Son: Dad's 'vitamins' were really steroids

Case against Brock Moody moves forward; testimony heard from son, brother

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A former Garnett business owner will be arraigned on at least two criminal charges of providing steroids from his now-closed martial arts studio — one of those instances allegedly to his teenage son.

Lee Brock Moody, 40, will face at least one felony drug charge and one misdemeanor child endangerment charge, the latter alleging he administered steroids to his son under the guise that the substance was a vitamin. But whether more charges will be compiled from 40 other prosecution complaints reviewed at last week's preliminary hearing will have to be determined after the judge further studies the evidence.

Magistrate Judge Kevin Kimball wanted to review evidence in the case against Moody after a preliminary hearing Nov. 21. Kimball will need to match numerous emails with testimony to decide how many charges, if any, should stand out of more than 40 counts of conspiracy to manufacture steroids.

Kimball did, however, find enough factual evidence to proceed to trial on two charges: one count of conspiracy to manufacture steroids and one count of aggravated endangerment of a child.

The preliminary hearing against Moody included testimony from his brother, Phillip Moody, 35, who also is facing multiple charges of conspiracy to manufacture steroids. Police and Anderson County Attorney Fred Campbell say the brothers procured compounds for anabolic steroids from foreign suppliers including some in China and then manufactured, packaged and sold finished drugs from the former jujitsu academy Brock Do Jujitsu in

Requests for city procedures part of effort to bridge generational knowledge gap

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Call it "long-range planning." Or maybe "generational knowledge transfer."

Whatever the term, there is a common theme running through recent requests for city information by commissioner Preston Peine. He has asked for detailed reports on everything from how the utility plant operates to a directory of every city employee.

He called it "the idea of knowledge transfer" and said it is important for younger city employees and commissioners to understand, in detail, all of city operations. As the so-called Baby Boomers begin to retire, it's possible the city could lose half of its administrators within the next few years. Peine wants to make sure the next generation of city leaders move forward with the benefit of their experience. He said it's important not only for older, more experienced employees to share their knowledge, Garnett. The studio closed last year.

Phillip Moody has been cooperating with law enforcement in the case, and it's likely he will be offered a plea deal, Campbell said. However, Campbell was voted out of office in the recent general election and Brandon Jones, Ottawa, will take over as county attorney in January. Campbell said he is not sure what impact the transition may have on the case.

Brock Moody's son, B.J. Moody, also testified in last week's hearing saying his father had given him injections and pills throughout high school and told him they were vitamins. It wasn't until late in 2011 that B.J. Moody discovered his father had been giving him steroids, leading to a family feud that culminated in a police report and the current criminal case, according to testimony at the preliminary hearing.

Also testifying for the state was a former customer, Jared Schultz, who said he purchased steroids from Brock Moody.

Kimball is expected to decide before Moody's arraignment Dec. 10 whether the state has enough evidence to go to trial on the other 40 charges. He could rule that all or none of the individual charges should proceed to trial, or he could decide to combine some of the conspiracy charges.

"It's a question of law, where one conspiracy ends and another one begins is an argument I have to make," Campbell said.

It's a little unusual for a judge to delay a decision, but not unheard of, Campbell said. This case is complicated because it involved email accounts and drug transactions through China, he said. It also is complicated because the incidents stretch back for several years, reportedly from 2006-2011 and January 2012. Campbell said the incidents likely had been going on even longer, but because of the statute of limitations, law enforcement could only pursue crimes that may have happened in the past five years.

If Moody is found guilty, the sentencing phase also could be complicated. Any sentence that may be issued will have to apply to the time when the crime was committed.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Phil Moody Dec. 11.

September and considerably lower than the same time last year. In October 2011, unemployment was 7.0 percent.

Statewide, unemployment continued to drop as the number of jobs grew.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 5.7 percent in October, down from 5.9 percent last month and 6.6 percent in October 2011. The non-adjusted unemployment rate was 5.2 percent, a decrease from 5.3 percent in September and from 6.2 percent one year ago.

"The continued decrease in the unemployment rate is a positive sign for Kansas," Lana Gordon, Interim Secretary of Labor, said. "It is encouraging to see the number of employed Kansans increasing the past two months."

