It's time to graduate

ACHS grad tackles unique challenge

Student spent last two years of high school studying at math, science academy

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

As a sophomore at Anderson County High School two years ago, Joe Dougherty wanted more.

More opportunities. More challenges.

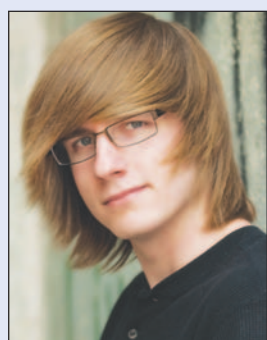

At 16, Dougherty knew exactly where he wanted to focus his energy. He knew exactly what he wanted to study and in what field he wanted to work - computer science.

But at Anderson County, he couldn't find enough classes or work study programs that would fit his goals. He would have to take extreme measures, turning to a new state program that would take him away from his friends and family half-way through his high school career.

Dougherty joined the Kansas Academy of Mathematics and Science (KAMS) in Hays, and on Saturday, he was part of the third class to graduate from the innovative new school that combines high school and college for high-achieving students.

While attending the academy, students spend their junior and senior years of high school at Fort Hays State University. They live on campus and take college-level classes, earning dual credit for high school and college.

Dougherty explained that the program essentially flips the traditional high school setting. At a traditional high school, college-bound students attend high school classes and can take advanced classes for college credit.

"This is the reverse of that," he said. Students take college classes, and earn credit for high school.

"For all intents and purposes, you are a college student," Dougherty said.

KAMS had its commencement ceremonies Saturday at Fort Hays State University. This Sunday, Dougherty will graduate with the Class of 2013 at Anderson County High School. And

Jail electrical problems get another look

County forced to get plans that were left out during construction

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — County commissioners say they're going to get a second opinion about ongoing electrical problems at the Anderson County Jail, but they feel confident the matter is under control.

A local electrician has been working for several months to come up with electrical system plans and drawings that were missing after the jail was constructed in 2008. Gordon Blackie with Lighthouse Electric and also a Garnett City Commissioner, has drawn plans to show how the electrical system in the jail works, and recommended changes that need to be made to improve the system and address possible code and safety problems.

County commissioners said they are pleased with the work Blackie has done, but want to get a second opinion to ensure nothing is overlooked.

Commissioner Eugene Highberger admits something slipped through the cracks when the jail was constructed, and commissioners want to make sure they properly resolve the issue now so it doesn't continue to plague the county.

The jail project was fraught with cost concerns from its first of three rounds of bidding.

Emergency management positions under review

Change in leadership offers opportunity to study department

BY VICKIE MOSS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — The unexpected departure of the county's emergency management director has provided an opportunity for county commissioners to evaluate the department and determine just what kind of staff is needed to oversee the county's emergency and fire needs.

Emergency Management Director Marvin Grimes resigned recently to take another job. County commissioners asked his assistant, JD Mersman, if he was interested in the head county emergency management position, and are waiting to hear back from him about his views on the department. Grimes and Mersman told commissioners they believe two people are needed to run the department.

But commissioners said they want to learn more about the responsibilities and duties, in order to determine what kind of staff is necessary. Each county in Kansas must maintain a detailed emergency management plan to prepare for emergencies and coordinate response to disasters. They must work with state and federal agencies

ANDERSON COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS APRIL 29

Chairman Eugene Highberger called the meeting of the Anderson County Board of Commissioners to order at 9:00 a.m. on April 29 at the County Commission Room. Attendance: Eugene Highberger, Present; James K. Johnson, Present; Jerry Howarter, Present. The pledge of allegiance was recited. Minutes of the previous meeting were read. Correction made that Commissioner Johnson stated that progress has been made in the weed department, however, he feels productivity could be better. Correction made that a contract will be offered to Steve Markham for Appraiser when he receives his certification. Minutes approved as corrected.

Road and Bridge

Lester Welsh, Road Supervisor, met with the commission. They will be working on 1700 Road and Osage Road going east to move the road to try to get it to drain better. They will be closing the road for a couple of days while the work on it. Lester informed the commission about several other locations they will be working on. Forrest Cass will be retiring May 24th.

Zoning

Michelle Miller, Deputy Zoning, met with the commission. She presented a resolution to rezone approximately 3 acres from A-2 to R-3A for Strobell. Commissioner Howarter moved to approve Resolution 2013,0429:1 approving zone change ZC2013-02. Commissioner Johnson seconded. Approved 3-0.

Emergency Management

JD Mersman, Assistant Emergency Management Director, met with the commission. Discussion was held on whether there is a need for two people in the office. JD stated that if the office went to just one person there are some areas that would have to be eliminated. Commissioner Johnson questioned if JD was interested in taking over the director position. JD stated he considered that over the last week and feels if he is to advance he would have to consider that position. It was discussed that Emergency Management and Rural Fire is too much for one person to do alone. JD will handle the office until a final decision is made.

