3D printers: Coming soon to a school near you?

Economic impact of new manufacturing technology weighed

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - A regional economic cooperative could bring 3D printing technology to area schools.

Dennis Arnold, economic development director for the City of Garnett and Anderson County, told Garnett commissioners last week about an effort to secure a grant that would purchase a 3D printing machine for schools in each of the 17 counties in the cooperative. The cooperative, called Project 17, is considering how to fund the project. However, Arnold said even if the grant opportunity falls through, he would like to find a way to bring the technology to Anderson County somehow.

3D printing is the process of creating a three-dimensional solid object from a digital model. The process is called "additive" because the machine essentially layers material in different shapes to create the object. It differs from traditional machine process that remove material by cutting or drilling.

The technology isn't entirely new; the first 3D printer was created in the 1980s and large, industrial 3D printing machines have long been used in the aerospace and automotive industries. But the technology has improved over the years, and the cost of the machines has dropped, allowing the machines to be more affordable for small

Former students recall music teacher

Paul Massey dies at age 75, remembered as passionate for music

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Paul Massey wasn't afraid of a challenge, and he made sure his students were up for it.

Massey, a music teacher and vocal coach who was known for developing Garnett High School into one of the top vocal music programs in Kansas, died Saturday, July 27, at Olathe Medical Center, at the age of 75.

One of his students, Scott Schulte, remembers one musical performance that featured several arias from Messiah, an oratorio by George Frideric Handel. The performance featured four or five soloists, and it's not easy, Schulte said.

"He wasn't scared to try new things," Schulte said. "He was kind of like a basketball coach. He got the best out of kids that maybe weren't that great of singers."

Schulte started taking voice lessons from Massey in sixth grade, and continued to work with him throughout high school. Schulte credits Massey's help and motivation with Schulte's achievement as a K-State Singer in college.

"He was a disciplined teacher, but the students had a good time in his class at the same time," he said.

Brother pleads in steroid case

Phil Moody makes plea deal after testifying against his brother

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - An illegal steroid operation in a Garnett martial arts studio that pitted brother against brother has been resolved in court, with both brothers taking plea deals that likely will place them both on probation.

Phillip Moody, who testified against his brother, Lee Brock Moody, pleaded no contest to one of 42 counts connected to the illegal manufacture and distribution of steroids. The felony charge came as part of a plea bargain in which he pleaded guilty to one count of unlawful distribution of steroids, and the other 41 charges were dismissed. He is scheduled to be sentenced September 9, but likely will receive a sentence of probation.

His brother, meanwhile, was sentenced to 36 months probation in June on three felony charges - aggravated endangerment of a child, manufacture of

Starr pleads not guilty after wheat dispute

88-year-old man faces aggravated assault with weapon charges

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - An 88-year-old man who brandished a weapon during a dispute over a dumped load of wheat is fighting the charges against him.

Wilmer Clarke Starr, of Gas, was arrested July 5 after he pulled out a .22 caliber pistol during a dispute with two men in a wheat field between Welda and Colony, according to police and court reports. According to reports, Starr hired a custom harvesting company to cut his wheat field, but refused to pay the workers after the wheat was loaded but before it was delivered to a local elevator. The truck driver refused to transport the load, and after words were exchanged with Starr, dumped the load of wheat on the ground. Starr then produced a pistol as the argument escalated, according to reports. No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Starr was arrested after law enforcement officers were called to the scene. He was charged in Anderson County District Court with two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, but pleaded not guilty. If convicted, Starr could face up to 34 months in prison.

The next court appearance in the case, a status conference, has been set for 11:30 a.m. Aug. 13.

Travel bug leads to book

ACHS grad makes love of travel pay, releases first book

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

LONDON, ENGLAND - Backpacking across Asia. Staying with nomads in Mongolia. Bush camping in Mozambique. Traveling across Russia by train. Jamie Rockers' travels have taken her a long way from Garnett, and now local residents can tag along on her trip through Africa through the pages of Rockers' new book.

While growing up in the local area, she longed to travel the world, to explore unfamiliar places and meet interesting people. She researched exotic locations online and posted pictures on her walls. She couldn't wait for the opportunity to study abroad in college.

Rockers, the daughter of Bruce and Christina Rockers, graduated from Anderson County High School in 2000. She studied film at Pepperdine University in Los Angeles and worked in Hollywood where she was working her way up the ladder to become a casting director.

But her first trip abroad to Argentina in 2002 changed her life. Her dormant travel bug was awakened, and she began a journey that would make her travel dreams come true. Since that first trip to Argentina, she has visited more than 50 countries and lived in four of them. She documented her journeys as a travel blogger and recently published her first book, "Savannahs & Sunsets, An African Overland Adventure," about a three-month trip across Africa. More books are planned, including one about her trip to Argentina and South America.

Her first book explores an Africa that most people never imagine. While newspapers and media report of war and poverty, child soldiers and corrupt politicians, Rockers wanted to take a closer look at the continent and interpret it for herself. She found that amid the troubles, Africa is a place where people learn to be patient. She describes a place of "vast savannahs in a sun-bleached land, of empty drifting dunes, soft sandy beaches with turquoise waters, an ancient and raw frontier where the skies are set aflame with the setting sun, and where the most exciting

August 29, 1937-July 27, 2013

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW
Published July 30, 2013

Paul Eugene Massey, age 75, of Garnett, Kansas, passed away on Saturday, July 27, 2013, at Olathe Medical Center, Olathe, Kansas.

Massey

He was born on August 29, 1937, in Anthony, Kansas, the son of Earl Edward and Mabel (Burris) Massey. Paul graduated from Kiowa High School in Kiowa, Kansas. He entered the United States Navy in Washington D.C., playing in the Navy Band in Kodiak, Alaska.

