Watch out for deer

Fall rut brings deer, reminders to drive cautiously in area

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — There are some predictable staples that come with fall in Kansas: the cool, crisp air; the trick-or-treaters; the harvest of fall crops.

And deer. Specifically, deer that dart out onto the open roads and highways, looking for love but often on a collision course with motorists.

But if you keep a few safety precautions in mind, you can minimize the chance of car-deer accidents, Anderson County's Natural Resource Officer Josh DeHoux said.

"The breeding season is starting, so the does are being chased around or pushed around by the bucks," DeHoux said. "They're not concerned about roads. They're just looking for a place to run."

Although the local deer population took a hit from two years of drought in 2011 and 2012, good weather and growing conditions this year have helped deer rebound to near-normal population levels, DeHoux said. And in this part of Kansas, there are a lot of deer.

"Car-deer accidents are going up right now. I've heard of a lot in the past month," DeHoux said.

A review of accidents reported to the Anderson County Sheriff's Department also shows a sharp increase in car-deer wrecks over the past month, compared to previous months. The Kansas Department of Transportation reports that 15 percent, or 8,695, of all traffic crashes in Kansas in 2012 involved deer. Two people were killed and 322 were injured in these crashes.

Motorists should be especially cautious about deer near timberlines around sunrise and sunset. But after dark, deer can be anywhere, DeHoux warns.

Greeley Cafe could get new life after fire

Group works to bring building back, lease business eventually

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GREELEY — A group of Greeley investors has begun the initial stages of renovating a fire-ravaged building on the road to reopening the historic Greeley Café.

The timeline for reopening the restaurant is not yet known, Pat Rockers, one of about a half dozen people involved in the project, said.

The building, formerly owned by Stephanie Katzer and now owned by Mike Rockers, was heavily damaged by fire in August of 2012 and has been closed since. The café had been operated by Katzer and local historians believe the business had been in operation for about 140 years until its closing. Fire investigators tracked the origin of the fire to a trash can inside the restaurant. A birthday party was held the night before and a smoldering candle might have been thrown away with other trash from the clean up.

Local historian Dorothy Lickteig said the fire-damaged side of the building dates to 1870 and is one of several buildings constructed over a 20-year period by a team of local stone masons and developers. The structure served under a number of different owners and proprietors as a drugstore and café and later a gift shop and has been continuously occupied for more than a century as one of the mainstays of the Greeley business community. The west building was added into the operation in the mid-1970s. The history may make the Greeley Café the second oldest continuously operating business in the county, behind The Anderson County Review, whose roots date to 1865. Lickteig said she could find no reference in

County reviews policy on indigent funerals

Recent case opens questions on who pays for services

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Anderson County commissioners are taking another look at county policies on indigent funerals, after a request from a local funeral home to pay for services for a woman who died without close family and no means to pay for funeral arrangements.

Reuben Feuerborn with Feuerborn Funeral Home asked county commissioners how to handle arrangements for a local woman who died recently at St.

Luke's Hospital. Hospital officials contacted Feuerborn to retrieve her remains. Feuerborn recommended cremation, but did not know who would be responsible for the ashes or payment for the process. A federal program the previously provided indigent funeral services is no longer available, and the cost likely will fall to the state or county.

Feuerborn said the expenses of an indigent funeral could exceed thousands of dollars, depending on whether the deceased is cremated or buried and whether services are held. He estimated cremation typically costs $2,800, and cost

County extension office waiting for word on consolidation request

Frontier District now considering request from local office

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Local officials are waiting to hear if their request to join a multi-county Kansas State University extension district will be approved or denied.

Anderson County commissioners gave approval recently for a request to join the Frontier District, a consolidated Extension district formed in 2010 by departments in Osage and Franklin counties. But the county's request to join the district must be approved by leaders of the Frontier District, which has asked for at least a month or more to consider whether they want to expand to three counties. The Frontier District's board typically meets once a month at the end of the month.

If Frontier approves the request, Anderson County could join the district July 1. By becoming part of the consolidated district, Anderson County could benefit in several ways. The county would have access to more resources because the number of extension agents available would expand to seven. The county also could save money with tax benefits and a different type of funding system.

If the county joins the larger district, its current nine-member extension executive board and a 24-member council would become advisory committees without budgetary responsibilities. Four people from Anderson County would be elected to the district board to oversee management of district activities and budget.

If the request is approved, the county would be required to allow 60 days as a "protest period," during which time local residents could voice concerns about the change.

A representative of the Frontier District was not available for comment this week. Blocker said if Frontier rejects the request from Anderson County, current Extension programs would continue as they have in the past. She said it's

"They come out in the open, into cropland and pastures. They're not just around trees," he said.

If you can't avoid a collision and end up killing the deer, it's possible to obtain a salvage tag for the carcass. DeHoux said about half of motorists in deer-vehicle wrecks choose to take the carcass, but he warns that you must obtain the salvage tag before you attempt to move the carcass. It's illegal to move a deer without the tag; and even if you just want the antlers from a buck, you must take the entire animal.