Other area counties also posted lower jobless numbers.

- Allen County: 5.6 percent in October, 5.8 in September, 6.5 in October 2011.

- Coffey County: 5.0 percent in October, 5.4 in September, 6.3 in October 2011.

- Franklin County: 6.2 percent in October, 6.6 in September, 7.1 in October 2011.

- Linn County: 6.6 percent in October, 7.2 in September, 8.6 in October 2011.

- Miami County: 5.4 percent in October, 5.4 in September, 7.1 in October 2011.

Most of the job growth in the past year was in professional and business services. Manufacturing, education and health service industries also saw job growth.

Between September and October of this year, most of the job growth has been in government, education and health services.

but also to document that institutional knowledge. The idea is more for review and education, Peine has said in the past.

The current target is the city's utility system. Peine recently attended a seminar for the Kansas Municipal Energy Agency, aka KMEA, and at the Nov. 20 city commission meeting talked about some of his concerns. The city eventually will have to make a decision about the future of its electrical generating engines in light of federal mandates that will require engine upgrades. Some cities, such as Garnett, may find the upgrades too expensive and could opt to shut down their engines instead.

City Manager Joyce Martin assured Peine the city's power plant employees and administrators are keeping a close eye on the situation. She also assured Peine that every department has Standard Operating Procedure documents so generational knowledge is not lost.

The city also could take advantage of a program through KMEA that offers energy consultants to compare Garnett with other cities in hopes of improving fiscal fitness.

"At the end of the day, (utilities are) our greatest source of revenue," Peine said.

Mayor Greg Gwin said there were benefits to Peine's push to learn more about the city's utility system and improve documentation. The next step could be to determine a long-range plan to replace aging lines in the city's utility system.

Peine, who joined the commission in April, is the governing body's newest member, but perhaps not for long. Commissioner Dan Morgan has left his position with a move to Texas, and city officials currently are accepting applications to fill the remaining 16 months of his term. Gwin has served on the commission since April 2007.

The most recent commission was made of men in their late 30s to 40s — Peine, 37; Gwin, 48, and Morgan, 41 — making them all younger than the Baby Boomers. It remains to be seen if Peine and Gwin will appoint someone to the commission from their own generation or a generation older or younger. Before he left, Morgan suggested they appoint a woman to add diversity to the group.

After the next commissioner is appointed, Peine has a new target picked for review: the airport master plan. Peine told Martin he wants to go through the airport master plan to learn more about how the city operates the airport.

The library will have homemade refreshments and entertainment.

The Garnett Business and Professional Women are organizing a Holiday Boutique shopping event to coincide with the homes tour. It will be next door to the library at the Kirk House, 125 W. Fourth Ave.

New life for windmill farce

Gale-force PR and lobby effort will pursue tax credit

If you thought Hurricane Sandy was bad, wait 'til the cyclones of wind power public relations get done with your U.S. Congress over the next few weeks.

The November election has renewed hopes in the windmill electricity camp that the federal tax credit for wind power producers will be continued. Kansas Governor Sam Brownback as well as Senators Jerry Moran and Pat Roberts support the measure with a nod to jobs the industry has created in Kansas, and when push comes to shove the wind power tax credit decision may be the litmus test that determines whether

by Dane Hicks, PUBLISHER

Moran, Roberts and even tax-cutting Brownback have the foresight to turn their backs on the credit and do, long-term, what's best for the country.

Post Nov. 6, the pro-wind group The Wind Coalition, made up of wind power developers, manufacturers and others in eight south central states including Kansas, has been shoveling out the press releases in advance of talks on avoiding the "fiscal cliff," claiming:

- wind generated power is equal to or cheaper than natural gas peaking generation;

- the wind industry in Kansas has created 3,484 construction jobs, 262 operating and maintenance jobs and 8,569 indirect and induced jobs for Kansas residents;

- that the Kansas Renewable Portfolio Standard – the regulatory mandate that forces electric companies to have 20 percent of their energy capacity from renewable sources by 2020 – has become an important economic development tool for attracting new businesses to the state. By the same token, the federal tax credit that guarantees windmill operators 2.2¢ in tax credit for each kilowatt-hour they produce is another staple the industry probably can't survive without. That tax credit costs the U.S. about a billion dollars a year.

