Man dies in rollover wreck

Williamsburg man's truck left roadway, flipped several times

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A Williamsburg man was killed last week when his vehicle left the road and flipped several times on a road between Westphalia and Garnett.

Gary Kettler, 58, died Wednesday, Jan. 15, on 1600 Road near Finney Road, according to a report from the Kansas Highway Patrol. He apparently lost control of his 2002 Chevrolet Silverado pickup, went left of center and overcorrected. The vehicle entered the ditch, rolled multiple times, and came to rest on the driver's side of the vehicle. The wreck was discovered at about 11:42 a.m. Kettler was alone in the truck and no other vehicles were involved.

Funeral services will be 10 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 22, at the Faith Lutheran Church in Ottawa.

GARNETT — A $500 reward is available to someone who can provide information leading to an arrest and conviction of the person who vandalized a county sheriff's patrol car last week.

Anderson County Sheriff Vern Valentine announced Friday, Jan. 17, the department is offering the reward after someone took a key or other sharp object to the side of a

At least 14 carcasses dumped in creek

Dumping is littering and illegal, game warden says

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT— The improper disposal of deer carcasses gives hunters a bad name, the county's game warden said last week.

At least 14 deer carcasses were dumped off the side of the Fourth Street bridge onto a frozen Cedar Creek west of Garnett last week. Although it looks as though the animals were killed legally and not victims of poaching, the action still is considered littering, said Joshua DeHoux, Anderson County's natural resource officer for the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks.

"It's not a good way to get rid of that stuff," DeHoux said.

Disposal of deer carcasses often is challenging for hunters, DeHoux said. Hunters generally remove meat for consumption, and on bucks they often remove the antlers, head or head and shoulders for trophy mounting. "You're left with bones and hide, and that's what people have a difficult time knowing what to do with," DeHoux said. "Some landowners want you to bury it. Some want to put it in an area no one uses. Some use it for coyote bait."

But dumping deer carcasses on someone's land without permission is littering — and it's a crime, DeHoux said. Dumping carcasses in a creek or river is especially a bad idea, he said.

Aunt sentenced to 5 years for fatal overdose

Mom also faces federal drug charges related to man's 2011 death

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, KAN. — An Edgerton woman will serve five years in federal prison for her role in giving a fatal cocktail of drugs to a young Garnett man in July 2011, while related charges against his mother are still being heard in federal court.

Stacy Ashley, 35, was sentenced January 15 to five years in federal prison and three years of post-release supervision as part of a plea deal on a federal charge of distribution of oxymorphone. Court documents show she gave drugs to her nephew, Joshua Auclair, 20, which led to his death from an overdose in Garnett on July 31, 2011.

Auclair's mother, Tammy Redel, 40, also is facing federal drug charges. Court records show she attempted to enter a similar plea agreement but the court rejected her plea in September. Redel said she did not intend to withdraw her plea, court records show. According to Redel's plea, she knowingly distributed substances containing morphine, substances containing oxycodone, substances containing alprazolam (Xanax) and substances containing methamphetamine.

Joshua Auclair had struggled with drug addiction for years, a fact well-known by his family and friends, according to federal court records. On July 29, 2011, Auclair and his girlfriend, Tina Prater of Garnett, picked up his mother, Redel, to spend the weekend with them. Auclair and Redel smoked

Election deadline nears; Blackie files to keep position

Deadline to file is noon today; Blackie so far unopposed in race

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — With just hours left to file for election to serve as a Garnett city commissioner, only incumbent Gordon Blackie so far has filed for the position.

The deadline to file for election is noon today at Garnett City Hall. The election will be Tuesday, April 1.

Blackie recently filed to run for re-election to the seat, to which he was appointed about a year ago after previous commissioner Dan Morgan moved to another state. Soon after taking office, Blackie initiated a new tradition of prayer to be said at the start of commission meetings, a request to which his fellow commissioners agreed. Blackie is a local electrical contractor and aircraft pilot active in Midwest MissionAir, a Christian organization that provides emergency air transportation for medical need and various relief work.

The commission consists of three members. Serving with Blackie are Preston Peine and Greg Gwin.

March 24 is tentative date for tax sale

County counselor says long-delayed sale will happen in March

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A tentative date for the long, long, long awaited delinquent property tax sale has been announced.

Anderson County Counselor James Campbell told commissioners last week he has scheduled March 24 as the date for the tax sale. The date is not yet official, but Campbell told commissioners he set it for March 24 because he has to attend a trial that could take up to seven weeks. Campbell said he should be able to attend the sale if it is held during the last full week of March, because he will not need to be in court and would like to be present during the sale.

County officials have been organizing a delinquent property tax sale after years of delays, hoping to recoup some of the $310,000 or so owed in past due taxes. The last delinquent property tax sale was May 2004, although the county had a delinquent mineral rights sale in May 2010.

The county published its official list of delinquent properties this fall, giving owners notice they had until Oct. 17, 2013, to pay up or have the property put on the auction block. At the time, 56 properties were eligible. Some owners have paid their delinquent bills since that time, removing their property from the chopping block and it was not immediately known exactly how many properties will be offered for sale.

Tax sales allow the government to recoup unpaid personal property taxes. Even if the property is sold for less than the amount of taxes owed, the county will recoup some of the money and the transfer of ownership is expected to at least bring the properties back onto the county's tax rolls. Bids for properties at the next sale will start at $20 to cover filing fees. County Treasurer Dena McDaniel previously said property owners benefited from an meth, and Redel gave her son 20 oxycodone, 20 morphine and 4 Xanax pills on credit so that Auclair could sell them, Redel admitted to the court. She said her son was trying to save money to move to a new apartment.

