Churches to serve as storm shelters

4 churches agree to offer public shelter from severe weather

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Area residents were reminded this weekend that it's still spring, and severe weather including tornadoes is a possible threat at this time of year. Now, for the first time in recent memory, residents will be able to seek public shelter if a tornado does threaten the area.

A committee of emergency response professionals and others announced last week that four Garnett churches have agreed to serve as a public storm shelter. The committee has been working since last summer to establish such shelters in Garnett.

The churches include: First United Methodist Church, 205 S. Oak St.; Holy Angels Church, 514 E. Fourth Ave.; First Baptist Church, 417 S. Walnut St.; and the Dunkard Brethren Church, 1020 S. Westgate Road.

In the event of imminent severe weather, emergency management officials will notify a representative of the church that the shelter needs to be opened.

The four chosen shelters likely will be sufficient for the city's emergency shelter needs because they are spread out

Effort to clean up city sparks debate

Proposed law could target outdoor living spaces, not just junk

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - It's back to the drawing board for a city ordinance that would make it a crime for people to keep some types of furniture - including televisions and air conditioners - on their porches and in their yards.

Commissioners asked City Attorney Terry Solander to rework the ordinance amid concerns its language was too broad, and people could violate the law if they have outdoor living areas or even central air conditioner units. A popular fundraiser that places decorated toilets in people's yards also would be against the law if Solander's initial version was passed.

Solander said the ordinance was an effort to clean up the

Airport plans get new look after nearly a decade

Financial help could be available when city tackles runway project

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Sometimes, it pays to be patient.

City leaders hope changes in federal airport financing will allow them to finish airport improvement plans that began nearly a decade ago.

When city commissioners and staff first looked at airport improvements, they estimated it would cost anywhere from $2.7 million to $3.5 million to extend the main runway from 2,600 to 3,400 feet. Some of that cost would have come from the cost of buying 100 additional acres, in addition to construction costs for a runway and taxiways.

Since then, however, the Federal Aviation Administration recently began offering grants to pay for 90 percent of the cost to acquire land for airport improvements; the city would be responsible for just 10 percent of the cost. City manager Joyce Martin said the new federal reimbursement would save the city quite a bit of money for the project, but exact figures and timelines were not readily available.

The runway extension is the final major project needed at the airport, Martin told commissioners at their regular meeting May 14. She provided a summary of the Airport Master Plan at the request of Commissioner Preston Peine, who said he wanted to review the plans to give himself and other commissioners a better idea of where they were at with the project and what still needs to be done.

Work began on the Airport Master Plan in March 2004, but the plan wasn't completed until March 2007. A major focus of the plan was to change the primary focus of the airport from municipal use to industrial use, including the development of land and utilities for an industrial park nearby.

Much work has been done at the airport that has led to increased use, Martin said. The city last year completed purchase of a property near the airport, and is working to

Design phase continues for new hospital facility

ACH reps, architects look into efficiency, space for new facility

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The final phase in designing a new Anderson County Hospital could begin in about five weeks, hospital and project officials announced last week.

Hospital representatives are working with architects to design plans for the new hospital building, after voters in April approved about $25 million in bonds for the facility's construction. Although initial drawings helped voters visualize what a new facility would look like, those plans were just the beginning. Now, a design team will draw more specific plans.

The design team includes ACH Board of Trustees members, hospital administrators, department managers and employees in addition to architects. The architectural firm of Hoefer, Wyszockie and Associates of Kansas City, Mo., is leading the design.

The design team will define space needs, discuss ways to improve efficiency, and work toward finalizing the new facility plan, according to a press release from the hospital.

The team is looking for design solutions that will serve patients far into the future, Travis Pigott, the owner's representative architect for the Lester will do some checking. They have found a phone line down the middle of the road at 1700 Road and Osage Road that they are going to be working on. Thomas Foster Snouffer, 89, died Saturday, April 20, 2013, of Alzheimer's at Monticello Assisted Living Center in Idaho Falls.

He was born Oct. 14, 1923, in Deercreek, Okla., to H.O. and Lela Snouffer.

He served his country in WWII and completed 16 missions in B-14 and B-17 aircraft, being shot down near the end of the European War, where he and his crew survived being held in a German prisoner of war camp for a brief time. During his combat service, Tom received medals such as the Bronze Star, Oak Clusters, an Air Medal and a Presidential Citation. He retired from active service to inactive service in 1958. He was an unabashed patriot from his early years to the time of his death.

Thereafter, Tom was briefly employed as a crop-duster and later turned his love of flying into a position as executive pilot for the natural gas industry. It was a trip to Idaho Falls involving that position when he decided the beauty of Idaho and its surrounding area was where he wanted to live.

He moved his wife and family from Ottawa, Kan., in 1957, where he owned and operated his electrical contracting business, Snouffer Electric. In 1979, after suffering a heart attack, he retired from his electrical business and worked briefly in real estate.

During his lifetime in Idaho, Tom was active in the Civitan Club, where he was honored with the Civitan of the Year Award in 1968-1969. He was also active in the Bonneville County Sheriff's Jeep Patrol for many years.

He was an avid fisherman and enjoyed golf and flying remote control model airplanes. He enjoyed life in general.

Tom is survived by his wife of 62 years, Donna; a son, Thomas Snouffer Jr. of Idaho Falls; and a daughter, Jann (Tom) Neiers-Squires of Boise; two grandchildren, Scott (Traci) Snouffer of Thornton, Colo., and Brindon Neiers of Boise; and four great-grandchildren, Easton, Quinton, Blake and Arianna.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his brother, Mike; and his sister, Izetta.

His family wishes to thank the staff of Monticello Assisted Living for their loving attention to Tom during his stay at their facility.

Per Tom's wishes, graveside services will be in Colony, Kan., at a later date.

We have no doubt that he would wish his friends to simply remember him.

town by making it illegal to store furniture outside. He said some people store furniture and appliances outside, on porches and in yards, giving the property a shabby look.