Sheriff

Sheriff Valentine met with the commission. He questioned what to do with the IT person for dispatch. He has been watching what is being done and does recommend paying Bob Stegner an additional $150.00 per month for IT in dispatch. If he was to call Advantage the rate would be much higher compared to the hours Bob is putting in on IT. Commission voiced approval for the rest of this year but questioned how long this should continue. They had a door issue again last week, however, the problem was discovered quickly. Discussion was held on where the information is that Lighthouse Electric is documenting and the county has paid for. At the present time Mr. Blackie still has all the information, however, Sheriff Valentine will be checking into getting it stored at the courthouse. Commissioner Johnson moved to continue pay for IT services to Bob Stegner at a rate of $150.00 per month until the end of the year. Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0.

Meeting adjourned at 11:46 a.m.

American Cancer Society turns 100

The American Cancer Society is using its 100th birthday on May 22, 2013, to encourage people to join together and take action to finish the fight against cancer. The Society's goal is to recruit 100 volunteers across the state of Kansas during the month of May, to mark the organization's birthday and give Kansans the opportunity to personally make a difference in the fight.

Longtime Society volunteer Priscilla Burnell says this about being involved, "I volunteer because my husband and sister both have had cancer, and I understand how badly we need to find a cure. I hope my volunteering helps raise more money faster to find a cure faster."

Many volunteer opportunities exist, including:

- Relay For Life® Committee – join the committee that plans and sets up Relay

- ACS Days volunteers – visit with cancer patients and their families in our local cancer centers about Society programs and services available to help them

- Youth volunteers – if you have teens who need volunteer service hours, we often have jobs for them at the Society office during the summer and/or throughout the year

- Advocacy volunteers – help fight cancer through our sister organization, ACS CAN, by working with lawmakers to ensure cancer remains a top priority at the Capitol

- Reach to Recovery® volunteers – mentor newly-diagnosed breast cancer patients (Volunteers for this program must be breast cancer survivors.)

To find out more about volunteering, call the Society's Topeka office at 800-359-1025. Free training is provided, and volunteers hours are flexible.

The American Cancer Society is a global grassroots force of more than three million volunteers saving lives and fighting for every birthday threatened by every cancer in every community. As the largest voluntary health organization, the Society's efforts have contributed to a 20 percent decline in cancer death rates in the U.S. since 1991, and a 50 percent drop in smoking rates. Thanks in part to our progress, nearly 14 million Americans who have had cancer (and countless more who have avoided it) will celebrate more birthdays this year. As we mark our 100th birthday in 2013, we're determined to finish the fight against cancer. As the nation's largest private, not-for-profit investor in cancer research, we are finding cures, ensuring people facing cancer have the help they need, and continuing the fight for access to quality health care, lifesaving screenings, clean air, and more. For cancer information, call us anytime, day or night, at 800-227-2345 or visit cancer.org.

while many of his ACHS classmates also will graduate with college credit, Dougherty will have enough credits to work on a double major in computer science and information technology, and still graduate from college in two to three years. He plans to continue to attend FHSU, and will stay in Hays over the summer to work on personal projects.

Dougherty said the program was quite challenging, especially during the second semester of his senior year. His course load included Physics for Engineers II, Calculus III and Differential Equations. The average test score in his physics class was about 30 percent, he said. The KAMS program requires students to maintain a 3.0 GPA.

"This program is not to be taken lightly," Dougherty said. "There are times where you have to work harder than you ever thought you could. During my time at ACHS, I never once studied for a test and I generally managed to pull all As. When I got here, I had to realize that you have to study and you had better learn that fast."

In addition to learning college-level material, Dougherty also was able to take part in a research project with the head of the FHSU physics department. He worked for the FSHU Black Board Mobile Development team, where he programmed iPhones and Androids.

The best part, however, was developing special bonds with other classmates, Dougherty said. The program brings together young students in a unique college setting, and they live together in one dorm, so it's natural the classmates become quite close.

"Nothing brings people closer together than sharing your third pot of coffee of the night at 4 a.m. while studying for a test together," Dougherty said.

KAMS requires students to apply for the program, and selects only those who can handle the rigors of essentially attending college full-time and away from home while still in high school. Applicants must have completed at least two years of high school with distinction in math or science, according to the program's website. Other criteria include drive, interest, maturity, stability, and personal and family commitment. While the local high school transfers its state aid to help pay for the student's tuition and fees, students and families must pay for housing and meal plans, plus some other expenses.

Although the program is challenging, Dougherty recommends it to anyone who needs more of a challenge in high school, as long as they are prepared to meet the requirements of the advanced program.

"My choice to join the Kansas Academy of Mathematics and Science was the best one I have ever made," he said. "Not only did I learn a great deal academically, but I grew greatly as a person. Living on your own challenges you for the better and it adds to the challenge."

Dougherty is the son of Joe and Rachel Dougherty and the grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. Joe Dougherty of Garnett.

with numerous revisions to its original design made to keep the project under the voter-approved $5.5 million combined property and sales tax bond financing. Cost and bidding issues eventually resulted in the project's construction manager being released from the project, and the project overseen by the general contractor and then-county zoning director Tom Young.

During the jail's construction, electricians made changes to the original electrical plans but failed to provide a detailed plan or drawing showing what changes were made, called an "as-built plan." As a result, when electrical problems surfaced, commissioners and jail administrators had difficulty tracking the source of the problems.