Paul married Virginia Stapleton on August 10, 1957 in Kodiak, Alaska, making this their home for one year. They moved to Memphis, Tennessee moving then to Hays, Kansas, graduating with his Bachelor's Degree in Music Education from Fort Hays State University. He taught in Oberlin, Kansas for four years. Paul received his Master's Degree from Fort Hays State University while living in Oberlin. In Council Bluffs, Iowa, he taught four years then moving to Belleville, Kansas, teaching for one year. They moved to Garnett in the summer of 1971, where Paul began teaching at the junior and senior high schools. He retired in 1993 from the Garnett School system.

Paul taught in various places throughout the community including Scipio, Mont Ida and Greeley. He was church choir director for the Methodist church, Baptist Church, and the Christian Church in Garnett. Paul also directed community choruses and musicals for many years. He participated in the Wichita Music Theater summer program in the 1970s. Paul was a District President for Kansas Music Education Association. He built one of the top high school music programs in the State of Kansas during his 22 years of teaching in Garnett.

Paul was a member of the First Christian Church. He volunteered his time at nursing homes, Hidden Haven Christian Camp, and at various clubs and events in Garnett. Paul spent many of his final years socializing in his 'office' with his coffee groups, and playing Bingo with friends. He enjoyed fishing, playing Bridge and Rook, and attending events in which his children and grandchildren were involved.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Earl and Mabel Massey; brother, Clyde Massey; and sister, Virginia Reutlinger.

Paul is survived by his wife, Virginia Massey, of 56 years, of the home; three sons, Rick Massey and wife Lori of Bonham, Texas; Larry Massey of Goddard, Kansas; Brian Massey of Winfield, Kansas; one daughter, Teresa Chaney and husband Chris of Kechi, Kansas; one sister, Louise Morrison of Fredonia; 17 grandchildren; 12 great grandchildren; many family and friends.

Paul's greatest passion was impacting the youth of our community. He not only taught music, but instilled Christian and life core values in his students. Many young people, when looking back, still claim that Mr. Massey was the best teacher they ever had because he didn't just teach a student, he touched a life.

Funeral services will be held at 10:00 a.m., on Thursday, August 1, 2013, at the First Christian Church, Garnett. The family will be present to greet friends on Wednesday evening, July 31st, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Feuerborn Family Funeral Service Chapel in Garnett. wildlife on earth coexist."

Rockers said she was motivated to write a book after years of writing about travel for various websites. One of her blogs was followed by more than 2 million people. She has published articles for Japan Today, and lived in the country for four years.

"One day a few years ago, the idea of writing a book about all my travels in various parts of the world came to me. I love to read, especially travel memoirs, so it seemed a natural progression that I moved into writing them," she said.

Writing while traveling brings its own risks and rewards.

"You are right there and can capture the smells, tastes, sounds and feelings of those scenes in words because it is right in front of you," she said.

On the other hand, sometimes it's difficult to stay motivated to write or edit your work while you are traveling.

"This means finding time to write whenever you can while on buses or trains or when you pick up a rare quiet moment," Rockers said.

Traveling itself can be a challenge, even for an accomplished traveler like Rockers. She said packing and unpacking, especially for a month at a time, can be difficult. It's inevitable that your luggage will get heavier as you go, she said, because you can't help but pick up trinkets along the way.

Navigating through an unfamiliar place can be difficult, too, especially when you don't know the language. But Rockers said knowing how to say simple words like hello and thank you in another language goes a long way when you are traveling. She also suggests finding someone who speaks English who will write out what you want to say in the local language.

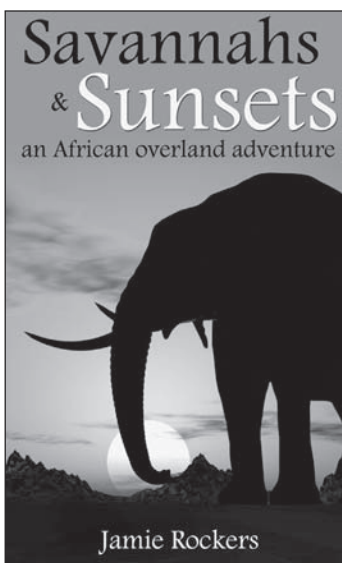

"This worked for me in China. I had a set of what I like to call 'flashcards' which were written out in Chinese characters which I would show people in various situations when I needed to do something like buy train tickets, etc. It worked like a charm."

Rockers, who has also lived in Australia and Japan, now calls the United Kingdom her home. But one remaining destination on her bucket list might surprise most people—America. At some point, she hopes to take three or four months to explore America the same way she explored Africa - by road.

"I've spent the majority of the last decade exploring other countries and am now ready to explore my own. There are so many national parks, cities, landscapes, and diverse cultures I would like to explore in the US and I feel like I would really appreciate it so much more, knowing what was out there in the world. It would also help me to be better prepared to give travel advice to people from outside the US when they ask me where they should go to in America!"

Rockers believes traveling makes people more tolerant, open-minded and connected to the world. It also provides an opportunity for personal growth. She encourages everyone to travel.

"At the end of their lives, it is documented that many elderly people wished they had traveled more, even within their own region. So if you can, get out there and start working on that bucket list," she said.

companies. Arnold estimated a basic unit that could be kept at Anderson County High School would cost about $2,200, and spools of plastic material to create the products cost about $45 to $50 each.

The use of this technology could drastically redefine how rural communities obtain products, Arnold said. Companies will no longer need to wait days or weeks for an item that could be produced in minutes by a 3D printer. Arnold gave the example of a farmer who is waiting for an important valve to get his tractor running again. Instead of ordering the part from a manufacturer and having to wait while it is shipped, the farmer can have the part made at a 3D printer.

"It's going to revolutionize almost all manufacturing," Arnold said. "A small community needs to carry a lot of stuff or special order it, but if you have one (3D printer), it can be made right here."

