Hospital fate hinges on vote

County, ACH officers prepare for spring
vote on new facilities

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Without a new facility, Anderson County could lose its hospital, county government and hospital leaders said last week.

That's not a threat to scare voters into approving a bond issue that could top $26 million, officials said. That's the reality of what could happen if the current six-decade old building fails, they say.

An engineering study found it would cost more to fix infrastructure problems at the current facility than to construct a new one, and some of the problems with the present building may be impossible to solve. If structural problems like concrete encased plumbing, vintage electrical circuitry, roof problems and cracks in the foundation aren't resolved, Saint Luke's Health System could pull out of its lease agreement with the county to provide medical services and staff. Finding a new service provider would be difficult without an updated building, officials said.

Anderson County Commissioners and the Anderson County Hospital Board of Trustees met last week to discuss a bond issue likely to appear on the April ballot. Although details including final costs continue to be hammered out, it's likely the bond issue will ask voters to approve more than $26 million to build a new hospital and long-term care unit. Under a new lease agreement, St. Luke's would then increase its annual lease payment from $440,000 to $1.024 million in order to help the hospital make its bond payments. It's expected the county would be expected to pay about $375,000 per year for 30 years with interest somewhere between 3 and 4 percent, Dudley Feuerborn served as an Anderson County commissioner for 24 years.

Feuerborn recalls challenges, highlights of terms

Listening, cooperation valued by longtime county commissioner

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Dudley Feuerborn learned an important lesson not long after he first took office as an Anderson County Commissioner more than 20 years ago.

A bridge east of Garnett had burned and needed to be replaced, but a landowner was opposed to the county's plans for a new bridge. Feuerborn decided to talk with the man, hoping to avoid a lengthy legal battle for the right-of-way. Feuerborn met with the man weekly, learned why the man was against the bridge and found a way to resolve the problem. The man signed a right-of-way agreement and the bridge - now known as the Hiner bridge - was built. The man and Feuerborn became better friends after the incident.

That's when Feuerborn learned how important it is for public leaders to listen.

"No matter what the issue is, it can usually be resolved if the parties sit down and communicate," he said.

That lesson still rings true at the end of Feuerborn's 24 years as county commissioner. He decided not to run for re-election last November, and a retirement party was held in his honor Monday.

The decision to retire from public office actually was made a couple years ago but has roots even farther, back in 2000, Feuerborn said. In the 2000 election, Feuerborn lost his long-held seat to his cousin, Bill Craig, in a narrow election. At the time, Feuerborn had been in office 16 years. His goal was to serve 20 years, so Feuerborn ran for the seat again in 2004 and won. He ran again in 2008, but decided soon after that he would not run again.

Now 71, Feuerborn said he wants to spend time traveling, especially taking motorcycle trips. He enjoys visiting historic places like museums

$1M in loan, grants to help Colony sewer plan

City works to head off problems before they escalate, clerk says

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COLONY — Four years worth of plans to improve Colony's sewer system likely will be given a boost if the city receives a $1.003 million USDA loan and grants.

City officials are applying for the loan to pay for improvements to the city's sanitation system. The process started about four years ago and the city received a grant last year for $274,000 toward the project, with the city paying another $274,000. The loan would wrap the city's portion into a larger project for a total cost of about $1.003 million, with the city expected to pay about half, or $503,000. The city increased its sewer usage cost Jan. 1, 2012, adding an extra $1.25 per gallon to cover the loan. The loan application typically is a formality, and work is expected to begin on the project within weeks.

The city has battled problems with its sanitation system for several years. While many cities now are fighting settling problems caused by drought, it actually was a rainy season several years ago that brought Colony's problems to light. Rain and runoff filtered into the city's sanitation system, and

Today is last chance to file for spring elections

Gwin unopposed so far,
no filings made yet by USD 365 incumbents

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

Today is the deadline to file for city and school board positions up for election April 2. As of Monday morning, only one person had filed for an open Garnett city commission seat and no one, including incumbents, had filed for their seats in USD 365. The filing deadline is noon today at Garnett City Hall for the city commission seat, and at the Anderson County clerk's office at the courthouse for all other races.

Garnett Mayor Greg Gwin filed to retain his seat, which he has held since 2007. So far, he is the only candidate in that race.

No one has filed for seats in USD 365. They include seats held by Pat Rockers, Mike Barnes and Deanna Wolken.

Unemployment holds steady across region

State reports strong job growth in last month of 2012

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA — Unemployment remained steady for most of the region in December, while the state marked the strongest month of job growth for the year according to labor statistics released Friday.

Unemployment in Anderson County was 6.0 percent in December, up slightly from November's rate of 5.9 but significantly lower than the same month last year. In December 2011, unemployment was 7.1 percent.

Statewide, unemployment was 5.4 percent, unchanged from November and down from 6.4 percent in December 2011.

"December marks the strongest month of job growth since January and ends 2012 on a strong note," Tyler Tenbrink, Senior Labor Economist, said. "This increase made up for the losses in the prior three months, putting the state back on the longer term trend of positive but slow job growth."

