has been constructed but engineers and USD 365 officials were not sure if a southbound turn lane would be necessary. Initially, the city of Garnett was expected to pick up the $47,000 tab for an engineering study to

'Where's Redbud?'

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 06-19-2012 / Vickie Moss

The T-intersection of U.S. 59/Maple and Redbud will be the site of a new crosswalk to help people cross the east and west sides of U.S. 59. City commissioners and a local businessman said the city should examine more crosswalk needs because of pedestrian traffic on Tuesday auction days and the new elementary school on the north end of the city.

City to examine crosswalk needs

Sidewalk plan sparks interest in improving highway crossings

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - City commissioners will review the city's crosswalk needs on U.S. 59, after last-minute questions about the city's latest efforts to improve handicapped accessibility by installing new sidewalks.

The city recently accepted a bid to construct sidewalks alongside U.S. 59 from First Avenue to Park Road. The plan will allow the city to meet its goals in an ongoing effort to meet ADA requirements.

Essentially, the city is taking the long way to get handicapped people from Point A to Point B - with Point A being senior living facilities near Park Road and Pine Street, and Point B being Country Mart grocery store at Park Road and U.S. 59. Primarily because of high-pressure gas lines along Park Road, it's too expensive to install new sidewalks along Park Road - the shortest distance between Points A and B. Instead, city officials worked with the state to determine a U-shaped path between the two points. The U-shaped path travels from Park Road along Oak to First Avenue, down First Avenue to U.S. 59, and north to Country Mart. Sidewalks have been constructed along the U-shaped path except for the section along the highway.

One stumbling block for the section, however, has been determining the best place to cross from the east side of U.S. 59 to the west. Initially, city officials considered crosswalks at either First Avenue or at Park Road but there were concerns about congestion at those intersections. The discussion resulted in a crosswalk at Redbud, a small street between First Avenue and Park Road unfamiliar to many city residents.

"I'm confused. Where's Redbud?", asked commissioner Preston Peine, who was elected to the city commission after the sidewalk plan was established, during the meeting last Tuesday.

Peine's question followed a request from Earl Lizer, who owns buildings on both sides of U.S. 59 near Redbud. He wanted commissioners to reconsider the crosswalk at Redbud and move it farther north, closer to Anderson County Sales Company. The sale barn brings lots of traffic on Tuesdays, and people frequently dart across the highway to access Country

Garnett's vicious dog ordinance up for review

Animal welfare activist asks commission to reconsider breed bans

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - A Topeka animal welfare representative wants Garnett commissioners to reconsider their ban on certain breeds of dogs. She plans to attend the next city commission meeting June 26 to discuss the issue, and others who want to talk about the city's ban on vicious dogs also are encouraged to attend.

Katie Bray Barnett, of Best Friends Animal Society, said she is acting on behalf of a Garnett resident who wants to adopt a type of dog prohibited by the city's ordinance on aggressive dogs. Barnett plans to draft ordinance amendments that would help the city change its stance on aggressive dogs.

The City of Garnett currently prohibits keeping aggressive dogs, defined by the city as dogs that have inflicted severe injury on a human being without provocation, or those that have killed a domestic animal without provocation while off the owner's property. It also defines aggressive dogs as those being of the pit bull or rottweiler breeds, or even being of the appearance of those breeds. Owners can keep aggressive dogs under stringent conditions, such as being kept in a secured, fenced-in area with a top attached and the pen securely locked, as well as requiring insurance for the dog. The dogs must be kept on a leash at all times when it is outside its confinement area.

determine if such a lane was necessary.

But city manager Joyce Martin said she felt it wasn't fair for the city to have to pay for the engineering study. She has discussed the issue with state transportation officials for the past several months, and recently learned the state has agreed to pay for the costs of the engineering study, plus other associated costs of constructing the turn lane. The City of Garnett will have to serve as gatekeeper for the project, essentially funneling money for the project through the city and the city will be responsible for finding contractors for the project.

The construction schedule of the project is not yet known. Major construction of the new elementary school has been completed and classes are expected to begin in the new building this fall. USD 365 officials have said they are not exactly sure what traffic patterns will look like when school starts, but they have planned alternative routes such as a back access road from behind the school to Lake Garnett, and a walking trail along that access road to the Prairie Spirit Trail.

meet with local firefighters to see if they can take on responsibility for opening the shelter in an emergency.

Tate's report on churches that could be used as a shelter was given to city commissioners during their regular meeting Tuesday, June 12. It includes the church's address and contact information, as well as a breakdown of information such as if the church has a basement, how many people it can accommodate, what emergency evacuation plans have been discussed by church officials, and if the facility can be used as an evacuation shelter after an emergency. Just because the church is on Tate's list doesn't mean church leaders have agreed to allow it to be used as a shelter, but most people seem receptive to exploring the possibility, city manager Joyce Martin told commissioners.