Salvage tags are available from local sheriff's deputies, Kansas Highway Patrol officers or Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks officers like DeHoux.

"Taking the animal is especially encouraged instead of letting it sit on the side of the road," DeHoux said. "Most of us know a hunter or someone who can use the deer, even if we don't want it. Getting some use of the animal is better than letting it go to waste."

The Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks, Kansas Highway Patrol and Kansas Department of Transportation have compiled a list of tips that motorists should observe to avoid deer collisions:

- Be especially watchful at dawn and dusk when deer are particularly active;
- Watch for more than one deer, as they seldom travel alone;
- Reduce speed and be alert near wooded areas or green spaces such as parks or golf courses and near water sources such as streams or ponds;
- Don't swerve to avoid hitting a deer - the most serious accidents sometimes occur when motorists swerve and collide with another vehicle or run off the road and hit an obstacle;
- Heed deer crossing signs;
- Always wear a seat belt and use appropriate child safety seats; and
- Use bright lights and slow down whenever the reflective eyes of deer are spotted.

possible the county could revisit the issue in later years, either with Frontier or with a district now forming between Miami and Linn counties. Counties can join a district only in July.

The consolidation of extension districts has become a trend since the 1990s as counties have sought to save money and of cremation with services is $3,100. He asked commissioners for guidance how to handle such situations in the future.

Commissioners discussed who is responsible for determining if a person is indigent and if the estate or family is unable to pay for funeral services. County counselor James Campbell said the commissioners should set guidelines for future indigent funeral services. Campbell said ashes could be held for 60 days and then buried or returned to family members, if family members could be located. Unclaimed cremations could become a problem, Campbell said. Indigent services for military veterans can be taken to Fort Scott, and those costs likely would not fall to the county, Campbell said.

In regard to the recent case, county commissioners approved paying for Feuerborn's expenses to recover the remains at $550 plus mileage, and agreed to hold the ashes unless the woman's family agreed to pick them up. It was not immediately known what the county would do with the ashes if the family did not claim them.

Real journalism and real bad journalism

Anyone who doubted the impact that us archaic, washed-up, forgotten newspapers still have, even in these days of social media and the Internet and a generally intellectually disengaged popular culture, probably missed what may be the best illustration of the value of solid newspaper journalism that I've seen since the beginning of the most recent "decline" of newspapers over the last half dozen years or so.

I say most recent decline because the fall of newspapers has been foretold for the past 100 years – soon-to-be vanquished in each era first by radio in the 1920s, then by television in the 1950s, now by the Internet in the 2000s. But while the 30 and under set preoccupies itself with reality TV and photos of what they had for breakfast posted on Facebook, newspapers are still on the job – and people who care about real information are still reading them.

Nowhere was that more apparent than last week when the Kansas City Star ran a Sunday feature on a dead-in-the-water rape case from 2012 in Maryville, Mo., involving a 14 year-old girl assaulted by a 17 year-old high school football player. Charges against the attacker were later dropped even though he admitted having sex with the minor (the age of sexual consent in Missouri is 17, 16 in Kansas). The exhaustive newspaper story (confirmed by copies of court documents held by the mother of the victim, since court actions involving minors are sealed in Missouri) went national in hours thanks to the worldwide if often fickle bullhorn of the Internet.

Bear in mind that there really are no heroes in the story. The victim and her 13 year-old buddy sneaked out of her widowed mom's house to go partying with the would-be attacker and his friends the night of the incident and got willfully, pathetically drunk and had sex with the young men. It is the law and their ages, not their behavior, which makes them victims. The prosecutor last week announced the investigation would be reopened and who knows what the outcome will be. But the fact remains that the law, and justice, in the case has not been served.

Reporter Dugan Arnett's story in the Star lit the firestorm that the story has become across the country. It did so with facts and an unvarnished retelling of the tale, its outcome and the unfinished business that now defines it. It is an example of the veracity and in-depth nature that came to define our industry long ago and which continues to outdistance the digital bit and soundbyte nature of other media. Most of what you read on the Internet actually comes from print publication websites anyway, and without the core or good reporting it doesn't matter how big a bullhorn the Internet provides. We congratulate Arnett and the Star on this fine piece of reporting.

And while I'm on my judgmental high-horse about the state of journalism, did anybody ever actually catch what was at the root of the governmental shutdown and debt limit crisis which ended last week? Did any of the breathless reporters with the perfect hair on television ever actually explain the root of the problems between the Snidely Whiplash Republicans in their quest to tie the virtuous Nell Fenwick Democrats to the railroad tracks?

I watched the whole charade pretty closely and I never saw it once, so I'll provide it here. And yes, it is an amazing amount of value for a mere 88¢ a week subscription price.

Here's the deal: In our nation right now we have separated into two camps with only a few stragglers in between. In one, the Democrats in their view are aghast that in this, the richest nation ever known to man, we still have people living in poverty and doing without regular meals and health care, without jobs, without education programs for kids who have trouble learning... on and on. Democrats believe that the wealth of our nation should be restructured so that the government can ensure we're all taken care of.

