Girls recap X Factor tryout

4Bella members Miranda Woosley, Kaylan Peine, Amber Mauldin and Hope Theisman stand in front of the X-Factor sign during tryouts in Denver, Colo.

4Bella girls group brings lessons home from X-Factor tryouts

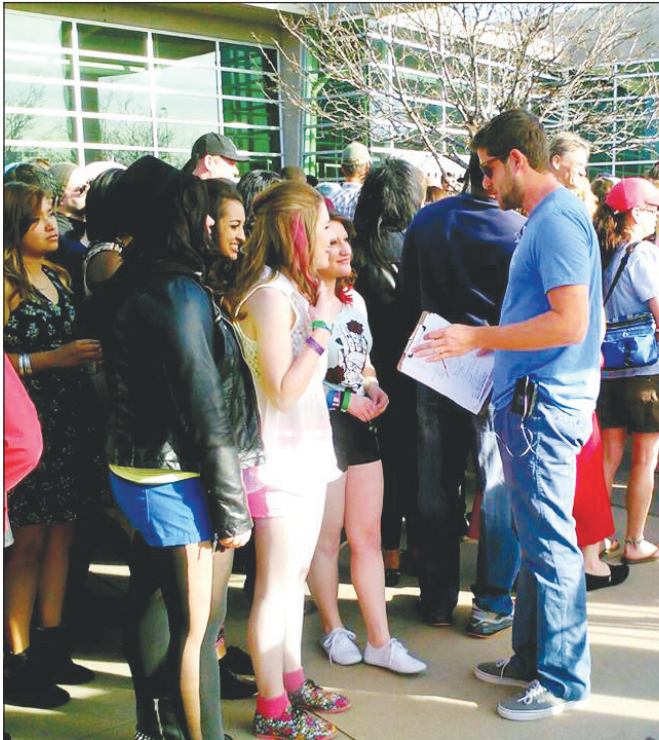

Hurry-up-and-wait, hard work, show biz fakery educate girls

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

DENVER, Colo. — They say “close” only counts in horse shoes and hand grenades. But a quartet of Anderson County High School girls who fell short of a headline appearance this past summer on the television talent search program “The X-Factor” is keeping up their momentum with local and regional appearances — wondering what the future will bring.

“I guess it’s fair to say it (the X-Factor tryout) was a disappointment at the end,” said Sheila Woosley, mother of 4Bella’s Miranda Woosley. “But the experience they got was incredible and they’ve had some appearance booked almost every single weekend since they’ve been back.”

The foursome of Miranda Woosley, Kaylan Peine, Amber Mauldin and Hope Theisman did local performances and raised money to go to the X-Factor tryouts in Denver back in May, which amounted to four auditions in two separate trips. A harrowing call-back audition at the end of June was the final step and led to a filmed tryout before an audience of several thousand in the Denver Coliseum and in front of celebrity judges 4Bella members are interviewed as part of the process.

Demi Lovato, Kelly Roland, Paulina Rubio and grumpy talent show icon Simon Cowell.

The first three auditions went gangbusters. The last one — well...

It was a brutal introduction to show business, but one the girls say was an unforgettable experience and one that taught them more about the underbelly of music and television than they ever could have learned anywhere else.

It was grueling — a 12-hour wait in the anti-rooms of the Denver Coliseum’s service areas with hundreds of other acts for the initial set in front of screening producers. But 4Bella passed. Their lineup of tunes — “Wings” by Little Mix, The Temptations classics “My Girl” and “The Way You Do The Things You Do” got them the “ticket” to proceed to the next screening, and the one after that, and then a jubilant return to the second day of auditions as well. They were on Cloud 9,

Officials kick off construction of new hospital with nod to commitment, collaboration

GARNETT - Local leaders and medical specialists paid homage to Anderson County’s vision for healthcare Thursday when they broke ground for the county’s new $25 million hospital facility.

It was a vision that dates back to the late 1940s and in recent decades has included a partnership with St. Luke’s Health System.

Sex offender’s medical costs at issue

County juggles justice against budget in case of 84yo on 3rd conviction

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Anderson County finds itself hard-pressed to locate nearby treatment options for geriatric sexual offenders - a criminal element whose novelty may only be upstaged by the degree of frustration it’s causing Anderson County Attorney Brandon Jones.

Jones told county commissioners Monday the county’s dead-end predicament in finding treatment as a sentencing option for 84 year-old Donald Tipton gave few plausible sentencing alternatives for district court, due to the health care cost risks Tipton and inmates like him could mean to the county.

Tipton was sentenced last week to a 6 months suspended jail sentence with 12 months community corrections probation in connection with a charge of lewd and lascivious behavior, after exposing himself to a woman in his neighborhood on April 10 of this year. At the time of the incident Tipton hadn’t yet finished probation for a similar incident in January 2012, and that sentence followed up a prior one in 2010.

Jones told commissioners the costs for housing elderly prisoners like Tipton can be exceedingly high due to possible medical costs, because while incarcerated the county is responsible for his medical expenses. Outside of jail, Tipton would be eligible for Medicare benefits.

Anderson County faced medical cost issues back in 2012 in the case of 46 year-old Connie

City takes fresh look at swimming at reservoir

Rules for a sand beach could get bypassed to allow swimming area

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - For the second time in recent years Garnett City Commissioners plan to revisit the possibility of developing swimming at Cedar Valley Reservoir, but probably only if they can get around the cost of building a sand beach there as once required by their liability insurer.

Commissioners Preston Peine brought the subject forward at Tuesday’s commission meeting, saying the topic seemed to arise every summer and noting that illegal swimming has traditionally been taking place at CVR for years. City ordinance presently forbids swimming there, although it does allow skiing, tubing and other watercraft.