Only three of the churches on Tate's list actually have a basement - two with full basements and one with a partial basement. The First United Methodist Church, 205 S. Oak St., has a full basement and can hold the most people - 200. The First Baptist Church, 417 S. Walnut St., and the Dunkard Brotherhood Church, 1020 S. Westgate St., each can hold about 100 people in their basements. Most of the facilities could be used as an evacuation center after a storm, although the number of people they could accommodate varies from 15 people to 200 people, depending in the church.

Although some of the church leaders have discussed emergency and evacuation plans, none actually has a plan in place. Martin said this has been a good opportunity for emergency management personnel to discuss those issues with churches and others.

Mart's parking lot or Pizza Hut. A man was struck by a car about a year ago while trying to cross the highway during the Tuesday sales.

Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin said city officials considered crosswalks closer to Park Road, but the state's transportation department requires minimum distances between intersections and a crosswalk at Country Mart or Pizza Hut would be too close to Park Road. She said the stop lights at Park Road and U.S. 59 offer a button that people can press when they want to cross the street, which was news to most of those in attendance.

Peine and commissioner Dan Morgan asked if the city could consider crosswalks in every direction at that intersection. Peine said he was especially concerned because a new elementary school on U.S. 59 on the northern edge of the city likely will result in many young children walking to and from school along the highway.

"No matter how many times you tell a little kid this is where you walk, they're going to go here, there and everywhere," Peine said.

Eventually, the city will have to improve sidewalks everywhere in town, Martin said. She said the current plan is simply the first phase to meet the most pressing need - getting people from the senior living facilities to Country Mart. After that, the city can look at other sidewalk improvements, such as installing sidewalks along parts of U.S. 59 not included in this phase.

The city's plan to install sidewalks along the east side of U.S. 59 from First Avenue to Redbud, and from the west side at Redbud to Park Road is estimated to cost about $25,000. The city approved the low bid from Lickteig Construction, but Martin said it's possible his bid could be negotiated if the city provides help like hauling dirt and removal of old sidewalk material. The crosswalk at Redbud will be marked but is not likely to feature a stop light unless traffic patterns show one is needed later.

City to look at garage sales restrictions

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - A woman who Garnett city officials say has too many garage sales wants city commissioners to either reconsider the restrictions or at least make sure more people are aware.

Debera Mace said she received a letter from the city taking her to task for having four garage sales this year. She said she felt she was unfairly targeted because she sees others who have more than four sales in a year. She said she and her husband are missionaries who recently moved to the house and all proceeds from their garage sales go to mission work with their church in Ottawa.

City manager Joyce Martin

explained at the most recent city commission meeting Tuesday, June 12, that commissioners several years ago decided to restrict garage sales after concerns from retailers that too many people were selling items and not paying sales tax under the guise of having a garage sale. The city's policy on garage sales is part of the zoning regulations, A small paragraph says garage sales "shall not exceed three consecutive days in duration (and shall not) occur more than four times each year at any particular location."

Mayor Greg Gwin told Mace that commissioners would discuss the issue at their next meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 26. That way, others who want to discuss the restrictions would have time to prepare remarks and attend.

Anderson County's forgotten votes

Candidates might be better served to go door-to-door in county - the old-fashioned way

Do you think, with 7 people running for two available seats on the Anderson County Commission this fall and 3 running for county attorney, that those candidates will be working harder this year to get your vote?

If past experience is any indicator, probably not.

In fact, Anderson County political office holders have gotten so far away from the opposite extreme of the traditional vote-hounding politicos of the old days that most county residents have never had a local politician show up at their house and ask for their vote.

In recent memory, only First District Commissioner Jim Johnson has made it a point to personally visit every household in his district. Johnson, whose father was a county commissioner when he was a kid, made it a point to trek to all his constituents homes and introduce himself, and give them a handy wooden yardstick - of course with his name printed on it and a "dun" for their vote. A yardstick, after all, is a great gimmick; you never throw it away until it breaks, and it's a great ice breaker to let someone know that you care enough to show up and ask them to vote for you.

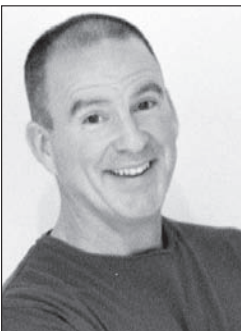

So Johnson did the same thing - and even though he was an "import" non-native to the county, he pulled off a victory over a primary challenger and a three-term incumbent. It turns out, making the effort to visit your constituents can pay off.

