of low humidity and high winds make it difficult for farmers and ranchers to conduct their annual spring burning of fields and pastures before new spring grass emerges and is thwarted by dead ground cover from last year.

The consistent calls are starting to wear on fire fighters said JD Mersman, Anderson County Fire and Emergency Management Flames lick through a field near K-31 just west of Garnett Saturday evening. The annual spring burning of fields and pastures has resulted in numerous out-of-control grass fires this year.

GARNETT — Rural fire crews in the area responded to 11 out-of-control grass fires throughout the county on Saturday in what has become a rolling series of fire calls since mid-March, with bans on burning issued about two-thirds of the month.

Fire crews have been called out nearly every day over the past month or so, as a combination

City leaders want to expand property improvement program

Garnett's Neighborhood
Revitalization Program could cover entire city

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A program that rewards some Garnett property owners for making significant improvements to homes and businesses could be expanded to include all properties in the city limits.

The Neighborhood Revitalization Program currently is offered to property owners within designated zones around the city. Owners who make improvements that boost their property's value by at least $5,000 can qualify for a refund of new property taxes assessed because of the improvements for either five or eight years. Property owners in the downtown area, primarily businesses, are eligible for eight years worth of refunded property taxes; owners in other zones are eligible for the five-year benefit.

City commissioners last week said they want to expand the program so that every property within the city limits is eligible for the program. The downtown zone would continue to offer an eight-year benefit; everyone else could apply for the five-year benefit.

In order to qualify for the program, a property owner must make at least $5,000 worth of improvements to a home or business, such as building a new addition, new construc-

CBPC plans 'Second Saturdays' starting May 10

Business group looks for event to feature promotions, entertainment, activities

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Garnett's Creative Business Partnerships Committee will launch a city-wide promotion later this spring designed to attract monthly crowds to town, along with other initiatives aimed at local business and community development

owner of Poulette on the Garnett square, said "Second Saturdays" will coordinate special promotions, entertainment and activities on an ongoing basis set for the second Saturday of each month, rain or shine, starting May 10.

"We're super excited to introduce Second Saturdays," Hiestand said. "We'll have entertainment, extended retail hours, a cash giveaway contest and other activities."

Hiestand said the committee's hope is that local businesses will coordinate and promote their own individual promotions and activities in tandem with the Second Saturdays schedule. The CBPC is a subcommittee of the Anderson County Development Agency.

The Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce will coordinate and publish a special Second Saturdays brochure to promote the schedule and events and provide seed money for cash giveaways. Chamber director Katy Ludwig will be visiting businesses this week to present the plan and its brochure advertising opportunities, Hiestand said.

The committee has a number of other new initiatives underway as well, including planning for a promotional video of the

Coupon promotion aims at development using chance encounters

Public asked to clip coupon in today's paper, mail to outsiders

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — What if you had thousands of sales people for Garnett and Anderson County, pitching the quality of life in the community to potential new residents, entrepreneurs and businesses in hopes of attracting them to the area?

That's the aim of a special clip-out coupon that launches today in the Review as a project of the newspaper and Garnett's Creative Business Partnerships Committee — but the plan needs your help to be a salesman.

"What we want people to do is to clip out the coupon and mail it with basically anything that you mail out of the area," said Review publisher Dane Hicks. "Maybe stick it inside the envelope with your cell phone payment, your Netflix return, a magazine subscription renewal, birthday card to a relative— anything you mail that goes outside the local area."

The coupon can be found in today's Review on page 1B.

The idea is to make a truly one-on-one, grass-roots effort to connect with outsiders who may be thinking about relocating or who might pass along the info just on the novelty value alone. The coupon includes one of the city's website addresses as a point of connection for more information, Hicks said. Since folks are already paying to mail the letter, Hicks said there's virtually no expense.

"A lot of times people relocate a business or move to an area because of a simple chance encounter," Hicks said. "We're trying to encourage those chance encounters but we need everyone's help to make them happen."

Chance encounters like those the coupon campaign aims to make can generate huge results, Hicks said. He noted the chance response to a Chicago newspaper classified ad for a watchmaker in 1893 that brought Richard Sears and Alva

Herbert Robert Hayden, 69, Garnett, was arrested March 21 on suspicion of arson. Bond was set at $5,000.