The city last examined its policy regarding swimming at the lake in June of 2010, at which time liability insurer EMC said it could still cover the city if it allowed swimming in a designated swimming area with a sand beach and “No Lifeguard” signage. State tort reform in Kansas passed several years ago limited most of the liability municipalities can face in recreation site accidents, which

Anderson County Board of Commissioners August 5

Chairman Eugene Highberger called the meeting of the Anderson County Board of Commissioners to order at 9:00 a.m. on August 5 at the County Commission Room. Attendance: Eugene Highberger, Present; James K. Johnson, Present; Jerry Howarter, Present. The pledge of allegiance was recited. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Road and Bridge

Lester Welsh, Road Supervisor, met with the commission. Fuel bids were presented. Both bids were the same and discussion was held on how to handle it. Since Leroy Co-op has received several of the bids for the last few months it was decided to give the August bid to Lybarger. Discussion was held on complaints of wash boarding near the stop sign on Catalpa. Lester will check it out.

KAC Meeting

Commissioner Johnson moved to approve Chairman Highberger be voting delegate for the KAC Conference. Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0. Commissioner Highberger moved to approve Commissioner Johnson and Commissioner Howarter be alternative voting delegates. Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0.

Abatements

Abatements B13-223 and B13-224 were presented and approved.

Extension

Shannon Blocker and Nancy Schuster met with the commission. They explained what they have been doing in the extension program to reach 4-H and non 4-H residents, youth and adult. They explained the different kinds of involvement in 4-H and stated that it was not necessarily for rural kids as there are several things for kids from rural or town. Discussion was held on the extension districts that being formed. Franklin County and Osage County are currently one district (Frontier) and they would like to talk to them about possibly joining that district. Extension districts elect members from each county at regular county elections. If the Frontier District accepts them they would join July 1, 2014. Do to buying items in bulk for the district, it looks as though the mill levy for extension could be reduced.

Health Insurance

Stephen Euston and Phil Drescher met with the commission on the county health insurance. Proposals for partially self-funded plans were presented as the current insurance is looking at a 39% increase. Discussion was held on charging employees extra if they do not participate in wellness screenings, smoke, or do not participate in wellness activities.

Sheriff

Sheriff Valentine met with the commission. They are trying to find a way to change the light bulbs in the tower. They are 40' up and they have tried the city lift but it would not reach that high. They are looking at bringing in another lift that will hopefully reach the top.

Minerals Rights

Discussion was held on a motion in May of 1993 abating the tax on severed minerals that was not being produced. The legislature has since deemed that all counties that have abated those taxes do not have the authority to abate. County Counselor Campbell advised the commission that they need to rescind that motion. Commission would like to see a copy of the original motion before they make any alterations.

Meeting adjourned at 12:26 p.m.

USDA Seeks Applications for Grants to Create Jobs, Economic Opportunity in Rural Areas

WASHINGTON, DC, August 15, 2013 - Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is seeking applications for grants that will be awarded to organizations to help rural businesses create jobs and spur economic development. USDA is making $5.6 million available through the Rural Community Development Initiative (RCDI), a program that serves as a catalyst for economic growth in rural areas.

"This funding will help local and regional organizations as they assist small and emerging businesses," Vilsack said. "The Obama Administration recognizes small businesses as the engines of job creation and essential to strengthening our national economy."

Strengthening the rural economy remains a main focus of USDA, despite budget uncertainties. Qualified intermediary organizations receiving the grants will provide financial and technical assistance to recipients to develop their capacity to manage housing, community facilities, or community and economic development projects. Recipients will be non-profit organizations, low income rural communities, or federally recognized tribes. Intermediary organizations must provide matching funds at least equal to the RCDI grant. Funds are not directly provided to business recipients by USDA under the program.

"USDA Rural Development supports regional economic development efforts that assist entrepreneurs in rural Kansas communities," stated USDA Rural Development State Director Patty Clark. "Through the RCDI program, USDA can provide technical assistance to rural communities that can help create and preserve businesses."

RCDI brings economic opportunity to rural areas. For example, in 2013, the Kansas Center for Entrepreneurship received a $200,000 grant for technical assistance and training to create new leadership capacity, capital creation, and increased connectivity to local, regional, state, and national resources. Assistance included community and entrepreneur coaching, succession planning for businesses, and the education and recruitment of potential angel investors.

Secretary Vilsack said that today's announcement is another reminder of the importance of USDA programs for rural America. A comprehensive new Food, Farm and Jobs Bill would further expand the rural economy, Vilsack added, saying that's just one reason why Congress must get a comprehensive Bill done as soon as possible.

The deadline for submitting RCDI applications is November 12, 2013. RCDI applications from Kansas must be submitted to the USDA Rural Development State Office, 1303, SW First American Place, Suite 100, Topeka, KS 66604-4040. Additional information on the RCDI program is available by contacting the USDA Rural Development State Office in Kansas at (785) 271-2730, or by viewing the August 14, 2013 Federal Register at www.gpo.gov/fdsys/pkg/FR-2013-08-14/pdf/2013-19773.pdf.

President Obama's plan for rural America has brought about historic investment and resulted in stronger rural communities. Under the President's leadership, these investments in housing, community facilities, businesses and infrastructure have empowered rural America to continue leading the way - strengthening America's economy, small towns and rural communities.

USDA's investments in rural communities support the rural way of life that stands as the backbone of our American values. President Obama and Agriculture Secretary Vilsack are committed to a smarter use of Federal resources to foster sustainable economic prosperity and ensure the government is a strong partner for businesses, entrepreneurs and working families in rural communities.

USDA, through its Rural Development mission area, has a portfolio of programs designed to improve the economic stability of rural communities, businesses, residents, farmers and ranchers and improve the quality of life in rural America. USDA has made a concerted effort to deliver results for the American people, even as the Department implements sequestration - the across-the-board budget reductions mandated under terms of the Budget Control Act.

USDA has already undertaken historic efforts since 2009 to save more than $828 million in taxpayer funds through targeted, common-sense budget reductions. These reductions have put USDA in a better position to carry out its mission, while implementing sequester budget reductions in a fair manner that causes as little disruption as possible.

O'MARA

March 15, 1934-August 18, 2013

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW
Published August 20, 2013

Eugene Francis "Red" O'Mara, of Burlington, Kansas, died August 18, 2013, at Coffey County Hospital, after a short bout of cancer.