There's probably a good reason for that. Part of what makes people feel so far removed from politics - the idea that their opinions don't really matter to those who get elected and therefore it doesn't really matter who they vote for, is that they have precious little real one-on-one contact with candidates. In most elections the only time voters see the candidate is on a brochure in the mail, a sign on a car in the county fair parade, or a newspaper ad, or maybe a TV commercial in a bigger race. Candidates always say they care what you think, but few stop by to give you the chance to tell them on your turf. The old days of door-to-door campaigning are nearly dead, it seems.

Particularly, it seems for Anderson County races. There is so little interest from potential candidates in most county offices, i.e. county clerk, county register of deeds and county treasurer that it's easy to see why those offices prompt no campaigns. Johnson said he was surprised at how many times, on his door-to-door sojourn across the First District, he was told "You're the only county candidate that's ever come to my house to ask for my vote." Of course not all of them voted for him, but Johnson's victory is proof the effort wasn't for naught, and it's a good bet he got a better perspective on his constituents as well.

It would be good for those local candidates, and for the voters, if they got out and "beat the bushes" during this election, and let the voters get their yardsticks while they last.

by Dane Hicks, PUBLISHER

We've got a bad case of national amnesia

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

The Declaration of Independence is a poor excuse for an obscure historical document. It's not the Magna Carta or the Peace of Augsburg. Its name is so straightforwardly functional, it almost makes you wonder why the Founders weren't more imaginative.

Yet only 35 percent of American fourth-graders know the purpose of the Declaration of Independence, according to a National Assessment of Educational Progress. The findings of the test -- administered to representative samples of fourth-, eighth- and 12th-graders -- are another dreary recitation of the historical ignorance of America's students.

Only 20 percent of fourth-graders, 17 percent of eighth-graders and 12 percent of 12th-graders were proficient in history. More than half of 12th-graders were categorized as "below basic." Only 22 percent of 12th-graders knew that North Korea was allied with China during the Korean War.

These are the symptoms of a country engaged in a long process of erasing its memory. For decades, we have been congratulating ourselves for a broad-mindedness that is really a self-destructive national amnesia.

It's no accident that the teaching of American history became ascendant during the surge of national self-confidence in the wake of the Civil War. Back then, we infused the endeavor with an unabashed love for America. The historian Merle Curti writes that the schools "emphasized the importance of presenting vividly and attractively to children the glorious deeds of American heroes, the sacrifices and bravery of our soldiers and sailors in wartime, the personalities of the presidents, who might properly be regarded as symbols of the nation in the manner in which royal personages of Europe were regarded."

How passe. Today, we're lucky if students can pick their forebears out of a lineup.

The content of education began to change in the middle of the 20th century, and eventually tipped into embarrassment and self-abasement. Huntington cites a study of 22 grade-school readers published in the 1970s and 1980s. Out of 670 stories and articles in the books, only five were patriotic. All of the stories dated from prior to 1780. Four of them focused on a girl. Three of them involved the same girl, Sybil Ludington, the female Paul Revere.

As this transpired down below in the elementary schools, the professional historians worked to kill American history from above. They suffocated it first in data-driven "social history" and then in multiculturalism, until it seemed fit only for obsessives about race or gender.

The neglect of history leaves on the cutting-room floor all the entertaining, instructive and inspiring material involved in the world's most daring and (ultimately) successful experiment in self-government. Worse, it robs us of one of the most important constituent parts of our national identity.

Historian David Lowenthal says of heritage: "By means of it we tell ourselves who we are, where we came from, and to what we belong." Increasingly, we don't know and don't want to know. "Never forget" is an appropriate admonition for victims of atrocities. "Never remember" is a strange and ominous admonition for a nation somebody or other once called "the last best hope of earth."

Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

Does it pay to get elected to the Kansas Legislature?

So—because this is a year where all 165 members of the Kansas Legislature are up for election—what's it cost to become a legislator? Probably more than it did two years ago for members of the House and probably more than it did four years ago, the last time senators stood for election.

Here are the numbers:
 • In the 2010 election, the winners of House seats spent $2.941 million. That's $23,530 apiece. In the 2008 election cycle, winners spent a total of $2.379 million, or about $19,040 apiece. That's about a 15% increase in what it cost to win the seats. Losers? Who cares...

• In the Senate, where the terms are four years, in 2008 the 40 winners spent a total of $1.465 million on their campaigns. That's an average of about $36,625 apiece.

Individually, the most expensive House race cost the winner, Rep. Jim Denning, R-Overland Park, $76,276, and the cheapest House race cost the winner, Rep. Jan Pauls, D-Hutchinson, $1,261.