The next day, Auclair traded morphine and oxycodone to his aunt, Ashley, for oxymorphone (Opana). Ashley also gave him more oxymorphone and amphetamine on credit. Later that day, Auclair crushed up several pills and snorted them. Auclair drifted in and out of consciousness that evening while other drug users were at his residence, drinking, playing pool and partying, court records said. Prater and Redel, who had both ingested drugs that evening, according to court records, checked on him several times but did not seek medical help. Auclair later died of an accidental overdose.

The minimum charge for a conviction on the charges facing the women is 20 years to life in federal prison, but in taking a plea deal the women could obtain a lesser sentence. It was not clear when the next court hearing would be for Redel.

The court recommended Ashley be housed in the Federal

On land, scavenger animals will consume the remains. Even the bones will be consumed by squirrels who need the mineral content.

But in the water, the carcass will rot and fish won't consume the remains.

The deer dumped from Fourth Street Bridge landed on top of about an inch or so of ice on Cedar Creek. DeHoux counted at least 14 carcasses, but said more may have broken through the ice and descended to the bottom of the creek. The area is near a pumping station that provides water to the City of Garnett, but DeHoux said the carcasses do not present a health hazard. He said it appears many people dump trash and other unwanted items in the area; he saw a Christmas tree, a bag of garbage and empty ice cream buckets in the area as well as the deer carcasses.

Landowners on each side of the creek own up the middle of the creek, and dumping anything in the creek without permission is littering, DeHoux said. The government has an easement to the creek, similar to the ownership of a road.

DeHoux said he usually sees one or two instances of people illegally dumping deer carcasses each year, but this incident was unusual because there were so many carcasses involved. He hopes people will think about the impact of their actions, as well as the legal implications if they are caught.

"I would like to see people get rid of deer ethically," DeHoux said. "It paints good hunters in a bad light."

white sheriff's patrol vehicle while it was parked on West Seventh Avenue in Garnett. The vandalism caused $1,245 worth of damage and is considered a felony crime, Valentine said.

A conviction of felony damage to property, in which the damage caused is more than $1,000, could result in a prison sentence, losing the right to vote and losing the right to keep firearms, among other penalties, Valentine said.

"(Whether) you're mad at the individual officer or at law enforcement in general, when you cause damage to local government property everyone pays the price and it is your, and/or your parents, taxpayers' money that takes care of the repairs," Valentine said.

During the 2004 tax sale, 18

Lessons from KU's Taj Mahal

How ironic is it that, as U.S. college campuses and the rest of the "hip" world embrace the nouveau-socialism of the 20-teens, the only folks left out there with any clout in hipdom who seem to understand capitalism are the college athletic programs building awesome palaces for their athletes.

Word broke last week that KU would build a $17.5 million privately-funded, premium apartment complex for 32 Jayhawk men's and women's basketball team members and 34 other students who get lucky in the KU residence signup system. This follows other collegiate Taj Mahals built for college athletes at other schools across the country in which athletes are treated to sweet digs, leather recliners, in-complex movie theaters and other luxuries with the aim, of course, of helping to recruit top talent.

Meanwhile, faculty teaching staffs at just about every university across the country continue their ever-familiar refrain that funds for academic instruction are stagnating or eroding. It's hard for them to be all excited about new luxury college housing for Bill Self's basketball players when the TA in the geology department can't get gas money to take his class on a field trip to Peine's Mound.

Listen to the media coverage generated regionally about the KU plan and it's a story we've all heard before: Athletics vs. academics.

But there is of course the fact that KU athletics, spurred by its men's basketball reputation for greatness, generated $92 million in revenues last year. All the major college conferences, in fact, are pulling in major TV sponsorship contracts, and as a Kansas City Star article recently pointed out, if you're not going to pay the athletes involved in the teams, that money has to go somewhere.

Luxury housing for athletes is the latest battlefield in competitive collegiate recruiting, and if you don't think it's about capitalism and getting the best possible deal for both athletes and universities, you're kidding yourself.

That's what sets up the contrast between the different sides of campus. On one side, a money-driven, performance-dependent culture of athletics where people keep score and your team's win-loss record at the end of the season matters regardless of the impact on players' or coaches' "self esteem." When you can no longer score points, you're replaced by someone who can – pretty much like the world of U.S. private business used to be before the lawyers and the government took it over.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

Then on the other side of campus is the academic culture full mainly of faculty who've made their careers within the academic system – embracing liberal ideas and teaching students that it's process, not performance, that really matters. Conservatives and capitalists are always demonic, environmentally destructive and wrong, unless they're hiring you after graduation. Socialism – the redistribution of wealth and benefits earned by one person and awarded to someone who didn't earn them – that's been the political tilt of college campuses for decades, culminating with the election of President Obama, who openly proclaimed his socialist leanings as a candidate.

KU's was the campus, remember, where a journalism teacher (and geez, we know about journalists) wished death on the children of NRA members last September. Not exactly a showpiece for an objective learning environment.

So it may be that college athletics and waitress and food delivery jobs – where you make tips for extra hustle – are the last bastions of capitalism left on the nation's college campuses. If that's the last place where young minds can learn how to produce something instead of the expectation of the right to consume what others produce – then a privately-funded Taj Mahal for them to live in should be worth it.

How ridiculous! I can't believe the cheerleaders were denied doing a routine they learned at camp. First of all, the school should have just let them do it. That's a no brainer, unless we are all about squelching school spirit and against using the skills the girls learn at camp. Secondly it astounds me that it had to go the school board and then they denied it too. Really? Let's put on our big boy pants people.

Hey jackbooted Nazi Phone Forum writer, it might behoove you to know when the cops put together a case they pass it along to your county attorney. It is your county attorney who decides whether or not charges should be filed and what those charges should be. You might do well to remember that and if you have an issue with the situation, well then you should just trot your ignorant (deleted) up the steps to the county attorney's office in the courthouse and when he's done working behind his $10,000 desk maybe he will have time to speak to you.

