Tornado Season Strikes Midwest

Oklahoma tornado serves as deadly reminder of a storm's potential

Local church leads efforts to help Moore families recover

Former ACHS coach talks about life in Moore, tornadoes

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - When your friends and neighbors need help, you do what you can.

That's the message behind a relief effort spearheaded by the Garnett Nazarene Church to help people whose lives were changed by an F5 tornado that ripped through Moore, Okla., last week. The efforts include working with a family that lives in Moore but once called Anderson County home.

It's too early to help Moore residents rebuild, but church officials last week collected specific items to help with the early stages of recovery. That includes things like batteries and flashlights.

"At the very onset, you can't get in there and clean but people still need tarps and Rubbermaid containers for what they can find and carry," Rhonda Rhoades, representing the church, said.

The church was expected to deliver a van filled with relief items on Saturday, May 25.

The church is working with Trinity Nazarene

Church in Oklahoma, which is scheduling relief efforts for other churches and volunteers.

Local church volunteers also are keeping in close contact with former Garnett residents who now live in Moore. Culley and Cheryl Seymour moved to Moore in 1999. Culley Seymour was a teacher at Anderson County High School and coached basketball and golf from 1994 to 1999. He now teaches at a Christian school in Moore. Rhoades said she has kept in close contact with the Seymours, who were fortunate that their home was not damaged. Cheryl Seymour's parents, however, were not as fortunate. Their home was damaged, and they are staying with the couple.

Culley Seymour said his family's house was more than a mile away from the tornado's path. He was teaching at the time, while his family sought shelter with neighbors. He heard weather reports that the tornado was headed straight for the Warren Center, near where his wife's parents lived, and he called them. His father-in-law said they planned to ride out the storm. They and their home managed to escape relatively unscathed.

Ethanol plant still expected to reopen

Mother Nature could put damper on plans with this year's corn

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - It's still too early to predict what kind of corn crop will arrive this fall, but ethanol plant officials continue to say they plan to restart operations with the fall harvest.

A representative of East Kansas Agri-Energy ethanol plant said last week that plans remain the same - to restart the plant in the fall. The ethanol plant, meanwhile, will stay shuttered with a minimal amount of employees until it can restart production.

Whether those plans materialize will depend mostly on Mother Nature, who already pushed this year's corn harvest back by about a month. Spring rains have gone a long way toward relieving the area of the drought that plagued the state for two years, leading to two devastated corn seasons that forced the ethanol plant to close in October. K-State Research and Extension Agent Shannon Blocker said previously that if the weather cooperates and temperatures do not get too hot in July when the corn is at a critical state, it won't matter that the corn got a late start. But the crop's success will depend on a variety of factors, such as the amount of rain it receives, temperatures and diseases. This year's wheat crop received appropriate rain and temperatures, but has been plagued by disease.

The ethanol plant suspended production in October of 2012 because of the drought, which lowered corn supplies and raised prices. The demand for gasoline was low at the time.

City's former public safety director dies

Yates named 2003 Investigator of Year for schoolhouse fires

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

MOUND CITY - Whether it was helping law enforcement officers determine how a fire started or implementing new policies and procedures at the Garnett Police Department, David Yates made a lasting impression on law enforcement in Anderson County.

Yates, a former Kansas Fire Marshal's Office investigator, one-time candidate for Anderson County Sheriff and Garnett Public Safety Director, died Wednesday, May 22, at the age of 66, after a long illness.

"He was one of the most professional people I have ever known," Garnett City Manager

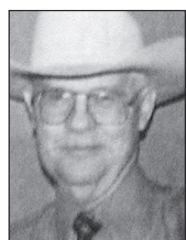

Joyce Martin said of Yates.

Even before Yates was hired as the city's public safety director, he frequently worked with local officials to help determine the cause of fires as a state fire marshal.

Anderson County Undersheriff Tom Laiter said he worked with Yates on several fire cases, such as a fire at Astro Cap Manufacturing and a series of arson fires at small, rural schoolhouses several years ago. Like Martin, Laiter praised Yates for his professionalism and skills as an investigator.

"He was a great guy," Laiter

Tips to survive a tornado: Listen to warnings, have a plan, find shelter

Oklahoma tornado reminds residents to be prepared, find some type of shelter

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Last week's tornado devastation in Oklahoma serves as a reminder to people of the need to seek underground shelter, Anderson County Emergency Management Director J.D. Mersman said.