Over the course of 2012, Kansas added 13,800 nonfarm jobs and 13,200 private sector jobs. Six of the major industries also reported job gains since one year ago. Professional and business services added 9,700 jobs, an increase of 6.3 percent. Manufacturing gained 3,900 jobs, a 2.4 percent growth, and education and health services added 3,000 jobs or 1.6 percent.

and forts. He also is a member of volunteer groups like the Optimists, and would like to help the fair board determine how to make the county fair viable again. He also occasionally helps his son at Feuerborn Family Funeral Home, the family business he ran for many years.

Growing up, Feuerborn always was interested in county government. His father served as a county commissioner from 1948 to 1952. Feuerborn has lived on the family farm all his life, moving just a few feet away when he built a new house on the land. When he first decided to run for office in 1984, Feuerborn simply wanted to serve his community. He was not motivated by any particular issue and had no ax to grind, he said.

But the transition from business owner to public figure wasn't easy. It was quite an adjustment to work as part of a three-person board subject to the will of the people, compared to being the sole decision maker for his company.

But thanks to lessons learned early, such as with the Hiner bridge problem, Feuerborn is satisfied with his years of service.

That doesn't mean it was easy, of course. There are things Feuerborn wishes he had done differently, especially concerning the building of a new jail in the late 2000s. Many aspects of the jail project could have been handled better, Feuerborn said. In particular, the county should have had more oversight of the project from the beginning, and should have been paying closer attention to the construction, he said. The jail has faced several problems over the years, such as electrical issues, that could have been avoided in the initial stages of construction, he said. On the other hand, some early but controversial decisions turned out well, like the jail's location and the ability to pay off part of the bonds by renting beds to other counties.

In his 24 years of service, there are many accomplishments Feuerborn recalled proudly. The stability of the county's workforce likely is thanks to an equitable pay system and salary committee adopted by commissioners several years ago. The county's road and bridge crew handles hundreds of miles of county roads, which Feuerborn said is one of the biggest challenges faced by commissioners.

Most of all, Feuerborn is proud of the way county commissioners learned to work with other governmental entities, particularly the City of Garnett. When he first took office, the city and county did not always get along, particularly when it came to law enforcement. Thanks to training provided by the state, Feuerborn learned techniques that helped him and other leaders improve relationships. Since the late 1980s, the county and city commissioners meet regularly to keep each other abreast of local issues. There have been several projects that couldn't have been completed without their cooperation, such as improvements to the fair grounds, projects to improve streets, and the formation of a joint economic development group. Improvements to the county courthouse, such as a new roof and weatherproofing the basement, also make his list of proudest accomplishments because it helped preserve the historic courthouse - the centerpiece of the county's business.

Feuerborn also served leadership positions in state groups such as the Kansas Association of Counties, and developed connections across the state that have helped Anderson County in various ways.

Because of the four years when Feuerborn lost his seat, he knows what "retirement" from county government feels like. He'll miss it, but eventually he will adapt to life outside of public office.

"After a while you get that all out of your head and enjoy the time," Feuerborn said.

The commission will continue to face challenges with several controversial issues on the horizon, such as a continuing recession, ever-increasing costs for supplies such as fuel, and a proposal to build a new hospital.

"Either a community is green and growing or dead and dying," he said. "Keeping Anderson County growing was always one of my goals. It's not as prosperous as it once was, but hopefully it can be again."

LICKTEIG

August 23, 1918-January 15, 2013

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW
Published January 22, 2013

Florence Sophia (Brummel) Lickteig, age 94, of Greeley, KS passed away January 15, 2013 at the Anderson County Hospital, Garnett, Kansas.

Lickteig

She was born in rural Richmond, KS on August 23, 1918 the sixth of seven children of Frederick and Helena "Lena" (Bach) Brummel. She graduated from West Scipio School in 1932.

Florence grew up during the Great Depression, and helped her "Pop" disk, cultivate and hay the fields with horse-drawn machinery and also milked, in her words "a lot of cows". She worked as a housekeeper and nanny for three different families in the Kansas City area in the mid-1930s, before moving to Elgin, Illinois in 1937 with her sister Marcella to work at the Elgin Watch factory. She returned to work in Kansas City in 1938 after factory lay-offs. In 1939, Florence moved back to her parent's farm to help care for her mother who had suffered two broken legs in a farm accident.

On August 26, 1941 she married Maurice J. "Dutch" Lickteig at St. Therese Catholic Church in Richmond, KS. They made their home on the 1895 Lickteig family farm northwest of Greeley, KS and to this marriage ten children were born. Seven sons: Jacob, Ronald K., Merle, Dean, Howard, James F. and Richard; and three daughters: Nancy J., Dorothy J., and Lynn.

Florence was active in St. John's Catholic Church in Greeley, and served as Vice President of the Altar Society in the 1960s. HOSPITAL...

which translates to a property tax increase of about $60 per year on a $100,000 valued home. Those figures are preliminary estimates and could change.

The county owns the hospital and leases it to Saint Luke's health system, which has provided staff and medical services for about 17 years under the lease and operations agreement. But the current building was constructed in 1949 with renovations in 1968 and 2000 and faces numerous infrastructure issues. An independent engineering firm found it likely would cost about $15 million to fix some of the problems, and some repairs would be very difficult or impossible. For example, the hospital's basement is built on bedrock. Inside the building, a drop-down ceiling provides only about 18 inches between the ceiling and roof. There isn't enough room to lower the ceiling in order to add space on a second floor, and it would be difficult to impossible to dig under the bedrock to add basement space. That means any new equipment, particularly heating and air conditioning equipment, must be installed on the roof. The building and its roof may not be able to handle the weight of such equipment.