That's where Blackie came in, and he tried to reconstruct drawings of the electrical system. He discovered several problems, such as regular lighting installed on the same circuit as emergency backup lighting. That means when the lights go out in a cell block, the emergency backup lights also go out.

Commissioner Jerry Howarter said the risk of more serious safety issues like fire was slight, and was discovered early. In some cases, coatings were skimmed off wires as the initial construction crew pulled the wires through conduit.

"It wasn't anything that was going to endanger anyone. We just want to make sure we're up to code," Howarter said.

The cost of the repairs is not yet known, commissioners said. Highberger estimates they have spent a couple thousand dollars already, and likely will spend more. The system is no longer covered by warranty, and county counselor James Campbell told them it would not be cost-effective to take the matter to court to try to prove the original contractor was at fault in order to recoup losses.

"We think we've got it up to par now," Howarter said. "We're going to have someone locally give us a second opinion, so we know we aren't doing something unnecessary."

and conduct regular training and exercises to test for local preparedness.

Anderson County, however, is among a small group of counties that includes its rural fire departments as part of its emergency management department. The office oversees all of the rural fire departments, making sure they are properly staffed, well trained, and supplied with proper equipment.

Under Grimes and Mersman, the office did a good job of managing those duties, commissioner Jerry Howarter said. Grimes handled training and provided direction, while Mersman excelled at writing grants to make sure rural fire departments received needed supplies, training and equipment.

"We pretty much liked the way it was working," Howarter said. "They were staying under budget and running a good ship. I think they were doing a good job of keeping everybody trained and informed."

Mersman was expected to provide commissioners with a list of job responsibilities at a county commission meeting Monday, May 13. Commissioners also have asked its human resources consultants, Austin Peters Group, to review the department and offer its recommendations.

Playing politics with tax records

A bedrock principle of U.S. democracy is that the coercive powers of government are never used for partisan purpose. The law is blind to political viewpoint, and so are its enforcers, most especially the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service. Any violation of this principle threatens the trust and the voluntary cooperation of citizens upon which this democracy depends.

The Washington Post

So it was appalling to learn Friday that the IRS had improperly targeted conservative groups for scrutiny. It was almost as disturbing that President Obama and Treasury Secretary Jack Lew have not personally apologized to the American people and promised a full investigation.

"Mistakes were made," the agency said in a statement. IRS official Lois Lerner explained that staffers used a "shortcut" to sort through a large number of applications from groups seeking tax-exempt status, highlighting organizations with "tea party" or "patriot" in their names. The IRS insisted emphatically that partisanship had nothing to do with it. However, it seems that groups with "progressive" in their titles did not receive the same scrutiny.

If it was not partisanship, was it incompetence? Stupidity, on a breath-taking scale? At this point, the IRS has lost any standing to determine and report on what exactly happened. Certainly Congress will investigate, as House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-Va.) promised. Mr. Obama also should guarantee an unimpeachably independent inquiry.

One line of questioning should focus on how the IRS's procedures failed to catch this "shortcut" before its employees began using it. Another should center on how this misguided practice came to light, and on what the IRS planned and plans to do about it. Ms. Lerner was responding to a question when the news first came out; it's not clear whether the government intended otherwise to disclose what had happened. Nor have officials been clear whether disciplinary measures have been taken.

Did some officials hope never to reveal this wrongdoing? Did others hope it could quickly get lost in the weekend news cycle? Misguided, if so. We hope to hear Democratic leaders as well as Republican ones loudly saying so.

The agency said that it now has rules in place to make sure this sort of thing never happens again. How could such basic safeguards not have existed in the first place? And what are the new rules? In response to our questions, officials did not say.

Thankfully, it's a safe bet that the decision on whether to answer such questions won't rest solely with the agency for much longer.

The euphemism imperative

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

President Barack Obama was proud to become the first sitting president to address Planned Parenthood the other week. But not proud enough to utter the word "abortion."

The right to abortion is the sneakiest, most shame-faced of all American rights. It hides behind evasion and euphemism and cant.

Lowry

So President Obama sang a hymn of praise to Planned Parenthood at the organization's annual conference without mentioning what makes it so distinctive and controversial. He said its core principle is "that women should be allowed to make their own decisions about their own health." He excoriated opponents involved "in an orchestrated and historic effort to roll back basic rights when it comes to women's health."

Listening to him, you could be forgiven for thinking that the country is riven by a fierce dispute over whether women should be allowed to choose their own OB-GYNs or to get cancer screenings. In his speech, the president said the word "cancer" seven times. About that he is happy to be forthright.

Imagine if he had been similarly frank about the core of Planned Parenthood's work: "In 2011, according to your annual report, your clinics or affiliates performed 330,000 abortions. That's a lot of abortion. Over 10 years more than 3 million. Thank you, Planned Parenthood. Think of all those women who wanted to terminate their pregnancies, and you were there for them. That's what you are about. And that's what this country is about."

Before that crowd, he might have gotten rousing applause, but talking in such honest terms would have been a gross faux pas. The unwritten rule when the left discusses abortion is that it shouldn't be called "abortion," but always "health" or, more specifically "reproductive health" -- although abortion is the opposite of reproduction and, for one party involved, the opposite of health.