In the other camp are the Republicans, who for so many of the Bob Dole years championed another set of priorities but pretty much played along with the Democrats in the spending of money on pet projects, special programs, etc. – the only difference being that Republicans wanted government funding for their own set of favorites and tax breaks for

I was shocked at the article about the misbehaving boy on the bus. He was not following the rules and was told to stop. The bus driver did the right thing to pick him up and remove him from the situation. Come on parents, this kid should have been in trouble at home too for causing trouble on the bus. This is the root of our whiney, poor me society. This kid will probably cause more trouble in the future because he already knows daddy will come to his rescue. If you don't follow the rules and don't listen to your authority figures like bus drivers, teachers, etc., you're going to be in trouble. It's just a fact of life. Thank you.

Here's a bit of history for all the hand-wringers who pine for the good old days of bi-partisanship, defined as both parties agreeing to spend more of the money we don't have. When the Food Stamp giveaway was dreamed up in the mid-1960s, it was shepherded through the Congress by George McGovern and our own iconic Bob Dole, "working across the aisle." Now half the country is hooked on them. The USDA advertises them, and social service agencies recruit new applicants. They can't give them away fast enough. No thanks. When our two parties join hands, they're not leading us, they're coming after us.

Hey, people of the family of the 102 year-old man still out on the town, he pulled out in front of me and if I'd been driving on Park Road like some, I'd have got him. I'm glad we didn't connect and I'd been killed. I doubt my family would have sued. Some would, I'm sure. Then what would he do without his money?

Hi, I've been reading the comments about the school not having bus routes in town and it occurs to me that it was the awesome wisdom of the school board that put both our schools so far out of town in the first place. At least 100 years ago the school board had enough sense to build schools in town where a good portion of kids could walk to school instead of needing a ride. Nowadays you've got even fewer kids living out in the country, but no bus routes in town? From the south end of Garnett out to the new elementary school is nearly two miles. Is this our fault? I think not. You caused this problem, school board, you fix it.

I'd like to comment on two articles in your forum. The person saying people are crying about taking their kids across town, well Greeley's a lot smaller town and if you live clear out here on East Fourth and have to go to the high school that's almost a couple of miles and there's nowhere in Greeley that kids walk two miles to school. Ought to get your facts straight on that. Garnett's a lot bigger and it would help to have a bus service here. Also I agree about getting rid of the thieves, but its really none of his business about who's paying their bills.

Congratulations to the bus driver who solved the problem on the bus with the kid who was causing trouble. Sounds like he needed his little head peeled.

I have a suggestion for all of you people in business and others who are always being asked to donate to local school groups and organizations for drawing prizes and auctions and what not. If its a drawing or an auction or something, be sure to donate an item rather than cash. I suspect a lot of cash donations for our local charities end up being spent at Wally World for items and never do any local businesses any good. Thanks.

Welcome to Garnett. As you pull off of 169 we give all visitors a hearty welcome with a big chuckhole in our beautiful asphalt pavement just as we pull into the motel out east. What a welcome.

You know, the post office is going broke and there's not that many people that's buying stamps anymore, so they just figure, hey, we'll raise the price of stamps by 3 cents. It kind of reminds me of our rec center down here, it's losing its membership so like any good liberal they just decide we'll just raise the membership fee. Really makes a lot of sense. We're going to get a lot more customers that way. Thank you.

Why is it okay for people riding horses on the street don't have to clean up after their horses, but if you don't clean up after your dog you practically go to jail around here.

If any of you who are still a member of the Republican or Democratic party and think that your party is not part of the problem in Washington, and I say this as a friend, you are delusional.

The junior class haunted hospital was awesome. Well worth the $5 admittance fee. Keep it up guys. Great job, can't wait to go again.

The Obamacare rollout train wreck

Nancy Pelosi famously said that we had to pass Obamacare to find out what's in it. The then-House speaker erroneously assumed, evidently, that people would be able to get onto the government-run exchanges created by the law.

So far the law's implementation has been as ugly as its passage. The rollout of Obamacare has been so disastrous that even "Daily Show" host Jon Stewart was plainly mystified and unconvinced when Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius came on his show the other day to offer reassurances.

Judging by the haphazard beginning -- error messages have been the norm, and the federal website has had to be taken offline several times -- you'd guess that this was a back-burner project for the Obama administration, or the start date for the exchanges had been sprung on it a few weeks ago. Of course, it is the president's most cherished initiative, and his team has had more than three years to get the exchanges up and running.

Imagine the chaos if this were something the administration cared about less. The conservative trope used to be that Americans shouldn't want health care delivered by the people who run the post office. The new conservative trope could be that Americans shouldn't want health care delivered by the people who built HealthCare.gov.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

A young man named Chad Henderson achieved instant media celebrity by claiming to have signed up for Obamacare on the federal exchange. So desperate were reporters to find someone who had managed this unlikely feat that they flocked to him for interviews about his amazing experience -- except even he hadn't actually done it.

The website problems are the result, according to the administration, of overwhelming volume. Experts disagree. CBS quoted a sympathetic programmer named Luke Chung observing that "it wasn't designed well, it wasn't implemented well, and it looks like nobody tested it."