In the Senate the last time the full chamber stood for reelection, the most expensive race in the state cost winner Sen. Laura Kelly, D-Topeka, $204,889. Cheapest seat won in the Senate in 2008 cost former Sen. Jim Barnett, R-Emporia, $10,523. Barnett later resigned, but the cheapest seat still held by a senator belongs to Sen. David Haley, D-Kansas City, who spent $10,528 to hammer down his victory.

Seem like a lot of money? It did then, but remember those 2008 and 2010 campaigns were held before the federal judges shook the earth, creating new districts for candidates to run in.

A handful of districts will have virtually the same voter contingent which had seen the same candidate names on ballots for a decade.

But this election, there are dozens of districts where half or more of the voters in an incumbent's district are brand new, which means candidates have to make a lot of new friends. That's been the incumbents'

by Martin Hawver KANSAS STATEHOUSE COLUMNIST

advantage for the past decade...seeking votes from people who have voted for them before and who require less time at the front door. (Or, alternatively, by this time candidates have committed to memory their constituents who will never vote for them, and where they can take a shot, but probably not waste a lot of time.)

So what's that dramatic change in districts going to do to the cost of getting elected? It's going to shoot it up...unless some lucky candidate pulls a "Lassie."

Lassie? Yes, all it takes is good local news coverage of a candidate pulling a child out of a burning barn, and we're figuring that candidate has won the election.

Figure for the next few weeks, those primary election candidates are going to be raising all the money they can...about the cost of a fancy Harley-Davidson in House districts, maybe the cost of an entry-level Mercedes for Senate districts—or hoping for a chance to pull a child out of a burning barn...while someone with a fancy camera takes a photo...

I would love to hear some comments back on this. Why do people on ISS and disability, why are they able to take their little cards, get money, and go buy cigarettes and alcohol with it? I don't understand that. Can somebody explain that to me? Thank you.

Hello, Anderson County Review Phone Forum. Every week I read the column and read what everyone else thinks so now I want to tell you what I think. I have lived here for more than a year now, and when I lived in two other cities and was involved with some organizations there, we always did a member night or something like that to try to recruit new members. In the time I have lived here I have not seen any of your civic organizations or local clubs do a member night to attract new members. I'm sure they must need new members, every group always needs new members, but in the time I've lived here I have not been asked by anyone to join their group and have not seen any information on joining to be a part. Am I missing something? Thank you.

To the madam on Willow Street. My son 8 and my daughter 11 and I would like to thank her for our new unfounded future. As of April 2012, I am a divorcee and my kids see their father once a month due to a one night stand. Mr. Colony, you're lucky you don't have young kids. Have a nice life madam, and tread softly.

Rodney King. How in the world did this career criminal thug come to die in his own swimming pool? What a great country. Drive drunk and stoned, resist arrest, get beat up by cops, win a court settlement and get your own swimming pool. And will CNN, which turned him into a martyr by refusing to broadcast all of the famous police video, pay for his funeral? Thank you.

debate of the charges between Anderson County Attorney Fred Campbell and District Judge Eric Godderz. She was sentenced in March to a year in the Anderson County Jail. Now, county officials and lawyers are debating whether she should be released from her one-year sentence so the county can avoid the costs of treating what her lawyer told the court yesterday was liver cancer, and key to that debate is whether she actually has liver cancer at all. County officials working behind the scenes have hustled in recent weeks to get McCormick out of jail before the costs of her medical treatments have to be paid by Anderson County. Family members say McCormick's liver has been damaged by years of alcohol and drug use, and that she's used medical issues before as an attempt to skirt penalties and jail time. They're angry at the dark irony that the destructive lifestyle that she says now threatens her life and helped kill her niece may be her ticket out of jail. "I feel like, you know, if this (victim) was their family member, would they be wanting that person out?," Frye asked. "We're all paying taxes on people in jail. That shows a lot of what kind of person you are. She took my sister from me and she spends only two months in jail? Is that right?" In their victim statements for McCormick's sentencing in March, both Frye and her sister Brandy Crouse referenced a separate incident in which a passenger riding in a vehicle McCormick was driving died in a crash in 1999. They said McCormick was under the influence of pills and alcohol at the time. "She made no positive life changes after the last time she was given another chance by a judge," Brandy Crouse said in a written statement. Melissa Wangeman, an attorney for the Kansas Association of Counties, said the law is unyielding in requiring counties to furnish medical care for those in their jails' custody. She said federal Medicaid guidelines stop payment for Medicaid recipients once they're imprisoned, so those funds aren't available to cover an inmate's medical costs. Anderson County Commissioners acknowledged Friday the impact large medical bills could have on a rural county, but said the final determination would be made between the county attorney, McCormick's defense lawyer and the court. County Attorney Fred Campbell said last week he did not intend to file a motion to release McCormick, and told the judge Monday the defense had produced no evidence to prove McCormick had liver cancer - a point Forest Lowry, McCormick's court-appointed lawyer, disputes. Lowry made no motion on Monday. Another hearing has been set to hear defense motions on June 29. Judge Godderz, who revised the state's initial charges against McCormick which led to her jail sentence, said he believed McCormick should be incarcerated but wanted to avoid the county's responsibility for her medical costs. "It's unfortunate sometimes there's a cost/benefit analysis to things," Godderz said. Though the extent of McCormick's medical issues aren't fully known, the website of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., estimates the cost of a liver transplant at $100,000 to $200,000, not including pre and post-operation expenses, and some $10,000 in first-year anti-rejection drugs.