The trial of Philadelphia abortionist Kermit Gosnell has been an exercise in stripping away euphemism. He is accused of murdering babies because he allegedly didn't manage to kill them in the womb and had to finish the job outside the womb. His case is so discomfiting for liberals not only because it is such a stark picture of the seamy, money-grubbing side of abortion, but because it illustrates how slight the difference is between late-term abortion -- or late-term "health" -- and what nearly everyone recognizes as a crime.

In a story about the case, The New York Times referred to the newborns killed by Gosnell as "fetuses." The definition of a fetus according to Merriam-Webster is "an unborn or unhatched vertebrate." By definition, the newborns weren't fetuses; they weren't unborn. But the Times couldn't bring itself to use the word "baby."

This is the crux of the matter: If it is a baby outside the womb, why not inside the womb? If a procedure to end its life is wrong outside the womb, why isn't it wrong inside the womb?

The essence of abortion is that there are two lives when you start and one when you finish. If it were your business to perform them and fight all restrictions on them, no matter how slight, you wouldn't want to be forthright and honest about it, either.

New primary political firepower

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder has handed Gov. Sam Brownback and many Kansas House Republicans what amounts to the political equivalent of a 30-round clip to use during their upcoming election campaigns.

That political firepower?

Holder's letter, released last week, that basically told Brownback that the state's Second Amendment Protection Act that Brownback signed into law and which prevents federal officials from seizing—or, even worse, registering—Kansas-made or Kansas-assembled guns that aren't involved in a crime is unconstitutional.

Holder could be right. But politically, that doesn't matter.

Now, no matter where you are on gun ownership or registration, politically, that letter was a 30-round clip that the governor can wield to the delight of gun-rights advocates, or with a little more complicated aim, for certain fans of state's rights.

That Kansas law? It prohibits federal officials—probably even postmen—from seizing or requiring registration of Kansas-made or assembled firearms. Kansas made? Well, that's basically either manufacturing guns stamped "made in Kansas" or just sending off for enough parts to make a gun, assembling them in Kansas, and not taking them across the state line.

Now, there really isn't a substantial gun industry in Kansas—except for sales—but if you can assemble mail-order parts here, you've got yourself a Kansas gun, and the federal government can't use the interstate commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution to track it to your nightstand or basement gun locker/man cave.

Brownback replied that Kansans like their gun rights, they think protecting them from federal officials is good, and we'll see where this goes from here.

The politics? For gun-rights advocates, Brownback has put a line in the sand, he's on their side and he didn't say it specifically, but it's clearly understood that he's on the side of Kansas, not "big government" trying to regulate Kansans' lives.

by Martin Hawver
KANSAS STATEHOUSE COLUMNIST

Count on Kansas gun-rights advocates to find themselves at the Republican primary election voting for Brownback and legislative conservatives who voted for the Kansas guns bill in what will be portrayed as a vote against the federal government. Moderate Republican senators who were ousted in the last primary know what it's like to be portrayed as being for the federal government—their votes against Kansas dropping out of Obamacare because they didn't think that action would pass constitutional muster came back to bite them as the senators were characterized in campaign materials as tools of the president.

From the small percentage of Kansans who vote in primary elections figure that defending the state against Holder's threats will be a hotter button than, say, school finance or welfare reform.

That more complex state's rights issue? It's trickier, and probably wouldn't be needed, but politically, it could include federal interference in, say, the Affordable Care Act or same-sex marriage. We're thinking probably not to Kansas-raised, Kansas-smoked marijuana, but the rejection of federal regulation of whatever goes on in Kansas could be expanded to several interests.

Only political mistake Brownback made? Probably not rejecting Holder's letter—saying he wouldn't read it until Holder gets President Barack Obama to co-sign it...

Underestimating damage of high school drop outs

From The New York Times

Only 21 states require students to attend high school until they graduate or turn 18. The proposal President Obama announced on Tuesday night in his State of the Union address — to make such attendance compulsory in every state — is a step in the right direction, but it would not go far enough to reduce a dropout rate that imposes a heavy cost on the entire economy, not just on those who fail to obtain a diploma.

In 1970, the United States had the world's highest rate of high school and college graduation. Today, according to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, we've slipped to No. 21 in high school completion and No. 15 in college completion, as other countries surpassed us in the quality of their primary and secondary education.

Only 7 of 10 ninth graders today will get high school diplomas. A decade after the No Child Left Behind law mandated efforts to reduce the racial gap, about 80 percent of white and Asian students graduate from high school, compared with only 55 percent of blacks and Hispanics.

Like President Obama, many reformers focus their dropout prevention efforts on high schoolers; replacing large high schools with smaller learning communities where poor students can get individualized instruction from dedicated teachers has been shown to be effective. Rigorous evidence gathered over decades suggests that some of the most promising approaches need to start even earlier: preschool for 3- and 4-year-olds, who are fed and taught in small groups, followed up with home visits by teachers and with group meetings of parents; reducing class size in the early grades; and increasing teacher salaries from kindergarten through 12th grade.

These programs sound expensive — some Americans probably think that preventing 1.3 million students from dropping out of high school each year can't be done — but in fact the costs of inaction are far greater.