What those talking points don't relate, however, is the fading opacity of the façade that drives the entire wind power industry: The idea that somehow, because power companies are forced to buy some of their power from windmill companies and because taxpayers are forced to subsidize windmill companies, that we somehow burn less coal or otherwise reduce environmental impact.

Indeed, that is where the farce begins. Any amount of power generation produced by windmills and force-purchased by power companies still must be 100 percent backed up by other production from those companies – either by coal, nuclear or hydro. Mandatory purchase laws and tax credits may prime the industry pump with cash, but at least in this configuration they don't stop power companies from having to tool up to produce the same amount of electricity – whether the wind blows or not.

The final analysis in Kansas reveals a state law and a federal tax credit that create jobs wholly by virtue of government regulation and provide no true environmental benefit whatsoever, all while boosting electric rates as power companies try to replace the costs of those forced purchases or worse yet, result in degradation of the power grid as electric companies cut investments in equipment and maintenance to try to recoup those added costs.

With the current wind of economic naivete that blows through the federal government, there's no reason to expect the tax credit to die. Whether Brownback, Moran and Roberts will, under the light of fiscal cliff talks, see the tax credit for what it really is and oppose it, or whether they will continue to expect gold from the federal pork barrel, is a question probably already answered.

The amnesty fantasy

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

The networks had barely called the election for President Barack Obama before GOP elites rushed to embrace an amnesty for illegal immigrants.

Getting killed by almost 3-1 among Latino voters understandably concentrates the mind, but it's no reason to lose it. The post-election Republican reaction has been built on equal parts panic, wishful thinking and ethnic pandering. It's one thing to argue that amnesty is the right policy on the merits. It's another to depict it as the magic key to unlocking the Latino vote. John McCain nearly immolated himself within the Republican Party with his support for amnesty and did all of four points better among Latino voters in 2008 than Mitt Romney did in 2012, according to exit polls.

Lowry

What is the common thread uniting McCain, the advocate of "comprehensive" immigration reform, and Romney, the advocate of "self-deportation"? They are both Republicans supporting conservative economic policies. Surely, that had more to do with their showing among Latinos than anything they did or didn't say about immigration.

According to Census Bureau data, among native-born Hispanics, 50 percent of all households with children are headed by unmarried mothers. About 40 percent of all households receive benefits from a major welfare program. This doesn't mean that the GOP shouldn't try to appeal to persons in these households. It does mean that they aren't natural Republican voters.

Latinos tend to have liberal attitudes toward government. Take health care. An ImpreMedia/Latino Decisions poll of Latinos conducted on the eve of the election found that 61 percent of Latinos supported leaving Obamacare in place. Sixty-six percent believed government should ensure access to health insurance, perhaps because 32 percent of nonelderly Latinos lack health insurance, about twice the national average. These are facts that never intrude upon Wall Street Journal editorials scolding Republicans for supposedly turning their backs on budding new recruits. In the Journal's telling, if it weren't for Republican intransigence on immigration, Latino voters would be eagerly joining the fight for lower marginal tax rates and the block-granting of Medicaid.

Republican donors with a disproportionate influence in the party would be perfectly happy to jettison the cause of immigration enforcement. They are fine with a flood of low-skilled immigrants competing with low-skilled American workers. And why shouldn't they be? These immigrants don't suppress their wages; they care for their children and clean their pools.

Whenever it is pointed out that illegal immigration tends to harm low-skill workers already here, the comeback is the scurrilous canard that there are "some jobs that no Americans will do." But most hotel maids, construction workers, coal miners and workers in meatpacking -- all tough, thankless jobs -- are U.S.-born. If it is hard to entice legal workers into such positions, here is a radical concept: Pay them more.

None of this is to deny that the GOP has a tonal problem on immigration, or that Latino voters care deeply about the issue. Absent a greater economic appeal to all working-class voters, though, it's hard to see how an obviously opportunistic turnabout on immigration will help the party much. Amnesty isn't a quick fix for the GOP's problems. Would that it were.