Inside the building, offices and exam rooms are crammed into any available space, including the dark and dank basement with its low ceiling and exposed pipes.

The stark reality of the infrastructure problem has convinced Anderson County Commissioner Jim Johnson, a former administrator of the hospital, that a new building is the county's only option. By building a new facility, part of the bonds could be paid by revenue from the lease agreement with St. Luke's; without their help, the county would be stuck with repair bills and could lose health care services.

"I'm concerned about this. I want to see our county continue to be serviced by a hospital. It's part of the reason a lot of people, particularly people my age, retired here. It's part of our fabric," Johnson said. "It's essential if we're going to maintain a balanced community."

Even though Johnson said he agrees a new building is needed, it will be a tough sell to the public. The county, like the rest of the country, continues to battle a recession. Industry is scarce in Anderson County, made even more difficult by the loss of three companies and their 70 jobs in the past two years or so.

Property owners are paying off bonds for a new jail constructed in late 2008 and a new elementary school in Garnett which opened last August. In addition to those financial concerns are questions about the fate of the health care industry, which is facing new national regulations by 2014.

Yet despite those concerns, hospital administrator Denny Hachenberg said he believes voters will approve the new hospital.

"We have a compelling story to tell," Hachenberg said. "Once people understand what it means to them and how we arrived at those figures, if they know all that and still don't support it I will be very surprised."

Hachenberg did not want to discuss specific plans or cost estimates until final details had been worked out. The hospital's board of trustees will meet Jan. 28 to address some of those details, and the county's bond counsel was working to develop a ballot question that is expected to be completed by the end of the month or early February.

After that, hospital supporters will have only a couple of months to roll the project out to voters. County commissioners Johnson and Eugene Highberger said they were impressed with efforts to build the new elementary school, and suggested hospital officials follow a similar model. In that instance, a series of town hall meetings helped address questions and concerns, but the process took several months and was organized by a grassroots committee of supporters.

The new facility would increase ACH's surgical capacity to two suites and expand the specialty clinics. It would construct eight in-patient rooms to do away with existing privacy problems, among other improvements.

If the new facility is built, the lease agreement with St. Luke's would span 10 years. At the end of that time, it's possible St. Luke's could continue with a new lease. Even if St. Luke's were to decide not to continue, the county would have a modern facility to use in negotiations with another health care system, Johnson said. Without a modern facility, it would be difficult to convince another provider to take over health care services, he said.

"The only question is, 'Is this the right thing for Anderson County?' I certainly believe it is," Johnson said.

YOUR LIFE IS A STORY. TELL IT WELL.

Beyond the argument

Concealed carry permit holders find their own place in national gun debate

A whole new batch of local and area residents met at the Garnett Shooting Range Saturday to take the concealed weapons carry training course which is required to get their concealed carry permit in Kansas. As of today, pending the appropriate and required background checks, a whole new class of qualified individuals may be carrying weapons on their person.

EDITORIAL

by Dane Hicks, PUBLISHER

And though the President's new initiative on gun control last week was no doubt playing in the background, a handful of those new permit holders we talked with last week weren't taking the class out of some threat that concealed carry might be banned (so far no one has mentioned that). They wanted the right to carry concealed weapons, instead, because the slaughter of more than 20 elementary children in Connecticut re-awakened them to the fact that there are bad people out there.

Even though the relationship isn't direct, however, the new concealed carry permit holders don't live in a vacuum and neither does anyone else in our country. Firearms enthusiasts and 2nd Amendment cherishes have been buying up semi-auto rifles, accessories and ammunition in the past month like they were going out of style – because their fear has been that since guns are the easiest target in the debate spawned by the Sandy Hook massacre, President Obama would seek the quickest political points in “doing something” about gun violence and start a nationwide federal clamp down on guns.

The rhetoric and the maybe-justified paranoia among gun lovers has yet to be fulfilled by federal effort, and the president tells us a door-to-door canvass by jack booted federal thugs in search of our guns won't be forthcoming. While the Biden task force on gun violence recommended the banning of “assault weapons” (whatever an assault weapon really is?), most of its subsequent recommendations were for more bureaucracy and study – easily countered in the future and not very effective at removing gun rights.

At its worst, the Biden task force fell heir to the tunnel vision of nearly every task force that is assembled after some tragic event to find answers. While Sandy Hook was a national heartbreak, a broader assessment of gun violence in America was and is still warranted; one that addresses urban gun violence and the predominance of gun violence among impoverished ethnic and minority communities which account for the lion's share of American violent crime.. A task force that refuses to address racial, criminal and economic factors in its assessment of gun violence on a national scale hasn't done its job.

In truth, America can live without military assault weapons, the same way it can live with a little less freedom speech, a little less voting rights or a little less speedy or less impartial jury. But taken on the whole, outside the specific horror of a single event, do we want to?

The argument will go on, and the truth is the back and forth matters very little to the new class of concealed carry permit holders. They have looked beyond the endless argument to the practical reality: they simply plan to protect themselves and their families when the law cannot.

Government shouldn't ignore its own laws

BY DOUG ANSTAETT

KANSAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

A prevailing argument among Republicans today is that government has simply become too large.

It must be reined in.