It's important to have a plan before a tornado warning is issued, Mersman said. If you don't have a basement, seek public shelter. If a public shelter isn't readily available, talk with neighbors or friends close by and see if they have a basement or shelter.

If no shelter is available, you need to put as many walls or floors between you and the outside as possible, Mersman said. Look for a closet or interior room on the lowest floor, he said.

Local emergency management and fire department officials last week announced a cooperative plan with local churches to provide emergency public shelters at four churches in Garnett. The need for public storm shelters had been discussed for many years, but a committee was formed about a year ago to find a way to fill the need.

The churches include: First United Methodist Church, 205 S. Oak St.; Holy Angels Church, 514 E. Fourth Ave.; First Baptist Church, 417 S. Walnut St.;

and the Dunkard Brethren Church, 1020 S. Westgate Road.

In the event of imminent severe weather, emergency management officials will notify a representative of the church that the shelter needs to be opened.

For people who want the security of their own storm shelter but do not have a basement or other underground shelter, another option is to purchase a premanufactured shelter. Such shelters have become popular in places where wind and tornadoes are common, and have been popularized recently by television shows like "Doomsday Preppers."

Area residents had plenty of time to prepare for the storm, according to the article on the Kansas Historical Society's website, written by Rebecca Martin in July 2011. Weather officials watched a massive but slow-moving storm roll into Kansas from Colorado. At about 5:30 p.m. April 26, Garnett residents saw a funnel cloud in the western sky, near Westphalia.

Adams, a farmer and amateur photographer, was able to assemble his box camera and capture the long, rope-like funnel. He later sold souvenir cabinet cards and stereographs of the image, but a photographer in South Dakota took a more dramatic photograph of three cyclones just four months later. That more dramatic photo was advertised as the first photographed cyclone, and experts now believe it may have been altered, according to Martin's article.

The Kansas Chapter of the International Association of Arson Investigators named Yates the Investigator of the Year for 2003, after his probe of the historic West Scipio and Earnest School fires in 2003 yielded evidence for the arrest and conviction of four suspects. Yates lost the election for Anderson County sheriff in 2004 by 40 votes to Scot Brownrigg.

While working as the city's public safety director, Yates oversaw both the police department and fire department. He insisted that officers follow standard operating procedures and implemented policies that are still in effect today, Martin said, such as procedures to help officers better track evidence.

"He was always honest with you. You always knew where you stood," Martin said. "Being proud of what you do and who you are - he tried to instill that in officers."

Yates moved to Kansas at the age of 6 months and graduated from Greeley High School in 1965. He married his high school sweetheart, Barbara Ann Miller, in 1968 and they had a daughter.

Yates worked in law enforcement, including positions with the Garnett Police Department, Miami County Sheriff's Department, Santa Fe Railroad and Kansas State Fire Marshal's Office. He later served as Garnett's public safety director, and as Linn County Emergency Management Director.

Funeral services were held Saturday in Mound City. A full obituary can be found on page 3A.

One's special, 12's a crowd

High school valedictorians are like martinis: one is awesome, but 12's too many

Multiple valedictorians has become a common sight among Anderson County graduations and the rest of the nation for that matter in the last decade or so, ever since high school curriculums started giving more credit for harder classes and since some college classes have been fitted into high school curriculums and allowed dual credit.

Tougher classes in a range of disciplines have ramped up potential credits and given solid-performing students a better chance of meeting or even exceeding the 4.0 grade point average usually set as the threshold for being named valedictorian. Some larger high schools in the country have had as many as 41 valedictorians in one graduating class, each of them legitimately earned according to their school's grade rankings.

That's obviously not a bad thing in and of itself. If more kids challenge themselves and perform well they can improve their ranking. That's the kind of message we should, after all, be sending to our young adults in a society and dog-eat-dog world where performance matters.

But to the real idea of a valedictorian and salutatorian – the number one and number two academic rankings of any given academic body and those generally honored in a traditional high school graduation – we should raise the bar so that winning one of those posts is special again.