Today I want to take the time to thank each of you, first people there, first responders, EMTs who all helped me in my accident on 1600 Road Jan. 6. Honestly, I do not know what all happened or took place. If I said or did anything to hurt you then please forgive me. Again, I want to thank each of you for all your help, support and encouragement. God bless you all.

Yeah, good job there Teamsters, put old YRC out of business. Get their credit rating downgraded because you won't make a deal with them to keep the company in business. Typical union, going to price yourself right out of a job. Thank you.

USD 365 School Board, the reason GES's enrollment continues to rise is because you are allowing students to be based in from Greeley and Westphalia. Why? If we are going to keep these outlying schools open, set up some boundaries. Start to distribute these kids throughout your district. Have them go to the schools they live by and quit paying to bus them all over creation. My child goes to GES. He has over 20 in his class and when he goes to PE, music, library and computer he has over 30 because a class and a half are combined. They don't even have enough computers for everyone. How safe can that PE class be with over 30 students? Wake up school board. Stop counting our kids as a head count and a dollar sign. Start to think of their education.

ECKAN gives thanks for Christmas help

ECKAN (East Central Kansas Economic Corporation) and the Spirit of Christmas Committee would like to thank everyone who participated in the 2013 Spirit of Christmas.

This year 114 households applied for and received Christmas assistance. That number amounted to 409 individuals, of which 209 were children. There were 37 adoptions, 21 full adoptions (food and presents) and 16 partial adoptions (presents only). All families received a sack of groceries either through ECKAN or through adoption. Many, many toys were given by individuals, families, businesses, and clubs and organizations and the number was matched by the Marine Corp Toys for Tots. There was $3,623.84 raised specifically for the Spirit of Christmas.

Anderson Countians you should be proud. You recognized a need and stepped up to offer your assistance. It matters not what help you provided or who you are, what matters is the time, effort and talents you were willing to share. Thank you again for sharing the blessings of the Lord this Christmas season.

We are wishing you a happy and healthy New Year.

Obama's Insincere War, via Robert Gates

Robert Gates has roiled the Beltway with perhaps the least surprising bombshell ever to appear in a tell-all Washington memoir.

Did anyone believe that President Barack Obama was passionately committed to the Afghanistan War that he escalated at the same time he announced a withdrawal date?

If what Gates tells us isn't particularly new, it still packs a punch coming from such a highly placed, credible source. For Obama, Afghanistan is the insincere war. More than 1,500 troops have died there during his time in office -- almost three times as many as under George W. Bush -- yet by early 2011, the president had lost whatever faith he had in the war, according to Gates.

In the telling of his former secretary of defense, Obama violated what should be the psychological Powell Doctrine: If you don't believe in it, don't fight it.

John Kerry famously asked during the Vietnam War: How do you ask a man to be the last man to die for a mistake? Obama evidently has been asking men to die for what he considers a mistake for years now.

As reported in the press, Gates describes a dawning realization at a March 2011 meeting in the situation room. "As I sat there," he writes, "I thought: The president doesn't trust his commander, can't stand [Afghan leader Hamid] Karzai, doesn't believe in his own strategy and doesn't consider the war to be his. For him, it's all about getting out."

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

This is the war that the president and other Democrats had long hailed as "the good war." Candidate Obama made the first item in his proposed "comprehensive strategy" in the war on terror, "getting out of Iraq and on to the right battlefield in Afghanistan and Pakistan."

The president may have meant every word he said at the time, but his position also happens to have been politically convenient. It allowed him to promise a quick exit from one (very unpopular) war while still sounding tough on the other. He wasn't a stereotypical dove, but a nuanced, clear-eyed hawk.

Once in office, the rhetoric came due. By all accounts, the president felt trapped by his own advocacy. He and his team resented the military for asking for more troops than he really wanted to send. He escalated by about 50,000 all told, anyway, although with an uncertain trumpet and a highly ambivalent spirit.

If a president doesn't believe in a war, he is obviously less likely to see it through. The cost of liquidating our position in Iraq has been a resurgence of al-Qaida. If we pull out from Afghanistan right away, the Taliban will surely enjoy a similar windfall.

Obama has a remarkable ability to create critical distance between himself and almost anything. Here is a conflict that began with an invasion that he supported, that he consistently called for escalating and that he ordered tens of thousands of additional troops to go fight, yet he resisted taking ownership of it.

"I never doubted Obama's support for the troops," Gates writes, "only his support for their mission." Stranger words may never have been written about an American president.

Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

Hey GOPers, don't say anything stupid

To my knowledge, this memo has not been sent, but it should:

From: Top Republican Officials
To: Party 2014 Candidates
People:
Don't do or say anything stupid. That is all.

And from the same guy, a note to the GOP members of the House and Senate seeking re-election: A "do-nothing Congress" is a good thing.

Or as one of them, Rep. Charlie Dent, told The New York Times: "It's pretty clear to me in the House, we don't want to make ourselves the issue."

Unless they make themselves the issue by going crazy doing something like forcing the nation into humiliating default when the government's borrowing authority runs out by March, or taking other extremist tea-party-fueled positions or uttering Neanderthal comments on social issues that give the Democrats new ammunition, the R's have a good chance of taking control of both sides of the Capitol and turning the White House into a bunker.

Yes, this is an election year. All that happens on the Hill is nothing more than background music for a midterm congressional/pre-presidential campaign that will dominate everyone's agenda from now till

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

November and then beyond.

Certainly, the D's are going to try and goad the R's and back them into the corners of their harsh policies. We're getting an early taste of that with legislation to extend unemployment benefits to desperate Americans whose big sin is not finding a job for a long, long time. Add to that a push by the president and his party allies to raise the minimum wage to a slightly larger pittance and paint the opposition as heartless champions of the rich. A few of the top Republicans realize that as they dig in against any meaningful increase, they're on treacherous ground given the perception that they're the defenders of inequality in the United States.