Garnett Police Officer Robert McLeod said Hayden was arrested after a fire was discovered at property owned by the Lakeview Estates Homeowners Association. The fire, a grass fire, was in close proximity to a storage building but otherwise did not cause significant damage.

Officers recovered a coffee can that contained flammable material. McLeod would not say what led authorities to Hayden. The incident remains under investigation.

Director. Rural fire departments are made up of volunteers who typically have full-time jobs elsewhere. Between work and fighting fires, many of the fire fighters are getting tired, Mersman said.

"They're the true heroes. We couldn't do it without them," he said.

Fire crews have been sent to an estimated 75 out-of-control grass fire calls in the past two weeks, Mersman said, although he added he is working on a more exact count. Because of adverse weather conditions like low humidity and high winds, he has issued a burn ban about 20 days out of the past month, or an estimated 75 percent of the time. Burn bans were issued Sunday and Monday.

Restrictions on burning could be frustrating to local farmers and ranchers, who use prescribed burning to control weeds and improve grass quality, and need to conduct a burn during a limited period in the growing season for optimal results. Most farmers and ranchers understand the need for a burn ban and generally are cooperative, Mersman said. He said he tries to consider their needs when issuing a burn ban.

Statistically, most prescribed burns go off without a hitch, Mersman said. On Saturday, dispatchers issued more than 200 burn permits. Of those 200, 11 got out of control, or about 5 percent.

Anyone who wants to burn is required to call Anderson County Communications dispatchers at (785) 448-6823, to request a burn permit. The call typically takes less than a minute, and callers will be asked to provide basic information like name, address and phone number. If a burn ban has been issued that day, the caller will be informed and the burn will not be permitted. Anyone who burns in violation of these rules could receive a citation, under a resolution adopted last year by Anderson County Commissioners.

Mersman said he is reviewing some of the recent incidents to determine whether to issue citations. Some people still don't know the proper procedures to obtain a burn permit, and in most cases he will give them a warning and provide a copy of the county's resolution and rules on burning. He has noticed an increasing number of out-of-the-area landowners, who don't know the rules and recent changes in burning regulations.

"The majority of them are fairly innocent, but that's where it's hard to tell," he said. However, he expects to issue some citations soon, particularly to repeat offenders.

"When we're sent to the same place two or three times, or we were there last year or two years ago, we remember that," Mersman said.

The recent spate of grass fires so far has not resulted in the loss of any structures or any injuries. Fire crews typically respond to a high number of out-of-control grass fires each spring, Mersman said.

He encourages anyone who plans to burn to have adequate personnel and water.

"Even a four-wheeler or ATV with a water tank or sprayer can do wonders controlling those types of fires," he said.

He also asks people to be careful with flammable material in general. For example, do not toss lit cigarettes along the roadside, and properly dispose of hot coals from barbecue grills.

Sometimes, a Pop Tart is only a Pop Tart

No one will ever convince me that teaching is anything short of a noble profession, but what in the name of Eli Whitney is going on in American education when a kid can be suspended for chewing a Pop Tart into the shape of a pistol and playing with it?

So it begs the question: At what point along the career path does a young and inspired first year teacher who wants to make a difference in kids' lives make the transition into hapless educator, anxiety-ridden with liberal philosophy and terrified by lawyers and the rest of the bureaucracy? The first step must be going for the Masters degree.

Indeed, the Frankenstein Monster of political correctness has its electrodes firmly wired to the American education system and nowhere is the voltage any higher than in public school.

Here everyone from the local school board to the U.S. Department of Education fears the litigation onslaught of those whose rights have "undeniably" been violated the minute their kids walked through the school's front door. The casualty of it all is common sense, and nearly always in the direction that favors pro-feminist, pro-gay, anti-gun and anti-testosterone policy. The resulting dynamic issues decisions that embarrass American education, but make great headlines:

- two Suffolk County, Va., second graders were suspended for pointing pencils at each other and making gun noises;

- a deaf three year-old in Nebraska sparks a school policy debate because his name, spelled out in American Sign Language, requires him to make a gesture resembling a gun;

- a five year-old girl in Mount Carmel, Pa., was suspended from kindergarten for telling a friend she was going to shoot her with her pink Hello Kitty soap bubble gun.