The Washington Post cited two allies of the administration who "said they approached White House officials this year to raise concerns that the federal exchange was not ready to launch. In both cases, Obama officials assured them there was no cause for alarm."

Presumably, the administration will eventually make its website work, since it doesn't involve radically new technology. The more fundamental question is whether the larger project is sustainable when the exchanges need young and healthy people to sign up, at the same time they will have to pay sharply more under Obamacare.

The San Jose (Calif.) Mercury News quoted one Cindy Vinson, an Obamacare supporter, who was disconcerted to learn that she will have to pay $1,800 more a year for an individual policy. "Of course, I want people to have health care," she said. "I just didn't realize I would be the one who was going to pay for it personally."

She might not have realized it because the president of the United States never mentions it. In all his speeches about Obamacare, he never quite gets around to the part about some premiums going up, which for people forced to pay more will probably be the most salient feature of the law.

But hey, what possibly could go wrong?

Robots of Destruction: The GOP created a monster

Have you seen the reports about the newly created "Bionic Man," actually a robot assembled with a variety of state-of-the-art artificial organs? They include mechanical kidneys and a heart, as well as ear and eye parts. Of course, there is no brain, which makes the story fascinating because they have re-created a member of the United States Congress (except, the machine has a heart).

The human cyborg's name might be Rep. Gerry Mander, elected from a district newly created by a GOP state legislature to provide a safe haven for the party by lumping together a population that reflects far-right thinking. Voters choose the candidate who they believe will go to Washington and do whatever it takes to stand up against abortion and for guns. What really unites this electorate is their divisive loathing of Barack Obama.

So the congressman doesn't have to worry about the nationwide scorn heaped upon him because he refuses to budge on positions that threaten the country's strength and standing in the world. All he has to concern himself with is the rigid hatred in his own "Mander" precinct back home. In fact, the only thing he has to be nervous about is being perceived as a traitor to the cause if he succumbs to the pressure to be reasonable. If that happened, the tea party and other zealots would turn on him. What the hard-liners giveth, the hard-liners taketh away.

So Gerry is one of a gang of militants who are unmovable, unswayed by the evidence that their positions could be ruinous. Their priority is sticking it to President Obama and, of course, getting re-elected.

They couldn't care less about the suffering they cause. If children go hungry, that's just tough. If the sick cannot get treatment, they're on their own. The manipulators are not willing to allow their puppets, like Congressman Mander, to pass laws that would regulate their most egregious behavior or require them to pay their fair share in taxes.

Suddenly, though, they realize that they might have created a monster. Mander and his other marauders have gotten uppity and refuse to listen as the big-money people who paid for their election tell them to back off. This paralysis is bad for business, so the wealthy actually are talking about looking for new patsies. If that happens, maybe those safe districts might not be so safe for the Manders anymore. The voters would have to choose between narrow economic interests and narrow-mindedness.

How sad this all is. The beautiful concepts outlined in our Constitution have been distorted. Remember that most of them were the product of compromise, which has been twisted into a pejorative. James Madison wrote: "You must enable the government to control the governed and in the next place, oblige it to control itself." Unfortunately, things are out of control. We've turned things over to those select mindless automatons whose programming is limited. Push a button, and they utter a sound bite. Another one will get them to try to destroy Obamacare. Consequences don't compute.

Congressman Gerry Mander's robotic adherence to the passions back home might make him safe in his district, but his actions make him a danger to America.

big business. There's a lot of extraneous nonsense spouted by both about the other like where the president was really born and that Republicans are racists, yada-yada. Forget about that, which makes up 75 percent of network TV government coverage, and stay with me here.

Among the Republicans and even some of the Democrats now are the conservatives, Tea Party followers, etc. They're pointing at the Office of Management and Budget reports and pie charts and financial accounting work and the reaction of the stock market to talk of the nation's credit downgrade due to our debt and so on, and they're saying "we cannot continue to spend money we do not have, because eventually our debt will make us insolvent, like someone who keeps maxing credit card after credit card." Not to mention that our kids will have to pay off all this debt through higher taxes, and with the feebleness of the U.S. economy right now they'll be lucky to find jobs and may not be able to pay taxes anyway.

That's the main reason Republicans despise the subsidized spending and forced insurance buys of Obamacare. U.S. spending deficits were out of control and a danger to the future of the nation even before the new law that tries to guarantee everyone in the country health care.

Compound this all with the fact that Americans were mad at Geroge Bush and elected Obama and gave control of the Senate and House to the Democrats in 2008, and that the Democrats pretty much rammed Obamacare down the throats of the Republicans. Then, when enough people in the country realized that wasn't what they wanted, they threw out a bunch of the Democrats in the 2010 elections and re-elected Republicans with the rallying cry of cutting all this crazy spending.

So there you have it: Democrats want to spend money taking care of everyone because they think it's the right thing to do. Republicans say doing so will ruin us. To me, it's a lot like the kid who wants to bring home the stray puppy, and dad says he doesn't need another mouth to feed.