Yeah, I was interested to read the article in the newspaper about the appraiser's office and the new digital maps they're getting, about how it's going to save us all this money because it's going to save the staff at the appraiser's office a lot of time and all this. I'm just wondering how exactly do we save money on that? If we save them a lot of time because we invest $40,000 worth of maps, how do we exactly save money on that? Are we going to cut hours or let someone go from the staff so we don't have to pay them any more and we saved all that time? Does it make them more efficient so they find some other way to recoup that $40,000 somewhere? If they tell us they're saving money I would like to know exactly where that will come from. I'm just not exactly sure how we save money if we don't cut staff or somehow make more money or save more money by making that investment of that $40,000. I wonder if the appraiser can explain how that works. I'm also wondering why the county commissioners didn't ask any of those questions because I didn't see that they'd questioned it in the paper.

On Tuesday, Nov. 20 there was a statement made on Phone Forum about special troubled children not needing to be in public schools. I totally disagree. What our troubled children need is social interaction in a normal, every day environment. Don't shut these children out just because they have special needs or problems. Love them all equally.

It was such a disappointment to open the Garnett paper and read in the forum about why do we have the troubled children in the new school. Shame on you, and I am willing to bet you are a religious person who attends church regularly. It sounds to me as if some of the pages of your Bible are missing, such as Love Thy Neighbor in our lives. I would be happy to purchase you a new Bible so you might reacquaint yourself with that basic tenet. So sad that we have people with this kind of mentality among us. I just so happen to be the grandma of a one year-old little girl with Down's Syndrome. We do not treat her any different than any other child. We all came from the good Lord Jesus Christ and I hope you have a good answer for this kind of comment when you meet up with him. God Bless you because whoever you are you need a lot of blessings to even consider this kind of thing let alone voice it in the paper. If you have these kinds of comments in the future please keep them to yourself. Thank you.

I just want to say that Garnett needs some activities for middle adults, like miniature golf course, a new video store and I think we need an animal shelter to adopt out animals. Thank you.

I'm want to know when the City of Garnett is going to make a no parking zone on the north side of east Fourth Street during church hours, because I still cannot get in and out of my fricking driveway and I'm getting tired of it. They need to do something. They gave us a jail we didn't need. They gave us a new school we didn't need. Why don't they give us something we do need?

The pressures of cooking

During one of my digs I found this old pressure gauge, which I have learned is from a pressure cooker.

At a London dinner party on the evening of April 12, 1682, the members of the Royal Society sat down to a meal such as they – or anyone else – had never eaten before. Cooked by the invited guest, 35-year-old French inventor Denis Papin, a pioneer of steam power, the evening's fare was prepared in Papin's latest marvel, the "steam digester."

Papin, an assistant to the renowned Irish physicist Robert Boyle, formulator of the laws governing gases, had developed his steam digester in 1679. It was a metal container with a safety valve and a tightly fitting lid, which increased internal steam pressure, raising a cooking liquid's boiling point.

Following the historic meal, the Royal Society's esteemed architect, Christopher Wren, wrote that thanks to the steam digester, "the oldest and hardest cow-beef may now be made as tender and savory as young and choice meat"; one wonders what was served at the meal. Wren oversaw publication of a booklet, "A New Digester," which offered recipes for steam cooking mutton, beef, lamb, rabbit, mackerel, eel, beans, peas, cherries, gooseberries, plums, pike and pigeon.

In the booklet, Papin astutely observed that pressure cooking preserved more of a food's natural flavor and nutritive value. Other contributors demonstrate the "bandwagon effect" of attempting to employ a new invention for a multiplicity of purposes. The authors offer methods for steam-cooking desserts, punches, hot toddies and puddings.

History's first pressure cooker bombed – figuratively and literally. Not only did the majority of Londoners not take favorably to the idea of steamed pike and pigeon, but those who purchased a digester and attempted its recipes often ended up with the evening's meal on the kitchen wall. The temperature vicissitudes of an open fire were no match for Papin's imperfect safety valve. Several serious accidents were reported.

Except for scientific applications, pressure vessels were forgotten for about 150 years. It was French emperor Napoleon Bonaparte who was responsible for the pressure cooker's reemergence.