Runaway Mamas complete Oklahoma City Memorial Relay Marathon

Runaway Mamas completed the Oklahoma City Memorial Relay Marathon race in 4 hours 37 minutes and 39 seconds placing 383rd out of 746 relay teams. In the open division female, the team placed 45th out of 123, and averaged a 10 minutes 36 second mile. The team consisted of Anderson County Hospital Employees, Karen Gillespie, Hannah Thompson and Joey Fager; Rachel Poss who works for Countryside Vet Clinic and Sandee Meyer who is the school nurse for Central Heights and wife of Ryan Meyer, physical therapist for ACH. The team includes women with a total of 14 kids between them who enjoy running in their "free" time. They got together for a girl's weekend to compete in the Oklahoma City Memorial Marathon as a relay team. There were 5 legs to this race, two 10K's (or 6.2 miles), two 5k's (3.1 miles) and one 12k (7.6 miles), a total of 26.2 miles. May 1 was far from the perfect day with weather conditions consisting of wind chills in the low 40's with gusts up to 25 mph, lightning (which delayed the start of the race 30 min), various intensities of rain and yes even hail - all weather that the team had avoided training in. The race had approximately 25,000 participants, and was not limited to just a relay marathon. there was also a regular marathon, a half marathon, a 5k and a kids 1 mile run. Despite the crummy conditions the team members were all in agreement that this was the most fun and empowering race they have been a part of. It was very emotional and the weather was slightly symbolic of the pain that this city felt with the bombing that occurred there in 1995. Everyone from race staff and volunteers to other race participants were friendly.

GHS Class of 1962 has 50-year reunion

Members of the Garnett High School Class of 1962 met May 18-20 to celebrate their 50 year reunion. The event was held at Garnett Inn and Suites Friday and Saturday nights.

Friday evening was spent by classmates who were here then visiting and catching up on news of the past 50 years. On Saturday morning, classmates toured Garnett High School/Garnett Elementary Center, remembering where classes were held and the good (and not-so-good) time spent there, Irving Primary Center where many attended grade school, and taking a bus tour of places in Garnett and Cedar Valley Reservoir. After lunch at the Coffee Loft, several toured the Harris House and Anderson County Historical Society Museum or played golf.

On Sunday morning, 17 members of the Class of 1962 and spouses attended church at the First Christian Church where they were recognized. Later that afternoon, the class was introduced at Anderson County High School graduation.

The Top 15 List for home canners

BY NANCY SCHUSTER COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

Dave Letterman has his top 10 lists; I have my top 15 list! Canning season is here and there are lots of home canners using directions that are unsafe. Please take time to update your food preservation methods and processing times if you are using anything older than 2000.

1. Pressure canners should be kept clean. Food is prepared in them so wash the gasket, the plug, the insides and outsides. The Anderson County K-State Research & Extension Office tests dial gauges for free. Bring the canner lid with dial gauge on it.

2. Pressure canners must be exhausted so the air in the canner is forced out. After the hot jars of food are placed in the canner and the lid is put on the canner; let the canner water come to a hard boil. Strong steady steam should escape from the vent for a good 10 minutes. Before you start the correct processing time, if you do not exhaust your canner, the temperature will not be correct.

3. Read research based information to see what the head space at the top of the canning jar should be. Head space will vary by how the air in a food expands when it is heated and also allows space for forming a vacuum in sealing jars of food. Liquid should cover all food in the canning jar. If there is too much headspace in the jar, the processing time may not be long enough to drive out all the extra air at the top of the jar. This would mean a tight vacuum might not form.

4. This is a new recommendation. After processing jars of food in a water bath canner, slide the canner off the burner and let the jars sit for another 5 minutes before removing them. Canning jar companies have asked USDA to recommend this extra time for jars to seal.

5. This is another new recommendation. After processing jars of food in a pressure canner, slide the canner off the burner, when pressure has completely dropped to zero, remove the vent cover or weight. Let jars sit in the canner for another 10 minutes. Canning jar companies have asked USDA to recommend this extra time for jars to seal.