He is survived by his wife of 58 years, S. Jane O'Mara, and their three children: Robin Renner of Angleton, Texas, Mark O'Mara and wife Helen of West Lafayette, Indiana, and Sara O'Mara of Huntersville, North Carolina. Red and Jane have three grandchildren, Rachel Eggemeyer, Andy O'Mara and Shannon O'Mara, and three great grandchildren, Claire, Luke and Eli Eggemeyer.

Red was born March 15, 1934, in Burlington, and was adopted by his great aunt and uncle, Andrew "Dud" and Lela O'Mara. His early years were spent living in a boxcar with his folks who were employed by the Missouri Pacific Railroad. After his parents retired from the railroad, they owned and operated the City Café in Richmond, where Red attended and graduated from the Richmond High School in 1952. During high school, Red was drafted by the Kansas City Athletics and offered an athletic scholarship to KU. He decided instead to enlist in the Navy Active Reserve and then he enlisted into the Marine Corps and, after training, served as both a sniper and machine gunner in the Korean War.

Upon return from Korea he became engaged to Jane Sigler and in 1954 they were married at the Mare Island Naval Base, Vallejo, California.

He then attended Ottawa

University, with the birth of daughter Robin in 1955 and son Mark in 1958.

In 1959, he reenlisted, however this time it was in the Army. He was assigned to the Army Security Agencies (ASA) at Fort Devens, Massachusetts, and was initially trained as a code breaker. He served in the ASA through two tours in the Vietnam War and the birth of daughter Sara in 1969, until he retired with twenty-six years of service in 1979.

During the course of his services, he was wounded more than once; he was awarded the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit and five Bronze Stars among several other medals. He was hired by KG&E and Wolf Creek Generation Station as a security shift supervisor (Lieutenant) in 1981, and retired from the site in 1996.

In retirement, Red served on the Burlington City Planning Board and the Coffey County Hospital Board. He was also a volunteer at the hospital for 13 years.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, August 24, 2013, at the United Methodist Church in Richmond. Burial with military honors will follow at Richmond Cemetery.

The family will receive friends for visitation on Friday evening, August 23, from 7-9 p.m., at Jones Funeral Home in Burlington.

group member Hope Theisman said.

"We went back to the hotel that night and some of the other acts were staying at the same hotel. They were congratulating us and everything and some of them hadn't made it," she said. "Everybody was so supportive of one another. We knew everybody had talent. It was really cool how we got to mingle with all the people who were there for the same reason we were."

By now 4Bella was refining their approach to the auditions. They'd figured out X-Factor was all about television, and that the producers were looking not just for good voices but for acts that would make good TV. That meant looks. Smiles. Energy. Be engaging and cute and passionate and attractive and make the camera love you. As they moved through the process the scripted nature of the supposedly candid interviews, which appear on the show as intros and video biographies before the groups perform, became abundantly clear, said group member Kaylan Peine.

"They were setting us up with these interviews and telling us what to talk about and what to say," Peine said. "A lot of it was really pretty fake."

The third audition was strong, and ended with a promise from the producers that they'd call to let them know if they made the final cut.

So 4Bella waited. And waited. After the first week with no call, hope was waning.

Nearly three weeks went by, Theisman said, before the call came. They'd made it and were headed back to Denver for initial filming in front of a live Coliseum audience.

"I think we were just shocked," Theisman said. "We were like, 'oh my God, they called!'"

But there was a hitch. The group pounded out eight audition songs and knew them backward and forward over those three weeks prior to the final audition, only to get a call from the producers two days before their arrival to tell them they couldn't sing those songs because Fox Television didn't have rights from the artists and music companies to rebroadcast them.

"We had to come up with five songs. We literally had to break these songs down, come up with all the parts, practice the harmonies, everything - in two days," Theisman said.

Back to Denver they went. This time the tension was higher. There were fewer acts standing around and waiting. And this time there was the giant Coliseum stage, those four familiar celebrity faces, and some 4,000 audience members who'd bought tickets to watch the early portions of the show. They settled on the Katy

Perry song "California Girls" for the final stage presentation. But in the final audition the accompanying music coming from stage monitors was so loud the girls couldn't hear themselves through their own microphones.

"We weren't nervous at all to go on stage," Peine said. "But it was so loud, we couldn't hear each other. All we could hear was this vibration. They stopped us about in the middle of the first chorus."

"The sound was horrendously loud," Theisman said. "We were basically screaming because we couldn't hear ourselves." The audio mess shook her up and it was hard to know what to say, Theisman said, but the other girls weren't going down without a fight.

"We begged them to let us sing another song," Peine said. "We started into a Little Mix song, but they just said 'no, it's not working.'"

It did not go well. They even won a barb from the show's renown miscreant Simon Cowell, who noted that the community had chipped in to raise $2,000 to get them there.

"He said something like 'It wasn't a one-way ticket, was it?'" Sheila Woolsey remembered.

They kept a stiff upper lip until they got off stage. Then in Hope Theisman's words "there was just waterworks everywhere."

But the girls said the experience was worth the fall.

The glitz and glam of the Fox Network show and its 7 million viewers was a rare and exciting shot at stardom. The girls and their families were under contractual restrictions not to talk about their performance or that of any other contestant until just last month. The new season for the show premieres Sept. 11 and 12. 4Bella isn't sure whether clips any of their auditions will be televised.

"There were some bloopers that have already been on the Internet," Kaylan Peine said. "At least we weren't in those," she laughed.

Since then the quartet has been in demand locally and regionally.

They sang at the Lyon and Anderson County fairs and they're set to sing The National Anthem at the upcoming Cornstock concert in September. They're making a return live appearance on KOFO radio.

Woolsey graduated last year, Mauldin and Peine graduate in 2014 and Theisman next year. What happens next will depend on desire, work and chance, they say.

"Who knows what's going to happen after school," Theisman said. "We'd like to (keep singing together) but we don't know what's going to happen. It's crazy how much you have to go through to get there."

for by increased contract lease payments from St. Luke's as the facility's operating tenant, will be constructed on county land adjoining the present hospital property to the west. Thursday's event was attended by an estimated 300 area residents and others with connections to the project.