High school completion is, of course, the most significant requirement for entering college. While our economic competitors are rapidly increasing graduation rates at both levels, we continue to fall behind. Educated workers are the basis of economic growth — they are especially critical as sources of innovation and productivity given the pace and nature of technological progress.

If we could reduce the current number of dropouts by just half, we would yield almost 700,000 new graduates a year, and it would more than pay for itself. Studies show that the typical high school graduate will obtain higher employment and earnings — an astonishing 50 percent to 100 percent increase in lifetime income — and will be less likely to draw on public money for health care and welfare and less likely to be involved in the criminal justice system. Further, because of the increased income, the typical graduate will contribute more in tax revenues over his lifetime than if he'd dropped out.

When the costs of investment to produce a new graduate are taken into account, there is a return of $1.45 to $3.55 for every dollar of investment, depending upon the educational intervention strategy. Under this estimate, each new graduate confers a net benefit to taxpayers of about $127,000 over the graduate's lifetime. This is a benefit to the public of nearly $90 billion for each year of success in reducing the number of high school dropouts by 700,000 — or something close to $1 trillion after 11 years. That's real money — and a reason both liberals and conservatives should rally behind dropout prevention as an element of economic recovery, leaving aside the ethical dimensions of educating our young people.

Some might argue that these estimates are too large, that the relationships among the time-tested interventions, high school graduation rates and adult outcomes have not been proved yet on a large scale. Those are important considerations, but the evidence cannot be denied: increased education does, indeed, improve skill levels and help individuals to lead healthier and more productive lives. And despite the high unemployment rate today, we have every reason to believe that many of these new graduates would find work — our history is filled with sustained periods of economic growth when increasing numbers of young people obtained more schooling and received large economic benefits as a result.

Of course, there are other strategies for improving educational attainment — researchers learn more every day about which are effective and which are not. But even with what we know, a failure to substantially reduce the numbers of high school dropouts is demonstrably penny-wise and pound-foolish.

Proven educational strategies to increase high school completion, like high-quality preschool, provide returns to the taxpayer that are as much as three and a half times their cost. Investing our public dollars wisely to reduce the number of high school dropouts must be a central part of any strategy to raise long-run economic growth, reduce inequality and return fiscal health to our federal, state and local governments.

Tyson update on legislative session covers taxes, guns, drug testing and roofers

BY CARYN TYSON KANSAS SENATE

If your business is a sole proprietorship, LLC, or S-Corporation, you may want to check if the business should be paying state income tax for tax year 2013. Last year income taxes for small businesses was eliminated and lowered for all personal income taxpayers. Taxes were lowered to keep more money at home, not send it to Topeka.

During regular session, several laws were passed protecting our 2nd Amendment rights in Kansas. SB 21 was signed into law and passed on a vote of 38 to 2. The bill allows reciprocity for individuals traveling through or visiting Kansas, recognizing a valid concealed carry permit from another state. The law requires a new resident with an out-of-state concealed carry license to obtain a Kansas concealed carry license. The new resident can apply for a 180-day permit from the Attorney General's office while working to get a Kansas concealed carry license. One of the requirements for the 180-day permit is that the out-of-state concealed carry license is from a jurisdiction that meets or exceeds Kansas requirements for concealed carry.

SB 102, referred to as the 2nd Amendment Protection Act, was signed into law. The law protects firearms and accessories manufactured in Kansas, owned in Kansas, and that remained within the borders of Kansas will not be subject to any federal law, regulations, or authority. The bill passed the Senate on a vote of 35 to 4.

HB 2278 was signed into law and changes the punishment for theft of a firearm. One of the changes is the theft of a firearm valued under $25,000 will be a level 9, nonperson felony. The punishment was a misdemeanor if the firearm had a value less than $1,000.

SB 149 was signed into law. It requires regulations for drug testing of applicants or recipients of cash assistance programs, Unemployment Insurance benefits, and legislators be put in place. If a person fails a drug test the first time, benefits will stop until the person completes drug rehabilitation and job training. The second failure to pass a drug test will stop benefits for 12 months and until drug rehabilitation and job training are completed again. The third failure will result in the person no longer being eligible for benefits. The Senate vote was 29 to 9.

I supported those bills, however I did not vote for the Kansas Roofing Contractor Registration Act, Sub for HB 2024 that was signed into law. The law requires a roofing contractor to register with the Attorney General's office. The annual registration fee could be as much as $500, and a late fee not exceeding $300. If a registration is not renewed it will be revoked. In order to restore a revoked registration, a roofing contractor will have to pay the annual fee plus $500. The intent is to the keep contractors out of Kansas that are not scrupulous. While I support the intent of the law, I do not support the bureaucracy and fees that may or may not stop unscrupulous contractors.

The legislature begins Veto Session May 8th. The legislature is required to pass a budget each year and so this will be a majority of the work during Veto Session.

Please contact me with any questions or comments via phone 785.296.6838; email Caryn.Tyson@senate.ks.gov; or by mail, at Kansas State Capitol, 300 SW 10th St., Topeka, KS 66612.

It is an honor and a privilege to serve as your 12th District State Senator.

Jump Rope for Heart Collects $12K

Even animal lovers prefer no rabbits in garden

MANHATTAN, - You've done it -- tucked those tender bedding plants into the garden just so. And now you're looking forward to all manner of flowers and vegetables from your very own back yard. So what can turn this satisfying scene into one of big disappointment overnight?