"This is an effort to address what is an eyesore to a lot of people," he said.

But all three city commissioners said they were concerned that the language of Solander's ordinance was too broad. The ordinance also does not say how long something could be outside before it would violate the law, which could mean that someone who was moving could be in violation if any item was left on a porch or in a yard even for a short period of time.

The ordinance would prohibit any furniture, except patio furniture that was constructed and intended for outside use. It also would prohibit any appliances, any air conditioning units, and any plumbing fixtures like toilet bowls and sinks. It also would prohibit any television receiver, radio, speaker, camera or video equipment including tripods and stands. It would apply to items inside an open garage or shed.

A violation would be considered a misdemeanor crime, and could be punishable by jail time and/or a fine of up to $2,500.

"We have an opportunity to wear them down before their pocketbook runs dry. Each day they have it out is a separate violation," Solander said.

Commissioners said they were concerned that the ordinance would target such things as central air conditioner units and satellite television receivers, among other things that could be legitimate working items on a property. Outdoor living areas are becoming more popular, but under Solander's ordinance it would be illegal to keep a refrigerator, sink or television in an outdoor living area, Commissioner Preston Peine said. He said some people repurpose old furniture and appliances as yard art or planters, and they would be in violation. He also said he was concerned that anyone who uses a tripod to hold a satellite receiver would no longer be allowed to do so if they passed Solander's ordinance.

Solander said the intent is to clean up the town, not to target people who are making responsible use of such products. He said enforcement would be up to city staff, including zoning and police officers.

"It's my decision what's prosecuted," Solander said.

Commissioner Gordon Blackie objected, saying that the law would remain on the books long after current staff had retired or moved on to other employment. A future law enforcement officer or prosecutor may not see the law the same way.

Solander and City Manager Joyce Martin said the ordinance was needed to allow city leaders to force people to clean up properties. Similar ordinances prohibit trash and weeds, but do not address furniture and appliances. Solander said the ordinance was written so it could be expanded to include more items.

"We need something with teeth," Martin said.

Commissioners said they support the idea behind the ordinance, and agree it is important to keep properties tidy and appealing within the city limits. They asked Solander to rework the ordinance so that it targets people who are storing junk, and not those who make appropriate use of items outside.

across the city, City Manager Joyce Martin said.

"We feel very lucky to have four," she said.

The timing of the announcement comes just in time, as severe thunderstorms moved into Anderson County Sunday and Monday, May 19 and 20, although the shelters were not opened for those storms. There were reports of tree limbs down and possible damage to a grain silos on a private farm, but no significant property damage was reported. Emergency Management Director JD Mersman said he had heard reports that wind gusts reached 45 to 55 mph Sunday.

Rainfall totals at the Garnett Industrial Airport measured 0.73 inches Monday morning, which covers the period between Sunday morning to Monday morning. There also was 0.10 inches of precipitation reported Sunday morning.

"The goal is to plan for the future of health care in Anderson County by designing a modern facility that will meet the community's needs for the next 60 years," Pigott said. "We expect that the design and development phase to take approximately five more weeks and then the team will move into the final construction document phase," Jim Stearman, architect, added, discussing next steps and ongoing plans to share with local residents. demolish a house that sits on the property. The demo has been a slow process in order to meet FAA guidelines to qualify for reimbursement of expenses, Martin said.

After the house demolition is completed, it would be a good time for city leaders to thoroughly review the Airport Master Plan and decide how they want to proceed with the final project, the runway extension, Martin said.

Peine said he and other commissioners would need to take time to comb through a great deal of material associated with the Airport Master Plan, but he was looking forward to learning more about the projects.

The perils of Teflon

If the electorate doesn't wake up to recent government abuses, the worst is yet to come

It's almost as if one can hear the drum roll, as the next amazing escape act of the Obama presidency plays out before us.

The brutal murder of an American ambassador by terrorists and the cover-up that ensued as the story became public; the political prejudice exercised by the nation's most powerful and damaging agency, the IRS, against the president's conservative political opponents; the Gestapo culture at the president's Department Of Justice that sees no harm in seizing phone records of the Associated Press in order to find out who leaked information to the news bureau for a story. What might be thought daunting manacles will prove no match for the easy-going, slip-free Chief Executive of Style.

Back in the 80s they used to call Ronald Reagan the "Teflon Coated President," because try as they might, the press that detested him so couldn't get any of his foibles to stick to him in the public eye – not a ballooning budget deficit, not the Iran-Contra affair, not the murder of 241 Marines in Lebanon, not his apparent dreamy disconnect with the day-to-day aspects of governing. But the recent three-punch which has finally awoken the American media to President Obama's utter inability to lead has reminded us that Teflon lives.

The chorus is not a recent one. There were those who warned early on that a politician who had not even completed his first term in the U.S. Senate and who's primary career had been as a law school lecturer and a "community organizer" was too green to be considered for the presidency. The voting public disagreed. Twice.

But while ignoring the president's failings up to this point – a pull out plan that assures failure in Afghanistan, broken promises to close the terrorist detention camp at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and a lingering five-year recession in most parts of the economy – the mainstream media seems to have now finally awakened. Even Obama's fans in the mainstream press cannot ignore the unleashing of the true American Godzilla – the Internal Revenue Service – against conservative political groups who oppose the liberal manifesto. So to for the Department of Justice in seizing phone records without a court action to ascertain who might have leaked information to the Associated Press regarding a successful counter terrorism effort. Despite the media's finally paying attention to the largesse of a governmental philosophy built on governmental largesse, the criticism will fall on deaf ears.

While it was a general public agreement in philosophy and his natural likeability that shielded Reagan from his failings, Obama will escape harm largely because the modern electorate fails to understand the gravity of the emerging firestorm of stories, much less the criticism that followed the president to this point. There was a time when having a U.S. Ambassador dragged into a foreign street and sodomized and murdered by criminal thugs incited the U.S. Government and its citizens to action, but the Obama electorate is too busy texting its "bff's" to care.