The 18-year partnership and collaboration between the county and St. Luke's was a major theme of the day in speeches made by both St. Luke's officials and members of the local hospital's directors and board of trustees. Speakers noted the partnership had been complicated and involved numerous entities, but that the collaboration had worked to develop first-rate health care and a connection to world class services through a growing St. Luke's system.

Don Sipes, vice-president of regional services for St. Luke's, noted the partnership between the health system and Anderson County had become a model of collaboration for both St. Luke's and other health systems with mutual benefits to the sponsoring system, the local hospital and the communities in which they're located. Sipes, who was also involved with St. Luke's during the 1995 initialization of its lease of ACH, noted the importance of Anderson County Hospital over those years in developing a patient base for St. Lukes services and providers.

Chairman of the ACH Board of Directors David Lybarger, who was instrumental in the campaign for the new facility's bond passage, acknowledged the partnership was at times complicated but in the end was highly functional.

"Our partnership serves as a testament to the success of complicated partnerships," Lybarger said, adding "with a commitment to a common mission here and a focus on the future, we can proudly usher in a new era of healthcare for Anderson County."

The widely contested bond issue passed by a margin of 130 votes last April, or about 53 percent of the 38 percent eligible voter turnout. The run-up to the election was marked by illegal campaign activities by anonymous opponents who argued the project was too expensive, ill-fitted to local needs and did not constrain St. Luke's by contract long enough to pay the full amount proponents claimed. The originators of the illegal campaign efforts have since been identified but as yet unprosecuted. Chairman of the support committee REACH (Revitalization Effort for Anderson County Hospital) which promoted the issue, Mike Burns, thanked his members and others for their courage in standing up publicly for the effort.

"Every one of you that were involved in this process had to have the integrity to make the commitment to openly, transparently and honestly state your position publicly, then humbly ask for input good or bad and then ask for their support, knowing and accepting the consequences," Burns said. "On behalf of everyone involved, I thank you and the voters for the faith and the trust that you placed in us."

Anderson County Commission chairman and longtime ACH board member Gene Highberger told the crowd tough decisions regarding the hospital, its operation and management had followed the community since the 1949 construction of the present facility, and that time and time again the community had chosen the right course. Highberger said the $25 million question amounted to one of the biggest decisions and came about with the realization that the present 1949-vintage structure had outlived its usefulness.

"The challenge was 'Do we repair the lady across the street or do we build new?'" Highberger said. "Was that a tough decision? I'd say it was. Was it a good decision? Absolutely. This is proof of what teamwork can do with everybody involved."

"My opinion is life is good, the future is outstanding, it's exciting and I'm excited to be a part of this."

Construction will begin immediately with completion planned for late 2014.

SWIMMING...

allowed EMC to modify years of 'no swimming' policy.

But beset by tighter budgets in 2011, commissioners opted to cut the swim beach development from its plans. More years of continuing austerity since then has resulted in the project never being added back into the city's development plans; the main problem being the widely varying lake level could wash away the sand from a designated swimming and whatever funds committed to it lost within a period of heavy rain, such as what the county recently experienced.

Commissioner Greg Gwin said the development of a swimming beach at CVR might result in competition for swimmers with the city's municipal pool. Peine and commissioner Gordon Blackie agreed that they'd like to see any development funds aimed at the pool, but said they'd like to determine if the city's present liability carrier had any flexibility on the beach requirement, or if there might be another carrier that was more lenient in that regard. Blackie said he didn't like an insurance company having so much authority over autonomous city property.

"I think we should do some shopping," Blackie said. "It appears the insurance company is dictating what we can and can't do with our public property."

Commissioners directed city manager Joyce Martin to look into options with the carrier and possibly other carriers who might allow swim activities without the sand beach requirement.

Her efforts for a reduced sentence never included firm proof of the diagnoses, and after $6,000 in initial bills McCormick finished her year-long sentence without major additional expense.

Costs of an elderly criminal element is something jails across the country and particularly the nations prisons are having to deal with as the population ages. Senior citizen prisoners make up the fastest-growing segment of prisoners according to the U.S. Department of Justice. State and federal prisons are required to pay for inmate medical costs under the cruel and unusual punishment clause of the 8th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Bureau of Justice Statistics show the male prison population over age 55 ballooned by 82 percent from 1999 to 2007 from 48,800 to 89,900. Most studies define "elderly" prisoners as those over 55 though some states reporting criteria is age 50, and studies have showed an inmate's body ages faster than that of someone not in prison.

Tipton's sentence mandates probation through the community corrections division, with stipulations that he seek treatment for his obsession and have no contact with the victim.

Too close to history

Long-term impact of hospital, school decisions hard to absorb

Although there are thoughtful speeches and poignant photos and plenty of congratulations and thanks to go around at an event like last week's ground breaking for the new county hospital, few of us probably ever realize at the time really just how important and far-reaching these efforts are and will be. When you stand so close to history it's a little hard to see how big it is.

And that's why it behooves us to be reminded that Anderson County residents have made some historic strides in the last couple of years whether or not we realize it. Although it may sound overly magnanimous, we have taken positive steps to fight off the blight of decay that threatens most of rural America - steps that help ensure the strength of fabric in our community for decades to come.

We've become used to the contrasts with our county and neighboring Linn and Coffey counties, where public budgets are heavily subsidized by tax revenues from regulated multi-billion dollar utility properties. In Anderson County, without such major "sugar daddies" of tax revenue, we taxpayers for the most part pay our own way. That's another reason why, when our community makes major new investments in new schools or a new hospital as it has over the past couple of years, our true and individual personal commitment to our own future - and our belief in sacrifice for it - are so much better illustrated.

Probably none of the county leaders or voters who supported the 1949 hospital construction project anticipated the opportunity that would arise with the development of an adjoining Long Term Care facility that was later added. In that same vein there will no doubt be changes in the future that present new challenges and new opportunities to the new Anderson County Hospital, particularly with the modern phenomena of skyrocketing health care costs and struggles for the population in finding a way to pay for it. Whatever the future holds for health care, Anderson County will have a firm foothold due to the course we've chosen.