Remember Johnny Weissmuller, the 1924 Olympic 100 meter swimming champion and later star of the Tarzan movies of the 30s and 40s? In the Olympics of 1924 he was the fastest human ever to be timed in the 100 meters at 57.4 seconds. But advanced training techniques, adjustments and new designs for competition pools and more physically conditioned athletes resulted in increasingly lowered times. In the 1980s and 1990s, female college swimmers were regularly beating Weissmuller's old records in their training sessions. In 2009 Brazil's Cesar Cielo set the new record at 46.91.

We see it in every Olympics – old records shattered by newcomers who deserve every bit of the fame they receive. But we always name a new champion – someone who clearly stands above the rest. We don't give everyone a medal just because they beat Weissmuller's time. We look to competition enough to see the value in having a real winner. If we don't then we're left with little more than an elevated sense of mediocrity. In the words of the villain Syndrome in the Pixar animated super hero romp The Incredibles, "Everyone can be super! And when everyone's super...no one will be."

It's been suggested in other parts of the country that committees of teachers, administrators and parents of non-graduating students convene to select a valedictorian and salutatorian from among the qualifying candidates by assessing other criteria like leadership, citizenship, community service, etc. Others have suggested determining a separate scoring mechanism which would accompany a student's grade point average that would measure some of these more subjective criteria over his/her school career and which could be used as a tie-breaker in the case of multiple 4.0s.

For its part Anderson County High School will implement certain additional honors-based criteria next year which should tighten the race a little.

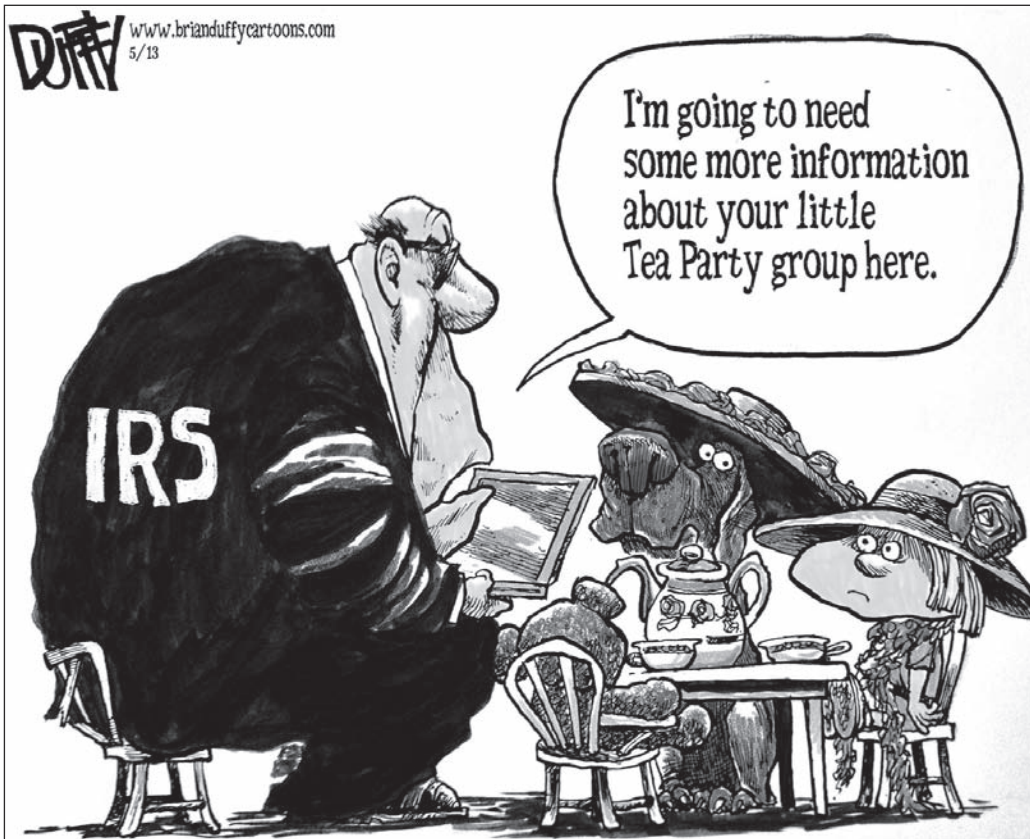

Any method is subjective, but we should pursue one with the mission of arriving each year with a name at the top of the heap.

No matter how many outstanding students we have, one of them every year deserves the honor of being top of his/her class.

The media's Tea Party moment

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

Rarely has the White House briefing room so resembled the main ballroom at a meeting of the Conservative Political Action Conference.