If our country can't overcome its lethargy in what Tennyson describes in Ulysses as "a savage race that hoard, and sleep, and feed, and know not me," then we have much to fear.

'Patriot' games at the IRS

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

It sounds like the plot from a dystopian libertarian novel. The word "patriot" and the phrase "educating on the Constitution and Bill of Rights" triggered heightened scrutiny from the most intrusive agency in the federal government.

We now know that the Internal Revenue Service did indeed target conservative groups, as had long been rumored and oft-denied. The news is a perverse confirmation of the groups' worldview, and a challenge to President Barack Obama's. He always harangues us about putting more trust in government, and then you find out that the IRS has been singling out his political enemies.

This isn't an unaccustomed role for the IRS. It was notoriously used as a partisan bludgeon by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Richard Nixon, an abuse that was a Watergate impeachment count. In this case, the IRS gave special scrutiny to conservative groups filing for tax-exempt status as so-called 501(c)(4) organizations. Their applications would be flagged if an offending phrase or issue popped up, say, "tea party," or statements criticizing "how the country is being run," or concern about the federal debt. Then, the group might be hit with massive document requests and queries about the activities of family members of board members and key officers.

No one defends the propriety of any of this. President Obama says it is "outrageous," and even the IRS calls it, drawing on that elastic Washington word, "inappropriate." So how did it happen? The IRS explanation is that it was an innocent mistake by the rubes out in the Cincinnati office, who apparently lack an appreciation for objectivity and the rule of law, not to mention common sense.

We will learn soon enough how this holds up. But Ken Vogel, a reporter at Politico who has covered the IRS, says via twitter that the "Cincinnati office has little autonomy" and "mostly just follows DC's instructions." Certainly, if the IRS had a rogue operation on its hands, it didn't act like it. An agency vigilant in defense of the rights of citizens and of its own reputation would have exposed and shut down the misconduct immediately.

Reports say that the IRS targeting of conservatives began as early as 2010, and senior IRS officials learned of the practice two years ago. In March 2012 congressional testimony, then-IRS Commissioner Douglas Shulman repeatedly denied any targeting of conservatives. Evidently, no one who knew about it did his or her boss the favor of telling him he had misled Congress.

There are two steps toward making it right. One is a thorough congressional investigation and the firing of anyone involved in the harassment or in looking the other way or covering it up.

The other is, as much as possible, to remove political regulation from agencies like the IRS that can become the tool of one party and its partisan agenda. The Federal Election Commission has its faults, but it is designed to be bipartisan and is better-suited to making politically sensitive judgments.

Needless to say, ours should be a country where you can start a group with the word "patriot" in the title and not incur the hostility of the American government.

Where the Legislature stalls

We are now at the point of the 2013 Kansas legislative session where the street of Responsible Public Policymaking intersects with another street, this one named Crowd Management.

And, we're at the point where we really don't know which of those streets has the right-of-way.

Responsible Public Policymaking involves putting together a budget, and possibly a tax plan that will allow the state to take care of its people, to provide education, public services, social welfare and such.

The street named Crowd Management? That's very basically keeping legislators—most of the 165 lawmakers aren't involved in the actual assembly of budgets and taxes—busy, or, at least out of trouble.

As simple as that sounds, by this time of the session, we're down to the leadership and the six members of the two key conference committees—Tax and Budget—who are producing the product to keep the rest of the members occupied.

It's the three House and three Senate members on the conference committees—a dozen legislators—who are working or not working on reports that will be sent to the House and Senate for yes or no votes. There's no amending a conference committee report under legislative rules. So, it's up or down.

Reject a report, and it goes back to the conference committee for adjustments that will pick up the votes to approve it. It's bargaining and negotiating by each chamber's conferees—what each team believes its chamber will approve. It takes time, lots of staff work, and meanwhile, lawmakers not involved in the deal-making are...well, at loose ends.

They're generally not learning crafts, say embroidery or small engine repair. They're sitting around, either on the House and Senate floors or in their offices and hallways until they've told everyone

by Martin Hawver KANSAS STATEHOUSE COLUMNIST

the same joke at least twice.

This is part of the job that most legislators earned by sending out mail, going to coffees and public meetings and sweating on your doorstep last fall to win. Not exactly what you tend to think about when you vote for a senator or representative, is it?

But that's how it happens, and while legislators are waiting for a chance to vote on those reports that will wrap up the session, and hopefully make public policy that works for the state and for their constituents, there are critics out there who don't know how the Legislature actually works, griping about dragging out the session and getting paid while there's not a lot of result to show every day.

Not a real pretty picture of democracy in action. But that's how it plays out in the last few days of the Legislature. There's waiting, and then there's balancing the boredom of waiting for getting the state's business done, even when you can hear the sound of a lawmaker jangling his/her car keys in their pockets.

That's how it goes.

I would like to comment on the local schools dropping the optional finals policy. I really have to wonder who the any number of students are who contacted the school board to complain that they were poorly prepared for college. From my experience the students who do this are the same students who God blessed with natural scholastic talent and so they put forth very little effort in high school. They don't do anything that would tax or stretch that talent (the remainder of this message was cut off).

Whoever came up with the new ordinance about what cannot be in our own yards, porches or carports: we don't live in a gated, private community. This is just a small town. We own our small piece of land and we all have the need to store items. Most storage places are not on the front porch or in the front yard. Some places have boats, trailers, campers, rabbit hutches, chickens and so on. Do you want anyone to live here? Just keep this up and people will be afraid to live in this town. This is ridiculous.

Hey, Andy and Barney down at the jail. That's why they have architects and engineer blueprints so you can follow the blueprints. The blueprints you're following don't sound like it's working too good. That's because it don't.