6. Flats must not be boiled!!! Flats must be in simmering water for 10 minutes before being used.

7. Never tighten the screw bands after removing jars from a canner. Screw bands work loose in processing and that is okay. If you tighten the screw band, you could cause your jar to not seal.

8. When in doubt, throw it out! NEVER taste a home canned food to see if it is safe to eat. A pin head of botulinum is enough to kill you. If you smell food, you will most likely breathe in the spore which is not healthy.

9. Using canning information that came with your 1950s canner. Let's just say that since 1972 when a family almost died from botulism found in properly home canned tomatoes, lots of research has been done. K-State Research & Extension's food preservation information has a 2010 printing date on them. The Ball Blue Book has new versions for sale. So Easy to Preserve from the University of Georgia (they do USDA home canning research) has a print date of 2006.

10. Green beans (low acid foods) must be pressure canned. A hot water bath never gets hotter than 212°F. Even if you heat it all day (12 hours) it is still 212°F. A pressure canner at 11# pressure (correct for Anderson County) reaches 240°F; hot enough to kill botulinum spores if the proper amount of time is used. These spores do not need oxygen to live.

11. Not adding bottled lemon juice to tomato products - whole, crushed, chunks, or juice. Varieties of tomatoes are less acid; spots in tomatoes that need to be cut out, tomatoes from dying vines at the end of the season are low acid. Bottled lemon juice makes sure the tomato product has the correct amount of acid and can be canned in a hot water bath canner.

12. People who make their own home canned recipes up, like salsa recipes. Recipes are research based if they are from a reliable source. The recipe has been tested to ensure that after a year of storage on the shelf, the product is still safe. Original homemade recipes have no research behind them and no accurate knowledge if the produce is low acid or high acid. There are no recommended processing times or methods.

13. People who never have the dial gauge canner tested. It is recommended that dial gauges be tested every year, or at least they should be tested every other year for accuracy.

14. People who are looking for a flashy new way of canning! Research based information is the only safe process to follow. Canning in the dish washer, the oven, the microwave, etc. can be dangerous.

15. Know the Altitudes of where you live. Water boils at 212°F at sea level. Above sea level water boils at lower temperatures. Lower boiling temperatures are not effective in killing bacteria. You can find altitudes for the towns in Anderson county at www.anderson.ksu.edu under food preservation. Information for other Kansas counties and towns can be found at <http://skyways.lib.ks.us/kansas/counties/index.html>.

To learn more about home canning procedures, plan to attend the Hands On Canning Workshop that will be held on Saturday, June 30 from 9:00 am to 12:30 pm, at the Anderson County Extension Office. A cost of $5 is needed for jars and supplies. Please register for the workshop by calling (785)448-6826.

Richmond Alumni meet

The Richmond High School Alumni held their 63rd annual banquet on June 9 at the Richmond Community Building at 6:30 p.m. A delicious meal was served by L&M Catering of Ottawa to 131 alumni and guests.

Also present was Vera Rockers Pysher, Denver, Colo., Class of 1942, her 70th year. Class of 1952 had the most present with 11 attending on their 60th year. States represented were California, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri and Texas.

The tables were beautifully decorated with purple candles and purple and gold flowers, the school colors.

New business discussed was to change the time of the banquet. No decision was made. Left up to the officers. The next meeting will be June 8, 2013. Meeting adjourned with singing the pep song.

Thompson hosts JJJ Club

The JJJ Club met June 13 with Darlene Thompson. There were four members and two guests, Alice Chase and Bert Jackson, present. Roll call was answered and the minutes of the last meeting read. The mystery gift was guessed by Alice. Cards were played with Darlene Olson receiving high and Sharon Miller getting low. Refreshments of log ice cream cake and coffee were served. No meetings in July or August. The September meeting is with Clarann Kempknich on Sept. 12.

Guild sends Quilts of Valor to be quilted

Pieces and Patches Quilt Guild May 24 meeting was called to order by the President, Judy Stuke, in the meeting room of K-State Extension Office. Twenty-four members were present with 3 guests: Marilyn Foltz, Orra Lutz, and Jan Christenson. The minutes were reviewed from the newsletter with no changes made.

Ruth Theis read the Treasurer report.

Committee Reports:

Program: Charlotte Lutz reported that today's program is from Wing and a Prayer Design presented by owners Jennie Foltz and Toni Steere.

Opportunity Quilt: The 2013 Opportunity Quilt committee met on May 10th at Country Fabrics. We changed border fabric for the center. The center block has been started but needs some adjustments made. Next meeting will be on the 2nd Thursday, June 14th in the back room of Country Fabrics from 10am to 3pm. We will be going out for lunch.

Block of the Month: Anyone needing the last set of instructions for setting your mystery quilt together please get them from Charlotte Lutz. Looking forward to seeing everyone's mystery quilt finished.