So if there's a backlash in the conservative community that typically finds fault in public education anyway — and there no doubt is — the educocracy has brought it down on itself.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

Maybe — just maybe — a school principal somewhere, indoctrinated for decades in the system, honestly believes that a kid who chews a Pop Tart into a pistol and then points it at someone and says 'bang-bang' presents a clear and present danger to himself and others. Or maybe it's a hard, no-nonsense interpretation of some school security policy.

Whatever the reasoning one thing is clear: It was still a kid with a Pop Tart. Kicking the boy out of school isn't going to make him give up his fascination with guns or shoot'em up movies or video games. He's a boy, and regardless of the level of gender neutrality fostered by his school system, that's the kind of thing that boys do.

As much as the maniacal spat of school shootings in the decade and-a-half or so has terrified parents, I honestly believe it has struck more fear into the hearts of teachers and educators no matter their level of indoctrination into this system. But even legitimate fear ebbs and flows, as we know from the national consciousness post- 9/11. The fear of educators goes behind that.

Idiotic decisions like these aren't being made because educators fear violence — it's a Pop Tart, after all — they're being made because educators' most constant and ever-present fear is the bureaucracy they have created and which will feed on them in its own efforts at self-preservation.

The woman running for congress against Lynn Jenkins, the divorce lawyer from Lawrence, she is not a family practice lawyer, she is a divorce lawyer. She is an anti-family practice lawyer. Thank you.

Mr. Hicks I wanted to comment on your article Kansas goes Kremlin that's in this week's paper. Yes, very true and did you ever notice that we never have any information about our judges before we vote to retain them every couple of years? I believe this is why things like the arrest information is not a public record. I think they intend it to be that way so you never know who's really the ones responsible for all this, it's the judges. They keep it secret to cover the judge's (deleted). Thank you.

Supposedly this is springtime and it's time for the city to get their act together and use some common sense. If they're going to be doing sidewalks in our neighborhood I think they should do it in the spring so could be used throughout the summer instead of waiting until November like last year and telling people they only have 30 days to get it done. Common sense is a very valuable tool and it's a shame it's not used at the city hall very often.

I would like to thank our fire chief and all the firemen for all the time and effort they have been putting in putting out fires recently. There was four at one time one day and several that night. Two fire fighters have been hurt in helping with the fires. Hope they are all doing A-okay. It is a wonder thought that Anderson County has so many fire stations in the county. They really do a great job. I don't understand why people are so stupid to set a fire when it is so dry and the winds are so strong. They need to be given a big fine for doing such a thing and that might serve as an example to others. Our firemen are doing a great job. Thank you.

As a taxpayer and having a kid who has to walk to Willow Street to catch a bus I want to say what BS it is that I see them buses dropping kids off up town and at their homes. They can't pick your kid up at home but they can drop a kid off at the beauty shop or drop another off at the dance school. I didn't know it was a private bus system. My tax money running people's kids where they want to go, and yet my kid has to walk to Willow to catch a bus to school. This is stupid and disgusting and the school board ought to do something but they won't, except maybe bully somebody around to get what they want. Thank you.

Listening to the stories and watching the TV news about the legalization of marijuana in Colorado and I thought it was ironic that we have such a no drug culture- just say no to drugs, DARE in the schools and yet when we go to the doctor or when we watch TV at night, lord they've got a pill for everything, don't they. Take this pill for this or that pill for that. Everything they got, they're pushing a pill on you for something. I just thought it was ironic. Thank you.

Has anyone else ever thought about the sidewalk project in Garnett? There are several neighborhoods that don't have sidewalks at all. Do they have to put in sidewalks as well? It would only be fair to others if they did.

A special thanks to all the volunteer firemen. You have all worked so hard. We do appreciate what you do.