I saw the thing in the paper this week and I can't believe they've got this bunch of lame brains still working for the county. They don't get sufficient feasibility studies if they get a feasibility study at all, and if they get it, it's usually when it's too late and already they've committed the money. Then they find out it's not going to work and we're stuck for the money. I think they'd be better off to draw lots instead of having elections. If you go to the right church or right social group or the right club and keep your mouth shut, you're a shoe-in.

Just found out Greeley has a new landfill dump at the end of Main Street just before you go over the tracks. Congratulations, Greeley.

I paid my taxes, I voted yes on the new school, then I go to the Play Day and some of the helpers there were rude as could be to my kids and some of the other kids. Some of those helpers need to be trained how to deal with these children because there were pushing and shoving on them.

The posted speed limit along Park Road is 30 mph, and maybe one out of 10 drive that and the rest are doing 50-55. It won't be long 'til the kids are out walking there to go to the pool. If the cops would patrol that area we could probably could have had the jail paid for, the school paid for and the upcoming hospital and maybe part of the national debt, but they'd rather advertise for tourism and then give them tickets coming through town really showing that we're just here to invite them in then give them tickets. Thank you.

I'd like to thank Allison Russell for the great job she had done this year with the vocal department at ACJSHS. It has been such a pleasure to go there this year and hear and see the students instead of listening to the pianist and the piano. We go there to hear our children and our grand children and our neighbors, not to hear the pianist. Thank you, thank you, thank you.

Christ is God's living word

Weekly Devotional
by David Bilderback

(Jesus) became what he had never been before (human), without ceasing to be what he had always been. (divine)

John's gospel begins by speaking about the "Word". "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God. He was with God in the beginning." (John 1:1-2) Jesus (the Word) did not have a beginning himself but existed from all eternity. as far as the human mind can go back the Lord Jesus was there. A real person who lived with God.

In John 1:14 we read; "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us. The Believers Bible Commentary explains. "By coming into the world, Christ has perfectly revealed to us what God is like. By dying on the cross, he has told us how much God loves us. Thus Christ is God's living Word to man, the expression of God's thoughts." That should give each of us pause for thought.

USDA announces CRP sign-up

WASHINGTON, May 14, 2013—Secretary of Agriculture Tom Vilsack today reminded farmers and ranchers that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) will conduct a four-week Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) general sign-up beginning May 20 and ending on June 14. Vilsack also announced the restart of sign-up for continuous CRP, including the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program, State Acres for Wildlife Enhancement Initiative, the Highly Erodible Land Initiative, the Grassland Restoration Initiative, the Pollinator Habitat Initiative and other related initiatives. Sign-up for continuous CRP began on May 13 and will continue through Sept. 30, 2013.

"As always, we expect strong competition to enroll acres into CRP, and we urge interested producers to maximize their environmental benefits and to make cost-effective offers," said Vilsack.

Vilsack encouraged producers to look into CRP's other enrollment opportunities offered on a continuous, non-competitive, sign-up basis.

CRP has a 27-year legacy of successfully protecting the nation's natural resources through voluntary participation, while providing significant economic and environmental benefits to rural communities across the United States. Producers enrolled in CRP plant long-term, resource-conserving covers to improve the quality of water, control soil erosion and develop wildlife habitat.

In return, USDA provides participants with rental payments and cost-share assistance. Contract duration is between 10 and 15 years. Currently, 27 million acres are enrolled in CRP through 700,000 contracts on 390,000 farms throughout the U.S., with enrollment in 49 states and Puerto Rico. Contracts on an estimated 3.3 million acres will expire on Sept. 30, 2013. Enrollment authority for all types of CRP, which had expired Sept. 30, 2012, was extended through 2013 by the American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012.

Offers for general sign-up CRP contracts are ranked according to an Environmental Benefits Index (EBI). USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) collects data for each of the EBI factors based on the relative environmental benefits for the land offered. FSA uses the following factors to assess the environmental benefits for the land offered:

- Wildlife habitat benefits resulting from covers on contract acreage;
- Water quality benefits from reduced erosion, runoff and leaching;
- On-farm benefits from reduced erosion;
- Benefits that will likely endure beyond the contract period;
- Air quality benefits from reduced wind erosion; and
- Cost.

CRP soil rental rates for non-irrigated cropland were updated this year to better reflect location and market conditions. A nationwide cap was placed on the maximum amount that may be paid per acre for the general sign-up. Taken together these steps help ensure that taxpayer dollars are spent in a fiscally responsible manner while producing the maximum environmental benefits for each dollar spent.

CRP is the largest USDA conservation program and continues to make major contributions to national efforts to improve water and air quality, prevent soil erosion, and protect the most sensitive areas including those prone to flash flooding and runoff. At the same time, CRP has helped increase populations of pheasants, quail and ducks and is recognized as benefiting certain rare species like the sage grouse, the lesser prairie chicken and other grassland birds. Highlights of CRP accomplishments include:

- The restoration of more than two million acres of wetlands and two million acres of riparian buffers;
- Prevention of more than 600 million pounds of nitrogen and more than 100 million pounds of phosphorous from flowing into our nation's streams, rivers, and lakes.
- Providing $1.8 billion annually to landowners — dollars that make their way into local economies, supporting small businesses and creating jobs; and
- Sequestering more carbon than any other conservation program in the country. By placing vulnerable cropland into conservation, CRP sequesters carbon in plants and soil and reduces both fuel and fertilizer usage. In 2011, CRP resulted in carbon sequestration equal to taking almost 10 million cars off the road.

For more information on CRP and other FSA programs, visit a local FSA service center or www.fsa.usda.gov.

Gov. Sam Brownback recognizes Brytton Strickler of Anderson County High School as a Governor's Scholar May 5.

Strickler, Jacobus named Governor's Scholars

At the invitation of Kansas Governor Sam Brownback, Brytton Strickler of Crest High School and Kevyn Jacobus of Anderson County High School, were selected to attend the 30th annual Governor's Scholars Awards Program on May 5, in Topeka.

Strickler is the daughter of Todd and Sammie Strickler of Colony.