Challenge Committee: No further blocks were collected for the challenge. All three Quilts of Valor were shown with chosen backing for each. The first quilt top was sent with Carolyn Crupper to be quilted. The remaining 2 quilt tops just require the backing to be fitted and they will be ready to quilt. All three will need pillow cases made, and there are a few extra challenge blocks to make them with. Cynthia Fletcher requested the guild to pay for quilt batting and quilting expense for all 3 of the Quilts of Valor. Phyllis Mundell motioned for the guild to honor their request; Ruth Theis 2nd; motioned carried.

Quilt Show Committee: The 2012 Opportunity Quilt raffle was won by member Phyllis Gordon. Mandy Sobba won the Wall Hanging. Nancy Kriebach's sister, Karen Werle, won the Table runner. Roberta Norman and Janie Paxton both won Charm Packs. The people's choice award went to Kay Rockers for her beautiful appliqué quilt. People's Choice award is $15.00 per minutes from 7/21/11 meeting. We had 184 guests come through the quilt show and 44 items were shown. A thank you card will be sent to Patriots Bank for the use of the building. A heartfelt thank you was given to Charlotte Lutz for a job well done in organizing the quilt show. Guild also extended a big thank you to Cynthia Fletcher and children (Jorneau Hoy, Ulysses Hoy, Samantha Fletcher, and Steven Possey) for all their help with setting up and taking down quilt frames. Will what is lost ever be found?

Monday, June 4, 2012, was the one-year anniversary of losing my wallet. I still maintain the hope that one day I'll go to our mailbox and there it will be. Perhaps the money I had in it will be long gone, but my precious pictures will be returned.

I'll never forget the message left on our answering machine by some dear lady, while we were on a bus trip. "Henry, just say this prayer, 'St. Anthony, St. Anthony please come around. Something's been lost and must be found.' (Repeating this three times.) I guarantee your billfold will be found. Well, God hasn't answered my prayers yet, but it doesn't mean he won't in His time.

Ironically, on June 5 I returned to the ATD site where I lost my wallet and continued my archaeological excavations. The fact is I've made several recent trips out to this site. Artifacts seem far more difficult to find than ever before at this site. I have, however, been able to add two tokens to my collection and a very pretty marble to Kay's, plus five more buttons to the 223 already found at this site.

The tokens advertise the old A.T. Duncan Store that once stood on this site. Both were worth 10 cents on any purchase.

Kay's marble is a real beauty. It is a clear marble, but when held to the light and rotated, it appears to be filled with a million little bubbles or stars. You can even create a further scene by rotating it in the light at a certain object and that object will appear in every bubble or star.

As for the buttons, one is a medium-sized mother-of-pearl, one decorated black glass and the other three are different sizes of white glass.

Naturally, like most dig sites, one always uncovers their share of broken dish-ware, glassware, crockery and nails. I am presently awaiting landowner permission to take on the excavation of another family cabin site here in Anderson County. Until then, I'll just keep digging at the ATD site.

1912: Neighbors help after cyclone

June 25, 2002

A couple renovating their historic Fourth Avenue home want to stop construction of a new 500,000 gallon city water tower southwest of their property. They argue the tower will have a "blighting impact" on their home and the city was in violation of its own zoning regulations when it approved construction of the tower.

Anderson County Attorney Fred Campbell said he doesn't intend to file charges against a part-time sheriff's deputy in connection with an April 30 shooting death at an anhydrous ammonia facility in Greeley, but he will pass the investigation report on to the state attorney general's office for a review. The deputy accidentally shot and killed a 39-year-old Osawatomie man while the deputy and his wife, the Greeley marshal, were conducting surveillance on anhydrous tanks at United Coop in Greeley.

For the fifth month in a row, the Anderson County Hospital finished a month's worth of activities and still had a surplus of funds. The hospital had a revenue surplus of $47,800 for the month of May. One reason for the increase was that the hospital's number of in-patient

by Vickie Moss
Staff Writer

days was up during the month of May. The average number of patients in the hospital during each day was 4.2. During the financial crisis of 1991, the average number of patients was running about two per day.

Plans to hold the first ever recycling collection day in Anderson County were put into action. The first countywide collection day will be July 11 at the Anderson County Fairgrounds. The collection is voluntary and residents will not be compensated for their recyclables.

June 21, 1982

Garnett police report that late Wednesday night or early Thursday morning, burglars entered the Sinclair Station on U.S. 59. All that was taken was a six-pack of pop.

Estimated Revenue Sharing funds for 1983 have been released by Washington D.C., which reveal that the taxing units in Anderson County will receive $7,406 more in 1983 than expected in 1982.