So too was the right choice made by voters in USD 365 in voting to construct the new elementary school in Garnett and to upgrade facilities at the district's other elementary schools. Besides the moral obligation of the present generation to provide education for the children, it is an economic given that good schools lend greatly to communities and improve their salability and value in attracting residents and jobs. The choice for Garnett provided the first major change in facilities in some 90 years, and the whole of the project helped improve education and maintain the vitality of the communities in the district.

These were good decisions that move our communities forward, and we should be proud of ourselves for having made them.

The disgrace of the Yankees

BY RICH LOWRY

NATIONAL REVIEW

New York Yankee third baseman Alex Rodriguez may be the most hated figure in sports, but he is a man for our time.

He is a master at the insincere mea culpa, at self-involvement, at pretense and greed. Not just greed for money, but for fame and glory. If he had only disgraced himself playing for the Texas Rangers, that would be one thing, but he has done it playing for the most storied franchise in sports, whose legends are synonymous with baseball greatness.

So let's consider the tale of two prodigiously talented Yankee corner infielders, separated by about 80 years and a vast moral chasm.

Like Rodriguez in his prime, first baseman Lou Gehrig posted awesome offensive numbers. But what is most remarkable about him isn't the statistics, it's the character. He was modest even at the height of his powers, calling himself "just the Yankee who's in there every day." When tragedy struck, he made his debilitating illness an epic of dignity.

In 1939, he removed himself from the lineup after playing 2,130 consecutive games, for "the good of the team." Soon after, he was diagnosed with the amyotrophic lateral sclerosis that killed him two years later. On "Lou Gehrig Appreciation Day" on July 4, 1939, his sobbing manager Joe McCarthy called him "the finest example of a ballplayer, sportsman and citizen that baseball has ever known." He recalled how Gehrig told him he was quitting because he had become a drag on the team. "My God, man," McCarthy said, "you were never that."

Lowry

They called the movie about Gehrig "Pride of the Yankees." Then, there's Alex Rodriguez.

He knows the basic rules of 21st-century damage control: First, lie, and when that becomes unsustainable, confess and become a celebrity spokesperson against your vice.

Sports Illustrated reported in 2009 that Rodriguez had tested positive for steroids in his 2003 MVP season with the Rangers. He had previously denied using steroids on national TV, but eventually admitted it, explaining that he had been young, stupid and naive. He pledged never to use steroids again. He did events for the Taylor Hooton Foundation, named in honor of a 17-year-old who had abused steroids and taken his own life.

Nonetheless, here he is again, facing a 211-game suspension for abusing steroids. Unless he's the victim of a vast conspiracy, he has been caught cheating a second time. Perhaps because he is old, stupid and cynical? Appealing the suspension, Rodriguez says that he's "fighting for his life."

The difference between the two Yankees is the difference between going away with grace when no one wants you to leave, and sticking around, gracelessly, when most everyone would prefer that you go. It's the difference between fighting for your life but not mentioning it, and saying you're fighting for your life when you are not. It's the difference between calling yourself "the luckiest man on the face of the Earth" when you have been dealt an ugly hand by fate, and pitying yourself when your predicament is the product of your own bad choices.

From Gehrig to Rodriguez is a long way down.

I was reading in the Phone Forum about a caller who was talking about the electrical problems they're having at the jail. Now just what do you think they're going to run into with the hospital? I read an article where they said they wanted to build a 60-year hospital, but to do that it would cost 40-50 million dollars. Well, they're going to cut that thing down to a budget of $25 million just like the jail, so therefore when they get it built they're going to find all kinds of problems with it. Our people in our planning committees and stuff just don't learn.

I just wanted to say to the community how much I appreciate our local automobile dealership. There's some wonderful people who work there. Just wanted to give them an attaboy from another satisfied customer.

As you celebrate the new Anderson County Hospital you should remember that all that construction money put into it will not generate a lick of taxes because it's a county-owned building just like the shop or the courthouse. You don't get any taxes off a building when it's owned by the county. Now ask yourself how much St. Luke's would have to pay in taxes if they owned these buildings where they operate all these hospitals? I think I see their plan.

I'm appalled. All veterans have given and all deserve to be honored. Why would anyone suggest or debate the stupidity of a choice for a memorial to be built.

I wanted to say I was pleased and delighted to attend the ground breaking ceremony for the hospital. What a wonderful thing to have accomplished for our city.

Will Brownback turn on his buddy, Kobach?

Remember your mother telling you that you are known by the friends you keep? Sure you do.

Now—admittedly after a day reporting on the state's most fervent Democrats at their mid-year "Demofest" convention in Wichita—some are wondering whether Republican Secretary of State Kris Kobach's enforcement of a new law he got passed to demand proof of citizenship of Kansas voters might just splash back on Gov. Sam Brownback.

OK, that Democrat crowd would have voted to impeach Brownback for using the wrong fork to eat salad. They're a little...fussy about anything or probably all things Brownback, of course.

But Democrats tend to talk about the "conservative Republican administration" that is running the state now and even though Kobach was elected to statewide office on his own, Brownback is seen as the head of the government, the head of the party—the man in charge—and in some manner responsible for Kobach.

This registration business, which now sees maybe 15,000 Kansas in "suspense," or not eligible to vote until they prove citizenship, is a growing issue that will likely see thousands more Kansans become ineligible to vote in the coming months as they renew or apply for drivers' licenses and are asked if they care to register to vote, or move or get married or whatever and need to re-register to vote.

by Martin Hawver
KANSAS STATEHOUSE COLUMNIST

And that's great for Kobach because it's what he wants—proof of citizenship for voters. "The State of Kansas takes the citizenship qualification seriously and will enforce it," Kobach said last week.

But it's going to splash back on Brownback, who signed the new voter citizenship bill into law but like many of us who hang out at the Statehouse probably didn't think far enough ahead to see how big an issue it would become. It truly is like that tough piece of meat that gets bigger the more you chew it.

Give it a couple of months and many of us will know someone, maybe down the block or at work, who has to dig out a birth certificate or passport for those who have one to prove he/she is a genuine American and has a right to vote.

That's when it's likely that people are going to start asking Brownback what he's doing to fix this and they probably won't be satisfied with Brownback saying "that's not my department."