We couldn't agree more. So this year, we are going to adopt the mantra that, yes, government has become too large, it has become unresponsive to the public and downright arrogant about its importance.

Anstaett

Of course, some of our reasons for believing this aren't about lowering taxes and reducing regulations. No, our reasons are these:

- When government gets so large that it can ignore its own laws, it has become too large.
- When government can place burdensome costs on the people's right to know by jacking up the charges for retrieving what is rightfully the people's property — public records, for instance — the government has become too large.
- And when government can thumb its nose at its own law enforcement and legal system because it doesn't like a particular court decision, government has become too large.

Government has three branches: executive, legislative and judicial. They are all designed to provide checks and balances to each other. The press is there to provide a check on all three.

The Kansas Press Association is pursuing legislative changes this year that are simply designed to force government to do what it is supposed to do under the law.

We shouldn't have to do this, but we've been forced to do it by government officials who believe essentially that they are above the law.

We have reporters who are trying to fulfill the watchdog role that is so important to our democracy.

Yet, those reporters are met at every turn by “public servants” who have forgotten the meaning of the phrase.

Why do we have a Kansas Open Records

Act if access to those public records being sought by reporters or private citizens comes only when accompanied by deep pockets or a huge checkbook?

KORA cannot fulfill its purpose if public officials are allowed to gouge the public and press every time someone seeks a peek at the records of what government is doing.

Taxpayers already pay the salaries of every government employee. One of the duties under the law is for those employees to create public documents to record what has been done. We pay for the paper and computers those public records are printed or stored upon and we pay for the file cabinets and computer networks that store them. We pay for the electricity to keep the rooms comfortable and for the chairs and desks used by those staff members.

Why, then, should we have to pay anything other than nominal costs for access to those records?

Senate Bill 10 has been filed by new Pittsburg Republican Sen. Jake LaTurner. The bill would eliminate 95 percent of the frivolous charges made today by government officials when records are sought. Mr. LaTurner, of course, will be told he is naive. He will hear from the government-paid lobbyists who represent the cities, counties, school boards and other public bodies that this bill would create unimaginable burdens for those government workers.

The taxpayer-funded lobbyists will try to convince legislators that they must charge for records or risk being inundated with frivolous requests for access.

And they'll argue that the cost of doing all that research for citizens and the press will be impossible to fund from their puny office budgets, what with all the budget-cutting going on.

I hope Mr. LaTurner and others will meet those crocodile tears with a reality check.

Government has become too large, and it must become a servant of the people again.

Doug Anstaett is executive director of the Kansas Press Association.

Third graders should know how to read

Every now and again there's an idea that sounds good in the Statehouse, makes sense to a lot of Kansans, and turns into a tiger once it gets out of the Statehouse.

This read-by-third-grade proposal of Gov. Sam Brownback appears to be one of those. A good idea—that you have to wonder how it is going to be received out across the state.

Kansans want their children, or their children's children, or even the neighbor children to grow up and get good jobs and start families and all of that. The American, err...Kansas way of life.

For a good part of that idyllic future we hope for, Kansans need to be able to read.

Brownback says third grade is the bright yellow line for reading.

Don't wait for anyone substantial to show up at legislative hearings to testify in opposition to the idea.

The test will come when parents get the note from the school that says their child isn't advancing to fourth grade because the child can't read well.

Imagine the social stigma...the innocent question at the office or the neighborhood picnic, when you say, “Billy is going into, what...the fourth grade next year?”

by Martin Hawver KANSAS STATEHOUSE COLUMNIST

That's when parents are going to come unglued. And, with a little luck, they won't find anyone in state government who will take their complaint seriously.

Brownback said the third grade break point is important because if the state allows kids to get much older, say, seventh grade, then they have probably lost a lot of chances to learn between third and seventh grade. Delay the reading proficiency test until high school, and some kids will just drop out before getting that important high school diploma.

“We do a lot of things in school before third grade, but this very simply makes teaching reading the most important thing we have to do. There are a lot of things you do in kindergarten, and the early grades. But: This is the one thing

I agree with our local publisher for questioning the wisdom of the tourism committee in outsourcing a $10,000 brochure printing to foreign publishers. We encourage our locals to shop at home to preserve our community and to spend our tax money with local business.

Sir: I am an American by birth, farmer by choice, senior citizen by date and taxpayer by conscription, meaning local, state, county and federal. To state my distaste of being slowly impoverished, I am putting my forever flag stamps on mail upside down. A flag upside down means in distress- send help. I invite others of like mind to do so in a nonviolent act of protest. From a baby boomer and taxpayer.

Hi, I read in the paper a while back that the City of Garnett will be this year's business of the year award winner. How is that? Is the city a business? Does the city take its products and services out into the market every day and fight competitors and all other forms of problems in order to try to make a profit and make a living? No, the city has the legal power to take your tax money and seize your property if you won't pay. There's no competition for city utilities- you have to pay or get shut off- however the city has been in lots of lawsuits to make the gas companies open their pipelines to competitors because it wasn't fair to the city not to have any competition to buy from. This deal with printing our own city brochure in Salina of all places and ignoring the local printers, well that just takes the cake. Business of the year? Not in my opinion.