Jacobus is the daughter of Angela Aguilar of Garnett. She has three siblings, David and Kylee Jacobus of Garnett and Dylan Jacobus of Roeland Park.

The recognition ceremony honors the top academic one percent of Kansas high school seniors. Scholars are selected from accredited public and priate schools in the state.

"These high school seniors have shown dedication in their studies and a commitment to learning. They've earned this honor, and I want to congratulate them on this achievement," Gov. Brownback said. "We also should recognize their families, teachers, and mentors for helping these outstanding students achieve their academic goals."

This program is coordinated for the governor by the Confidence in Kansas Public Education Task Force. It is funded by donations from private sector businesses in Kansas. The Confidence in Kansas Public Education Task Force was formed 30 years ago to strengthen public confidence in education.

Garbarino leads state track qualifiers from area schools

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

IOLA – Anderson County senior Alexandra Garbarino put the proof in the pudding at Iola's 4A State Qualifying regional meet Friday when she topped her opponent's time in the 200 meter by less than a half second to qualify to run the race at this week's state meet.

Controversy arose at the recent Pioneer League meet when some witnesses at the finish line of the 200 said Garbarino won the race, but volunteers timing the lanes said the first place finish belonged to Iola's Ashley Campbell. AC head track coach Mike Sibley appealed the issue to officials at the meet but to no avail, and blamed the problem on the lack of digital timing equipment at the league meet. Campbell was credited with the league win.

But Friday's regional qualifier at Iola used the modern technology to determine race timing, and showed Garbarino sprinted the 200 meter in 26.71 seconds compared to Campbell's 27.07. Both runners qualify to go to the state meet in the event, Garbarino seeded 7th and Campbell seeded 12th out of 16 qualifying runners.

The 4A state meet will be run this Friday and Saturday at Wichita State University. Garbarino also qualified in the 2nd seed position in the girls 300 meter hurdles with a time of 46.85 and in the 13th seeded girls 4x100 meter relay team along with Jessica McCullar, Reagan Jirak and MaKayla Kueser, which qualified for the 16 team field with a time of 51.25.

Other Anderson County state qualifiers from Garnett included the Bulldog boys 4x400 team of Tanner Wilson, Joey Read, Zach Hilliard and Cale Hedges with a qualifying time of 3:30.90 and a 5th seed. Wilson and Hedges also qualified in the 800 meter run, Wilson seeded 8th at 2:00.54 and Hedges 9th at 2:00.73. AC's Stephen Kaufman also qualified in pole vault with a 14 seed and a height of 12'6".

Central Heights qualified the most athletes among local schools for the 2013 state meets.

Amanda Stevenson, Ariel Lambert, Brianna Erhart and Emily Holloman qualified from Central Heights to run the girls 4x100 relay in the 3A state meet and managed a 12th seed with a qualifying time of 52.04. Erhart also qualified with a 16th seed in the 300 meter Hurdles with a time of 52.28. Donavon Milliken and Gavin Holler qualified with 7th and 16th seeds respectively in the Pole Vault with qualifying vaults of 12'6" and 10'. Regan Markley made the cut with a 16th seed in the 3A Javelin with a toss of 100' 3". Tanner Erhart earned a 5th seed in the Shot Put with a toss of 50' 10", and Tyler Herndon made it in the same event seeded 15th with a 44' throw. Amanda Stevenson qualified with a 16th seed in the girls Long Jump with 14' 11.5" and 16th seed again in the 100 Meter Dash with a time of 13.56.

From Crest, Kurston Gilliland qualified in the 1A division Shot Put competition with a 3rd place seed and a throw of 39'3.75", and was seeded 6th in the Javelin at 113'10".

Weight Loss Challenge closes with 44,409 pounds lost; 183 teams beat the Governor's

TOPEKA — With the final weigh-ins complete, Kansas Governor Sam Brownback announced Thursday the more than 5,000 Kansans participating in the Governor's Weight Loss Challenge lost a total of 44,409 pounds or a little more than 22 tons.

Governor Brownback's team finished 184th out of 1,026 teams in which the goal was to lose the most percentage of weight as a team of five. While final weights have yet to be certified, the team in first place at the closing of the competition hails from the Kansas Department of Corrections.

"Congratulations to everyone from across the state who accepted this challenge to begin eating healthier and exercising regularly. It's important to your well-being that you maintain a lifestyle that keeps the weight off, so don't stop today," Gov. Brownback said. "I am extremely impressed by the success of individuals and teams during the past four months."

Prizes will be awarded next Tuesday, May 21st, to State of Kansas employees who are members of the first- and second-place teams. The Governor also will host a prize drawing for the State employee teams finishing ahead of his team. The drawing will result in 37 additional teams winning prize money. Additionally, an award will be presented to the individual losing the most percentage of weight, regardless of his or her team's ranking.

Prize money in the Governor's Weight Loss Challenge totals $44,500. The following sponsors made the monetary prizes possible: Coventry Health Care, UnitedHealth Group and Kansas Beverage Association.

"I appreciate our sponsors for their commitment to a healthier Kansas. Our obesity rate for adults is approximately 30 percent, and I'm glad we were able to bring awareness to this epidemic and work together to reduce our risk for chronic illness like diabetes and heart disease," Gov. Brownback said.

In March, Gov. Brownback held a mid-way event to encourage participants to stay committed to the healthy habits they had developed during the first half of the competition. The event included a live Jazzercise demonstration, displays from local health and fitness clubs, participant testimonials, and a $1,000 prize drawing for teams ahead of the Governor's Team at the time. "Journey 2 Lose", a team from the Department for Children and Families, was drawn for the prize.

Details about the closing event and the winners will be announced soon.

Schmidt praises legislature on new ID theft law

TOPEKA – Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt today praised the Legislature for approving a tough new law to combat identity theft.

"Identity theft is one of the fastest growing crimes in the United States," Schmidt said. "Our law needs to keep up with the problem, and this aggressive new approach approved by the Legislature will strengthen our hand in fighting identity thieves."