It gets more interesting when one remembers that Brownback virtually abandoned the Kansas Chamber of Commerce's immigrant worker legalization legislation when Kobach started challenging it.

Oh, and there is some information trickling out that there are more Republicans than Democrats being put into that "suspense" category and unable to vote until they prove citizenship, though the vast majority of those in suspense are not affiliated with either party.

Looking for a Brownback/Kobach cage wrestling match over the issue? Democrats would be happy to hold their coats while they battle, but it will likely stop short of that.

This might be an interesting little... maybe thumb-wrestling match in the next few months if any of those suspense voters have Brownback bumper stickers on their Buicks.

Icivics online learning to be introduced in Kansas Classrooms

The Kansas Supreme Court and the Kansas Bar Association (KBA) initiated a new effort to encourage use of an on-line game-based educational curriculum - iCivics - to reinvigorate civic learning in Kansas classrooms.

iCivics is a free on-line civics education program started by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in 2007 following her retirement from the high court. The Kansas iCivics Coordinator, Overland Park attorney Ted J. McDonald, Adam & McDonald, PA, is being assisted and supported by a Kansas iCivics Advisory Committee formed at the request of Supreme Court Chief Justice Lawton R. Nuss. The Chief Justice is excited about the educational possibilities iCivics offers, and he and several other state Chief Justices around the country are very supportive of the program. The Advisory Committee includes judges, teachers, attorneys, other professionals, and staff members at the Supreme Court, the Office of Judicial Administration, the KBA, and the Department of Education. Current teacher/curriculum director committee members include Deborah K. Brown of the Shawnee Mission Schools, and Debra Stewart and Susan Sittenauer of the Topeka schools, and all currently use iCivics in their work.

The Committee plans to promote the curriculum's use during "Celebrate Freedom Week," which was enacted during the 2013 legislative session as an opportunity to educate school children on the Constitution and Declaration of Independence. "Celebrate Freedom Week" can be presented to students during any full school week as determined by local school boards. During the week, public schools are required to teach to grades kindergarten through eight the history of the country's founding, with particular emphasis on the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, and to eventually include their relationship to the nation's diversity by way of immigration, major wars, and social movements in American history. The State Board of Education, along with other volunteers, is required to promote "Celebrate Freedom Week."

The Advisory committee also plans to facilitate contacts with local educators, principals, curriculum developers, school boards, and "home school" organizations and individuals to assist with the introduction of iCivics into the educational system. In addition, the KBA may seek to use its lawyer members and others to reach out locally to educators and schools about iCivics.

iCivics seeks to improve civics education and support teachers by providing off-the-shelf solutions that can be integrated with existing curricula, by taking a digital approach to engage students and by leveraging media that the students are already using - video games.

iCivics currently has several curriculum units: Foundations of Government; The Constitution; Three Branches; The Judicial Branch; The Executive Branch; The Legislative Branch; Government & the Market; Persuasive Writing; Citizenship and Participation; Budgeting; Influence Library; Politics and Public Policy; International Affairs; Landmark Library; State and Local Governments; Civil Rights; County Solutions; and Media and Influence. iCivics also develops new curriculum units periodically. Each unit has corresponding lesson plans, web quests and a game that allows teachers to approach the curriculum in a variety of ways. If used together, iCivics' lesson plans and games make up more than a semester's worth of instruction and learning. If teachers pick up lesson plans and games here and there, each curriculum unit can independently supplement the teacher's existing plans.

More information is available at the iCivics website, <http://www.icivics.org/>. You may also contact Ted McDonald at TMcDonald@mam-firm.com, and 913-647-0670.

Scam Alert: "Free" medical alert devices not really free

TOPEKA - Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt last week warned Kansans about a new scam targeting senior citizens offering "free emergency medical alert" devices.

In the past week, dozens of Kansans have reported to the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division that they have received recorded calls from "John" who claims to be with "Medical Alert" telling them they can receive a free medical alert device, and they just need to press 1 to confirm their shipping information. Consumers who press 1 are connected with a live telemarketer who offers them the "free" device, but then asks for a credit card number to cover shipping or monitoring fees.

"These calls are nothing more than a ruse to get your personal financial information," Schmidt said. "You should never have to pay money to get a 'free' product. We advise Kansans not to answer these calls, or if they do, be suspicious and do not give out any personal information."

Schmidt said his office is investigating these calls. Consumers who have received such calls are encouraged to file a complaint with the Attorney General's Office online at www.ag.ks.gov or call 1-800-432-2310 to request a complaint form.

Peek-a-boo shroom

Recent soggy weather has reawakened numerous molds and spores in the local environment, like this mushroom which found a handy growing spot in the rotting bough of a sawed-off limb on East Seventh Street in Garnett.

America's Farmers Grow Communities launches fourth year

ST. LOUIS - Thanks to the help of local farmers, over the past four years America's Farmers Grow Communities has invested more than $13 million in rural America. Now in its fourth consecutive year, America's Farmers Grow Communities will give farmers the opportunity to win a $2,500 donation for their favorite local nonprofit organizations.

Winning farmers have the opportunity to make a difference in their own communities by enrolling and nominating a nonprofit organization of their choice. Over the past years, organizations have used the funding to purchase vital equipment, supplies and resources for the betterment of their community.

"Farmers have really stepped up to the plate since Grow Communities piloted in 2010 and have thoughtfully chosen thousands of deserving organizations to receive the $2,500 donation," said Deborah Patterson, Monsanto Fund president.

Each year in an effort to expand the impact of Grow Communities throughout rural America, the Monsanto Fund evaluates new counties to be included in the program. Thanks to the addition of 18 new eligible counties this year, Grow Communities now reaches 1,289 counties across 39 states.

How To Enter

To make a difference in your community, register for a chance to donate to your favorite nonprofit organization online at GrowCommunities.com. The deadline for eligible farmers to enter is November 30, 2013. In December, the Monsanto Fund will then select one winner at random in each eligible county, and announce winning farmers and recipient nonprofits in January 2014.