In response to the individual's complaint in the Phone Forum section dated January 15 regarding not being able to wear short shirts to show off our middle and no short shorts to show off the wiggle in our rear end, let me ask you to stand back and take a good sincere look at the decline of morals in this country. Where do you think this decline comes from? Now, I grant you, this is only one of the phases of the cause. But we have to start someplace to get this nation back on track as a good, decent minded and moral country. Cover your body and clear your mind. Thank you.

To that blooming idiot that don't like the way our high school dance team dresses. Apparently you have never been to a KU game and seen how their dance team dresses, because those girls have no morals of any kind.

I think it's silly for people to complain that city employees get free membership to the rec facilities. What's wrong with promoting healthy living habits? I think it's a great perk. Most employers provide some kind of perk for their employees. Besides I'll bet less than half of them take advantage of this. City employees, please correct me if I am wrong on this. I'd love to hear the numbers. Thank you.

you have to do.

“It puts pressure on the system, but that's what I am trying to do,” Brownback said.

That progression through grades is important to parents, and with a little luck, and an ironclad (with exceptions, of course, for children with learning disabilities, or who are new to the English language) third grade rule, parents may spend a little more time reading with their kids, maybe testing them at home by having them read a few newspaper stories.

The progression to fourth grade reflects on the parents and may be a key to making it work.

Other states have done this, but it's new for Kansas and it is going to become a test of how much Kansans want the state to grow and prosper.

And...at least at the third grade level, all the kids are about the same size.

PV upsets Vikings at Pleasanton

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

PLEASANTON - Jordan Horstick fought into the double-digits Saturday in Central Heights' unsuccessful bid to salvage 3rd place at the Pleasanton Blu-Jays Mid-Season Tournament, but tough defense from Prairie View contained the Vikes scoring and sent Central Heights home with a 57-43 defeat.

It was the final blow in a tournament upset performance that saw the second-ranked Vikings win handily 62-36 over Uniontown but fall 47-39 to a big, tough, hard playing Humboldt team that eventually took the tournament championship from the Crest Lancers.

"Rebounds. Rebounds. Rebounds," said head coach Rusty Cannady of the Humblott loss. "Against a bigger and more physical team the key to success it to make stops defensively and get the rebound. In the first quarter we made stops but we gave up 9 offensive rebounds." The Vikings were down by only two at the half 21-19, but Humboldt pushed the lead to 10 by the end of the third period. Horstick led that attack as well with 17, followed by Trever Burkdoll with 9, Tanner Erhart 8, Tyler Hendron 3 and Drew Beckwith 2.

Horstick nailed 26 in the Uniontown game, which was never much of a contest with clear dominance by the Viking defense. Central Heights was up 43-17 at the half and closed it 62-36. Erhart had 11, Beckwith 9, Burkdoll 5, Tristan Davis 6, Hendron 3 and Adam Pryor 2.

Prairie View edged ahead of the Vikings 27-22 at the half after a tie at 14 at the end of the first period. The Buffaloes held up the offensive pressure and worked inside shooting to maintain their lead, staying just ahead of the Vikings in both periods of the second half. Erhart had 9, Davis 6, Burkdoll 7, Beckwith 4 and Hendron 3.

Viking girls top Crest, fall to PV & Humboldt

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

PLEASANTON - The Central Heights Lady Vikings struggled to keep up offensively in their final Saturday contest in the Pleasanton tournament, losing 43-19 to Humboldt.

The Vikings lost their opener 43-36 to Jayhawk Linn but overpowered Crest 56-27 in the followup.

Central Heights wrestled to a 10-9 lead at the end of the first period against JL, but the first period just warmed up the Jayhawk defense which held the Vikes to only 2 points in the second period and 6 points in the third. A fourth quarter rally that saw the Vikes hammer in 18 points wasn't enough to catch up.

Brianna Erhart led CHHS with 17 points, Whitney Kraus had 10, Sydney Meyer 6, Kenzie

Hayard 2 and Sam Stegner 1.

But it was the Vikings who drilled its offense against Crest in the second round game from the loser's bracket.

"We came out a little flat but we found our rhythm defensively after the first quarter and we held them to two points in the second period," said coach Scott Lane. "Whitney Kraus showed what kind of scorer she can be."

The Vikings were up 26-11 after that big second period and pushed through the second half for the 56-27 win. Kraus led with 20, Erhart had 12, Meyer 9, Stegner 6, Regan Markley 5 and Hayward 4.

Kurston Gilliland led Crest with 12, Brooklyn LaCross had 7, Madison Covey and Madison Kellar both had 2.

Crest's Kyle Hammd drives to the inside against a Humboldt defender during Saturday's championship game of the Pleasanton tournament.

Crest 2nd in Pleasanton tourney

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

PLEASANTON - Humboldt pulled a Jeckyl & Hyde act in the championship game of the boys side of the Pleasanton Mid-Season Tournament Saturday, coming out of the locker room to defeat the Crest Lancers 72-50.

Crest took a 29-25 lead into the half, but Humboldt exploded in the third period and overwhelmed the Lancers with a 28-point fire storm in the period while holding the Lancers to 10.

Head coach Travis Hermreck called a time-out to try to put himself and his team back on track and the defense improved, but by then the margin had been laid down and the tall, hard charging Humboldt team wasn't going to give anything back without a fight.

Bottom ranked Crest manhandled host Pleasanton in the Tuesday opener 70-37 and edged Prairie View 47-44 to set up the championship game. Tournament scoring and stats for Crest was not available as of presstime.