After news broke of a sweeping Justice Department subpoena of The Associated Press telephone records, White House press secretary Jay Carney didn't so much have to deal with querulous reporters pressing him on all fronts. He had to deal with citizens bristling with anger over perceived encroachments on their rights by an overweening government. The reaction to the seizure of records on 20 office and personal lines of AP staff is another reminder, if we needed one, that what the press cares about most is itself.

The New York Times sniffed at the Internal Revenue Service scandal. It didn't even put the initial story on the front page. But the paper rebuked the Obama administration for the AP subpoena in an editorial titled "Spying on The Associated Press": The administration has "a chilling zeal for investigating leaks" and is trying "to frighten off whistleblowers."

It sounds like the Times should go back and read President Barack Obama's recent commencement address at Ohio State University, where he lamented that the students have been hearing warnings that government is "nothing more than some separate, sinister entity" and "that tyranny is always lurking just around the corner."

Yes, why can't all the journalists hyped up about the AP subpoena simply put more trust in the good intentions of their own government?

Lowry

Appealing for calm, Carney said the president believes in an "unfettered ability to pursue investigative journalism," but that there should be "balance." The implicit reaction of journalists was: "Balance? Don't give us any stinkin' balance. Give us our rights."

In this, the reporters exhibited a healthy impulse toward vigilance about liberty. The phrase "chilling effect" has been bandied about often. A chill comes not necessarily from what government is doing to you, but from what it might do to you. On top of everything else, it is the principle of the thing -- an infringement, or even a potential infringement, on the constitutional rights of even a handful of reporters is an affront to all. There are lots of people who share this way of thinking about rights and government. Some of them gather every year at places like CPAC and the National Rifle Association annual convention.

Scorn was heaped on the NRA for opposing new gun rules out of the very same logic that compels reporters to react so strongly against the AP subpoena. The NRA will not abide an infringement of anyone's legitimate right to bear arms, and it fears what could come of enhanced state power. Like the reporters, it casts a jaundiced eye on the reassurances of government. What they are to the First Amendment, it is to the Second.

Journalists should learn from this moment. Maybe they should stop rolling their eyes when the likes of Texas Sen. Ted Cruz talk of the Constitution. Maybe they should credit the skepticism about government of the tea party, which was right in its early complaints about the IRS. Maybe, after nearly five years, they should invest the phrase "adversarial press" with true meaning.

I have just read the article about Terry Solander and his remarks about cleaning up the city. I am concerned and hope the rest of the community is concerned too when he commented, and I quote: "It is my decision what's prosecuted." When did Terry Solander become a dictator. Thank you.

I was reading in the paper where the city's trying to pass this law where we can't have any furniture in our yard. Well, won't they have to remove all the benches on the rail trail and in front of the sheriff's office? I would think they would have to.

My mom, sister and myself went Wednesday, May 22, 2013, to decorate graves at Scipio Cemetery for Memorial Day. To our surprise all three of our graves were stripped of more than $100 worth of pretties. My mom buried the love of her life in 2002, a very wonderful and caring person, and you know what a shame it is that we cannot go out and put things on his grave without knowing that it will be stolen. Apparently you didn't know Mr. Nick (name deleted) very well because you're dern lucky he didn't reach up and grab your leg when you walked away with all that. Well, then there's my two kids, a 24 year-old buried in 2004 a 20 year-old buried in 2010, who are buried right above their grandpa Nick (name deleted). Their graves were stripped too. That is all we have left of them besides memories, to go out and put something on their graves to let them know we love and miss them very much and then we have idiots like you who steal from their graves. Now that you know this family's feelings we also want you to know that we had cameras trained right on the graves. We know who you are, and we are giving you this opportunity to please return what you took. No questions asked. Please Lord forgive these people for doing this because they need it. And I promise the good Lord will take care of you when it's your time because he does not tolerate these kind of actions. Shame on you.

As I drive around Garnett I don't see an issue with furniture in people's yards that would warrant a law being passed, I think that's just city hall trying to flex its muscles. If you want to clean up the town and make it safe for tourism, build some decent curbs to keep the grass and gravel from spreading into the street and make the businesses with gravel parking lots pave them so they don't look so ratty. If I wanted to live under an anal retentive neighborhood association agreement that controls my property I'd move to Johnson County. I won't pay these extreme city taxes and high Garnett utilities and then have city hall tell me I can't have a bench or chair in my yard or on my porch. Thank you.