The new law makes identity theft a violation of the Kansas Consumer Protection Act, which allows the Attorney General's office to receive and investigate complaints about identity theft. It also allows the Attorney General to seek injunctions and impose fines on identity thieves. The new law is in addition to the previous law, which remains in effect, under which identity theft is a crime.

"There are times when a criminal investigation and a prison term are the right response to identity theft,"

Schmidt said. "But there also are times when the greater agility available to law enforcement under the Consumer Protection Act will be a more effective way of obtaining justice for victims of identity theft."

The new law was approved last month in the Senate 39 to 1 and was approved today in the House of Representatives 121 to 0. It is named the Wayne Owen Law in honor of the late Sergeant at Arms in the Kansas House of Representatives who had been involved in reporting and fighting identity theft.

The bill will now be presented to Governor Sam Brownback for his consideration.

Alexandra Garbarino sets up to hand off the baton to Reagan Jirak in the girls 4x100 Relay Friday at the 4A Regional Track Meet at Iola. The team earned a 13th seed in this week's 4A State Meet; and Garbarino qualified in two additional events.

Avenue of Flags dates back to Bicentennial

As the year 1976 was approaching and Americans were making plans to observe and celebrate its United States Bicentennial, those then holding positions in Garnett's City Hall wanted our citizens to be included in such events. A committee of about a dozen area residents was named to serve in that capacity. Many ideas were suggested with the final vote being an Avenue of Flags at Garnett Cemetery.

People would be asked to contribute the casket flags, which the United States military had presented to those survivors of deceased persons who had served our country. Flags came from far and wide from family members of persons from Anderson County who had served in all branches of the military. Such generosity there was! And what a fantastic site those flags have been over the years, so very impressive!

For their part in the Avenue of Flags, members of Garnett's Four Winds Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution wanted to be participants. Members of the then-small chapter had to show positive proof of service in the Revolutionary War for an ancestor enabling them to become DAR members. The members made replicas of the Betsy Ross flags of that time period to honor and recognize the part their ancestors had played in gaining the freedoms 237 years ago, which American citizens have enjoyed. Those flags, with their field of blue with a circle of 13 white stars, have flown for 37 years. Sadly, they have become ragged. Four Winds Chapter members voted to replace those Betsy Ross flags.

Visitors to Garnett Cemetery where these patriotic flags are flown each Memorial Day can see those new, bright flags this year during the Memorial Day weekend. Members of the Four Winds Chapter have chosen to replace eight of those Betsy Ross flags. Those flags are for the Soldier or Patriot and by whom originally contributed: John Tate, Laura (Mrs. Larry) Cox and her mother the late Mrs. Nina Sailor; Edward Tyler and his son Robert Tyler (one flag), Juanita (Tyler) Kellerman; Jacob Loesch/Lesh; the late Gilma Lesh (Mrs. Guy

Rogers; Daniel Newton; the late Mrs. Pauline Benjamin; Martin B. Dreibelis, the late Mrs. Arlene Hiner; Israel Hils, the late Mrs. Margaret Kennedy; Ebenezer Snow, the late Mrs. Bernice (Don) Stith; Frederick Kellerman, Juanita for her late husband Lawrence Kellerman.

Any female aged 18 or older who would like to join Four Winds Chapter is most welcome to contact any of the Chapter members, or most expressly Iona Sweers, or Juanita Kellerman, who co-chairs as Registrars, for aid in proving eligibility.

Find ways to stay active

May is Older Americans Month

The benefits of exercise are both social and physical. Exercise and physical activity help you to stay active and independent while helping to increase muscle mass to assist in mobility. Exercise has also been proven to increase mental cognition in older adults. Older adults do better when they continue to maintain relationships within the community and their relationships with family, friends and neighbors tend to flourish as well—exercising the body and mind helps achieve both of these. Older adults who stay active are also more likely to volunteer and be involved in civic and social groups, which, allows them the opportunity to share their wisdom and experience while making valuable contributions to their community. Older adults have a variety of options for exercise and physical activity. Exercise should be focused on helping improve balance, range of motion and flexibility and increasing muscle strength without putting too much strain on the body. Exercise that is too strenuous can increase the risks of falling and broken bones. Below is a list of common exercises proven beneficial to older adults:

- Walking
  - Biking
  - Gardening
  - Stretching programs
  - Swimming programs
  - Choreographed fitness such as dancing, yoga, water aerobics or tai chi
  - Structured games such as Wii bowling or miniature golf
  - Brain games including cards, puzzles, trivia and board games
  - Volunteering with community based groups
  - Joining a local fitness center or senior center exercise program
- There are many ways to get physical exercise and to stay active so reaching into the cabinet, taking a short walk or but-toning your favorite shirt remain things you can do more easily and without assistance. Contact the Area Agency on Aging for a list of exercise programs in the community and at local senior centers at 785-242-7200 or 1-800-633-5621.

Rep. Jones returns for veto session

BY KEVIN JONES KANSAS HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

We're back. After a month break from the Topeka whirlwind, we returned Monday May 8th for veto session. During this time we will vote on bills that have passed out of either the House or the Senate that are now within conference committees made up of House and Senate members, to work for agreements to any differences that both sides of the Capitol may have. When the conference committees come to agree on a particular bill, it is then brought before the Senate and the House again for a final vote. If it passes both, it goes before the governor to be signed.

Veto session is notorious for taking an excessive amount of time doing last minute work to pass legislation (and sometimes force legislation). The goal this session was to get done in 80 days having a more effective session with less spending. The trouble is that any disagreement can cause us to miss our goal.

Currently, there is a disagreement that has set the stage for this veto session. Of the tax plans put forward by the Governor, by the Senate, and by the House, the main sticking point is retaining the current sales tax rate of 6.3% that is supposed to sunset to 5.7% as of 2014. The Governor's original tax plan included this sales tax being retained permanently and it removed the opportunity for you to write off your Mortgage Interest during tax season. Both the Senate and the House passed a tax plan that still allows the Mortgage interest to be written off at a decreasing rate in proportion to the increasing income tax savings, but the House wants the sales tax increase to fall off and the Senate wants to keep it on.