3D printers have several drawbacks, however. The parts are not considered to be as strong as traditionally-manufactured parts, and at this point the technology allows for only plastic material. In order to make a part, the user will need to have computer design models; scanning machines are available, but they cannot scan the inner workings of an item. Production of a single item does take time, which makes it less ideal than traditional manufacturing.

3D printers made headlines in recent months after it was shown that a 3D printer could be used to create a working handgun, leading to debates over other issues like safety and counterfeiting.

and served in the United States Navy, playing in the Navy Band in Kodiak, Ak. He and his wife, Virginia, moved to Garnett in 1971, and Paul Massey began teaching at the junior and senior high schools until his retirement in 1993.

In addition to his educational instruction, Massey was the church choir director for the Methodist, Baptist and Christian churches in Garnett. He also directed community choruses and musicals for many years.

His daughter, Teresa Chaney, said the family has received an overwhelming outpouring of support and memories since her father's death. She said many of his former students have sent condolences, often sharing stories of how Paul

Massey impacted their lives. She said one person told the family he was able to recover from suicidal thoughts thanks to the mentoring and support from Massey, and he went on to college and built a good life.

Another former student, Stacey Holloran, also took voice lessons from Massey and was part of the Generation Singers at the high school. Later, he played piano at her wedding. She said he cared about his students and music, and especially enjoyed performing patriotic musical numbers.

"You could tell he was passionate about his work," Holloran said. "Sometimes he might be intense with a class, but that's just because he cared so much about what he was doing."

steroids and unlawful distribution of steroids - with dozens of other charges dropped as part of a plea deal. He also was sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail as "shock time," and has been serving that sentence on weekends.

The Moodys were arrested about a year ago after family members discovered Brock Moody had been giving his teenage son steroids for several years by telling him they were vitamins, according to courtroom testimony in the case. B.J. Moody testified against his father at a preliminary hearing, saying he had been denied admission to the U.S. Military Academy at Annapolis due to kidney issues. The revelation about the drugs led to a family feud, and a police report regarding Phil Moody's use of computer equipment at USD 479 in Colony, where he was employed as a tenured math teacher and was subsequently dismissed from his job. Further investigation of Brock led to the arrest of both men on the related drug charges. Phil Moody also testified against his brother during a preliminary hearing.

Police said the brothers procured compounds for anabolic steroids from foreign suppliers including those in China and then manufactured, packaged and sold finished drugs from the former jujitsu academy Brock Do Jujitsu in Garnett. More than 40 charges were filed that varied from possessing components and illegal steroids to using email to facilitate those transactions and accepting orders for drugs by email. The incidents reportedly occurred from 2006- 2011 and in January 2012. The jujitsu studio closed in early 2012.

Smile at the drone

Emerging technology demands legal clarification of privacy in your airspace

It's not too early for state legislatures in Kansas and across the country to begin to balance federal authority and determine just how much of their constituent's privacy should be forfeited due to emerging surveillance drone technology.

As with developments that allow the clandestine monitoring of telephone calls, email and site searched done on personal computers, the technology that has proved so effective in searching out terrorists and criminals threatens the boundaries of governmental over-reach when the prospect of monitoring innocent civilians on their own properties or in their own legal private pursuits is considered.

Some hunting groups, basing their response on information that animal rights organizations may use drones to monitor their activities, have already vowed to place a "point system" on the gunning down of such invasive micro aircraft. The Federal Aviation Administration, in response, has repeated that firing at a drone would carry the same legal penalties as firing at any other aircraft. Fitted with tiny but effective digital video or still cameras, the small remote controlled devices can be flown over areas of varying range and pictures of the ground – and what's going on there – can be transmitted back to a mobile laptop computer or cell phone and recorded there.

The devil's in the details – and the altitude, it would seem.

The regulation of the airspace over your house right now is a combination of authorities – yours, the federal government's and to some degree the state, and depending on public interest we can expect this combination to be much debated as the technology emerges. When Kansas Highway Patrol aircraft circle over Anderson County in search of a criminal suspect or to gather information on a marijuana field, few law-abiding citizens necessarily care that their homes or vehicles or properties may be inadvertently photographed or viewed in the process. From a thousand or more feet, the public service aspect of such activity has traditionally been accepted and the privacy invasion unknown, ignored or minimized by the rest of us on the ground.

But bring that activity down to 10-20 feet off the ground and its peripheral impacts become more poignant. Flying a surveillance drone over someone's rooftop enroute to some target has more implications because of what may be seen in the process and the fact that the aircraft is close enough to be well within a property owner's personal space.