In 1810, Napoleon, proclaiming that "an army moves on its stomach," was desperate to find a means of supplying preserved food to his troops. The government offered a handsome prize for a solution to the problem. Employing a modification of Papin's pressure cooker, French chef Nicholas Appert developed the first practical method for cooking, sterilizing and bottling foods. For his preservation technique, Appert won the prize of 12,000 Francs, and his methods reawakened interest in pressure cooking.

Manufacturers today claim that although pressure cookers, incorporating high safety standards, sell in respectable numbers, the public's main resistance to them is the same as it was in Papin's day: Fear of an explosion!

How many homes do you have?

God really desires for us to have 3 homes. A family home, a church home and our heavenly home. Most people have a family home. It has always been a part of the American dream to own a home. Even if some people aren't able to own a home they are able to rent or live in some type of housing. I have heard it said that "home is where the heart is."

Our dwelling can provide us with a safe, secure and comfortable place to live our life. Our home can also provide us with a way to express ourselves. A home says a lot about a person and may be the single largest investment we ever make.

Webster defines a home as - a place one holds dear because of personal feelings or relationships, a place of security and comfort.

The church can also be like a home for us. I am very lucky to be a part of a very small church. For most of my life I have attended the Greeley church. This church is just like an extended family to me. In many respects it is much like another home to me. When I say church I am not referring to the building but to the other people who attend there. God does not dwell in any building but enters in with the first believer in the door and leaves with the last believer out the door.

It is upon Christ himself that the church is built. The church implies no more than a gathering of people who have been called together. The key phrase here is called together. This is what makes the church like our home. By meeting as a gathering or body we provide support to other believers in time of need as well as being able to share in their joys. We can also provide support throughout the world through missions. The church should be a group of believers who care for you just as Jesus Christ cares for you.

Our third home will be heaven. Someday we will either die and go into the presence of the Lord or we will be raptured out of the world at the second coming of Christ. It is at this time the believer will become a permanent resident of heaven. This will be our final home.

In John 14:2-4 Jesus gives us a small glimpse of heaven. He says, "In my Fathers house are many rooms; if it were not so, I would have told you, I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come back and take you to be with me that you may also be where I am."

We do not know what our home in heaven will be like but I do know it will be the very best that a loving God who was willing to send his only Son to die on a cross for you and me can provide. God however does not provide this unconditionally. God requires that we receive Jesus Christ as our Savior. In John 14:6 Jesus says, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." Jesus makes it very clear there is no other way. Receive Jesus today and make for certain your heavenly home is secure.

1912: Garnett newspapers merge into one daily

Nov. 26, 2002

Ten months after a winter ice storm slammed eastern Kansas, causing mass power outages across the region, the final out-of-pocket costs to the City of Garnett have been totaled at some $67,500 as a result of the storm. Garnett City Manager Rick Doran said total damage costs to the city topped in at some $450,000. Local officials at both the city and county level were lauded for their record keeping and efficiency in wading through the onslaught of federal paperwork after the Jan. 30 ice storm that crusted over the region. One advantage of the storm was it allowed the city to replace worn infrastructure with new facilities and have the federal government pick up the bulk of the tab.

commissioners are trying to determine the extent of damage to a county road bridge in northwest Anderson County after a brush fire got away from county crews last week.

Nov. 26, 1992

The Anderson County Commission spent about one-half of an hour discussing the need for an additional deputy coroner in the county after learning of an incident on Sunday in which the district coroner didn't get to Kincaid until about 12:30 p.m., almost two hours after a fire claimed the life of a Kincaid woman. A commissioner said he heard complaints from residents due to the fact that the body of the victim was not removed from the scene. Apparently the deputy district coroner could not be reached, so the district coroner from Osage City had to be called in on the case.

An 8-year-old boy was injured in a hunting accident Thursday north of Welda when a gun accidentally discharged. He was picking up guns laying on the ground when one of the guns discharged. The pellets ricocheted off rocks and struck the boy in the left side above the waist and left arm. He was taken to Anderson County Hospital and three buckshot pellets were removed from his left arm.