Of course, it's not that the Republicans are just going into passive mode. They, too, are trying to exploit what they can paint as failures on the other side. From the start, they will do everything they can to keep Obamacare on the front burner, starting with their legislation that will attempt to exploit security weaknesses that aren't there. Obviously the strategy is to take advantage of the awful start of healthcare.gov and continue to bang the drum about shortcomings, real or imagined, as the Affordable Care Act lurches forward. The question is whether they'll overplay the issue.

That would be foolish, which is what party leaders are trying to avoid. Of course, that is easier said than done. Look at what's happening in New Jersey. The Democrats are having a field day. Suddenly, Gov. Chris Christie is completely tangled in a bizarre scandal, desperately trying to separate himself from the top aides who created those awful traffic jams on the George Washington Bridge, allegedly retaliation for not supporting Christie's re-election, aimed at Fort Lee's Democratic mayor.

Granted that mind-boggling episode is more about 2016 politics and Christie's presidential flirtations, but it just goes to show that moronic and hateful actions or comments are always lurking. Predicting this year's election? Now that would be stupid.

Parents can help keep kids safe online

As a parent who once had three middle school children of my own, I know parenting teenagers is not an easy job. However, social media has not made the job any easier. When it comes to social media, parents take different approaches to supervising their child and his/her internet use. Some parents monitor their child's social media accounts while some do not because they believe this shows a lack of trust in their child's decision making skills. Meanwhile, there are parents who do not know how to use social media and therefore cannot monitor their child's use even if they wanted to. Then there are parents who simply do not have the time to monitor their child's social media accounts. There are many different ways parents can monitor their child's social media accounts, such as using software which blocks, records, and alerts parents regarding the internet use of their child. Parents participate in monitoring because they love their child and want to protect him/her. One of the main concerns parents should have regarding social media revolves around the people their child communicates with online. I tell my driver's education students I don't worry about their driving skills, I worry about the people they are meeting on the road. The same holds true for internet usage. Facts parents need to understand regarding the Internet:

- Some sites require children to be 13 years of age to have an account. However, children set up accounts regardless of the age requirements by recording a false age or birthdate.
- Social media keeps children connected to friends and provides a vehicle for self-expression.
- Inappropriate picture, posts, and messages can result in damage to a child's reputation and can follow the child throughout his/her future.
- Children can "tag" their friends in pictures and posts which violates the friend's right to privacy.
- Children need to think before they post! Remind your child that everything they post can be seen by a vast amount of people.

- Take time to learn how the privacy settings work on your child's account.
- Let your child know anything they create or any type of communication can be cut, altered, pasted, and sent around the school or web.
- DON'T EVER POST THE CHILD'S LOCATION! It is not safe for teens to do this.

In the end, we as parents still have to step up and recognize that we need to be involved in our child's life. I deal with social media problems on a daily basis. I try to give good advice to our middle school students regarding social media. It basically comes down to monitoring their activities and stopping the behavior that is harmful or unhealthy for your child.

Crest boys roll over Marmaton Valley

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

Crest picked up their first win of 2014 with ease as they pounced on Marmaton Valley Wildcats early as they jumped out to a 15-0 lead before the Wildcats finally scored in the final minute of the first quarter.

The Lancers went on to lead 17-2 after the first and 32-12 at halftime. The second half wasn't any better for the Vikings as they once again managed just 12 more points as they scored 5 in the third quarter and 7 more in the fourth quarter. Crest led by 31 heading into the fourth quarter. The boys scored 16 points in the third quarter and added 11 more in the fourth to finish out the victory 59-24.

Hunter Frazell and Brock Ellis each scored 16 points to pace the way for the Lancers.

Crest boys lose first game after holidays

The Crest High boys fought hard in their first game back after the holiday break, but came up short losing 72-59 to the Northeast-Arma Vikings.

The Lancers played NE-Arma evenly three out of the four quarters. After being tied 14-14 after the first quarter the Vikings broke open a close game as they outscored the Lancers 19-8 to take a 33-22 lead into intermission. It was a lead that the Crest boys just weren't able to overcome.

Crest cut into the lead slightly in the third quarter as they outscored the Vikings 21-19, but the Vikings shut the door in the fourth as they put up 17 points to the Lancers 16.

Brock Ellis led the way for the Lancers with 21 points. Landon Stephens was the only other player in double digits for the boys as he notched 14 points.

Central Heights girls struggle in loss to Iola

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

The Central Height Vikings got off to a good start, but couldn't hold on in a disappointing 37-30 loss on the road.

The Vikings played very well in the first half as they jumped out to an 18-14 lead at halftime. The second half didn't go as planned though as Iola caught fire and Central Heights just couldn't put the ball in the hole enough to hold on. Iola outscored Central Heights 25-16 in the second half for the victory.

Leading the way for Central Heights was Kenzie Hayward with 10 points and Brianna Erhart with 9.

Central Heights boys edge AC

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

In a close battle, the Vikings squeaked out a good win over the Bulldogs 59-56.

The Vikings were up 14-9 following the first quarter, but the Bulldogs controlled the second quarter as they outscored Central Heights 22-12 to take a 31-26 lead into halftime.

Central Heights started strong in the second half getting some key defensive stops on the first couple of possessions and turned them into scores on the other end.

Referring to that quick start, coach Rusty Cannady said, "I thought the start of the second half was key to our success. Our confidence really went up the second half."

The Vikings and Bulldogs played a tight third quarter as the lead for ACHS was just 46-44 heading into the fourth.

A strong fourth quarter by the Vikings was enough for them to pull out the victory as they outscored the Bulldogs 15-10 for the win.

Cannady was happy with his teams defensive performance following a tough road win. "Tonight's game we showed a little more passion. I thought defensively we were really good. Spencer Walter made tough shot after tough shot, but we kept to the plan. Taking charges and getting key rebounds and steals was the difference," Cannady said. "Kudos to our seniors for the leadership. They were tough as nails tonight."

Leading the way for Central Heights was Jordan Horstick with 23 points and Tanner Erhart with 13 points.