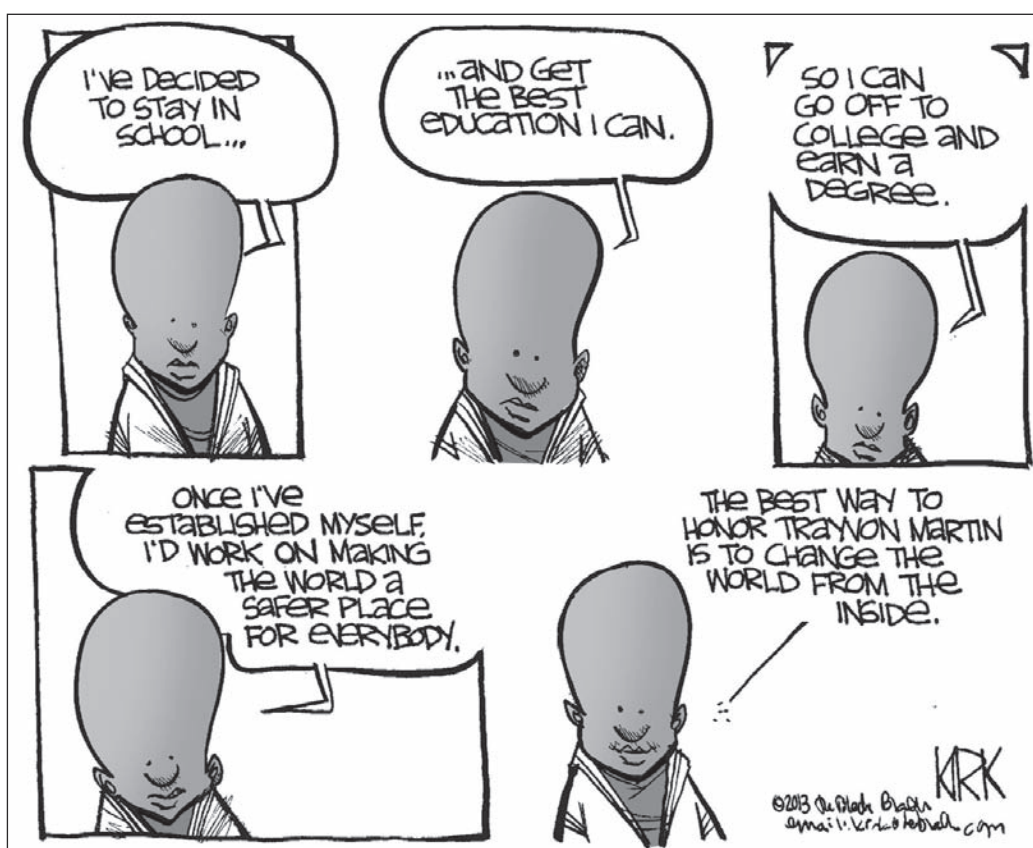

Enter the use of drones by the private sector and the issue becomes even more explicit. Wonder what your neighbors are doing at their yard party behind their privacy fence? Just fly your drone over the fence – without ever having to step foot on their property or even look through the crack in the fence – and check them out. Imagine the new intensity of our celebrity-obsessed paparazzi when reporters from TMZ can fly a drone over Brad and Angelina's pool to see if they sunbathe naked?

There is a balance to be struck between the need for public security and law enforcement and the rights of law-abiding people not to be eyeballed by the government or anyone else for that matter. Drone technology will force state and federal lawmakers to determine where that line is.

The National Conversation

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

Let's take the advice of the attorney general of the United States. Let's have a national conversation about race in the wake of the verdict in the Zimmerman trial. Let's make it a painfully honest conversation -- except about all the things that are painful for us to admit.

Let's take a tragedy and make it a racial crime. Let's not acknowledge the evidence suggesting that Trayvon Martin was beating George Zimmerman. Let's never, ever admit that if Martin hadn't hit Zimmerman, he would almost certainly be alive today.

Let's act as if the main threat to young black men in America is overzealous neighborhood-watch volunteers who erroneously consider them suspicious, call the police and follow them, then shoot them in self-defense after a violent altercation in confusing circumstances that will never be entirely disentangled. Let's pretend that this happens all the time.

Let's send down the memory hole reports of burglaries and attempted break-ins in Zimmerman's community that, according to a Reuters report, "had created an atmosphere of growing fear in the neighborhood."

Let's ignore that Zimmerman is from a mixed-race household. Let's forget that he initially didn't mention Martin's race on his 911 call and said he "looks black" only when prompted by the operator. Let's disregard testimony about his good character, lest it get in the way of the national dialogue about how he's a racist murderer who got away with it.

Let's say the trial was about race in America or about whether black men can walk home from the store or any other insipid, racially charged nonsense to fill the air or the column inches. The national conversation cannot afford to get mired down in legal niceties like what constitutes lawful self-defense, let alone reasonable doubt.

Let's call people we disagree with racists. Dissenting voices must be swiftly condemned and, ideally, silenced.

Let's not talk about the 90 percent of black murder victims killed by other blacks. For national conversation purposes, not all killings are equal.

Let's blast New York City's stop-and-frisk policy as the worst kind of racial inequity. Let's not bother to note that New York City once had 2,200 murders a year and now has 400, nor that many of the thousands of lives saved are those of black men. Let's focus on the important thing -- condemning the policy that contributes to saving those lives as heinously racist.

Let's listen to the attorney general inveigh against "stand your ground" laws and make believe that he knows what the hell he's talking about. Let's ignore that the "stand your ground" law wasn't the reason the Sanford, Fla., police initially didn't arrest Zimmerman, and that it really had nothing to do with the trial.

In short, let's take a terrible event and make it a festival for all our ideological and racial ax-grinding and a showcase for our inability or unwillingness to reason clearly. Let's do it in perpetually high dudgeon while simultaneously patting ourselves on the back about our fearlessness and honesty.

Yes, Mr. Attorney General, you are right. This is exactly the conversation that the country needs.

Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

GAPP was well-prepared, friendly

To whom it may concern:

Hello, my name is Jason "Bucky" Walters and I am a student minister at Gateway Christian Church in Mt. Sterling, KY. Last week, I had the opportunity, along with 18 students and adults from my church and 360 people from other churches and states, to attend a Group Workcamps summer mission trip in Garnett. I wanted to write a letter to let you know how impressed I was with the whole community of Garnett. From the welcome meal on Sunday, to the ice cream at job sites, to the gracious welcome from your mayor, state senator and other dignitaries, to the opening of the homes of the residents, to the wonderful treatment and kind words spoken to us at all the local establishments, it was all heartfelt and sincere. I have been to about 10 of these workcamps throughout the past and I wanted to let the city of Garnett know that this was BY FAR, the most welcoming and inviting community I have ever been a part of. The school, Anderson County Jr / Sr High School, and its employees bent over backward to make us feel welcome and at home. Garnett Area Paint Project (GAPP) did a tremendous job in preparation and getting the community involved and they are to be commended for their hard work. In closing, thank you for a great, life-changing week for my students and many others who visited your community last week!