I do believe in shopping at home and supporting my hometown but come on. Gas prices are 20 cents higher than other small towns in the area I travelled through last week- $3.79 in Pomona & Lyndon, $3.99 Garnett. Yep, I filled up elsewhere and was happy to do it.

I wanted to say congratulations to Sydney Poverlein on the wonderful job she did at the GES talent show on Thursday. Never have I heard such a great job done on "The Good Ship Lollipop," and I could certainly tell that the crowd agreed by their applause. Good job Sydney.

Tyson talks about veto session at Legislature

BY CARYN TYSON KANSAS SENATE

The legislature began Veto Session May 8th. Veto Session is supposed to be when the legislature works on bills that have been vetoed by the Governor but instead it has turned into a 'second' session.

One of the bills passed in Veto Session that will be signed into law is HB 2162. The bill strengthens our 2nd Amendment rights by not allowing taxpayer dollars to be used to lobby for gun control. The vote was 31 to 6.

HB 2199 was several liquor bills rolled into one. Last year state law was changed to allow liquor stores to give free samples. I voted against this bill - it was referred to as the 'mega liquor bill'. It was 11 bills that were rolled into one bill at the end of session. Ten of the bills had never passed either the House or Senate. The Division of Alcohol Beverage Control (ABC) interpreted the law in a manner that will not allow anything to be added to the samples, therefore a person would be taking a straight shot of liquor. The bill we passed this year will allow ice, water, and other items to be added to the sample. The bill also requires the ABC issue a fine within 90 days of issuing a citation. Currently, ABC will issue a citation and a business may not receive a fine for 11 months or longer. The bill passed the Senate on a vote of 39 to 0.

HB 2249 removes the Historic Preservation limit of 500 feet for city limits and 1,000 feet for rural. If you were a property owner within the defined range of a Historic Preservation property, you were required to get permission to make changes to your property, even though your property was not in the program. HB 2249 reduces the burden of government by allowing property owners the freedom to make changes to their property when it borders a Historic Preservation property. I voted Yes and the bill passed the chamber on a vote of 29 to 10.

Budget and tax negotiations continue. The decisions being made are critical and could impact Kansans for years to come. It is important that we have accurate information and are working from a common set of assumptions. The previous projections were based on an average 5% growth for the state. This was concerning to me because the legislature has always used an average of 4% and the number should be revisited as a result of the tax bill passed last year. By the end of the week, it appeared both chambers have agreed to use 4%.

The House made an offer of a 6% sales tax. The current sales tax is at 6.3% and is to sunset to 5.7%. Because of the aggressive income tax package that we passed last year, the Senate has taken a position to keep the 6.3% sales tax and use it to 'buy down' income tax. The House 6% offer would require the income tax cut passed last year to be less of a cut by decreasing the standard deductions. The legislature increased standard deductions to $4,500 for individuals, $9,000 for married filing jointly, and $9,000 for head of household. These are considerable tax cuts and is a step in the direction of keeping more money in your pocket. If the Houses offer is passed, the sales tax would be at 6% while the standard deduction would be $6,500 for married and $5,000 for head of household.

The difference between the Senate and House tax plan on sales tax is .3% - a difference of 30 cents for every $100 you spend. However the difference on income tax is thousands of dollars in deductions and income tax cuts. While the end result has taken longer than hoped for this session, it's worth the extra work to come out with a plan that will dictate the next decade of fiscal policy in Kansas.

Please contact me with any questions or comments via phone 785.296.6838; email Caryn.Tyson@senate.ks.gov; or by mail, at Kansas State Capitol, 300 SW 10th St., Topeka, KS 66612.

That's a typical response from Oklahoma residents, Seymour said. He grew up in central Kansas, and never saw a tornado until he moved to Oklahoma. Every May, residents are plagued with multiple tornado reports and warnings. After a while, it's easy to become complacent and ignore the warnings. It can be deadly when a big storm moves through, as it did last week, killing at least 24 people.

The Seymours traveled to Moore to interview for a job in May 1999 - just a week after a tornado destroyed much of the city. They wondered at the time if moving to Oklahoma was such a good idea, and in 14 years Seymour has seen devastation from three major tornadoes that hit his community. But after 14 years, they love living in Moore, he said.