Last week Crest's head football coach was released from his coaching position for no apparent reason. It is not known whether the school board or the superintendent is the cause of this release. Coach has built an exemplary football program in the 10 years he has been at Crest. Every year many boys receive high honors for Three Rivers League, District, Kansas newspapers, Kpreps, & MaxPreps. In 2010 coach was named Coach of the Year by Kpreps. He has held the utmost respect for all his athletes; is a huge supporter of the Crest District, and does what he can to help the community. He is an excellent role model for our young athletes striving to teach them teamwork, respect, and strength. As an upstanding citizen in the towns of the Crest district he is a friend with a smile to anyone who has had the chance to speak with him & get to know him. Coach Smith is a positive light in our school and we want the school board to reinstate him to his head coaching position. Coach will be speaking at the next school board meeting on February 10 unless a special meeting will take place prior all community members and any persons willing to show support are most welcome to attend. Just being there for support is all that is needed; no speaking is required.

Saddling up every morning keeps local cowboy busy

BY FRANK J. BUCHMAN Special to THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

"Eight head of horses are shod and ready to go. It takes a lot of horses as many cattle as we look after. Sure can't be without a horse if one, or a couple, gets crippled up, and it can happen."

Obviously, that's a cowboy talking. "I've had some really good horses, and have several good ones now. When you make your living handling cattle, you want to be mounted. There's too much to think about, and you sure don't want to have to worry about your horse," contended Les McGhee at Greeley.

McGhee

"There are always cattle on pastures somewhere, we utilize stalks and feed residues, and, of course, cattle are in the lots. I'm in the saddle most of the day, and then like to go to a team roping in the evenings and on weekends. I use the same horses, but it takes several," McGhee continued.

That's the way it's always been for the Anderson County rancher who grew up nearby. "We lived at Colony where I went to school, but the mail was out of Neosho Falls, along with the phone when we did finally get one.

"LeRoy was close, too You never knew where we'd be. We rode our horses everywhere; one town one day, another the next, maybe all three in the same day," McGhee reflected.

Growing up on a diversified farm, the McGhee family "milked cows, had stock cows, did a little of everything, like all farmers in those days," he insisted.

"I can farm, know how to run the machinery, have done it all, and still do. But, I never had a line of equipment of my own, and didn't really like to do that work. I've always been a cowboy," McGhee defined.

Fortunately, his dad and grandpa had horses for cattle use, so McGhee and his brother, Kendall, had horses to ride.

"That spotted mare called Cricket was the family horse. We all rode her, but she's the one I guess I learned to ride on. That ole mare was always running off trying to do what she wanted to, but I'd get her straightened out," McGhee assured.

A 4-H club member growing up, McGhee showed at the county fair, competed in local "shodeos," and always wanted to have a rope in hand to snag whatever got in the way, maybe even the milk cows, "if Dad wasn't looking."

"I got to roping calves, always liked that. I never was real good, but I competed at local events, then got to going to rodeos around, and won some. Later on, I got into team roping, and like that a lot, too," McGhee said. Married to Carol right after graduating from high school in 1971, McGhee went to work for an outfit as a cowboy, initially, near Copan, Oklahoma. "I was just a kid, but I learned a lot during the time I worked there. Did farm work besides look after cattle, but got to rope a lot; that's roping country. Yet, that time down there was when I really learned how to do lots of the things that have come in handy ever since, still do," he credited.

"Another thing about that stint there in Oklahoma was the 'pigeon-toed' gray gelding I had called, of course, Gray. He was sure a good horse, could ride him all day doctoring and rope all night.

"I had another sorrel horse, then too, that had the fastest running walk of any horse I ever rode. He was called Peaceful, nothing ever bothered him," McGhee said.

Back to Kansas, McGhee had a short stint for a cattle-farm operation at Netawaka, and then returned to work in a partnership with Joe Donohue at Greeley. "It was a great partnership for 34 years. We handled thousands and thousands of cattle," McGhee said.

But, there was considerably more than making a living as a cowboy for McGhee. "I competed in the United Rodeo Association, roped calves, team roped, did some winning. Then, I started putting on jackpot team roping competitions, had 15 to 18 a year, some big ones; Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day. I did that for 22 years.

"I really enjoyed sponsoring those roping competitions at the Donohue Ranch headquarters. I made so many friends. Ropers would look forward to coming to our place. We had 780 teams entered one time, that was the biggest," calculated McGhee, who competed at his own events, and other jackpots throughout the Midwest.

While he's capable at both ends of a team roping steer, McGhee is noted as a heeler. "There are some good headers, and they can sure make a heeler look good, too. I've had lots of good headers.

"Together we've won quite a bit over the years," said McGhee, counting his trophy buckles, and pointing out the saddle won at a major competition in Iowa.

Although he hasn't put on jackpots recently, and doesn't go to nearly as many as a decade and two ago, McGhee entered three team roping competitions this past year.

"They've been memorial jackpots for cowboys that I've known over the years, and I feel it's important to enter the benefits in respect of their memory," he said. "And, I placed in two them; that made me feel good, too, being 60 years old."

When he heard about one of the first ranch rodeos being organized more than 25 years ago, McGhee put together a team, competed successfully, and has had his teams, with varying members, as a serious threat to all comers at ranch rodeos throughout the Midwest and on the national level ever since.

"Our team has been to the Working Ranch Cowboys Association Finals in Amarillo four teams. We won the cow milking one time, but never did win the whole rodeo," McGhee said.

However, the norm was more often in the winner's circle. "Some years, we were at a ranch rodeo nearly every weekend. One year, we won 12 out of the 15 ranch rodeos we entered; that was 1995. We've had some good runs, but there've been plenty of times we'd leave with our tail between our legs," McGhee admitted.