Special session pulls rabbit from a hat

Statehouse insiders are not surprised, but maybe intrigued, by the special session of the Legislature that Gov. Sam Brownback has called for Sept. 3 to fix the state's hard-50 murder sentencing law.

Now, all by itself, changing state law—to have juries and not just the judge determine aggravating circumstances that boost a 25-year murder sentence to 50 years without possibility of parole as per U.S. Supreme Court order—doesn't sound like an emergency.

But, some law enforcement bodies and Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt believe that Supreme Court ruling needs to be responded to quickly...that it can't wait until the Legislature reconvenes in January.

Maybe they're right. That's something lawyers and judges debate, but changing the law sure can't hurt...it's just the surprising speed...and convenience for another purpose that nobody's really talking about.

Remember the magician's law...the sexier the assistant, the less the audience will notice if it takes two tries to pull the rabbit out of the hat?

That rabbit? It's the new authority for the governor to single-handedly—that's without the Supreme Court Nominating Commission screening process—name judges to the Kansas Court of Appeals, subject to confirmation by the Kansas Senate.

Now, let's see...prospective Appeals Court applicants have until this week to submit applications—and don't worry, your name won't be revealed publicly. And, the governor has until Aug. 29 to name the winning contestant.

Hmmm... Aug. 29, the governor names his choice for the new Court of Appeals post...and Sept. 3, the Legislature comes into special session to consider the sentencing bill.

Oh, that new law that allows the governor to name a new judge, with Senate confirmation, falls right in line, doesn't it?

Now, can the Senate research, background-check and such the new judge nominee during the short special session? Maybe, but it actually doesn't matter, according to that new law.

The Senate, when it is in session, has 60 days to consider the appointee. If the Senate isn't in session when the appointment is made, it has 20

To those who sought to sabotage the hospital project and cost taxpayers millions and are now hiding behind the county attorney's $10,000 desk, you may bury dead people for a living but you will never bury those who are alive. You should be ashamed and we will never forget.

Why in the world would we who invested in the Garnett ethanol plant want to hand over control of the company to someone from Arizona who has his own very checkered past in just about every business dealing he's ever had and wants to bring in a whole new board full of foreigners? I have been an investor and a supporter of this plant since the earliest days of EKAE and I'm very happy with the return I've gotten on the money I put into it and I have complete confidence in the board which Mr. Brittenham wants to get rid of so bad. I hope they get rid of Brittenham and keep the board. Thank you.

This is to the person that was complaining about the bridge between the Parkside Place and Rails to Trails: Get off your butt and go paint it yourself. You've got plenty of time to sit and complain about things. Thank you.

Yes, I'm a unit holder of Eastern Kansas Agri Energy and I believe we should beware of Scott Brittenham, because from what I've read of this guy he's wanting to have control of EKAE so he can squeeze some of the unit holders out. There's any number of ways he can make moves with full control, probably by higher salaries and much lower dividends. I've been in the program since it started and I've been completely happy with my return on investment. It's nothing but greed. Thank you.

Another fair has come and gone and again this year my kids never even mentioned wanting to go. I wonder what their attendance was and how much it has gone down since the days when we used to have a carnival there. I know, I know, there are apparently reasons why we can't have a carnival at the fair but other fairs can. I will say though that until you give people who don't farm or sew or raise pigs some reason to go out to the fair, we will always have an agriculture show and not a real county fair. Thank you.

I hold stock in EKAE and I couldn't have been more impressed when they shut the plant down to save money when the drought ruined the corn. Tough decision during tough times but it was all about survival. This Brittenham character would have stripped it of everything it built up and ran away with all of our money, just like he is trying to do now. Thank you to the current board for making good decisions during tough times. Brittenham needs to move on and go find somebody else to try and steal money from.

days into its next session to approve or reject a nominee.

But, with this special session, and the judicial appointment law doesn't talk about conventional annual sessions, just "in session" as it will be during the special session, everything hurries up.

Key is getting that nominee's name to the Senate during the special session. No telling how quickly Brownback can type, but if he gets a note to the Senate before the special session, and it is read into the record, well, this is about wrapped-up.

If the Senate has quick meetings during the special session to consider and confirm the nominee, great. If not, well, whenever the Senate meets and doesn't reject a nominee, that nominee is considered approved.

Is this hurry-up change in sentencing law the attractive assistant to the magician? Does Brownback owe Schmidt a favor for ginning up support for the special session? We'll see whether Brownback lets Schmidt ride along on the re-election campaign bus next year, won't we...

Practice communication skills to grow relationships

MANHATTAN – With June, the nation's most popular month for weddings behind us, a couples' communications expert has some commonsense advice for newly marrieds and others who want to strengthen their relationship and make the most of their life together.

While couples usually thrive on excitement and anticipation during courtship and dating, many are unprepared for the stress generated by a wedding, said Charlotte Shoup Olsen, a K-State Research and Extension family systems specialist.

The unexpected stress can threaten the relationship, said Olsen, who encourages newly married couples and others who value their relationships to "make time for each other to grow and nurture their relationship."

"It's easy to get caught up in the day-to-day demands of balancing our personal and professional lives, commitments to family, extended family and community, and take a relationship for granted."

In advising couples to reserve time for their relationship each day, Olsen suggested using the time to talk about events of their day to continue learning about each other and grow the relationship.

She does not advise using the time set aside for catching up with each other to air complaints, but does say "establishing a regular pattern of communication can help couples build communications skills that can help them communicate more effectively when difficult conversations are needed."

According to Olsen, nurturing their relationship can be the best gift a couple can give to themselves – and their family.