The Garnett Evening Review has purchased the name, subscription list and good will of the Garnett Journal-Plaindealer (weekly). During the past six years, the subscription list of the Review has grown to over 1,800, and with the addition of the Journal-Plaindealer list, will be about 2,500, an unprecedented daily newspaper subscription list for a town and county of the population of Garnett and Anderson County. This final consolidation has been inevitable or some time, in fact, from the time two daily papers were established in Garnett. The town is too small and patronage too limited for two daily papers on a paying basis.

Youth biddy basketball registration now open

Biddy Basketball will be offered to kids in grades 1-6. The 1st and 2nd graders will be a new addition to the program this year. Age divisions will be 1st-2nd, 3rd-4th, & 5th-6th. Whether or not they are co-ed or not will depend on the number of entrants per age group. Also depending on how many teams there are for all age divisions will be the decision for what days/nights the games will be held.

All registrations must be signed by a parent or legal guardian. Forms are available at City Hall and must be filled out and returned to the Garnett Recreation Center during working hours. (M-F 6-9AM, 2-8PM, Sat. 8AM-12PM, & Sun. 1-5PM) If there are any questions please feel free to contact Brad Yeubanks at City Hall (785) 448-5496.

Financial aid is available for those requesting assistance with Recreation youth programs. For more information contact Brad Yeubanks at City Hall (785) 448-5496.

There will be a free basketball clinic offered at the Garnett Recreation Center on Saturday, Dec. 8. Girls will be from 9:30 a.m.-11 a.m. and the boys will be from 11:15 a.m.-12:45 p.m. The Anderson County High School basketball teams will be instructing these clinics.

Garnett Library takes part in state reading program

The 2012 Kansas Reads to Preschoolers had volunteer readers reading "Lola Loves Stories."

Kansas Reads to Preschoolers is a statewide reading initiative supporting early childhood literacy and a one-book/one-state inter-generational reading project to highlight the importance of reading to children. This year's chosen book was "Lola Loves Stories" by Anna McQuinn. The story is about how Lola and her daddy love to go to the library together. Each night Lola reads a story, and the next day she acts it out. She becomes a fairy princess, a pilot, a farmer, and a tiger! Lola shows her love of reading and imaginative play in this book. The goal of this project was that every Kansas child, from birth to age five, be read to during Kansas Reads to Preschoolers Week, November 12th-17th, 2012.

The Garnett Public Library and Anderson County volunteers read to over 260 children, including 14 daycares, preschools, schools, and the Anderson County Health Department, and were able to hand out 245 copies of the book. The library had a "special" storytime making tiger masks, eating cookies, and reading "Lola Loves Stories" and "Lola at the Library" which is also by Anna McQuinn.

We also had a special drawing for a basket of items that went along with the story including a glow wand, foam airplane, gingerbread house, and bear slippers. The winner of this alphabet bag was Braden Miller, son of Brad and Heidi Miller. The library staff were grateful to sponsors and many volunteers that were willing to donate their time reading to children.

Sponsors for this year's project were: American Legion Auxiliary, Anderson County Hospital Auxiliary, BPW, Chapter Y P.E.O. of Garnett, DAR-Four Winds Chapter, Garnett Lions Club, Garnett Rotary Club, Optimist Club of Garnett, Patriots Bank, Rockers Insurance Agency and Roland and Joyce Debrick.

Prayer and coffee 9 a.m. every Sunday; men's Bible study at the church 7 a.m. Tuesday; Nov. 25- practice starts for the Christmas program during children's church; Dec. 2-church fellowship potluck dinner and meeting following services at City Hall community room; Everyone is welcome; Dec. 23-children's church will be presenting "Just a Little Christmas" during worship time.

UMC
 Scripture at Nov. 18 United Methodist Church service was Psalm 24:1-10, Proverbs 3:9-10 and Mark 13:1-8. Pastor Leslie Jackson gave the sermon. Several church members and the pastor delivered shoebox gifts (fill a shoebox with Christmas gifts) that members made. They took them to Ottawa Bible Church and will be sent to needy children. The next challenge is Bag It For The Big Man (Santa). We will again get Christmas gifts but these are for local teenage children. Pastor Jackson feels that teenagers are sometimes overlooked at Christmas. Anyone can help us. Flyers will be posted around town.