So far I have not heard of a compromise. It will come. It has to come. It is a waiting game for most of us outside of the conference committee. When finally a compromise is reached, it will come to the Senate and the House and we will vote to concur or not, and then send it on to the Governor or back to conference committee.

It is a little frustrating being in Topeka and just waiting for the House and Senate and Governor's office to come to agreements. There have been activist groups for both the developmentally disabled "carve out" and for the Education Common Core Curriculum unrest this week. As I met with, listened to, and watched these groups, I could not help but think that at this point in session there is not much that can be done on these issues until next year unless a conference committee does something drastic. These are both issues for all of us to become more aware of and knowledgeable on.

I do know the House is interested in common sense reductions in the size of government. This week demonstrated that some of the best people to identify those savings are state employees. A state employee was awarded $1,025 because of a suggestion to install motion activated paper towel dispensers that saved the state $10,025 last year. The state has an Employee Suggestion Program that rewards employees who suggest an idea that saves the state money over a documented 12-month period. The employee receives 10% of the savings, the agency receives 10% and the rest goes into the State General Fund. Making the best use of tax payer funds is extremely important, and we are eager to find more savings and efficiencies. Any ideas for savings can be submitted to the Department of Administration.

I was present for the official signing of both SB136 and HB2066 both of which I carried in the House. It was a pleasure to carry these bills this session.

SB136 is the bill that will allow Veterans to have "VETERAN" put on their driver's license if desired.

HB2066 allows a patient to self-refer to a Physical Therapist for evaluation and treatment.

I had the pleasure to host 3 pages on May 9: Katie Lybarger from Garnett, and Brady Rockers and Jasmine White from Greeley. I was very impressed with their work ethic and the fact that they gave up time to come help me in Topeka! I hope others will take advantage of coming to the Capitol to Page next session.

Pages Katie Lybarger, Brady Rockers, and Jasmine White were accompanied by Myra Lybarger and Lori Rockers.

It has been a pleasure to serve the 5th District this Legislative Session. The "Listening Sessions" at several locations proved to be valuable in hearing what the people of the district were thinking on the issues. Please continue to communicate with me on the issues.

Much of the content of my future reports will rely on the concerns and questions you bring to me through your correspondence. I look forward to hearing from you! If you are in Topeka, please come by my office at 512-N. Please visit my website at www.kevinjonesforkansas.com, or email me at kevin.jones@house.ks.gov (Put "The Playground" in the Subject line to be signed up for my e-newsletter.) If you would like a hard copy of The Playground, please notify me and provide your mailing address.

Kevin Jones represents the 5th District in the Kansas House of Representatives.

Be on the lookout for deer ticks

Just thought I would let you know that deer ticks are out and very active. So far I've only found two crawling on my clothes and none attached to my body anywhere.

The loathsome deer tick, now known as the black-legged tick, is defined more by the disease it spreads than by its own characteristics.

Deer ticks are blood-sucking members of the arachnid family and were vaulted into the public consciousness in the mid-1970s when it was discovered that they are the primary (and possibly only) transmitters or vectors, for Lyme disease.

Lyme disease is a debilitating, though rarely fatal, infection that is often misdiagnosed because early symptoms closely resemble the flu. Victims usually have a slowly spreading bull's eye-shaped rash where the tick attached, but not always. If untreated by antibiotics, patients can develop a variety of health problems, including facial paralysis, heart palpitations, arthritis, severe headaches, and neurological disorders.

Associated mainly with the northeast, deer ticks live by Henry Roeckers Contact (785) 448-6244 for local archeology information.

throughout the central and eastern United States, wherever their favorite hosts, deer and rodents, are present. Western black-legged ticks live west of the Rocky Mountains and are vectors for Lyme disease.

Significantly smaller than the more commonly encountered dog tick, adult female deer ticks are about as big as a sesame seed and have reddish hind bodies with black dorsal markings. Males are slightly smaller than females and are solid dark brown.

Deer ticks live about two years and go through four life phases: egg, larva, nymph and adult. They feed exclusively on animal blood and eat only three times during their lives: once to molt from larva to nymph, once from nymph to adult, and once as adults lay eggs. They can contract the bacteria that causes Lyme disease from an infected host at any of these feedings, but transmit it only during the second or third. They must remain attached for at least 24 hours for the bacteria to transmit.

Larvae are minuscule, no bigger than the period at the end of this sentence, and feed only on birds or mice. Nymphs are about as big as a poppy seed, but like adults, will seek larger hosts, including deer, dogs and humans. Adult females mate on and off a host, then feed for several days, swelling to twice their normal size. Once engorged, they drop off, lay their eggs amid the leaves and die.

Lyme disease is currently one of the fastest-growing vector-borne diseases in the United States. More than 14,000 cases are reported annually, but because symptoms so closely resemble the flu and usually go away without treatment, scientists estimate as many as nine out of every 10 cases go unreported.

Word of caution: Stay clear of low-hanging cedar trees.

1993: Asbestos removal tab is $18K

May 27, 2003

With the approaching June 2 target date for East Kansas Agri Energy to tally its investor capital with an eye toward constructing a $32 million ethanol plant in Garnett, a number of economic advantages hang in the balance for the local community hinged on the success of the effort's equity drive.

Garnett Chamber of Commerce officials are expected to submit a proposal to the City of Garnett this week which will save the organization's annual Liberty Festival fireworks display, which was nearly canceled due to new federal restrictions governing explosives.

Members of the Anderson County Hospital Board and the Anderson County Commission seem to be tapping their toes to the same song about the proposed physicians office complex, but the county just won't get up and dance. The hospital board would like to construct a physicians office space sometime in the near future, while the county commission would like to see the board delay construction for an undetermined amount of time in order for the hospital to gain "better financial footing."

by Vickie Moss Staff Writer

A bid of $18,535 from an Overland Park firm for asbestos removal from the Richart Hotel was approved by the Garnett City Commission. The company bid the lowest among six companies who submitted proposals. Prices for the job ranged as high as $58,000.