"The thing about being here is the people," he said. "Nobody is whining about FEMA getting money to them because the people are taking care of them. People are coming by, giving us gloves and rakes and water. I saw a guy going around handing out cash to people.

"It's just like Kansas. You have good people who take care of people."

Seymour said he isn't focused on the destruction and tragedy. Instead, he and his family and friends are working to help people recover and move forward. He is grateful for people and groups like the Garnett Church of the Nazarene, who have traveled from other states to help.

Local volunteers likely will wait until the first week of June to travel to Moore for relief work. While there, they plan to stay at the school where Seymour works.

It's not the first time the church has sent volunteers for tornado recovery. Between 15 and 20 volunteers traveled to Joplin, Mo., when a tornado decimated the town two years ago. Volunteers took chainsaws to help people clear trees and debris, and it's likely they will do the same in Moore once the area has been cleared by insurance agents and emergency management investigators.

Shelters, FlatSafe and FamilySAFE advertise a variety of tornado shelters. Many offer shelters both above and below ground, typically built of steel and able to withstand high winds and impact. Above-ground units can be anchored to a concrete floor inside a garage, or can be built as a stand-alone shelter. Survive-A-Storm advertises extensive shelters with multiple rooms, able to house up to 100 people, as well as small family units.

While those companies do not list prices on their websites, instead offering quotes, other websites show that a basic tornado shelter can cost anywhere from about $5,000 to $10,000. Less expensive options, such as a fiberglass underground shelter, offered by Tornado Guard, could cost about $3,000.

KU announces 2013 graduates

LAWRENCE - The names of more than 4,500 candidates for degrees at the University of Kansas this spring - representing 95 Kansas counties, 41 other states and the District of Columbia, and 42 other countries - have been announced by the University Registrar.

The Class of 2013 includes more than 1,440 students who completed degree work in summer and fall 2012. Because KU conducts only one formal Commencement ceremony each year, many of these graduates returned Sunday, May 19, for the university's 141st Commencement.

surviving a dangerous tornado, however, is to listen to early warnings, Mersman said.

A NOAA weather radio is the most reliable weather awareness warning available, Mersman said. The weather radios typically range around $20 to $100, although local emergency management and fire department officials in the past have secured grants to provide radios at a lower cost. It's important to change batteries on a regular basis so the radio will function in a power outage, Mersman said.

Locally, Anderson County Emergency Management offers the CodeRED Weather Warning system. The feature is an "opt-in" service, which means you must add your contact information (cell phone, home phone, email) to receive calls when severe weather strikes. This can be done by clicking on the CodeRED link on the left side of the home page at www.andersoncountyks.org, or by calling the Emergency Management office at (785) 448-6797.

It's important to note that CodeRED relies on the telephone system to deliver messages, Mersman said. If something happens to the infrastructure or telephone lines become clogged, the CodeRED messages may not be delivered. Mersman said that is another reason to have multiple ways to receive warnings. In addition to NOAA weather radios, local media outlets disseminate this information. Sources like Kansas City and Topeka television stations and radio stations provide coverage of the local area.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 06-29-2010 / Photo Submitted

The Culley and Cheryl Seymour family moved from Anderson County to Moore, Okla., in 1999. Culley Seymour was a teacher and coach at ACHS. The family escaped damage from a deadly tornado last week because their house wasn't in the tornado's path, but knew family and friends who weren't so lucky.

Richmond Community Museum gets grant, reopens for summer

The Richmond Community Museum opened for its 6th season over Memorial Day weekend, May 25 and 26, and will be open each Saturday and Sunday afternoon, 1-4 p.m., through Labor Day weekend, Mary Tooley, president, said. The Museum will also open anytime on request and will welcome visitors from 1-6 p.m. Saturday, June 8, prior to the Richmond High School Alumni banquet.

The Museum is located in the former lumber yard at 119 E. Central on Richmond's main street. There is no admission charge but donations are appreciated.

The Museum was recently presented a grant of $1,139 from the Franklin County Community Foundation. The grant was written to purchase a highway sign, heavy duty photo albums, materials to make padded clothes hangars and office supplies.

There's a "new look" at the Museum this season, Peters said. Considerable refurbishing was done over the winter and new display cases added. The cases are gifts from the Franklin County Historical Society and Central Heights High School.