Four Winds DAR discusses Honor Flights at meeting

Four Winds Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution met Oct. 3 with Louise Stites as hostess. The opening ritual was led by Regent Alice Walker and Chaplain Agnes Carr. It was followed by repeating the Pledge of Allegiance and the American's Creed.

Agnes Carr read the President General's message. Judy Carr gave the National Defense Report on the Honor Flights, which was most appropriate as the government had shut down which meant the World War II memorial was also closed, but the vets made sure that they did get to see it. Members then mentioned various men from the area who had been on Honor Flights. Lynn Firestone, who is working on her application papers, was introduced.

"Minute" reports on Constitution, Indians, DAR schools and conservation were given. The ballot election of the nominating committee was held with Ione selected as chairman and Louise and Juanita as members. They will report in November.

The SE District of the Kansas DAR will meet in Iola on Oct. 26. Four Winds chapter is a member of this district and normally has a very good turnout for it. More definite info will be phoned or e-mailed to members as it is before our next meeting.

The program was given by Louise and Alice about the two-day State Fall Meeting that they attended in Junction City. There were 18 committee booths with information and handouts about that committee's plans, all of which helps the chapter decide what projects they want and can do. Then Alice talked about the NDSAR Insignia ("pins") as some of the newer members had asked for the information.

The next chapter meeting will be Nov. 7 with Alice Hostess and Connie talking on "Explore Boston."

Daughters of the American Revolution is a non-political, not-for-profit organization of women ages 18 and up who can prove descent from a man or woman who gave service to the Patriot Cause during the Revolutionary War. That service may be either military or civil. Civil Service includes taking the Oath of Allegiance (which made one a definite traitor to England), serving on various committees such as safety, correspondence, etc., supplying the Patriots with clothes, food, equipment, horses, money, caring for the wounded, etc. For other information or membership, contact Ione Sweers or Juanita Kellerman in Garnett; Louise Stites in Centerville/Parker; or Alice Walker in Blue Mound.

Hyatt Social Club meets

Rose Mary Turner and Phyllis Callahan hosted a luncheon meeting for Hyatt Social Club on Sept. 12 at the Northside Café. Sixteen members and one guest attended. Members were all delighted that Ellen Stinnett was able to join. Everyone received a gift of daffodil or tulip bulbs. Dorothy Miller won a beautiful purple mum. Terry Cain guessed the mystery gift of a decanter filled with oil and peppers. Birthday gifts of dish towels were received by Joella Phares and Rose Mary Turner along with a yellow mum.

President Dorothy Miller reported that we will present a program for the Historical Society in May of 2014. The committee for that event is Dorothy, Janis Hightower and Hilda Lankard. Dorothy also shared the news that Lois Miller has become a resident at Golden Heights and Shirley Benjamin is having knee surgery in October.

Everyone shared their most fun or interesting place or event. Joella had a very funny story about meeting the Oak Ridge Boys. Guest Rose Dennison was invited to join and we were very happy when she agreed.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 06-29-2010 / Photo Submitted

Bulldog quarterback Preston Emperling gets tangled up in a Fort Scott defender during Friday night's district opener. Despite a handful of solid offensive plays AC's defense was unable to stop Fort Scott's drive and lost 48-6.

Vikings can't handle Wellsville

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND - As if the cold, wind and rain Friday night wasn't enough, Central Heights just couldn't maintain an effective offensive drive and lost 12-7 to Wellsville.

"We had two drives stall in the red zone in the second half with a penalty killing one and a costly interception stopping another late in the fourth period," said Central Heights coach Kent Schulte. "When you don't have a lot of speed it forced you to play almost flawless. We have done a pretty good job of that but we did not do a good enough job tonight."

Wellsville scored first in the second quarter on a 65-yard run, but Viking Bron Ridifer blocked the PAT. It took Central Heights seven minutes to drive the field next and score on a short run by Jacob Pryor which put the Vikes up by one.

It was the fourth period before Wellsville found the end zone again early in the fourth period, but the PAT kick failed. Central Heights needed a single touchdown to pick up the game-winning point but Wellsville's defense hung tough.

"Defensively we held them to less than 6 yards on 19 of 31 attempts, but those three big plays did us in, in the end," Schulte said. "Wellsville's special teams kept you bottled up and forced us to drive the field 75 yards or better most of the night."

The Vikings totaled 298 yards with 248 on the ground and 50 in the air. Wellsville had 279 yards, all rushing.

Pryor led the Vikes with 179 yards on 32 carries. Jordan Horstick completed 4 of 16 passing attempts for 50 yards with one interception.

AC struggles at invitational

GARNETT - Anderson County High School volleyball players struggled through a tough lineup of competition at the team's Saturday invitational tournament, managing two wins and three losses on the day.

AC bested Independence 25-18, 25-21 and Iola 25-20, 20-25, 25-19, but lost to Wellsville, 25-11, 25-23, Burlington 25-17, 25-21 and Fort Scott 27-25, 28-26. The record gave AC a 4th place finish overall.