"Rabbits in gardens are a perennial problem because of the wide variety of plants they can feed on," said K-State Research and Extension horticulturist Ward Upham. "This time of year, they gravitate to young vegetables and flowers. But there are some vegetables that are rarely bothered including potatoes, tomatoes, corn, squash, cucumbers and some peppers."

Fencing can provide a quick and effective control method for susceptible plants, said Upham, who is the coordinator of the Extension Master Gardener Program in Kansas.

"The fence does not need to be tall; 2 feet is sufficient for cottontails, but the mesh must be sufficiently fine (1 inch or less) so young rabbits will not be able to go through it. Support for the fence can be supplied by a number of products, but electric fence posts work well," he said.

In cases where fencing is not acceptable because it affects garden's attractiveness, there are other ways to control rabbits, he said, including repellents, trapping and shooting.

"Repellents are often suggested for control, but often do not last long and require frequent reapplication," Upham said. "Also, many are poisonous and cannot be used on plants or plant parts destined for human consumption."

Live traps can be used to collect and move the rabbits to a rural area several miles from where they were trapped. A number of baits can be used to entice the rabbit into the trap, including a tightly rolled cabbage leaf held together with a toothpick. However, rabbits often avoid baits if other attractive food is available, he said.

A motion-activated sprinkler is another possibility, he added. These are attached to a garden hose and release a short burst of water when motion is detected. Some suppliers advertise that their sprinklers protect up to 1,000 square feet.

For those who live where it is safe and legal to do so, shooting is another possibility, he added.

ACHS girls take league title

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

CENTRAL HEIGHTS - It didn't come without controversy, but the ACHS girls track team brought home a Pioneer League track title Thursday, topping closest runner-up Iola by more than 29 points in overall scoring.

AC managed 157.5 points on the day to Iola's 128. Wellsville had 73.5, Central Heights 66, Prairie View 65 and Osawatotomie 63.

But a disparity arose in the running of the girls 200 meter, when watchers at the finish line said they clearly saw AC's Alexandra Garbarino edge ahead of Iola's Ashley Cambell. Timers at the finish however said Campbell was a stride ahead of Garbarino at the finish, recording Iola's runner with a time of 26.2 and Garbarino with 26.5.

AC head coach Mike Sibley said the incident was unfortunate but unintentional.

"The officials in charge of the meet believe that their call was correct, and this is in earnest- they certainly were not trying to make the wrong call," Sibley said. "Remember these are just teachers and parents who volunteer to help and not professionals who are being paid to make the right call, and that is the way track works when you are using hand timing on separate watches."

Sibley said the issue was a good argument for using digital timers at the league's meet in the future.

"I guess the worst part is that no one can prove it in either direction and the real fault was that we were not using today's available technology which would be conclusive and satisfying for both parties."

Garbarino has another shot at the event in the upcoming 4A regional at Iola this coming Friday.

Disappearing fountains are economical and appealing

MANHATTAN - Looking for something small to add a focal point to your garden? Disappearing fountains can add an aesthetically pleasing water feature to your yard and provide a relaxing sound for your enjoyment. They are easy to assemble and can be fairly inexpensive.

"The fountain works by pumping water from a basin, up through a piece of glazed pottery or stone. It gently overflows, and then seems to disappear into the ground, giving the fountain its name," said Cheryl Boyer, nursery crop specialist with K-State Research and Extension.

Disappearing fountains, compared to other water features, are safe and eye-catching. They attract birds and wildlife, and the water is safe for pets to drink. The fountains are safe for homes with small children because, unlike ponds, there is not an exposed pool of water, Boyer said. Once installed, they are easy to clean and maintain.

More information on disappearing fountains is available in "Water Gardening: Disappearing Fountains," K-State Research and Extension publication MF2945, available at county and district Extension offices and online.

Discovery of ancient Iceman provides information

Have you ever heard of Otiz the Iceman or maybe Frozen Fritz? Otiz was discovered in 1991, eroding out of a glacier in the Italian Alps near the border between Italy and Austria. The human remains are of a late Neolithic or Chalolithic man who died between about 3350-3300 BC. Because he ended up in a crevice, his body was perfectly preserved by the glacier in which he was found, rather than crushed by the glacier's movement in the last 5,000 years. The remarkable level of preservation has allowed archaeologists the first detailed look into clothing, behavior, tool use and diet of the period.

The Iceman stood about 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighed about 134 pounds. He was rather short compared to most European males of the time, but sturdily built. He was in his mid-40s, and his strong leg muscles and overall fitness suggests that he may have spent his life herding sheep and goats up and down the Tyrolean Alps. He died about 5,200 years ago, in the late spring. His health was fair for the period - he had arthritis in his joints and he had whipworm, which would have been quite painful.

Otiz had several tattoos on his body, including a cross on the inside of his left knee; six parallel straight lines arranged in two rows on his back above his kidneys, each about 6 inches long; and several parallel lines on his ankles. Some archaeologists have argued that tattooing may have been some sort of acupuncture.