May 23, 1983

The idea for a camping paradise began forming for Joe and Laura Gregg when they stayed at a campground in Biloxi, Miss., because of a broke-down truck. The idea culminated in the Greggs purchasing 27 acres five and one-half miles north-east of Kincaid, which has a trio of ponds and all the trimmings for campers to swim, fish and relax. Gregg estimates there will be space for about 200 campers at the site when it is completed, with 10 spaces for electrical hookups and other spaces for tent campers.

The search for a new administrator for the hospital, salaries for employees, the capital budget, a new television system and a new radio and paging system were some of the items considered by the Anderson County Hospital Board of Trustees.

The latest discovery for the extermination of chinch-bugs is a certain kind of road oil. The men who are fighting this pest at the Kansas Agricultural College believe this oil to be more effective than the tar now used in trenches. While a great many chinch-bugs have been destroyed this spring by the frequent, early rains in Kansas, there are millions of them in the wheat fields, ready to move into the corn.

Four Winds DAR attends state conference

Three members of Four Winds Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution attended the three day, 115th State Conference of the Kansas Society DAR, which was held at the Capital Plaza Hotel in Topeka the weekend of April 26.

Attending were Alice Walker, Chapter Regent as well as Honorary Kansas State DAR Regent; Caitlin Jackson a delegate as well as a Page; and Gretchen Jackson Magee, who also Paged. She is an associate member, having been a 10-year Four Winds member before moving to Arkansas where she is now a full member.

The DAR has three main goals: Historic Preservation, Education and Patriotism. Among the several very interesting speakers there were three of each whom talked on one of the goals. The Regent of District of Columbia told of her project for Historic Preservation had been to find, replace and restore the Boundary Stones that marked the 10-mile area that George Washington had chosen for the new federal government. These 40 markers were one square foot and set in the ground to protrude 2 feet. Since these were all set by 1793, some were missing, some badly damaged and some well-covered with grass and sod. The DC chapters now have the help of the National Park Service to maintain them.

Another speaker was Lt. Col. Jennifer Minus, a West Point Graduate, a history professor there, and who had recently returned from a tour of duty in Iraq, having done two tours in Bosnia. She combined Freedom and Patriotism in her talk, which brought tears to many eyes. The Kansas Society had given $3,000 to Landstull Medical Hospital for personal needs of the severely wounded as they arrive by air from the battlefield with nothing, and $1,000 each for San Antonio Base, for Camp Attebury and for Walter Reed Hospital for the personal needs of the service men and women who arrive for continued hospital care or for those who are deploying. The Assistant Director of Crossnore School, which is one of the five schools in Appalachia that DAR support mainly for students in intolerable home situations, spoke about the school and the new director. She introduced the young woman with her who was given a $6,000 college scholarship from KSDAR as well as a shower of items for her college dorm room.

Since we are small in number of members, we often feel that we do not accomplish much, but as we get state awards for the amount and quality of the work that we do, we have to be pleased. This year we received 13 awards: For outstanding work in the American History Essay Contests; For outstanding print coverage of the History Essay contest (thank you to the two Anderson County newspapers - you are the greatest); For Americanism (our flag project); For Constitution Week work; For excellence in DAR school programs; For Historic Preservation; For exceptional support for Juniors (who are full members age 18-35); For outstanding achievement in Project Patriot; For assisting an Arizona Chapter prospective member by two members going to Eureka and finally finding the needed proof and learned how to access county records, which have been sent to the Salt Mines at Hutchinson for storage; and lastly for donations to the state regent's projects at Crossnore School and to the President General's project of national building repair. Alice Walker received an individual award for her work on the State Library Committee.

Any woman who descends from a person, man or woman, who gave service, military or civilian, during the American Revolution is invited to join in the DAR work for Historic Preservation, Education and Patriotism. Contact Ione Sweers or Juanita Kellerman, both in Garnett; Louise Stites, Centerville, or Alice Walker, Blue Mound.

Local foster family makes a difference

Making a difference for even one child...can mean everything. This is the mantra that TFI Family Services, Inc. (TFI) foster parents Amanda and Davy Allison of Garnett, Kan. have adopted in their tenure as a foster family. They say their favorite part of being foster parents is seeing the children in their home succeed.

lives...a family that would love them no matter what they had been through and give them hope."

"You cannot change their past, but you can give them hope for tomorrow," TFI foster parent Amanda Allison said. "To be able to give them hope and to teach them to believe in their self is one of the best rewards. Foster children come with so little, yet they bring so much to your home. They want what every child wants, a chance."

Initially the Allison family considered fostering because they were interested in adopting. They ended up choosing to become a licensed TFI foster home because of two resource family workers who opened their eyes to the struggle that foster children face.

Similar to many other soon-to-be foster families, Amanda and Davy began their journey in a PS-MAPP class (Partnering for Safety and Permanence Model Approach to Partnerships in Parenting), a 10-week foster parent training course designed to educate prospective families about the children they may have placed in their home. In their course, they were asked to take an imaginary journey and step into the shoes of a foster child.

"We chose TFI because of the resource family workers we met," Amanda said. "They taught us about strengths and needs and they showed us the love that they felt for the foster children that they worked with. It was not just a job to them. They truly cared about the kids and they wanted to make a difference for them. They taught us that there was a need for loving forever families as well as foster families."

"They asked us to imagine the fear, the heart ache, the bewilderment that the children in foster care face," Amanda said. "It made me realize how strong these kids had to be at such a young age, and it scared me because I could not imagine that kind of loss in my life. It made me realize how much of a difference a wonderful foster family could make for those children. A family that could take them into their home, wrap their arms around them and help them through one of the most difficult times in their