"Our back row defense hurt us," said head coach Glenn Suderman. The tournament brought AC to 15-17 on the season.

MaKayla Kueser led AC servers on the day with 47/50. Reagan Jirak had 43 kills. Cassidy Lutz and Madison Martin had 18-15 blocks apiece. Jessica McCullar had a 93 percent setting percentage for the day.

AC drops to PV, beats OZ

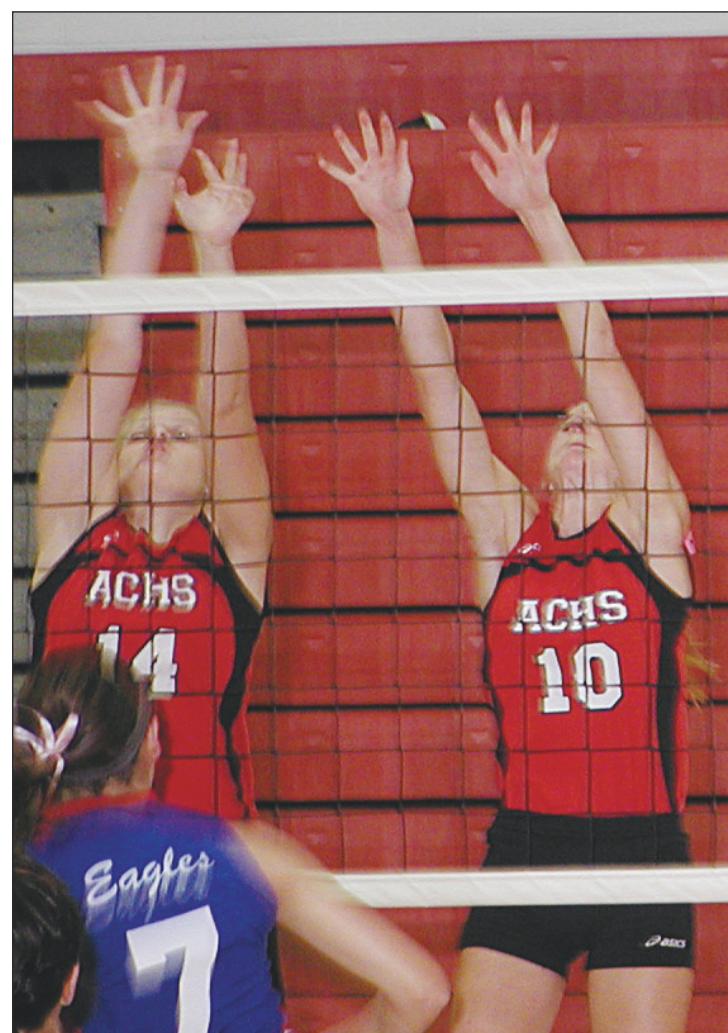

GARNETT - ACHS struggled through an early round with Prairie View but topped Osawatomie in local high school volleyball action last week.

AC managed only 9 points in the 25-9 opener against the Buffaloes and lost the followup 25-23, but dominated Oz 25-11, 25-23. Coach Glenn Suderman gave an unvarnished assessment of the matches.

"Prairie View beat us and we played our poorest match of the year," he said. "We had a good win over Oz though."

Junior Jessica McCullar topped the serving stats for AC for the day serving 21/21. Reagan Jirak was 26/28 in attacks. Makayla Kueser had 13 kills and 13 defensive digs on the day. Kinlee Jones set for 90 percent in the four matches.

The AC varsity record now stands at 13-14.

Garnett's Madison Martin and MaKayla Kueser move into block position during a play in the matchup against Wellsville Saturday in the AC Invitational. The Bulldogs went 2-3 on the day and now stand at 15-17 on the season.

Chetopa blasts Crest in final period

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

CHETOPA - It was a solid game of 8-man football Friday night until Chetopa put the hammer down in the fourth period to score 26 points and beat the Crest Lancers 42-14.

Chetopa scored in the first period but the Lancer defense held to give its own offense a scoring opportunity in the second period to make it an 8-8 tie at the half. Crest scored again but fluffed the 2-point conversion attempt, and Chetopa put another 8 on the board in the third as well. But the fourth period was all Chetopa and the Lancers didn't see the end zone again the whole period.

Individual stats and scoring were not available as of press-time. Crest is now 4-3 on the season and plays Southern Coffey County Friday at Colony.

2003: US 59/169 roundabout plans unveiled

Oct. 28, 2003

The Kansas Department of Transportation unveiled plans Thursday for a "roundabout at the intersection of US routes 59 and 169 south of Garnett but the city's chief economic development officer wants the state to hold off on the project until more is known about possible highway needs for a proposed ethanol plant. The roundabout, or circle interchange, would be constructed over the precise spot of the current intersection.

The Garnett City Commission denied a $380 claim from a man who said actions by city work crews pursuing the city's weed containment ordinance resulted in the destruction of wildflower beds. The City manager and public safety inspector had photographed the area which city crews later mowed, and saw no evidence that it was a flower bed.