In considering effective communications skills for nurturing and growing relationships, Olsen's recommendations include:

- Practice listening skills. Allow the other person to finish what he or she is saying, without jumping in – or jumping to a conclusion.

- Consider your response before speaking, rather than blurting out the first thing that comes to mind.

- Be aware of non-verbals that can carry more weight than words. Looking away when a spouse or partner is talking to you or walking out of a room in the middle of a conversation are examples.

- Need to address a touchy topic? Set a time and place to discuss it, and opt for a "soft start," using "I" rather than "You" messages that suggest blame. Calmly saying: "Having to clean up the dirty dishes from everybody's snacking will delay dinner" rather than an angry: "YOU left a MESS in the kitchen!" is more likely to bring cooperation.

- Acknowledge irritants for what they are, and set aside a time to talk about and resolve them, rather than allowing an issue to escalate. For example, if a wife comes from a family that gets up from the table and does the dishes immediately, and a husband from a family that prefers to leave the dishes for later, work together to come up with a plan that will satisfy both.

- Be willing to compromise. If personal spending from a joint account is becoming an issue, develop a budget in which each spouse or partner has a personal allowance that is his or her money to save or spend as he or she wishes.

- Focus on positive interaction, as it typically takes five positives to overcome a negative.

- Be respectful – and appreciative. If both parties are tired, say "thank you" to the one who volunteers to go to the grocery store, fix a meal, or make life easier to ease the stress.

- Nurture trust by being truthful and dependable; if breached, trust can be difficult to rebuild.

- Make "No Needling," (not doing anything intentionally to irritate the other person) the rule.

- Be aware that sarcasm and putdowns can erode a relationship. Humor can break the ice, but it's best to make fun of yourself, rather than another.

- Continue to date, as couples who continue to date continue to grow their relationship.

- Be spontaneous, particularly in making everyday opportunities enjoyable – and fun.

- Strive for balance in planning time together – and apart. Shared interests can be beneficial, but taking time to explore individual interests allows each partner or spouse to grow and bring more to a relationship.

- Don't wait to seek help from a marriage or family counselor if having difficulty in resolving issues in your marriage.

More information on managing marriage and family relationships successfully is available at K-State Research and Extension offices in each of Kansas' 105 counties and online.

Local church offers 'The Story'

GARNETT - The Bible is the best-selling book in history, but how many people in Garnett are actually reading it? A Gallup survey reports the average American household has four Bibles. However, research by Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life (2008) found that only 16 percent of Americans read the Bible every day.

Church of the Nazarene is hoping to reverse this trend, starting with his own congregation. Pastor Phil Rhoades believes that The Story, a Zondervan best-seller, is the right tool to increase Biblical literacy, helping readers understand God's story from Genesis to Revelation and how their own stories intersect with God's. Consisting of 31 chapters of carefully-selected scriptures sequenced in chronological order, The Story presents the word of God in an engaging format, reading like a novel.

"I want the people in my congregation, as well as the city of Garnett, to realize the incredible love God has for them and how their own story is found in His story," Pastor Rhoades said.

"The Bible is central to our faith, but many people are intimidated by its scope and size. The Story gives us a way to journey from Genesis to Revelation together in 31 weeks so everyone understands God's story."

The Story Church campaign is a unique program providing up to 31 weeks of curriculum for children, teen and adult Sunday school and up to 31 weeks corresponding sermons. When accompanied by reading through the five age-related books (The Story, The Story: Teen Edition, The Story for Kids, The Story for Children, and The Story for Little Ones), the entire church can be literally on the same page for 31 weeks. Church of the Nazarene plans to begin the experience on Aug. 18.

With thousands of participating churches nationwide, The Story is becoming a movement that is bringing wide-ranging benefits to local churches. Many have reported increased community outreach, increased Biblical literacy, congregational growth and a greater understanding of how God's story reveals the reasons for the things that happen in man's story.

Church of the Nazarene invites everyone to experience The Story. Sunday services start at 10 a.m. For more information, call (785) 448-3208.

Too wet & cold even for a goose?

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 07-30-2013 / Vickie Moss

Even these Canada geese at Crystal Lake in Garnett seem confused by the dreary late-July Kansas weather. Recent showers have dropped 2.29 inches of rain on the area since July 21. Added to the recent rains have been unseasonably cool temperatures, with a high of only 71 degrees Saturday and Sunday. The hottest day of the year so far was July 10, which reached 99 degrees.

Brownback calls Special Legislative Session

TOPEKA - In the interest of protecting public safety and in response to a request from Attorney General Derek Schmidt, Governor Sam Brownback will call the Legislature into special session at 8 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 3.

The Attorney General formally requested the special session on July 24, 2013 for the purpose of repairing Kansas' "Hard 50" sentence following the June 17, 2013 decision of the United States Supreme Court in Alleyne v. United States. Legal experts in the field agree that the Alleyne decision renders the current Kansas "Hard 50" law unconstitutional because the sentencing decision is made by a judge and not the jury. According to the Attorney General, the Legislature can cure the constitutional defect by adopting a relatively simple procedural fix allowing the jury to making the necessary factual findings before the "Hard 50" sentence is imposed.

"The 'Hard 50' sentence is a vital public safety tool that has been in place for more than 10 years," Brownback said. "It is intended to remove the most dangerous and violent killers from society for at least 50 years. The sudden absence of the 'Hard 50' sentence poses a real and present danger to the public safety of all Kansans. I am confident the Legislature can and will act quickly, with resolve and narrow focus, to protect our citizens by restoring to prosecutors the immediate ability to seek the 'Hard 50' sentence for the worst offenders."

Broad bipartisan support exists among the leaders of this Legislature that this special session is necessary and is in the best interests of public safety. Additionally, law enforcement and prosecutorial agencies across the state have urged the Governor to adopt the Attorney General's recommendation.