New to the Grow Communities program last year is the chance for community members to "plant" their ideas. Rural community members can now visit the Grow Communities website and submit an idea or initiative in need of funding. Eligible farmers are able to review planted ideas and consider them in their registrations.

Farmers have helped fund more than 5,200 nonprofit organizations in rural America through America's Farmers Grow Communities. Farmers and rural community members can now visit GrowCommunities.com and register to win or submit an idea in need of funding. This program is part of the Monsanto Fund's overall effort to support rural communities.

For more information about this program and to view the official rules, please visit GrowCommunities.com.

1983: City protests appraisal fees

August 26, 2003

A new track project approved Monday by USD 365 board members may be ready in time for next track season if weather permits. Board members voted 5-1 to accept a bid from Lloyd Builders of Ottawa for a base bid of $531,123 with alternates including electric service, track lighting, bleachers and water service. The total project came in at $768,289.

Hot weather and lack of rain has pretty much toasted Anderson County's corn crop, and local soybeans may not be far behind. Corn harvest started locally last week, but the trickling of corn received so far by local elevators foretells what many farmers and ag business people in the area saw coming weeks ago. After a great wheat harvest in June and good prospects for corn just six weeks ago, high temperatures and lack of rain hammered the fall harvest.

The $1.65 million cost of a planned water treatment facility improvement by the city of Garnett will exceed the money raised through bond sales to pay for it by $155,000, and will force the city to rely on water utility fund revenues to make up the difference. The project includes renovation costs to the city's water treatment facility of $1.48 million, and $170,000 in engineering fees.

for the recreational trail from Ottawa to Iola had its timetable moved up during a meeting Monday. Due to the fact that members of the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks will be meeting toward the end of September in Garnett, Rails to Trails coordinators would like to have the names available at that time so KDWP can make its selection. Also, a video of the trail is in the works, and those in charge of production would like to have a name for the trail to work with.

The amount set for appraiser's fees in the City of Garnett's condemnation suit were based on a rate of $75 per hour, according to court records. Three appraisers were appointed by the Anderson County District Court to assess the amount of damages to property condemned for the Cedar Creek reservoir site. The total amount of fees and expenses approved by the court was $10,904.50 for the three appraisers, which included $2127 in expense. The Garnett City Commissioners stated that the amount was excessive at their meeting Wednesday. The appraisers were allowed $3,562.50 each for fees in the amount billed to the city by the Anderson County District Court. The appraisers filed documents stating that they had each worked 47 hours and 30 minutes on the appraisals, but the hourly amount for reimbursement was left blank. Associate District Judge James Smith said he set the hourly amount based on what he considered to be fair compensation for the appraiser's work. He said that the court had picked "the best men in Anderson County for the job" and he wanted to give them fair compensation for their work.

An eight month fund drive by the family of a Garnett woman who died from complications of cancer reached a conclusion Friday when money was donated to the Anderson County Hospital for equipment to detect breast cancer. The family of Helen Gadelman launched the fund drive in January and a total of about $18,700 was received from individuals, businesses and organizations in the area. The hospital ordered x-ray equipment that will have the capability of detecting breast cancer through the use of low-level radiation mammography, in addition to capability to perform traditional x-rays and tomography.

Rogers in Wilson County District Court. The charges stemmed from an investigation by the Wilson County Sheriff's Office and the Kansas Bureau of Investigation.

Assistant Attorney General Greg Benefiel of Schmidt's office prosecuted the case.

The Kansas Archaeology Training Program Field School 2013

This picture depicts one of several depressions that were excavated during this Field School. What you are looking at is an excavation consisting of at least three grids without any separations or what are known as "bulk walls". These grids were large enough for two people to conduct the excavations, with perhaps one other person to perform the screening of the removed soil. You can easily see the different grid levels by the "stair stepping" of the sloped depression.

For this article I am going to concentrate only on the top grid. First the soil was very dry, because of no rain. You can also tell the soil was quite sandy, actually making it fairly easy to screen. Notice how clean and smooth the back and side walls are. This is all done by expert hand troweling. The small holes you see, are known as rodent burrows, mice, field rats, moles, large spiders, snakes, many different kinds of insects and also by decayed roots etc.

The first level or cluster of stones were once part of the walls of the dugout. The second cluster consists of both foundation and fireplace stones. Why do I say fireplace or hearth stone? If one looks closely at the darker soil colorization and charcoal mixture they can readily see evidence of a long ago fire has taken place. Oh yes, the stones are limestone and they are not natural to this area, so that means they were carried in from elsewhere.

One last note: For you who collect fossils, can you find any in this picture?

AG fines two companies for violating Kansas No-Call Act

TOPEKA - (August 13, 2013) - Two out-of-state companies have been fined a total of more than $100,000 for violating the Kansas No-Call Act, Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt announced today.

"A great many Kansas citizens have chosen privacy when it comes to telephone solicitors," Schmidt said. "We take seriously violations of the No-Call Act and we vigorously enforce the law against those who ignore it."

Bene-Fit Health Products Inc. of Kingsland, Ga., was ordered to pay the state $81,500 in penalties and fees for violations of the No-Call Act. The Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division began investigating the company after receiving complaints in August and September 2012 that the company had solicited Kansans by telephone, marketing health seminars and wellness products. Some of the Kansas consumers who were called were on the National Do-Not-Call list.

Vacations Digest, LLC, of Orlando, Fla., was ordered to pay the state $21,500 in penalties and fees for violations of the No-Call Act. The Attorney General's Office determined that the company called Kansas consumers listed on the National Do-Not-Call list offering to assist consumers in selling or renting their unused timeshares.

The Kansas Attorney General's office is responsible for enforcing the Kansas No-Call Act. This act prohibits most businesses from calling consumers registered on the do-not-call list to sell a product or service. Organizations soliciting charitable donations, calls concerning political candidates or issues, or other calls unrelated to the sale of property or services do not fall within the scope of the Kansas No-Call Act.

Kansans who wish to register for the national Do-Not-Call list can call 1-888-382-1222 or visit www.donotcall.gov.

Kansas scores high with new anti-human trafficking law

TOPEKA - (August 15, 2013) - A leading national organization has moved Kansas into the top tier of states for new efforts to combat human trafficking, Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt announced today.