Yes, I am a junior parent and I went to the local (deleted) shop in Garnett to see if they would like to make a donation. They said they only donate to the Garnett school district and that is fine, but I just wanted the residents of Colony to know, because prom is coming up, that they need to send their business to the Iola (deleted) shop because they have donated every year and donated generously.

The foolish anti-vax cause championed by McCarthy

In a feat that would have been unimaginable a few decades ago, the anti-vaccine movement has managed to breathe life into nearly vanquished childhood diseases.

It took all the ingenuity and know-how we are capable of to find safe, effective ways to dramatically diminish diseases like measles and whooping cough in the developed world; it took all the hysteria and willful ignorance we are capable of to give them a boost. A developer of the measles vaccine, Dr. Samuel Katz, says the question "is not whether we shall see a world without measles, but when."

Not if Jenny McCarthy has anything to say about it. The former Playboy model and current co-host of "The View" is a leading light of the anti-vaccine movement. She has a boy with autismlike symptoms that she is convinced were caused by the vaccine for measles, mumps and rubella (MMR). You can credit her passion for her child, sympathize with her heartbreak — and still cringe at her wholly irrational cause.

No amount of discrediting makes a difference. One theory was that a preservative in children's vaccines called thimerosal was causing autism. But the U.S. removed thimerosal from most childhood vaccines in 2001. If the theory had been sound, this should have reduced cases of autism. It didn't. Cases have continued to rise, and the same held true in Canada and Denmark after eliminating thimerosal in the 1990s.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Another theory, latched onto by McCarthy, is that the MMR vaccine in particular causes autism. Dr. Andrew Wakefield publicized this supposed link in a famous article in the British medical journal The Lancet. It has since been thoroughly debunked. The Lancet retracted Wakefield's paper, and the British Medical Journal reported that he "falsified data." He had his medical license revoked. All of which should have been enough to give the anti-vaxxers pause.

Nonetheless, they fight on. In a recent interview with the Fox Business Network, former MTV star Kristin Cavallari plugged the anti-vaccination cause, citing "books" and "studies."

Most parents don't listen. Only 1.8 percent of kindergartners get exempted from vac-inations, according to NBC News. But the number is much higher in some states. The more kids go unvaccinated, the greater the chance that diseases can get a foothold.

They usually are imported from abroad, but the absence of vaccination is a boon to their spread. A study in the journal Pediatrics found that the 2010 whooping-cough outbreak in California — when the state had the highest number of cases since 1947 — hit hardest in areas with high levels of nonvaccination. In 2013, measles cases tripled nationwide.

In the panic created by the Wakefield article, England saw MMR vaccination rates fall to 80 percent in 2004 and Wales to 78 percent. In 2012, England and Wales had the highest number of measles cases in 18 years.

These are dangerous illnesses, and the victims of an outbreak are often infants too small to have yet received vaccinations. Jenny McCarthy styles herself a "mother warrior." If so, the kids sickened in the fallout from reduced vaccinations are the victims of friendly fire. Nothing good can come from undoing one of the miracles of medical progress.

Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

Pick a party, not a candidate, for primary support

Let's see, it's June, the weather is nice, the kids are out of school and you have read enough about candidates in Kansas that you decide to switch parties so you can vote for (or actually against) a candidate you like (or don't).

Enjoy that month of June decision-making, because it's your last one.

That's the new law. Republicans, who like their primary elections to be just among themselves, passed and Gov. Sam Brownback signed into law this session a bill that prohibits change of party affiliation — but not first-time party affiliation as a new voter — after the candidate filing deadline. Previously, party affiliation could be changed about a couple weeks before the August primary.

The new bill doesn't become effective until July 1, and the candidate filing deadline this year is June 1, so you have a month to consider whether you want to dabble in the other party's primary election.

For the 2016 elections, you'll have to decide which primary election you want to vote in before you know for sure who's running.

If you're a Democrat — and there aren't many Democratic primary election voters in Kansas — you might well decide that you'd rather have your local representative or senator as moderate as they come, and register Republican to tilt the vote toward the moderate. If it works, the Democratic candidate runs against a moderate Republican, and the damage to your psyche on election night isn't as great as it might have been.