Likewise, McGhee sponsored a number of ranch rodeos throughout the years. "We had a ranch rodeo at Garnett for 12 years, and I contracted livestock for other ranch rodeos and jackpots around the country," he said.

"We furnished livestock for the American Royal ranch rodeo several years, and competed in it as well. We never did win that one, either, but have lots of fond memories of it, and of all the other cowboys and their teams."

McGhee leased steers for the All-American Cattle Drive to Montana in 1995. "That's a deal I probably shouldn't have gotten into. It's a long story, and the ranch rodeos as part of it were a lot of fun.

"The main thing I finally got my money out of those cattle, but it took an awful long time," grinned McGhee, remembering the involved negotiations, not so pleasant when happening.

Of all the horses he's ridden, one raised by McGhee's family still stands out from all of the others.

"Mr. Que, a grandson of King, was an orphan that Dad and us kids raised on the bottle. We broke him at three, and doctored thousands, tens of thousands of cattle on him. He'd pull anything, was really a nice head horse, but also a family horse. Dad rode Mr. Que, my brother and I rode him, my nephew learned to rope on him.

"That black gelding was so ornery. We couldn't keep him in a pen unless it was wired shut. Otherwise, that horse would let himself out, go eat grain out of the bin, and let himself back in the pen. Mr. Que wasn't the fastest, but he'd get to one quick enough, and had so much personality."

Father of two grown children, a son and daughter, along with having eight grandchildren, McGhee lost his first wife to illness. "I couldn't stay in our home due to the memories, so I moved to this place, and later married Linda. She does all of the book keeping. That's about a full time job, even though Linda is also employed at the bank," McGhee said.

His children rode horses extensively when young, but are not involved today. "They helped do everything, but I guess I worked them too hard. Some of the grandchildren like to ride, but I don't know how far that's going to go either," McGhee said.

Only entering one ranch rodeo last year, the McGhee Ranch with McGhee as captain along with Maurice Ball, Keith Morrell and Travis Kopf won the Morris County Invitational Fall Ranch Rodeo at Council Grove.

"We won the steer branding, were second in both the team penning and team roping, and ninth in double mugging out of 16 teams. It was one of those good days," McGhee analyzed.

Dissolving his longtime partnership with Joe Donohue five years ago, McGhee acquired ownership of his diverse ranch operations where he was headquartered until dispersing that real estate recently.

"I'd like to buy another ranch, maybe over around Welda, continue grazing cattle, have a cowherd, do some more roping, maybe even go to several ranch rodeos again," McGhee forecasted.

Having been involved in cattle at all levels of value, overhead and risk, McGhee said, "I've made money on cattle with the highest interest rates, and considerably lower values. But, I had time on my side then.

"Now, cattle are so high, but so are all of the inputs. Even with interest rates low, if they'd move up just a few points, there are people who would be in trouble. It's a different time than I've ever seen."

There's no shortage of horse flesh around the McGhee Ranch, and those cowboy-mouths have considerable value dollar-wise and beyond.

McGhee, who has raised foals out of broodmares sometimes in the past, commented, "The overall horse market is low, because of a variety of outside influences. But, well broke using horse still bring a good ticket, and I think they always will."

Having viewed considerable changes in rodeos and every type of horse competition, McGhee, likewise, is optimistic for their continuation and possible growth.

"It costs so much to go down the road. Horses are often the least expense these days, but cost of trucks, trailers, taxes, upkeep and the fuel make it hard for the average person to compete," McGhee evaluated. "It's all in the priorities, and those who get it in their blood, they'll find the way.

"In my lifetime as a cowboy I've had the opportunity to work with some very good hands, and I really do appreciate that," McGhee emphasized.

"I'll be riding my horse for my living and my entertainment as long as I'm able," McGhee said.

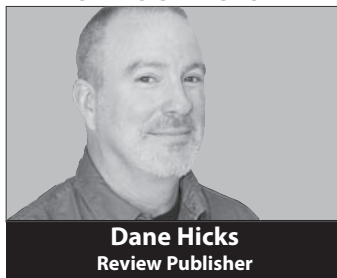

The salesman wears plaid

I don't care how much you may despise the idea of the red plaid jacket, yellow tie wearing, fast-talking salesman (remember that guy on Green Acres?), if you sell something - brace yourself - you're a salesman.

But don't be too hard on yourself. You're a lot more than a cartoon image. You're a vital, and I'm serious - vital - information source for customers who are in the middle of making a critical decision about spending their money. You can be a good salesman, provide needed information for your customer and make money for yourself - without being a schmuck.

There are only two things to know in being a great salesman: 1) know the product or service, inside and out; and 2) the same way you get to Carnegie Hall - practice, practice, practice.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks Review Publisher

Yes, I'm serious. Role play, out loud, with your husband or wife or staff or grab some guy off the street and make him sit and listen to you for 15 minutes (unless he threatens to call the cops). Practice it until it's flawless, earnest and conversational. Make a list of the points that should be delivered as selling points of your product or service. If you're an HVAC guy, it's probably energy efficiency, comfort and financing plan. If you're a restaurant owner or waitress, it's the special and the house's most popular dishes. Dump the negative image of the salesman and think about this: Great salesmen are great actors, and you're doing exactly what an actor does - memorizing lines and getting them across convincingly.

That's nothing to be ashamed of, because that information about that product is important - to you and the buyer.

Johns completes internship for U.S. Rep. Lynn Jenkins

WASHINGTON - Congresswoman Lynn Jenkins (KS-02) congratulates Eli Johns, a senior at Washburn University, on completing a congressional internship in her Washington and Topeka offices.

"Eli is a very talented young man who has the ability to serve our district well," said Congresswoman Jenkins. "He was a valuable addition both in Washington this past summer, and during the fall semester in Topeka. I wish him the best of luck as he finishes up his final year at Washburn."

Eli is a political science major at Washburn University, where he is active in student government and a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. After he graduates, Eli plans to study national security law. Eli is the son of Mike and Jean Johns of Lone Elm, Kan.