The Iceman carried a range of tools, weapons and containers. An animal skin quiver contained arrow-shafts made of viburnum and hazel wood, sinews and spare points. A copper ax head with a yew haft and leather binding, a small flint knife and a pouch with a flint scraper and awl were all included in the artifacts found with him. He carried a yew bow, and researchers at first thought Ortiz had been a hunter-gatherer by trade, but additional evidence makes it clear he was a pastoralist - a Neolithic herder.

Otiz's clothing included a belt, loincloth, and goat-skin leggings with suspenders. He wore a bear-skin cap, outer cape and coat made of woven grass and moccasin-type shoes made from deer and bear leather. He stuffed his shoes with moss and grasses, no doubt for insulation and comfort.

Otiz was probably born near the confluence of the Eisack and Rienz rivers of Italy, near where the town of Brixen is today, but that as an adult, he lived in the lower Vinschgau Valley, not far from where he was eventually found.

Otiz's stomach had cultivated wheat, possibly consumed as bread, game meat, and dried sloe plums. Blood traces on the stone arrow points he carried with him are from four different people, suggesting he had participated in a fight for his life.

Before Ortiz died, he had suffered two fairly serious wounds, in addition to a blow to the head. One was to his right palm, a deep cut that occurred between three and eight days before his death. The other was a wound in his left shoulder. In 2001, X-rays revealed a stone arrowhead embedded in that shoulder.

They also discovered a tear in an artery within the Iceman's torso. Ortiz appeared to have suffered massive bleeding as a result of the tear, which eventually killed him.

Researchers actually believe the Iceman was sitting in a semi-upright position when he died. Around the time he died, someone pulled the arrow shaft out of Ortiz's body, leaving the arrowhead still embedded in his chest.

1913: Train wreck kills 1, injures 2 others

May 20, 2003

One of two men wanted for questioning in connection with $30,000 in missing ATM funds from a Garnett-based bank chain turned himself in to authorities in Cape Girardeau, Mo., on Saturday. The 40-year-old man walked into the sheriff's department there and told officers he was wanted for burglary in Kansas.

Garnett city officials and local chamber of commerce leaders met yesterday to try to find a way to proceed with this year's Liberty Festival fireworks display. The show appeared to hinge on whether a local quarry company would allow the storage of fireworks in its secure storage site, as per new regulations from the federal government.

Recent years have seen public officials and private organizations claim slight victories in the war on substance abuse, particularly with young people. Those involved in the front lines of the fight say better education and awareness are the most potent weapons, and 16 local people recently underwent a training program to develop those tools in a substance abuse education program called STAR Baseline.

A public forum intended to give residents of the Anderson County community facts on construction costs, advantages of the facility to the Anderson County Hospital, and other information about a proposed physicians office complex will be held May 24.

Extra freight No. 163, east-bound, on the Missouri Pacific, was wrecked three-quarters of a mile east of Hecla switch this forenoon. The train passed Garnett at 9:15, and had about 35 cars, 16 of which were oil tank cars. In half an hour after the train left Garnett, news was received by telephone that it was off the track, just east of Hecla, and that the front cars had taken fire from the engine, and that the whole train would burn unless the back cars of the train could be pulled away from the wreck. The nearest engine was at Westphalia, and it was ordered to leave its train and go to the wreck. More than an hour and a half must have elapsed before this engine got to the scene. The accident was caused by the breaking in two of the second car behind the engine, which was loaded with hay. The cars in back of it piled up and took fire. How the fire started is not known, but it is thought sparks from the engine set fire to the hay. One man was killed and two were badly hurt.

Do you know what your permanent address depends on?

When Jesus was calling his disciples some of John the Baptist's disciples ask him; "Teacher where are you staying?" Jesus replied "Come and you will see." We read that they went and saw where he was staying and spent the day with him, however we don't read any details of where Jesus was staying.

We know that Jesus was rejected in Nazareth his home town. His public ministry began there in the synagogue in Nazareth when he took up the scroll of the prophet Isaiah and read concerning "The Year of the Lord's Favor." Isaiah 61:1-2. After his rejection in Nazareth he went down to Capernaum another town in Galilee. Jesus continued to travel from one town and village to another, proclaiming the good news of the kingdom of God.

Jesus at one point said, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests but the Son of Man has no place to lay his head." It is ironic that the Son of God would have no place to lay his head at night. I believe Jesus wanted to show the people of that day there was a cost to following him. That carries forward to our present age. When you pillow your head tonight and the cares of the day either fade away or close in around you consider what your relationship is to this Jesus of the Bible. Do you understand who he was? Someday Jesus will call for those who are his. He will say "Come and see." John 1:39. To others he will say "I never knew you" Matthew 7:23.

In Revelation 21 the apostle John sees a vision into heaven and says; "Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away, and there was no longer any sea. I saw the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, prepared as a bride beautifully dressed for her husband. And I heard a loud voice from the throne saying, now the dwelling of God is with men and he will live with them. They will be his people, and God himself will be with them and be their God. Jesus who had no place to lay his head while on this earth now resides in the Holy City. Your and my permanent residence will be determined by what we do with this Jesus of the Bible.