That happened in 2012, when enough Democrats changed party affiliation in at least one Senate race — moderate Sen. Vicki Schmidt, R-Topeka, vs. conservative Rep. Joe Patton, R-Topeka — to make Schmidt the winner of a close Senate primary race. The Democrat in the race? Terry Crowder, a solid Democrat in a highly Republican district. He lost, but for most purposes Democrats preferred Schmidt to Patton.

Republicans might also switch party lines to vote in Democratic primaries, but there aren't many of them, and culturally...well, it's difficult for Republicans to make even that brief party switch.

So, this is the last election cycle where voters are likely to learn something about who's on the ballot before they have to settle by June 1 on which primary they want to vote in.

Or...the shut-down of party switching might just create a new majority of light-footed unaffiliated voters, who will be able to declare a party affiliation at the polls, signing up and getting a ballot.

That might become a more popular option for many Kansans who figure that they want to construct a general election with candidates who overall are more likeable to them, one in which the candidates are closer to the general election voter's philosophies, whichever one wins.

Except, remember, after you choose a party — it doesn't matter in the general election of course — you have to switch back to unaffiliated status sometime before the candidate filing deadline of the next election to have that late-deciding option restored...

More than 100 Kansas farmers and ranchers took time away from their operations to connect with lawmakers. Kansas Farm Bureau represents grassroots agriculture. Established in 1919, this non-profit advocacy organization supports farm families who earn their living in a changing industry.

Local student part of cast, crew for 'Julius Caesar'

WARRENSBURG, MO - A University of Central Missouri student from Garnett, Tanya Wilson, is part of the cast for the "Julius Caesar" production. UCM's Department of Theatre and Dance will present the production April 2-6 in Highlander Theatre.

Wilson, daughter of James and Karen Wilson, Garnett, is a member of the crew for the production. She is a senior at UCM and a 2010 graduate of Anderson County High School. "Julius Caesar" is a classical story of pride and envy, arrogance and honor, and opportunity and tragic error set in a post-apocalyptic Rome where the strongest men have been killed, and the strongest women take charge.

Admission is $12 for the general public, $10 for UCM staff, faculty, and senior citizens and $7 for students. Children under age 5 will not be admitted. Tickets can be purchased online and are available at the Department of Theatre and Dance box office, 660-543-8811.

The Facebook face-off

Facebook, Pinterest, Twitter, Linked-In – they can all add sales to your business, but they're not as free as you think.

Some businesses are winning in the social media revolution and some are failing to find a way – or devote the time, attention and resources – to make it work.

Facebook is the least specialized and the most evenly split by gender, but the benefit of social media for your small business comes down to two criteria: 1) how do you get customers to follow your Facebook page, and; 2) how do you manage media posts on that page to generate sales?

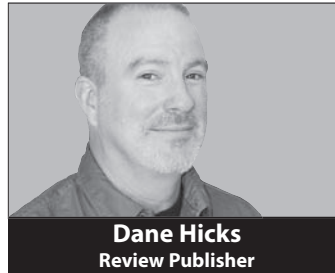

You build a following by bribing the right people – customers or soon-to-be customers who fit your customer profile. Promote a contest over a period of weeks – "like our FB page and get a $5 in-store coupon" or promote a drawing among people who "like" your page or "comment" on a post you make. Make the prize a good one – we've done tickets for waterparks or theater presentations, etc., and make sure the promotion lasts long enough to adequately saturate your base of existing followers. Re-post it frequently to generate more buzz and remind people of the contest and their chance to win the cool prize.

Once you start to develop a following, be sure not to alienate your followers with selling message after selling message. Internet users despise spam, and you have to craft your social media approach constantly in a way that legitimately interests your followers – and then slip your selling message in on them through the side door. As long as your followers feel like they're getting something neat or something extra- they'll stay with you.

A restaurant, for example, might offer up recipes or plating suggestions for your dinner party or Thanksgiving event, and then mention the awesome coffee and desert deal that runs through Saturday night. The point is, you can't just hammer your followers with unvarnished sales pitches all the time or they'll drop you.

articles that fit the interests of your followers and your business and post them. Give your followers something they can use besides your sales pitch—that's what they want and will react too.