'Dawgs 3rd in Baldwin tourney

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

BALDWIN - The third-ranked Anderson County's boys squad waltzed through Augusta last week at the Baldwin mid-season basketball tournament only to bounce off eventual tourney champs Baldwin and then take a 56-53 win over Wellsville for third place.

Both AC's Drew Mechnig and Eric Tastove were selected to the All-Tournament Team. Baldwin defeated Bonner Springs 40-37 in an overtime win to take the trophy.

Tastove hammered out 24 points against Wellsville and was four-for-four in free throw shooting, but he was the only Bulldog in double digits. The Bulldogs got off to a slow start in the first quarter but kicked in gear in the second period to take a 31-22 lead into the locker room. But Wellsville put on the blitz in the fourth period to outscore the Bulldogs 22-12 in the final minutes to bring the margin within 3 at the buzzer.

Carter Mann led the Cardinals with 18 points and Shamus Kearney had 16.

Drew Mechnig hit 6 for the Bulldogs, followed by Tanner Lickteig with 4, Zach Hilliard with 2 and Jack Rickabaugh with 1.

The Anderson County Jr. High boys started their 2012-13 basketball season at the Wellsville Tournament on Saturday, Jan. 5. The 8th grade team won their first game against Baldwin 34-21. Trevor Johnston was the leading scorer with 12 points.

In their second game of the tournament, A.C. went up against a tough Wellsville team and ended with a 26-21 loss. Nick Levy was the top scorer with 6 points. A.C. finished the tournament in 2nd place, behind Wellsville and ahead of Iola and Baldwin.

On Jan. 7, the Jr. High boys competed at home against Burlington. The 8th grade team played a fast and furious game against the Burlington Bobcats, neither team wanting to come up short at the final buzzer. The score was tied for most of the game but in the end, the Bulldogs lost 40-37 in the final few seconds. Brady Rockers was the leading scorer with 14 points.

Finishing up their first week of basketball, the A.C. 8th graders traveled to Central Heights to play the Vikings on Thursday, January 10th. The Bulldogs came out strong but their shots didn't want to fall.

It was another close game from start to finish that ended in a disappointing 27-26 loss for Anderson County. Nick Levy was the leading scorer with 16 points.

On Jan. 17, the 8th graders beat Osawatomie 30-20. AC was down 8-12 at the first quarter, but held Osawatomie to 8 points the last three quarters.

Kyle Lamb scored 15 points while Nick Levy had 9, Trevor Johnston had 4 and Brady Rockers had 2. Players included Mason Louk, Austin Akes and Jacob Null. Lamb and Levy had several rebounds.

Are all soils created equal?

These past 2 years of low to no rainfall has been a trying time for everyone involved with agriculture. Ponds are low to non-existent, grass has suffered and livestock herds have been reduced due to the harsh conditions. Farmers and ranchers are trying to preserve their livelihoods by just getting by. Hopefully soon, we can get some rains. Currently, everyone is desperately trying to preserve the natural resources that we have been given- water, air and soil. This article is based on learning more about soil and answer the question of 'Are All Soils Created Equal?'

Some soil items that I have learned are that Coffey County has 41 different soil types; Anderson County has 52 different soil types and Linn County has 34 different soil types. Just in these 3 counties there are 127 different soil types! I knew that there were different types of soil from the heavy packed clay (in the upland area) to the looser soils-verdigris (around the streams and rivers). I did not realize all of the 'in between' soils. I kind of took soil for granted, like a lot of people do. Kind of like what I have heard before- "Well, my grandpa had it (soil) and I had it (soil), so you'll have it (soil)." I knew that we needed soil, but did not realize how important soil is to everything. I mean everything!

Whether you have the heavy packed clay to the looser soil, we need to take care of what we have. Because, I now know that I did not get the topsoil that my grandpa had; and so the topsoil that I have now may not be there for my grandkids. Let's dig in.

I searched the internet to find the meaning of soil. The results- 'Soil is the loose material that covers the land surfaces of Earth and supports the growth of plants' as stated in the Soil Encyclopedia Article found on MSN Encarta. Soil is a combination of inorganic and organic materials. The inorganic particles in soil are the non-living particles such as pieces of rocks and minerals that have broken down gradually by weather, chemical action or other natural processes. The organic particles are the decaying matter from plants, animals and the many tiny life forms that live in the soil.

As all of us know soils vary from place to place. Some of the factors that come in to play are the chemical composition and physical structure of soil at any designated location. There are different rocks, minerals and other geologic materials from which the soil originally was formed from that play a role. Also, the various kinds of plants or vegetation that grow or grew are important. Topography or whether the terrain or 'lay of the land' is steep, flat or a combination can also be factors. You have to take into consideration the human activity such as farming or building which causes disruption in the landscape. Soils can also differ in color, texture, types of plants they support and their chemical makeup.

What makes up soil? We talked about what is contained in soil-inorganic and organic particles: rocks, minerals and plant and animal material. The inorganic or mineral component of the soil is made up of particles that are less than 0.002 mm in diameter. The soil particles are divided into 3 main size groups: sand, silt and clay. Depending upon the rock materials from which they came, these assorted mineral particles release chemicals that our plants depend upon for survival-potassium, calcium, magnesium, phosphorus, sulfur, iron and manganese.