In its annual report released yesterday, Polaris Project now lists Kansas in the top group of states in light of the new anti-human trafficking law enacted earlier this year by the Legislature. In 2011, Kansas was ranked in the third tier of states, essentially the bottom third nationwide. Under the current rankings, Kansas is now tied for 11th best among the states for its anti-human trafficking efforts.

"This is dramatic national recognition of our strengthened commitment to human dignity that the Legislature enacted this year," Schmidt said. "We have more work to do, but we're making tremendous progress."

The new law, which was recommended by Gov. Sam Brownback and Attorney General Schmidt, increases services for human trafficking victims and strengthens support for enforcement of the law. It also directs the attorney general's office to coordinate the Kansas anti-human trafficking efforts, including training and educational outreach. Schmidt has reorganized his office to establish an anti-human trafficking unit to guide implementation of the new law and has hired former State Rep. Pat Colloton, who was chair of the House of Representatives Corrections and Juvenile Justice Committee, to lead the effort.

Polaris Project, based in Washington, D.C., describes itself as a leading organization in the global fight against human trafficking and modern-day slavery. Named after the North Star "Polaris" that guided slaves to freedom along the Underground Railroad, Polaris Project is transforming the way that individuals and communities respond to human trafficking, in the U.S. and globally, in part by pushing for stronger federal and state anti-human trafficking laws. Polaris also staffs the National Human Trafficking Hotline that can connect victims to local authorities and victims.

The new annual report can be found at www.polarisproject.org.

The Lord Plans to Prosper Not Harm You

Weekly Devotional
by David Bilderback

In the letter to the Hebrews chapter 11 the writer chronicles the faithful lives of several Old Testament saints. Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses and others are commended for the faithful lives they lived. In 11:1-2 we read, "Now faith is being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see. This is what the ancients were commended for."

We read concerning these people that, "All these people were still living by faith when they died. They did not receive the things that they were promised they only saw them and welcomed them from a distance." (Hebrews 11:3) Each of these people were tasked by God to fulfill an assignment. Each died without seeing the fruits of their efforts. Abraham for instance never owned any land except the cave of Machpelah where he buried his wife Sarah. Moses never set foot in the promised land he only saw it from afar. So what drove these people?

What enabled them to remain faithful to the end without reward? In Heb. 11:13b, 14 we read, "And they admitted they were aliens and strangers on earth. People who say such things show that they are looking for a country of their own." Each of these people when they came into God's employment left everything behind. They became aliens and strangers on earth. There is a big difference in being a stranger in a land limited by your own power and being a stranger in a land with the power of God within your grasp and all you have to do to utilize it is follow the leading God shows you.

Abraham left his country because God told him to, "Go to the land I will show you." Abraham was living in Ur of the Chaldean's and was very prosperous at the time. God told Moses, "I am sending you to Pharaoh to bring my people the Israelites out of Egypt." Moses was on the far side of the desert at the time. God does not call someone to allow them to fail. In Jeremiah 29:11 we read, "For I know the plans I have for you, declares the LORD, plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future."

When one understands what God's plan is and accepts it by faith one begins to look for "A better country- a heavenly one."

David Bilderback: A Ministry on the Holiness of God.

'Insurance needs' should be on your students' college checklist

TOPEKA, Kan. —Don't forget "insurance needs" when checking off items your college students should have to make their year successful, said Sandy Praeger, Commissioner of Insurance.

"College students across Kansas soon are heading back to their schools," Commissioner Praeger said. "But in the rush to get there, students and parents shouldn't forget to review their insurance coverage needs."

The Commissioner, the Kansas Insurance Department (KID) and the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) have put together the following insurance tips for Kansas college students and parents.

Health Insurance
Nearly all young adults up to age 26 can now stay on their parents' health insurance plans because of federal legislation. That provision is not affected by marital status, financial dependency, enrollment in school, or location.

At school, students should have copies of their insurance cards and know how to seek medical treatment, the Commissioner advises.

"If the student is insured through a network of medical providers, check to see if he/she will be in or out of the provider network service area while at school," Commissioner Praeger said. "That will make a difference in how much you or your student will have to pay for out-of-pocket charges."

Another coverage option is a student health insurance plan purchased through the college, although not all schools offer these limited plans.

"In general, these plans have more limited benefits and coverages than traditional health insurance plans," Commissioner Praeger said. "Many of these policies don't offer routine examination coverage or cover injuries sustained while under the influence of alcohol or drugs. This might also be true of a parents' group plan."

Renters Insurance
Parents should check with their insurance agents to determine whether their family homeowners policies extend to children away at school. If not, they could consider a renters policy for their students.

"Many renters mistakenly believe that a landlord's insurance policy on an apartment will protect them in case of a disaster," Commissioner Praeger said. "A landlord's policy doesn't cover a renter's personal belongings. Also, make sure to take photos or video of the possessions, and store an inventory list in a secure location."

To print an easy-to-use home inventory checklist and get more tips about disaster preparedness, visit www.ksinsurance.org and click on "Publications" under the Quick Links button at the top right of the home page. Smart phone users can do an electronic inventory by using the myHOMEScr.APP book application from the NAIC.

Before packing a student's belongings into a car or rental trailer, make sure to talk with your insurance agent about whether the contents are insured. Ask if your homeowners insurance policy will cover the belongings in the student's car or rental trailer before he/she gets to campus.

Auto Insurance

If a student is taking a car to school, check with your local agent about the current vehicle insurance policy. Ask about the rates for the college's city and state before deciding whether to keep the student's car on the family's auto policy.

Identity Theft

"Identity theft insurance is limited. It can't protect parents or students from becoming victims of identity theft, and it doesn't cover your direct financial losses," Commissioner Praeger said. "It does give coverage for the cost of reclaiming you or your student's financial identity — such as the costs of making phone calls, making copies, mailing documents, taking time off from work without pay (lost wages) and hiring an attorney."

Parents should check first to see if their homeowners policies include identity theft insurance while students are away from home. If a student is renting an apartment, ask if his/her renters insurance covers identity theft, or if that could be added to the policy.