Avoid the idea that you can use Facebook or any social media as your sole marketing effort – in the same way you would avoid putting all your eggs in any other marketing basket. Facebook is free and can be a great addition to your marketing, but like every other aspect of your business you have to work it to make it work.

ACHS teacher to attend Brown University Leadership Institute: China on the World Stage

PROVIDENCE, RI – Michael Sibley, a social science educator at Anderson County High School, was recently selected to attend the Choices Program's annual Geography Leadership Institute at Brown University. This year's Geography Institute is focused on helping teachers develop content knowledge about China and U.S.-China relations, as well as the skills needed to lead their classes in examining China's role in the international community.

The Institute, sponsored by the University's Choices Program, will provide selected teachers from across the country with an opportunity to learn about issues on the U.S. – China agenda, including China's economic, political, social and environmental challenges. Participants will also discuss pedagogy for teaching about these important topics at the secondary level. The four-day program will be built around the Choices curriculum unit China on the World Stage: Weighing the U.S. Response.

The Choices Program is a national education program designed to introduce substantive international content into secondary school classrooms. The program offers more than 40 curriculum units on topics relevant to classes on geography, U.S. history, world history, civics and current issues. All units use a problem-based approach to make complex international issues accessible and meaningful to high school students.

"Choices provides valuable tools for teaching the geographic skills my students need to develop as active citizens in our global society," says Mr. Sibley. "I am excited to learn more about China, and the issues surrounding U.S.-China relations in the 21st century. I also look forward to becoming more adept at using Choices' materials on a range of important international topics."

As part of the Choices Summer Institute, Mr. Sibley will facilitate the use of Choices material in his school district and beyond. "We were impressed by Mr. Sibley's leadership skills, dedication to the field of social sciences, potential to impact other educators in his district and the geography community at large. We look forward to working with him," said Choices Director Susan Graseck.

The Choices Program is affiliated with the Watson Institute for International Studies at Brown University and housed within Brown's Office of Continuing Education.

For more information about the Choices Program, please see www.choices.edu or contact Mimi Stephens, Professional Development Director, at 401-863-3155.

This St. Christopher medal is believed to be at least 100 years old and found under several inches of topsoil.

St. Christopher helped travelers

This is a picture of my very latest find at the site I am presently working on. This St. Christopher medal is well over 100-years-old. How do I know this? By knowing the original dates of the old rock house occupancy and noting the wear on the reverse side of the medal itself. This medal was covered over by 6" plus of soil, laying face up on solid bedrock.

Medallions such as this one I found with St. Christopher's name and image are commonly worn as pendants, especially by travelers, to show devotion and as a request for his blessing.

Now do you understand why I get so excited when I make discoveries such as this one.

March 30, 2004

USD 365 Superintendent Gordon Myers says consumption of alcohol by students is the "number two problem" in the district, and he has the figures to back that statement up. According to a survey, USD 365 students answered "yes" more often than their peers across the state when asked, "Have you consumed alcohol within the last 30 days?" Overall, 39 percent of students in grades 6, 8, 10 and 12 in USD 365 answered yes, or seven percent above the state average. That figure included the county as a whole, including Crest High School. But 75 percent of the seniors at ACHS answered yes, a whopping 17 percent above the state average.

Wolf Creek Power Plant is scheduled to be on line by next February, according to a KCPL representative. Plant construction is already over 92 percent complete. Started in 1977, Wolf Creek was originally scheduled for completion in 1983. The delay is due primarily to the unanticipated regulatory commission's tightening of requirements since the Three Mile Island incident. Expected to generate 1150 megawatts of power, the plant's total cost is now estimated at $2.67 billion up from the $1.04 billion original estimate.

At the city's election to be held April 7, the proposition of establishing and maintaining a free public library will be submitted to the voters - this to be established under chapter 80 of the 1913 laws. If you will stop to consider that if the limit of the taxation is levied - four-tenths of a mill - it will cost the average taxpayer less than a membership fee for one year - and the library would then be a free library. That means that every member of your family can have a library card, if they want it. It seems now that this is sufficiently explained so that every voter can understand what this proposition implies. Vote for the proposition, and make our library a city institution instead of a charity.