Organic materials make up another essential part of soil. Some of this material comes from residue of plants such as: the remains of plant roots deep in the soil and leaves and materials that fall on the ground. All of these become part of a cycle of decomposition and decay, providing important nutrients to the soil. To sum it all up, soil fertility depends on a high content of organic materials.

Did you know that the inorganic and organic particles make up roughly 50 percent of a

Considering Conservation

by Mary Lou Ponder
Linn, Anderson & Coffey
County Buffer Coordinator

soil's volume? Water makes up 20-30% of the soil volume and is an important transport for the nutrients to go towards plant growth. The other 20-30% percent consists of 'pores' or open areas of various shapes and sizes. The networks of pores provide a way for water to travel through the soil, plus allow for oxygen and other gases to move freely through the soil. (Dr. Patricia M. Frazer- "What is soil?") Pores also serve as passageways for small animals, room for plant roots to grow and for water to travel through. Pores to soil are like veins to humans.

Did you know that an earthworm can digest 91.25 tons of food in 1 year? They are a small part of the little universe that lives in the soil. Earthworms, along with mites, millipedes, centipedes, grubs, termites, lice, springtails, bacteria, and fungi help in the break down or recycle the plant and animal materials. These little creatures all form a food chain living off of the plant and animal materials and each other. That is why all of these little creatures are important. The break down of plant and animal materials along with earthworm 'casings' form a dark-colored organic matter known as humus. Humus is the rich part of the soil in which plants can more easily pull their food from.

Soil takes a long time to develop. For nature to make 1 inch of topsoil, it can take from 500-1,000 years of the break down of rocks, minerals and decaying plants and animals. The years of break down depends upon how harsh or moderate our seasons are. Soil is considered a nonrenewable resource, or a resource that does not renew or make new quick enough for our generation or our grandchildren's generation to use. It would be our great, great, great, great +12 more greats-grandchildren that might see that 1" of added topsoil, if the formation of soil would take 500 years and the right conditions.

Only 25% of the earth is made up of land. So, as the human population grows, the demand for food increases; this in turn places a high demand upon the soil. Deforestation, over-development, and pollution from chemicals are a few more of the disruptions and demands that we, as humans, place upon our soil.

Erosion is something that we as humans can do to try to ease that demand on our soil. We must try to do as much as possible to control wind and water erosion. "In Kansas, about 190 million tons of Kansas topsoil are degraded each year through man's activities. Five tons of topsoil spread over an acre is about the thickness of a dime or 3/32 inch" as stated on the Kansas NRCS Website.

That is where the Anderson County Conservation District/ NRCS, can assist you with trying to control these problems. There are several programs that are available. We have the Continuous CRP(program) that can be applied to fields with a cropping history (will know more when Farm Bill rules are finished), which have included the following practices: field borders, filter strips, riparian buffers, shallow water areas, field windbreaks, contour grass strips, grassed terraces and wetland restoration (to name a few). Our office provides information and assistance in laying out terraces and waterways. We provide assistance in helping livestock producers get alternative water sources for their livestock and improving grassland. We are here to assist you in controlling erosion.

Why is soil important and why should we care? As stated on the NRCS Website- "Soil is KANSAS' most valuable resource. Combined with the state's climate and water supply, soil supports our No. 1 industry - agriculture. Agriculture accounts for nearly $6 billion each year to the Kansas economy. Kansas has over 300 different soil types across its 52 million-acre surface area. Crop acres account for 56 percent or just over 29 million acres while range and pasture lands account for over 19 million acres or 37 percent. Nearly, 25 million of the 52 million total acres (48 percent) are considered prime farmlands."

Soil provides homes and food sources for all animals and insects; regulates water distribution by spreading out water and letting it soak in where needed; absorbs flood waters (wetlands) by trying to slow water and allowing it to slowly soak in; plays the role in nutrient cycling-the inorganic and organic materials of the soil; and is important for agriculture-which provides all of us with food, clothing, shelter-everything. So, you see that soil conservation is vital to our existence, and our future generations-our children and grandchildren.

Information on the Continuous CRP or Buffer Program-the Continuous CRP or Buffer Program has been put on 'hold' until the new Farm Bill gets passed. As the Buffer Coordinator, I can still come out and visit with you about your concerns. I can still get the field work done-putting out flags and gps'ing the future buffer(s). But currently, no NEW Continuous CRP or Buffer contracts can be signed. If you are interested in setting up a field visit with me (Mary Lou Ponder), please call the USDA Service Center in Garnett at 785-448-6323 ext. 3 or call the USDA Service Center in Burlington at 620-364-5732 ext. 3. I would be happy to visit with you on your farm concerns.

Reminder: Grass Planting Dates are:

- Brome- December 1 through April 15 & August 15 through October 1
- Native-December 1 through May 15

The Anderson County Conservation District does have a custom drill operator that will drill your grass for you. If you have any questions please come in and visit us at the USDA Service Center in Garnett located at 111 North Maple St. The phone number for the NRCS/ Anderson County Conservation District is 785-448-6323 ext. 3. Nice weather leads to dig

It was 9 January 2013, the very first nice day of the New Year and for four hours I took full advantage of it at my dig site. No snow, frozen ground, ticks, flies, mosquitoes or snakes, just a perfect day for excavating. In fact, the ground troweled better than all of last year. As for finds, there's always something waiting to be dug up.