United Methodist Women met in fellowship hall of the United Methodist Church for the November meeting. Roll call was answered with a Thanksgiving article or scripture verse. The December challenge for the church is Santa Sacks for teenagers and it was decided to donate to this cause. Jane Ward received the drawing gift. The next meeting will be Dec. 6 with a carry-in luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Each member is to bring a gift for the Christmas drawing. The meeting adjourned with prayer. Members enjoyed snacks and visiting.

BOE
 The November regular meeting was held Nov. 12. The resignation of Kloma Buckle who represented Position #7 At Large was accepted with regrets and thanks for her service. The Board Vacancy Resolution was adopted.

In other matters Superintendent Jerry Turner reviewed the building water leaks, discussed special education transportation and repairs to the wrecked van. He has congratulated the volleyball and football teams and coaches for their work and effort. A new licensed personnel evaluation requirement was discussed. The high school hosted scholar's bowl on Nov.6 with staff, students and patrons volunteering to assist.

Principal Richard Burkdoll stated the elementary students enjoyed treats for Halloween provided by the PTO, Colony and Kincaid businesses.

Council
 Mayor Neal Wallace opened the Oct. 30 meeting with council members, Donna Westerman, Melissa Hobbs, Debbie Oswald and city personnel in attendance. Water Works Department reported the State of Kansas is still under water warning; therefore the City of Colony's water warning resolution remains in effect. They ask residents to severely limit outside watering. Some water resources remain low.

The budget hearing was held, no public comments were brought forward therefore the budget and Ordinance 421 were passed. Past due water bills were reviewed with action to be taken. The Boy Scouts donated six trees to the city as part of their community project. The new trees will be planted around the ballpark for shade purposes.

The council has agreed to have the downtown siren checked and if not cost prohibitive, repair it. The Emergency Management Services (EMS) determined when the new siren at the fire station was put in place on Pine Street, the downtown siren belonged to the city and if the city does not repair it, the county EMS will remove the siren.

Veterans
 The Kincaid VFW opened the annual program at the Crest School auditorium on Nov. 12. The colors were presented; Pledge of Allegiance was said. Four Crest students presented the Acclamation on Veterans Day. The Crest band played "America". A senior girl held the microphone while around ten veterans introduced themselves, giving branch of service in which they served. World War II, Korean, Vietnam, Iraq and Afghanistan veterans were honored. A moment of silence was held and taps were played. Refreshments were served.

December Celebrations
 Dec. 1-Charles Ward, Debbie Woos; 2-Stanley Luedke, Bob Prasko; 5-Mika Westerman Morrison; 6-Leslie Gilliland; 7-Brooklyn Jones; 12-Kerry Allen, Missy Strickler; 19-Virginia Dutton, Mary Clemans; 20-Wilma Goodell; 21-Laura Schmidt; 25-Yvonne Goins; 26-Jerrick Jones; 28-Stratton McGhee; 30-Clair Wiley.

Around Town
 If residents would like to support the Angel Trees effort, they may do so at the GSSB, Colony Branch. Your help is needed. You may adopt a child or an entire family. If you have toys or money to donate, they are most welcome. See the employees at the bank or phone them at 620-852-3512.

Roger and Debbie Oswald purchased the trailer in which Steve and Sue Michael owned in west Colony. The Oswalds own the lots and have the trailer rented.

Kloma and Richard Buckle, Missy and Sid Hobbs and their boys and Janila Preston spent the evening of Nov. 2 with Kloma and Janila's mother Myrtle and husband Elton Francis at Iola Nursing Home celebrating Myrtle's birthday. Cake and ice cream were served and the boys liked watching Myrtle blow out her candles on the cake. She had gifts to open and the evening was enjoyed.

Peyton Schmidt celebrated her 5th birthday with family at her new home (former Bill Michael home). She is the daughter of Nathan and Laura Schmidt. Peyton's sisters are Jaycee and Hanna. Roger and Debbie Oswald are her grandparents.

Our town welcomes Joyce Sipe, a new resident this month.

Where were you for Thanksgiving? Did you hold a Thanksgiving get-together? Let us know at colonynews@ckt.net, bring to 702 Pine St. and put in leave-a-note box in carport or you may mail to this address at Colony, 66015 or phone 620-852-3379.