Recently added items include a Jenny Lind baby cradle made in 1877 by Chris Barhan and used by the Barhan-McCall-Hadsall-Smith and Frank families for five generations. It is on loan from Bob and Margaret Hadsall., as is an antique hair wreath made by Mrs. Barhan in the 1850s era or earlier.

Other items and numerous photos and news-clippings have also been added.

For further information, call Dennis Peters at (785) 835-6170, Charlie Prue at (785) 835-6583 or Pat Vining at (785) 835-6598.

Update your home canning skills in June

K-State Research & Extension Anderson County is sponsoring several options for home canners to update their skills and ask food preservation questions in June. New technology and science research change how home canning is properly done.

A hands-on-canning workshop will be offered to those who would like to learn about preserving food with a pressure canner on Saturday, June 8 from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the County Annex. Cost of workshop is $5 per family unit. Participants need to register for the class by paying class fee before June 7 at the Extension Office located in the County Annex.

For those home canners who do not need the "how-to-can" approach, a Home Canning Update program will be offered, at no cost, on Tuesday, June 11 at the County Annex. The Update Home Canning program will be offered twice; a morning program from 10:00 am to 11:00 am, or an afternoon program from 1:30 pm to 2:30 pm. Please pre-register for this free program by calling the Extension Office at (785) 448-6826 so there will be enough handouts.

Amanda Teal of Garnett Public Library recently attended a workshop presented by Southeast Kansas Library System (SEKLS) on the topic of "How to Download ebooks from the Kansas EZ Library."

The goal of the training was to provide hands-on downloading experience for library staff so they will be able to train people in their communities to locate and download free ebooks from Kansas EZ Library.

A joint project of the State Library of Kansas and the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services, Kansas EZ Library provides free digital books to all residents of Kansas through their local library.

Present site full of fun stuff

Just thought I would write an article about a few of the unusual, interesting and true antiques I've uncovered at my latest area project. (Note, no order): Iron spoon, fork and knife (very likely from the 1800s), little white lighthouse and connecting building (toy), very old domino, 1 7/8 inch tall bottle "Hoods Pills - Cure Liver Ills" (1850), horseshoe with all the nails in it (some horse must have thrown its shoe), old tricycle seat, several "Kansas Brand," "Howard Brand," "Lee" and "Big Smith" overall buttons (must have been a farmer around).

play charm bracelet), lots of iron stone china pieces from Burslem, England, 21 buttons and counting, mostly white porcelain trap-door, shirt, etc., and brass overall buttons. Only two coins so far, one being a 1919 penny.

A few of the older artifacts are: Early glass marble, square nails, ridged clay pipe bowl, old crockery fragments, very unusual looking porcelain bird's head, 1861-1865 general service Civil War "Eagle" brass button an d1861-1865 small brass Civil War knapsack buckle, old oil lamp wick adjustment turn knob and an odd-shaped brass key with A. B. & M. Co., on it.

And then there's the day I dug up the gray elephant! In all my years (50-plus) of digging, I've never dug up an elephant. Oh yes! It was a toy elephant, but you know what, an elephant is an elephant, is an elephant, is an elephant!

Do you see why I love my hobby so much? You never know what you'll find next and what role it might play in history. This may be the most interesting project in a long time, because the site has been inhabited from the mid-1800s until the present time. A truly great variety of artifacts have been and will continue to be found.

The financially beleaguered Garnett Church Furniture Factory will face eviction proceedings from its newly constructed manufacturing plant within 30 days if it fails to act to satisfy rent payments and other liens filed against it by vendor companies. Garnett City Commissioners voted Tuesday night to send the company notice that it was in default of some $33,000 in rent payments to the city and Anderson County, as well as $1,000 in equipment payments, and that eviction proceedings would begin in 30 days if the debts weren't satisfied. The action came on the heels of a $42,000 federal tax lien filed by the IRS last week for non-payment of employee withholding taxes. That action followed a $97,000 lien filed by the IRS against the company in February of this year, again for non-payment of employee taxes.

City commissioners last week approved another two-year operations period for Garnett's Neighborhood Revitalization Plan, which gives a 95 percent tax rebate on improvements done to commercial and residential properties in certain zones of the city. The county's development director gave commissioners an update on the plan's past two years in making his proposal to extend the program, saying the benefits of the plan may have been hampered by a generally slowing economy.

or the public, Garnett Foods shut down its cheese-making operation this week amid days-old rumors that the plant was closing. The plant employed about 30 full-time and part-time workers.