My intention was to start excavation of the basement/cellar hole, but since it was so nice I continued to work on the flat. I still haven't truly figured out whether I'm in the front or back yard. As far as I know there are no pictures of this old homestead to show which direction the house actually sat. If I could actually locate the clothesline or outhouse, I could soon figure it all out. I reckon you're waiting to read about my finds of the day.

They were (no order): 2-wagon bolts, cultivator shank, old horse-drawn mower blade (really worn), 20-inch long iron rod, square iron harness buckle, old iron wire coat hook, large iron spoon bowl/partial handle, brass kerosene lamp globe prong holder, brass electrical connector, long stemmed brass Schrader valve, lead barrel shaped weight, 2 little mother-of-pearl buttons, 2 iron buttons, 2 wood screws (one iron, one brass), silver plated upholstery/canvass fastener, flat iron washer, 44-40 caliber shell casing, large brass shoe eyelet, a fragment of plate dated 1884, 7 unidentified iron items and a bottle, Kerr Glass Mfg. Co., Sand Springs, Okla., Aug. 31, 1915.

Someone recently asked me, "Don't you ever find any square nails at that site?" My answer was, "I sure do, every size and shape." I don't stop to county them, because I wouldn't have any time to dig and besides that I don't think I can count that far. I will say they go in my catch container (bucket), along with everything else uncovered. They're brought home, rinsed, dried and put in buckets at the landowners, just like everything found is.

They are forecasting tomorrow to be dry and in the 60s, so maybe, just maybe, I can squeeze in one more day before winter sets in again.

1912: Chinch bugs cost $17M

Jan. 28, 2003

East Kansas Agri-Energy announced the beginning of the sale of membership units in a $36 million ethanol production plant to be located in Garnett, after federal securities regulators authorized the sale last week. The proposed facility will be designed to produce an estimated 20 million gallons of fuel ethanol per year, and is expected to require 7.5 million bushels of corn and sorghum annually to meet its production level. The grain requirement for the plant represents the yield from about 85,000 production acres, or about 20 percent of the grain sold in recent years within a 50-square mile radius of the plant's proposed site.

Jan. 28, 1993

The Anderson County Economic Development committee has approached both the City of Garnett and the Anderson County Commissioners regarding parcels of land for the development into an assisted living complex for senior citizens. A Fredonia developer hopes to have needed construction applications stipulating a land acquisition to state regulating authorities by March 1.

Jan. 24, 1983

The figures were in the black for the Anderson County Hospital after the audit results for 1982 were revealed at the hospital Board of Trustees meeting. The hospital ended the fiscal year with $15,843 more in operating revenue than expenditures. The figure did not include non-operating revenue from the county mill levy, interest income and general contribution. This contrasts with 1981, when the hospital operational budget went into the red with $36,111 less operating revenue than expenses.

Jan. 20-21, 1912

It cost farmers $17,644,458

to feed the chinch bugs last year. An entomologist with the Kansas Agricultural College estimated the damage done at that much. And he says unless there is more severe weather this winter, and unless the farmers burn the dead grass and trash on their farms - the winter hiding places of the bugs - there will be more chinch bugs to emerge next spring than last. So far, these insects have passed the winter weather with little loss.

The University of Kansas is strictly a Kansas university, as far as the student body is concerned. A report shows that three out of every four students were born in the state, and one out of every three is a son or daughter of a Kansas farmer.

The call of the prophet Ezekiel

The book of Ezekiel is a prophetic book of the Old Testament with Symbolic language much like the book of Revelation in the New Testament. Ezekiel was among the captives taken during the second Babylonian attack against Jerusalem in 597 B. C.. Ezekiel was 25 years old at the time and his prophetic ministry began five years later. Ezekiel prophesied to the captives who dwelt by the River Chebar at Tel Abib.

In the first chapter of the book Ezekiel describes an amazing vision of God which came to him at the beginning of his ministry. Ezekiel relates as follows, "I looked and I saw a windstorm coming out of the north-an immense cloud with flashing lightning and surrounded by brilliant light." He goes on to describe the vision which included four living creatures, the heads of which represent the four realms of creation. Clearly visible above these strange creatures was the likeness of a throne symbolizing the might and power of God. Ezekiel receives his call in 2:1. He (God) said to me, "Son of man stand up on your feet and I will speak to you. As he spoke, the Spirit came into me and raised me to my feet, and I heard him speaking to me." God then directs Ezekiel on what it is he is to do. "The people to whom I am sending you are obstinate and stubborn. Say to them, "This is what the Sovereign LORD says. And whether they listen or fail to listen-for they are a rebellious house-they will know that a prophet has been among them." Prior to judgment on the nation of Judah God wanted these people to have one last chance to repent from their idolatry. Ezekiel then proclaims God's message for the nation Israel as well as for the nations surrounding the land.

Ezekiel was used mightily of God but he suffered mightily as well. One of the saddest notes of his life was the death of his wife who he called "the desire of his eyes", during the last siege against Jerusalem. Ezekiel's sadness at the death of his wife was to match the grief of God at the sin of Jerusalem Ezekiel was commanded not to grieve her death; he was to steel himself for this tragedy even as God had prepared himself for the death of his beloved city. (Ezekiel 24:15-22)

In future weeks will examine key events in the book of Ezekiel and the perilous times in which Ezekiel prophesied.