"We must address this issue to protect all our citizens, but particularly out of concern for the victims of these crimes and their families," Brownback said. "I agree with the Attorney General's opinion that we face an 'extraordinary occasion' sufficient to justify this office exercising its authority to call the Legislature into special session pursuant to Article 1, Section 5 of the Kansas Constitution."

Due to the constitutional and statutory requirement that the state bring criminal defendants to trial in a speedy manner, time is of the essence. After consulting with Attorney General Schmidt and legislative leaders, it was agreed a special session during the first week of September is optimal timing. According to the law enforcement community that time period effectively protects public safety while allowing the necessary time requested by the Attorney General for adequate preparation and planning to ensure a quick, focused and orderly session. According to the Attorney General, putting this issue off until next January will "virtually guarantee" an increase in "the number of convicted killers who will be eligible for parole after only 25 years instead of after 50 years."

"It is my hope after talking to legislative leaders that the special session can be completed by the close of business on Sept. 5," said Governor Brownback.

K-State ag doctoral programs ranked in Top 10

MANHATTAN - A website that compares university programs across the United States has ranked several Kansas State University College of Agriculture programs in the top 10 as compared with similar programs at peer institutions.

The rankings, at PHDS.org, use data from the National Research Council, the National Science Foundation, and the Center for Education Statistics to provide information about quality measures or graduate programs. The rankings, available at Graduate Schools are based on university doctoral programs. In total, eight doctoral programs associated with K-State's College of Agriculture were evaluated.

The council's most recent Ranking of Plant Sciences Graduate Schools lists Kansas State's plant pathology program at No. 10 nationally among 162 plant sciences departments. K-State's is the top ranked plant pathology doctoral program on the list, which puts it ahead of plant pathology programs at Cornell University, the University of Wisconsin and the University of California-

Davis. "These rankings, which include numerous renowned universities across the United States, are a testament to the incredible work being done across the College's doctoral programs," said John Floros, dean of K-State's College of Agriculture and director of K-State Research and Extension. "It affirms that our students and faculty are among the best and brightest. We are in the process of finalizing our college strategic planning for the campus-wide K-State 2025 process. These rankings provide at least one external benchmarking guide for us as we seek to become a top five college of agriculture by the year 2025. Clearly, we have some very strong programs."

K-State's agricultural economics program is ranked No. 4, ahead of similar departments at Purdue University and Cornell.

In addition, K-State's entomology doctoral program is ranked No. 8 and the interdepartmental food science program No. 9, compared with other universities' programs.

In the "Research Productivity" category, the university's animal science doctoral program ranked No. 5 among animal and dairy science programs nationally.

Overall rankings are based on a variety of criteria including research productivity, student outcomes, student resources, diversity, and a National Research Council quality measure.

One of the programs that was not included in the rankings was K-State's Department of Grain Sciences and Industry, which is the only institution in the country that offers college degrees in all three areas of baking, feed, and milling science and management.

"K-State's grain science doctoral program provides the lion's share of research scientists working on cereals, cereal processing, cereal chemistry, and storage worldwide, and has done so for a long time," said Jon Faubion, professor and graduate program director in the department. "Our concentration of faculty with this expertise provides all of our graduate students, including doctoral students, with a breadth of expertise and experience in these cereal grain areas that doesn't exist elsewhere."

"The National Research Council rankings reflect the quality of educational experience our doctoral students receive at K-State, as well as the quality of research conducted as those students are mentored through their respective degree programs in the college," said Ernie Minton, associate director for research and technology transfer with K-State Research and Extension.

Graduate scholarly experience is one of the goals of K-State 2025, the university's new strategic plan. K-State's College of Agriculture has a graduate enrollment of more than 500 students, including students seeking both master's and doctoral degrees. About a third of the graduate student enrollees are students seeking doctoral degrees. The college has about 200 faculty members and many of them have time dedicated to mentoring graduate students. More information is available at Kansas State University College of Agriculture.

Library to have book discussion

The Garnett Public Library will hold a book discussion on Wednesday, August 28th at 7 p.m. "The Forgotten Garden" by Kate Morton will be discussed. The discussion will be led by Paulabeth Henderson.

A founding, an old book of dark fairy tales, a secret garden, an aristocratic family, a love denied, and a mystery. The Forgotten Garden is a captivating, atmospheric and compulsively readable story of the past, secrets, family and memory from the international best-selling author Kate Morton.

Cassandra is lost, alone and grieving. Her much loved grandmother, Nell, has just died and Cassandra, her life already shaken by a tragic accident ten years ago, feels like she has lost everything dear to her. But an unexpected and mysterious bequest from Nell turns Cassandra's life upside down and ends up challenging everything she thought she knew about herself and her family.

The books are available for checkout at the library. The discussions are held the fourth Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Archer Room at the library. Notification is posted in case of cancellation.

Exciting finds mark trip

Tuesday evening, June 11, there was a free tour of the Stone Sculptor Gallery offered to us, but because of the extreme heat, several of us just gathered in the lounge area of Weist Hall and ate cool-pops and visited until bedtime.

Wednesday, June 12, up at 6 a.m., still very warm and windy this morning. I left for the field at 7:10 a.m. and saw six jackrabbits along the way. Field brief at 8:10 a.m. We will be working on the other sides (north) of Big Creek today. We will conduct metal detector surveys this morning and recovery after lunch. Recoveries consisted of several shell casings, bullets, wagon and stage parts, lots of broken glass of that period was scattered on the surface. One interesting find was a steel "V" (victory) wolf trap still attached to its iron stake. This artifact was found at a depth of 20-plus inches. What an unusual find. Also today was my best find to date, which I will be writing a special column on at a later date. Out of the field at 5 p.m., cleaned and ate supper at McDonalds. There is no program or tour scheduled for this evening due to the KAA Executive Committee meeting. Looking back through my notes, I found where I had failed to mention that one of our crew leaders found a great surface discovery of an old clay pipe bowl with the raised letters "CB" on it. The initials CB are molded inside of a circular cartouche on the right side of the bowl, a form of marking typical of pipes manufactured in Bristol, England. It is a product of Bristol pipe maker Charles Buckler, who was freed from his apprenticeship in 1713.