Hyatt Club learns about salads

The Hyatt Club had 14 members attending a salad luncheon hosted by President Dorothy Miller at her home on April 13. One guest, Helen Watt, was also in attendance. We welcome back Glenda Tastove who has been ill and unable to join the group during her recovery. Mary Ann Umbarger updated members on the progress of Ellen Stinnett. A short history of salads was presented including the "Bound" salad. Chairman Jo Ella Phares reminded us that the Hyatt Hens walked for Heeling for Health on April 27. The May meeting will be hosted by Janis Hightower and Sherry Benjamin, and Diane Hastert, Becky King and Betty Penn will play hostesses for the June meeting.

Pat Mosher received a birthday gift from her secret sister of two Amish books and brownie mix. One book was on desserts and the other was on wit and wisdom. Mary Ann won the hostess gift of a flower arrangement. The members agreed that it is time to order additional T-shirts, as several new members have joined the Hyatt Social Club. Dorothy graciously accepted this task.

Growth of an active church

BY MRS. MORRIS LUEDKE COLONY CORRESPONDENT

In January 2005 Mark McCoy became pastor of the Colony Christian Church. He, his wife, Erica and their three boys, Micaiah, Judah and Josiah reside at the parsonage. Beginning in 1999 he earned a Bachelor of Biblical Literature and a Bachelor of Theology with a New Testament major at Ozark Christian College. It was an immeasurable time of training and he highly recommends the college. He volunteered in the church his father planted and continues to pastor with Mark's brother, the Ambassador Christian Church at Chanute. Mark also interned at a church in northern Virginia. He grew up in southeast Kansas; his father was originally from Chanute, was pastor at Mound Valley and Galesburg, and then returned to Chanute.

The organization of the Colony Christian Church started in January 1884 by Dr. and Mrs. Metcalf. Lessons were held in homes and in 1892 property was secured for a church building which cost $1100. In 1920 a basement was dug under the church. In the 1950's restrooms and an entry way were added. It has been remodeled and reconstructed several times; rooms have been added, plumbing, electricity, and more recently air conditioning and comfortable chairs that can be rearranged are in the sanctuary.

A parsonage was accrued north of the church in the early years, sold in the 1930's. The current parsonage east of the church was purchased in 1958. This year a family room was added adjoining the east part of the home and bedrooms were walled in the original part of the parsonage.

The church's belief is the Bible to be the inspired Word of God, Jesus to be the unique Son of God, and salvation comes through living faith in Jesus. Their website www.colonychristianchurch.org has a more complete set of beliefs.

The church has many community services outside of the regular Sunday services. It has provided clothes and food for needy families, has men and women's groups and Bible studies, which are open to all congregations. Their children's program collects box tops, ink cartridges and offerings and as a church supports the Cookson Hills Children's Home in Kansas and Oklahoma also. They contribute to Philip McAfee, a missionary in Brazil. He will be visiting July 7. They also support Joseph Sinwal in Thailand, Jace Pavlik in Germany and others, Hidden Haven Christian Camp and Ozark Christian College.

Elders of the church are Larry Wittmer and Darren McGhee. They have many unofficial deacons. Their teacher's in the Cross Training programs are Mark McCoy (adults), Les and Arlene Gilliland (high school), Darren McGhee (junior high), and Jessica Riebel and Melissa Hobbs as children's teachers. Jessica also serves as children's ministry coordinator. Cross Training is held each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. They offer a fellowship breakfast once monthly. Worship service is at 10:45 a.m.

Pastor Mark is deeply impressed by the number of volunteers at any given event. The parsonage addition was done almost exclusively by volunteers, many of whom gave one or two nights weekly for over a half year and many gave much more. "It is an exciting place to serve", he said.

Their motto is "Following the Way, Teaching the Truth and Living the Life" - following after Jesus being the "Way" to Heaven, the "Truth" about reality, and the "Life" we get to live by being filled with His Spirit. "It's the greatest life in the world", he added.

Ludolph promoted to lieutenant

Colonel Ernest E. Garcia, Superintendent of the Kansas Highway Patrol, has announced that Master Trooper Wesley B. Ludolph was promoted to Lieutenant in March, and will serve as a zone supervisor in the Patrol's Troop G, the Kansas Turnpike.

Ludolph began his career with the Patrol on March 17, 1996, as a recruit trooper at the Kansas Highway Patrol Training Academy, in Salina. Upon completion of field training, Ludolph began road patrol duties in Harvey County. In November of 2000, he was promoted to Trooper II, and transferred to Osage County. From 2001-2003, he served as a technical trooper with the Critical Highway Accident Response Team (CHART), covering northeast Kansas. In July of 2003, he became a master trooper, remaining in the Osage County area. In March of 2005, he became a K9 handler, and transferred to Troop F, the south central region of the state. In January 2006, Ludolph transferred to the Kansas Turnpike

Ludolph received the Superintendent's Award for Meritorious Service in December 2007, after he helped remove a suicidal subject from the roadway in conditions which risked his personal safety. In 2008, he received an award from the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) for the seizing 27.5 kilograms of methamphetamine, the largest U.S. criminal highway interdiction seizure of methamphetamine.

Ludolph grew up in Anderson County and is a graduate of LeRoy High School in LeRoy, Kan. He earned an Associate's degree in General Studies from