June 19-20, 1912

Kind-hearted neighbors helped victims of the cyclone. Noah Powman returned from his father's farm yesterday and reports his sister, Mrs. McFadden and her son, as some better. All day Sunday and yesterday, a crowd of friends were there, doing whatever could be done to relieve the situation. Mr. McFadden has nothing left to work with, not even a hoe, nor has he a horse. The Hearn family is in a deplorable condition. This family consists of 11 members - father, mother and nine children. They were scattered by the storm and all were more or less hurt. One little boy was so badly hurt that his recovery is impossible. The father was found some distance from the home and he hadn't a stitch of clothing on - the cyclone had completely stripped him. The family was very poor and now they are absolutely destitute. Kind-hearted neighbors are doing all they can to help this family.

Already, there is more hay in this section of the country than there was altogether last year, and by the end of the haying season, the barns will be filled and the ground will be covered with stacks. Many farmers are seeding their farms down to tame grasses instead of trying to raise so much corn. The plan is a wise one.

held at the Garnett Reservoir. Missouri Pacific History: The St. Louis and Emporia Railroad Company completed building and started operating a railroad through Colony in 1886. This railroad was later purchased and operated by the Missouri Pacific and was known as The Madison Branch of the Missouri Pacific. The Missouri Pacific operated a motor coach from Butler, MO to Madison, KS and return stopping at Colony each trip to receive and discharge passengers. The railroad was abandoned in 1933.

Colony Free Press item, June 1, 1912: A man named Valentine who was running a railroad motor on the Missouri Pacific was injured when the machine jumped the track. The division superintendent was a passenger but was not injured. Valentine was taken to Westphalia and cared for by Dr. Simmons.

Railroads: The railroads had a great deal to do with the early founding of Colony and the surrounding territory. Cyrus K. Holliday, a lawyer, left Ohio in 1854 with $20,000 and arrived in Kansas with two desires. First, to found a city and then, to build a railroad. Kansas became a state in 1861 and just after the Civil War an era of propriety and growth was experienced throughout Kansas. It was a period for building railroads and Kansas was the focal point.

It was 1870 when a colony of veterans and immigrants numbering about 100 came to Divide (later to become Colony) to form the first settlement. It was 1870 when Mr. Holliday purchased the Leavenworth and Galveston Railroad Company, making him the owner of the first railroad at Colony, later to be a part of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company.

2003 Crest graduate, was awarded the prestigious Lowell Milken Center Internship to young educators. She began collaboration with the Lowell Milken Center of Fort Scott on June 11. Kristi is the daughter of Steve and Susie Bubna.

If you have doubts, read on

Is there ever any reason to doubt God? I don't believe there is but there are times that our faith wavers. You see God has a plan for our lives. The interesting thing is it's not written down and handed to us.

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

I will admit my faith has wavered at times and in Matthew 11:23 we find John the Baptist questioning if Jesus is the promised one. When John who was in prison heard what Jesus was doing he sent his disciples to ask him, "Are you the one who was to come, or should we expect someone else?"

It is interesting to note that the mission of John the Baptist is clearly stated in Isaiah 40:3; "A voice of one calling in the desert prepare the way for the Lord; make straight in the wilderness a highway for our God."

In the book of Isaiah written in the 8th century B. C. a man was clearly marked out as the forerunner of Jesus. When the Jews of Jerusalem sent the priests and Levites to ask him the priests and Levites to ask him the voice of one calling in the desert. Make straight the way for the Lord."

As we track the life of John the Baptist we see him baptize Jesus at the Jordan River. John 1:29, reads; "The next day John saw Jesus coming toward him and said, "Look the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!"

When John sent his disciples to question Jesus he was alone in prison and he knew the end of his life was near. It is times like this that we all begin to have doubts. We lose track of God and focus on some problem we have. The harder we focus on the problem the farther God is pushed away. What we are telling God is we do not believe he is sufficient to deal with the problem and we had better handle it. Sometimes we even try to engineer the outcome of the problem because we don't trust God to act in our best interests. Many times we fail to even include God.

When our faith wavers that is not always a sin. Many times however this results in us making our life more difficult than it would be if we sought God out. As I mentioned God has a specific plan for our life but it is one that is lived out not written out. It is year by year, month by month, day by day. Living our life according to God's plan is the highest calling we can receive. Ultimately we answer only to God.

In John 3:26-30 we read how John's disciples report to him about Jesus baptizing on the other side of the Jordan and all of John's followers are going to him. To this John replied, "A man can receive only what is given to him from heaven. You yourselves can testify that I said, I am not the Christ but am sent ahead of him.... He must become greater and I must become less."

That is God's plan he must become greater we must become less. If we allow God to work this out in our life we will never find a reason to doubt.