"I appreciate the opportunities Congresswoman Jenkins and her staff have offered me the past few months," said Johns. "I especially enjoyed getting to interact with and serve the people of the Second District of Kansas."

2004: Ethanol plant meets goal

January 27, 2004

A swarm of last-minute investors and a willing banker on Saturday made the quest to build an ethanol plant in Garnett a reality. Officials did not comment on how much money the company raised in the final week before the deadline or a final total in equity raised by the company to begin the estimated $36 million project. But they did say that January membership subscriptions, which cost a minimum of $10,000 per investor, had totaled nearly as much as the company's two previous best months combined by the close of Saturday's deadline.

A Kansas firm plans to construct a 300-foot tall tower southeast of Garnett in the next few weeks in hopes of finding out if there's enough wind in the area to make windmills practical for electrical generation.

Farmers in Kansas are finding that the extraction of methane from their land provides a solid revenue generating tool, and a meeting tonight in Ottawa may help answer some questions about the process and procedure. Extraction of coal bed methane gas is on the increase in Kansas. In 2003, Kansas produced about seven billion cubic feet of methane gas, mostly in southeast Kansas. Coal bed methane gas is a product of natural process in coal. It is retained in the coal, and the only way to extract it is to pump out the water that is also found in coal. Once the water is removed, the hydrostatic pressure on the gas is relieved and it begins to move. The gas can then be pumped.

landfill, the Anderson County Commission selected an out-of-state engineering firm to formulate the landfill's closure plan, which will most likely cost the county more money than a Manhattan company, which also bid the project. The landfill will be closed April 9 to avoid having to comply with new and expensive federal standards for landfills.

In a hesitant but unanimous vote Tuesday night, the Garnett City Commission approved a recommendation from the city's planning commission, which will bring a privately developed mini-storage unit near the downtown area closer to reality. The recommendation was to permit public warehousing storage units in the city by special permits only. That means each proposal falling into this category will have to be considered on an individual basis by the planning commission and acted upon by the city commissioners.

The City of Garnett will have to make several utility rearrangements to make room for the construction of the stoplight at the junction of U.S. Highway 59 and Kansas Highway 31, slated for completion in the fall of this year.

A Garnett woman has been arrested and charged in Anderson County District Court with stealing more than $500 worth of frozen food in a "gutsy" robbery that occurred the evening of Jan. 20 while the business was open. Authorities believe the theft occurred during evening business hours, possibly while employees of the restaurant were serving customers.

County officials and employees, with the exception of the county commissioners, will receive $40 month increase in pay in 1984, the Anderson County Commissioners decided in a special meeting Tuesday morning, which lasted about 15 minutes. The three commissioners had spent most of Monday discussing what to do about pay raises and this was the final decision. The commissioners decided not to increase their own salaries. Salaries for the county clerk will be $13,440; county treasurer, $12,240; register of deeds, $11,280; county attorney, $11,280; sheriff, $14,280; county appraiser, $17,180; county commissioners, $6,000; courthouse employees, from $7,980 to $9,720; road foreman, $16,440; shop foreman, $17,880; road employees, from $10,112 to $13,083.

This solid brass padlock was found along a short section of the old Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota Railroad bed, more than 100 years after the padlock was made in 1878.

Padlock has history with old railroad

Yes, a picture of an old padlock, but this padlock has a history. I found this padlock in 1988 while metal detecting along a short section of the old Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota Railroad bed.

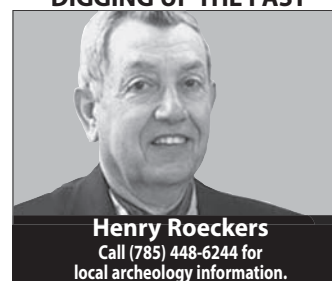

What's so different about this lock than most others? First of all, it's made of solid brass, engraved W. Bonhannan Lock Co., dated June 25 1878, it has an assigned number # 078 and it has the key broken off in the lock.

Oh, yes this railroad stopped operating in 1934 (80 years ago).

A little history of the K,N & D:

LIEAP applications accepted starting today

TOPEKA - Heating your home during the winter months can create a financial burden. In an effort to help keep Kansans warm this winter, the Kansas Department for Children and Families (DCF) will soon begin accepting applications for its Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP).

"Although we're experiencing a comfortable January week, winter has just begun," DCF Secretary Phyllis Gilmore said. "The winter months can bring frigid temperatures and we want families to be able to escape the cold in the warmth of their homes."

LIEAP provides an annual benefit to help qualifying households pay winter heating bills. Persons with disabilities, older adults and families with children are the primary groups assisted. In 2013, nearly 48,000 households received an average benefit of $489.

To qualify, applicants must be responsible for direct payment of their heating bills. Income eligibility requirements are set at 130 percent of the federal poverty level. The level of benefit varies according to household income, number of people living in the home, type of residence, type of heating fuel, and utility rates.

Applicants must demonstrate that they have made payments on their heating bill two out of the last three months. Those payments must be equal to or exceed $80 or the total balance due on their energy bills, whichever is less.

Applications for the program have been mailed to households that received energy assistance last year. LIEAP applications are also available at local DCF offices and through partnering agencies. They can be requested by calling 1-800-432-0043. To apply online, visit www.dcf.ks.gov. More information is available at <http://www.dcf.ks.gov/services/ees/Pages/Energy/EnergyAssistance.aspx>.

Applications will be accepted from Jan. 21 to March 31.

When we are absent from the body we are present with the Lord

The Epistle to the Philippians was written by Paul from prison. In Philippians 1:21-24 the apostle puts forth his future prospects. "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. If I am to live in the flesh that means fruitful labor for me. Yet which I shall choose I cannot tell. I am hard pressed between the two. My desire is to depart and be with Christ for that is far better. But to remain in the flesh is more necessary on your account."