Traffic was rerouted for several hours on U.S. 169 north of Colony Wednesday, when a truck carrying explosives and blasting caps ran off the road and could not pull itself back onto the roadway.

Plans are in process to fix the weak spot on the Greeley-Parker road as soon as the weather permits. Apparently, a portion of the road has settled further than expected and is starting to create quite a depression in the pavement.

A petition was filed on Thursday by the City of Garnett to condemn part of the land that will be used for the Cedar Creek reservoir site. The proposed reservoir site is about three miles west of Garnett. There are 15 people or corporations named in the action. Some of the people or corporations named in the petition for condemnation have liens or interest in the property.

The Garnett Church Furniture Factory has recently been recognized as a Centenarian Industry by the Kansas Department of Economic Development. In a letter from Gov. John Carlin, the factory was recognized as an industry serving Kansas 100 years or more. The factory will be recognized June 16. The factory was established in 1879 by J.Q. McAfee, who owned the business until the end of World War II.

"Nice" Nichols was shot and instantly killed about 9 o'clock this morning by A.B. Moberly, who fired two shots from a revolver of small caliber at a distance of a few feet. One shot struck the heart and the other only missed it by an inch, and either shot would have been fatal without the other. The shooting took place in the presence of a number of men who were employed on the Nichols farm, putting up alfalfa, at the point where the stacks were being built. Moberly had been in Nick's employ, and was discharged for smoking about the hay, contrary to orders. He went from town out to the Nichols farm this morning to get a balance of $3 due him. Nick told him the amount had been garnished and refused to pay. Moberly threatened with a five-cylinder revolver. Nick wrote a check, but by mistake wrote it for $23. Another check was written. At this point, trouble commenced. Moberly shot Nick twice. Nick fell back, crying, "My God, boys, he has got me!" and died very quickly.

Food for thought

Weekly Devotional
by David Bilderback

Many of the people who had been following Jesus, upon hearing his teaching, decided they could not accept his teaching for it was too difficult. They had turned back and no longer followed him. This prompted Jesus to ask the twelve in John 6:67, "You do not want to leave do you?" In the very next verse Simon Peter asks a question we all should ask. "Lord to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life."

How should we answer that question? First we must decide is there eternal life? In one particular parable in Luke 16:19-31, Jesus speaks about a certain rich man and a beggar who he specifically names as Lazarus. The rich man was dressed in purple which represents royalty and he lived in luxury every day. The beggar Lazarus laid at his gate and he longed to eat the crumbs that fell from his table. The time came when the beggar died and was carried to Abraham's side. The rich man also died and was buried. From torment he cried to Abraham as he saw him far away. But Abraham replied "Son remember that in your lifetime you received your good things while Lazarus received bad things, but now he is comforted here and you are in agony. And besides all this, between us and you a great chasm has been fixed so that those who want to go from here to you cannot, nor can anyone cross over from there to us." Here we see something about each man's life, death and eternal existence.

Now we must ask ourselves to whom shall I go? I cannot build a case for anyone except Jesus. Prior to the coming of Christ life was lived under the law. When Jesus came a new covenant began and we entered the age of grace. At some undetermined time Christ will come in the air and take the church out of the world which we refer to as the rapture. Following that will begin an age of judgment.

We as individuals have no control over our birth or death. That only leaves us in control of that span of time called life. We have two ways we can choose. The way of the world or the way of Jesus. In John 6:60 some of Jesus followers on hearing Jesus teachings said, "This is a hard teaching. Who can accept it?"

No one likes hard teaching or hard lessons. We want ease and comfort. We want everyone's approval. We want our efforts recognized and our actions affirmed. In John 13:34, Jesus states. "A new command I give you: Love one another. As I loved you, so you must love one another. By this all men will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another." This statement is the cornerstone of the age of grace.

MWA Beautifies Richmond Library

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 5-28-2013 / Photo Submitted

The MWA [Modern Woodmen of America] kids in Richmond have been planting the flower boxes at the Richmond Public Library for a few years now. They come in the spring and put in new soil and plant new flowers in the boxes. This year one of the parents donated a bench for the front of the library. The kids seemed to enjoy planting the flowers and we love the front sidewalk looking so nice.