Company plans a relocation move to Waverly which will transfer its 28 local jobs from this area to Coffey County. The news of the company's move was a disappointment to local economic development officials, who weeks ago made an offer of free land, free utility hook-up and trash service, a $50,000 cash grant for moving expense, and participation in a 10-year county tax abatement in order to persuade Idaho Timber to remain in Anderson County.

Oct. 31, 1983

There is something unusual about the house that used to be a stopping place for Frank and Jesse James, and it shows as soon as the visitor drives through the wooded area southwest of Bush City to the knoll on which the house stands. The only authentication that the house was once inhabited by Jesse James comes from his connection with the Talley boys, and heresay from historians and early day residents.

After 16 years of crime without being caught, the Jameses wanted to settle down without harassment. Jesse made a deal with John Rutledge, owner of the Rutledge place, a hideout for such men as the James, the Younger brothers and later the Daltons, to buy half of the ranch for a place to settle. Jesse already had plans for the first pre-fab house in Anderson County to go up on the Rutledge place. The house was in construction as a get-away-from-it-all hideout for James in a not-so-expected place. It is rumored that he William Clarke Quantrill, a leader of the pro-slave cause, set up a base station on an Anderson County farm then known as the Rutledge place. The farm was really set up more like a fort with a cannon up on the highest point of the place, which was already on a hill. It was the largest horse ranch in eastern Kansas. The house had lots of doors.

Last Saturday, the office equipment of the Garnett Journal was loaded onto a box car and shipped to Lane, where the present owner is establishing a newspaper. Some of the material was used by Dr. Geo. W. Cooper in getting out the first number of the Garnett Journal January 3, 1873, and has been part of the office equipment ever since. The Journal was published by Dr. Cooper until about 1887, when it was sold to Judge Schoonover, who in turn, sold it to C.E. Durall, now of Kincaid, who sold it back to Schoonover after a few months.

Beads found at work site

This picture shows a few of the beads that I have found at my present work site. Most Indian beads were made of shells, bone, pearls, metals, porcupine quills, seeds, teeth, wood and pottery. Beads were also made from stone, although not exclusively from the flint materials. Any small and pretty stone could be worked into use as a bead, although my research has shown that stone beads are rare when compared to beads of other materials. With the intrusion of the white man, glass beads were traded for by the Indian and thereby came into common usage as wampum, or Indian money, a medium of exchange. Beads can be found in almost any size or shape, but are usually circular, cylindrical or oval in form, almost always they are perforated for easier stringing.

Note three of these beads are spun on some type of hair or string. Horse hair and human hair were often used. The very flat, thin oval bead is made from a highly polished stone.

Will it be momentary pleasure or eternal life?

In 1st John 3:2 the Apostle John says. "The reason why the world does not know us is that it did not know him." From the time Jesus read from the scroll of the prophet Isaiah in his home town of Nazareth, concerning the fulfillment of that prophecy, through his trial and crucifixion the religious establishment and the majority of the general population failed to recognize him for who he was, God incarnate.

He was called a prophet or a great teacher but to most he was not recognized as the Messiah. Had Jesus delayed his coming until the current generation I doubt that most people perception would be any different than it was in the first century.

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

He could have had a large following no doubt. People love to follow successful and popular individuals. His miracles and deep teaching would have interested the mass media and intellectual thinkers. But in the end when he began to issue harsh rebukes and difficult teaching his following would dwindle just as it did in that day. On hearing it (the teaching) many of his disciples said, "This is hard teaching. Who can accept it?" (John 6:60)

These were disciples who took offense at Jesus words, refused to listen to Jesus explanations and were unwilling to accept the message of salvation by grace. This is a crucial point in this gospel. Many of the disciples together with the crowds rejected Christ in unbelief.

Jesus then asks the twelve a question. "Do you want to go away as well?" Jesus' question brings forth Peter's great confession. "Lord to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life and we have believed, and have come to know you are the Holy One of God." (John 7:68-69)

Peter's confession gets to the heart of the earlier statement, "The reason the world does not know us is that it did not know him." People do not want to believe and therefore they cannot worship God. That is the reason there is such a great chasm or gulf between God and man. God requires our worship. There is only one way to bridge this gulf and that is a through a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. The world can provide momentary pleasures but God can provide eternal life.

Lions Club learns about underground railroad

The Garnett Lions Club enjoyed an informative program by Todd Midfelt on the history of the underground railroad on Monday evening, Oct. 7.

The Lions Club is a community service organization. In recent years, the club built three shelter houses and sidewalks at the south lake, painted the bandstand, youth projects including Boys State, Youth Band Camp, scholarships and other local youth activities.

A major project is the annual Eye Clinic for everyone, and they check yes including preschoolers, kindergartners, in Garnett and Greeley schools.

The club raises money with their annual Chili and Soup Supper. This year's event is Oct. 22 at the United Methodist Church basement. Serving begins at 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tickets are available from any member and at the door. Other fundraisers are food booths at Square Fair in May, Anderson County Fair and two go-kart race events.