Paul was the earliest and most influential interpreter of Christ's message and teaching. One might wonder how Paul could have this attitude about death. We need not look any further than the 9th chapter of Acts where we read of the conversion of Saul of Tarsus. Saul was on his way to Damascus when suddenly a light from heaven flashed around him. It is here that Paul is introduced to Christ. It is this conversion that turned Saul's, later called Paul, life around. Paul had seen the Lord. Inspired by this experience Paul could say that it was "far better to depart and be with Christ" and believe it.

In Paul's 2nd letter to the Corinthians Paul makes this statement concerning death. "When we are absent from the body we are present with the Lord." (2nd Corinthians 5:8) This doctrine of the intermediate state between our death and Christ's return teaches that when Christians die their spirit goes immediately into Christ's presence and we are "at home with the Lord", while our bodies remain here and are buried in the grave. When Christ returns the bodies of believers will be raised from the dead and reunited with their spirit.

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

As Christians we will see Christ. Our meeting will come on the other side of this life. In an instant in the twinkling of an eye we shall pass from death to life. As Christians you and I can have the same confidence that Paul had. Life sometimes can be very difficult and we can feel like we are on a ship in a storm being tossed side to side but we must remember God never said we'd miss the storms of life just that we would make the harbor.

David Bilderback: A Ministry on the Holiness of God.

Kansas Farm Bureau releases educational and policy apps

MANHATTAN - Kansas Farm Bureau has released a new educational app based on its best-selling children's book series.

The free app, which is available for Apple and Android smartphones and tablets, focuses on the popular "Milk Comes from a Cow?" children's book written by retired KFB CEO Dan Yunk.

Readers can follow Kailey as she learns that milk comes from a cow, not the grocery store. The app comes with a host of bonus features and videos.

"We've had tremendous luck with our book series and connecting with children and parents," Yunk says. "The time was right to move in to the electronic era and build upon what's worked—telling the story of agriculture in a fun way."

Also recently released is a Kansas Farm Bureau governmental relations app that includes tools and information on the latest issues affecting agriculture.

Both apps are available in the Apple and Google online stores.

'Using Excel Spreadsheets Effectively' workshop to be held January 30

Have you attempted to use Excel for record keeping, but know it has the power to do a lot more analysis than you have the skills to create? Are you a newer computer user and looking for a cost-efficient program to keep records and plan farming and ranching budgets? If you have answered either of these questions in the affirmative, then I have an opportunity for you!

"Using Excel Spreadsheets Effectively" is a hands-on workshop designed to teach agricultural producers how to use Microsoft Excel for budgeting and enterprise analysis, estimating machinery costs, analysis of livestock economics and calculating principal and interest payments. Although the program is designed for agriculture, those with other businesses may also benefit as the spreadsheet program skills are generic and transferable.

Anderson County Extension will be hosting this workshop on Thursday, January 30, 2014, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room. Rich Llewellyn, K-State Agricultural Economics Extension Assistant, will be the instructor and participants will have guided practice using Excel with their own data. Computers with Excel installed will be provided for use by participants. Skills learned will include mathematical calculations, "sum" and "sumproduct" functions, link information from other sheets, calculate breakeven prices and yields, use "what-if" analysis, utilize financial functions, use "if" functions, create and use lookup tables, and Excel tools on www.agmanager.info.

Registration is $15 and the deadline is Thursday, January 23, 2014. To register, please call (785) 448-6826 or e-mail sblocker@ksu.edu. Lunch of pulled pork sandwiches will be provided on-site.

K-State Research & Extension is committed to making its services, activities and programs accessible to all participants. If you have special requirements due to a physical, vision or hearing disability, please contact Shannon Blocker, Anderson County Agriculture Extension Agent at (785) 448-6826.

There were two hardware stores on the south side of the Garnett Square, Meyers Hardware & Hutchison Hardware. Ralph Meyers bought out Hutchison Hardware and combined the two into Meyers Hardware.

In the 1960's Ray Miles bought out Ralph Meyers and in 1974 Earl & Martha Miller bought the business from Ray Miles.

Earl and Martha built Miller ACE Hardware in its current location in 1978. Mike and Amy Blaufuss, the current owners, bought the business in 2009 and renamed it Miller Hardware.

Founded in 1865 as The Garnett Plaindealer, the Review continues today as the oldest surviving business in Anderson County, set to celebrate its 150th birthday in 2015. In 2009 parent company Garnett Publishing, Inc., and owners Dane and Barbara Hicks purchased The Trading Post, a free shopper circulated in the Lawrence area and founded in 1977 by Phil and Joy Hunsinger. Besides print publications, Garnett Publishing, Inc., also launched Garnett's first website in 1995 and today continues its electronic news presence with the Review's breaking news Facebook page. The company remains one of the area's premier printers, having won numerous awards for graphic design and offering a full range of business and personal printing in four color and black and white.

Bolling's Meat Market & Deli is family owned and operated by 3rd & 4th generation meat processors. At Bolling's Meat Market we offer fresh cut steaks, ground beef, cuts of pork, our homemade brats and sausages, the hot dogs everybody loves and much more. Plus the Moran Locker beef and pork patties that are so tender because we do not machine press them. And don't forget whole chickens and boneless, skinless chicken breasts. Our deli case features 18 deli meats and 12 deli cheeses, sliced and packaged to your order. Bolling's Meat Market is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Sundays.

Bolling's Deli on the north side of Bolling's Meat Market offers dine-in and carryout with both inside and outside patio dining for those nicer weather days. Hours at Bolling's Deli are Monday through Saturday 11 a.m. - 7 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Bolling's Deli uses only the freshest breads, meats, cheeses, topping and condiments in every product they put out, assuring you of a delightful dining experience. Try Bolling's 2-foot party sub which feeds 6 to 10 people and boasts 72 slices of meat! Don't forget about Bolling's Catering service from "simple buffet to plated gourmet."