The exact year in which he stopped manufacturing pipes is unknown, but Buckler is recorded as deceased in 1729 (a very old discovery for sure).

Thursday, June 13, up at 5:45 a.m. Cool and very nice. This morning will be my very last trip to the field, as tomorrow our leader will not be here. I will most likely be working in lab or just maybe I'll be able to leave for home a day early. On the way to the field this morning, I saw only one jackrabbit, but two beautiful male pheasants. Boy, this short section of country dirt road is really dusty. In fact, it is as deep as snow in some places and just as hard to drive in. Back to the same site on Big Creek this morning until our first break at 10 a.m. and then we will switch sites. There's just such a big area that needs metal detecting and we are running out of time.

Friday's passage by the U.S. Senate of an energy bill that includes a Renewable Fuels Standard is wind in the sails of the nation's ethanol industry, but just how much of the proposed Garnett ethanol plant project will be owned locally compared to outsiders in that same industry remains to be seen. Individual investors in Eastern Kansas haven't shown much more interest since a June 2 target date passed two months ago.

Anderson County Commissioners are expected to approve a 2004 county budget Aug. 18 which will result in an estimated 1.1 mill increase in local property taxes, generating an extra $125,000 in tax funds toward planned total spending of $248,000 over last year.

first substantial find of the 1993 growing season. Ten of the plants appear to have been cultivated, while some of the others may have grown wild.

A cooperative effort between the Kansas Corn Growers Association, the Kansas Grain Sorghum Producers and Beckman Motors of Garnett has resulted in three new ethanol-powered Chevrolet Lumina's being added to the rental fleet at Beckman's Garnett location. The cars are powered by a mixture of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent standard unleaded gasoline, and are part of the Kansas Biofuels Project, a research and development project studying the use of grain-based fuels.

Electric demands during the recent dry spell has resulted in peaks approaching levels compatible to 1980 peaks in Garnett. A peak of 6,900 kilowatts citywide was reached on both Wednesday and Thursday last week, when temperatures soared past the century mark. The measurements were made in a 15-minute period and compared to a peak demand during hot weather in 1980 of 7,400 kilowatts. Usually the peak demand is between 4 and 5 p.m., when people arrive home from work and switch on air conditioners.

Embryos that had been frozen were implanted into five cows at the Garnett Veterinary Clinic Saturday. The procedure for freezing embryos, then implanting them later into cows is one that has been developed over the past decade. The frozen embryos can be transported in containers of liquid nitrogen to other country, and can allow transplantation in cattle over a period of months or years instead of being restricted to transplantation of the embryo within 48 hours after removal from the cow.

Extension Master Gardener training offered

Are you interested in becoming an Extension Master Gardener? The Master Gardener program is a volunteer program in which K-State Research and Extension exchanges classroom training for volunteer time. Training consists of 56 hours of instruction in all aspects of horticulture. Instructors include state specialists from Kansas State University, local extension agents and local experts in specific subject matter. Anderson County has joined Johnson and Miami County's training. A fee of $125 per participant is required for course materials payable to the Anderson County Extension Council. Training days are Tuesdays from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. A total of 9 sessions will be held, which will occur on September 17, September 24, October 1, October 8, October 15, October 29, November 5, November 12 and November 19. Trainings will be held at the Johnson County Extension Office in Olathe and transportation can be arranged, if desired.

After training is completed, volunteers donate 40 hours of educational community service in the community. Service activities will be coordinated by Shannon Blocker, Anderson County Extension Agent, Agriculture and Natural Resources. Volunteer programs include demonstration gardens, diagnostic clinics, 4-H Youth horticultural services, hotline question and answer sessions, school outreach, speaker's bureaus and special events and educational days.

Application forms are available at the Anderson County Extension Office and online

Micah Smith, Kincaid, a 2010 graduate of Crest High School, Colony, is a COBE Honors Scholar. He is a junior majoring in management.

Consumers warned of scams related to Affordable Care Act

MANHATTAN - Two Kansas State University professors are warning about fraudsters that are poised to take advantage of widespread confusion over the Affordable Care Act, also known as Obamacare.

Beginning Oct. 1, Americans can begin purchasing insurance from private providers in a marketplace, which is intended to make insurance more affordable.

Consumers can make choices one of three ways - online, on paper, or one-on-one with a trained professional (called a "navigator") who can help them understand the options.

"No one should be receiving any phone calls nor mailings telling them to sign up for health insurance," said Roberta Riportella, the Kansas Health Foundation professor of community health at Kansas State University.

"If someone does call, folks should assume it is fraud and hang up. People need to be especially careful not to give out personal information."

Already, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission has issued a consumer alert about a telemarketing scheme targeted to Medicare beneficiaries. Officials say that impostors are attempting to gain consumer's personal or financial information in order to continue Medicare eligibility.

"The health reform law changes do not affect the basics of Medicare so beneficiaries should be especially leary of any phone calls," Riportella said. "They will still need to make choices about their Medicare Part D prescription drug plans (through their normal processes)."

Elizabeth Kiss, a K-State Research and Extension family resource management specialist, said consumers should report suspected fraud to the FTC, by visiting the FTC Complaint Assistant or call 1-877-FTC-HELP.

Kiss added that consumers can also call 1-800-318-2596, 24 hours a day, seven days a week with questions about the insurance marketplace.

Riportella also maintains a blog that discusses current issues regarding the Affordable Care Act. It's at Issues in the Health Reform.