Anyone interested in joining an active Lions Club can call (785) 448-6118 or 448-6366, or come to the VFW Hall on the first and third Monday of each month. Dinner is at 6 p.m. followed by a short program and business meeting.

Durst helps with efforts in leukemia research

HOUSTON - A Dallas man with ties to Anderson County is part of a Texas law firm that raised more than $100,000 for the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society (LLS) last year, earning the company the qualification of "Alliance Partner" with the opportunity to align itself with a specific research program.

Baker Botts lawyers and staff raised more than $100,000 for LLS in 2012 and recently learned their efforts would go to support a research project aimed at trying to develop a new treatment for children with leukemia.

After reviewing a list of ongoing LLS-supported research, Baker Botts became a partner with Dr. Scott Armstrong at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. Dr. Armstrong, a pediatric oncologist specializing in the treatment of children with leukemia, is currently engaged in studying MML fusion genes in leukemogenesis in hopes of developing new therapies that are more effective and less toxic in battling cancer.

Baker Botts' Dallas partner Tim Durst is chairman of the national Board of Directors of the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society (LLS). His term as LLS board chair began July 1, 2012. Durst has served several capacities with LLS, beginning in 1999 during his son's successful treatment for leukemia. His son, Jacob, was diagnosed at age 2 with leukemia. He is now a freshman in college and they believe he is cured.

Durst is the son of Clyde and Holly Durst, formerly longtime residents of Welda.

To the residents of Garnett, thank you for the last 40 plus years. I recently retired from the city as the Utilities Coordinator. Obviously as with any job there are ups and downs; however it has been my pleasure to work at a job that kept me close to home, provided well for my family and helped keep a city going that I have always been proud of. It's not common to have a town with the capability of providing all services - gas, water, electric, sewer, trash, etc. We have that. As residents when we work together, we can only get better. Thank you again.

One ticket per booth; free tickets are given if you bring canned goods, labels from Best Choice products, box top for education points or a used printer cartridge. A soup supper will be served for a donation. Costumes are not required, but if you prefer to wear a costume, please keep it friendly. The community is invited to participate.

Donations/proceeds will go to the mission's work that the children's church has been supporting. This is not a church fundraiser. It is a children's fundraiser exclusively for mission work. In the event of inclement weather, the event will be held in the city hall community room. A great time for all and the community is invited to be involved.

Death

Wanda Billingsley (Reiter), 91, passed away Oct. 11. She was born in rural Colony to Samuel and Cynthia (Pittsenburger) Stauffer. She married Frank Reiter in 1939. Their children were Doris Fugitt, Humboldt, Kenneth and wife Kay Reiter, Waynesville, MO, Howard and wife Connie Reiter, Kincaid, eight grandchildren-Marilyn, Kenny, Pamela, Karl, Keith, Gary, Gilbert and Angela, and 16 great grandchildren. She could always tell you each one's birthday.

She married Al Billingsley in 1996 and moved to Baxter Springs, MO then to Joplin, MO. She enjoyed her extended family of stepchildren, grands and great grands. Also surviving is a sister, Mable Othick, Ottawa, KS and a host of nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death

by Mrs. Morris Luedke

by her parents, a sister Pauline Swisher and a grandson David Lee Reiter. Memorial services were held in Joplin at the Iron Gates Christian Church, Oct. 13.

Fire Dept.

Is your name on the list for a smoke detector? The Colony firemen are handing them out to those in need of one. They have plenty on hand. You may phone the city office 620-852-3530 to get your name on the list. Almost two-thirds (62%) of reported home fire deaths resulted from fires in homes with no smoke alarms or no working smoke alarms. Working smoke alarms cut the risk of dying in half in reported home fires.

Recently Scott Hendrix, KeWade Seabolt, Butch Lytle and Paula Decker were at Crest School for a fire prevention program. They demonstrated equipment and spoke of fire education to the elementary students.

Code Red

Winter storm warnings are now available for all Anderson County residents. Weather warnings are provided through CodeRED Weather Warning, a service of Emergency Communications Network (ECN). To receive an alert for a winter storm warning, residents should log on to the Anderson County website at www.andersoncountyks.org and enter both an email address and a cell phone number or contact the office of emergency management at 785-448-6797. Residents may also select to receive severe thunderstorm, flash flood and tornado warnings through telephone calls to their homes and businesses, email and text messages to their cell phones. All residents are urged to subscribe to CodeRED system. To receive winter storm warnings is an added bonus for all residents, which will allow them extra time to prepare if a storm were to impact our area.

History Items

Oct. 25, 1982-A new water tower, new water lines and a community water building are part of a $1.2 million project underway in Colony. Colony's water system will eventually be hooked up to a water treatment plant eight miles south of Colony. The project was necessitated by a combination of failing water lines and an inadequate supply of water from Deer Creek, which dries up every three years. The new system will draw water from the Neosho River once the new treatment plant is completed.

Oct. 3, 1983-A different type of water started trickling from faucets in Colony last week. The water was the same H2O that comes from most other faucets, and tasted the same, but is from a different source, the Neosho River. This water project was completed through a loan and grant and the new system was put to the test last Wednesday.