Chapter Y PEO considers scholarship applicants

Sonya Martin and Laverne Cole hosted the March 17th meeting of Chapter Y PEO at 7:00 p.m. at the Martin home. In honor of St. Patrick's Day, Marilyn Artherton arranged for the program, "A Lil' Bit of Blarney", presented by special guests, Julie and Cara Covault, who shared a beautiful and entertaining slide presentation of their recent trip to Ireland. Also visiting was Helen Lindeman, mother of Sonya Martin, who is a member of Chapter NF PEO, Lake Ozark -Four Seasons, Missouri.

The March 3rd meeting had been cancelled due to icy weather, so the election and installation of officers took place at the March 17th meeting. All Chapter Y officers will remain the same, with the exception of Co-President Donna Benjamin taking the Vice President position. Other officers are: Lucille Holderman, President; Betts Abraham, Recording Secretary; Jessica Klein, Corresponding Secretary; Lynda Feuerborn, Treasurer; Marilyn Artherton, Chaplain; Holly Reeder, Guard; and Pam Covault, Delegate.

The scholarship committee is in the process of selecting annual scholarship recipients. They had received fewer applications than usual from this year's local high school seniors, but were pleased that the students who did apply seemed well qualified.

Chapter Y members have been invited to a reciprocity meeting hosted by Chapter CH PEO at Yates Center on Saturday morning, March 29th. Some of the local members plan to attend.

Diane Doran announced that Anderson County Hospital's "Healing for Health" event will be Saturday, April 26th. Members were asked to walk with their team, the "Sassy Sisters".

The upcoming April 7th and April 21st meetings will both be held in the Archer Room at Garnett Public Library.

In the end faith matters more than success

In the first few verses of 2nd Timothy chapter four the Apostle Paul speaks of his impending death. "For I am already being poured out as a drink offering, and the time of my departure has come." (2nd Timothy 4:6) Paul says already. The apostle sees his death as inevitable even though it may be some time away.

He says he is being "poured out as a drink offering". Here he is referring to another metaphor for death. This language is taken from the Old Testament sacrificial system. A drink offering of wine was poured out in the sanctuary as an offering to God.

Paul then refers to "my departure" which is another metaphor for death. Paul held steadfastly to the hope and assurance of a destination beyond the grave. Paul's major concern with these statements is not that he has been successful but rather he has been faithful to the Lord.

In the Book of Hebrews the author lists a group of individuals who are listed specifically because they were faithful to God through the end of their lives.

God lists Abraham, who by faith obeyed when he was called to go out to a place that he was to receive an inheritance. God lists Moses who forfeited the treasures of Egypt and led the Hebrew people out of Egypt. Others mentioned are Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and Rahab. All these people had one common thread. They lived by faith. Hebrews 11:16 says, "They desired a better country, that is a heavenly one. Therefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he has prepared for them a city." The Old Testament believers themselves realized the hope and promises to which they looked forward to in faith were heavenly, and not merely physical. Simply what they longed for could not and would not be realized in this life.

The scriptures as well as your and my lives have vivid examples of people who started out well with passion for God and for some reason never advanced past that or they stumbled at some point and lost or damaged their witness for God. Paul had a legitimate concern. By the world's standard our measuring rod is success. God's standard is faith. If we allow success to determine our faith it will be circumstance based or based on our own efforts. If we allow faith to determine our success it will be based on God's effort through us. Understanding and following this guideline will allow us to be faithful to the end of our life which is all that God asks.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 06-29-2010 / Photo Submitted

The third, fourth and fifth grade students at Crest Elementary School sold homemade cookie grams for Valentine's Day to raise money for Make-A-Wish Kansas. This endeavor, organized by the students and Mrs. Strickler, school counselor, was a service learning project in their Skills class.

The students raised $702.30 for the charity which grants wishes for children with life-threatening medical conditions. The money will be used to help grant a wish for a child in the southeast Kansas area. The students chose Make-A-Wish to be the recipient of their service project efforts because of their desire to help a child less fortunate than themselves. Lisa Capps, Development Director, came to Crest to receive the check from the students on behalf of Make-A-Wish.

The fundraising effort is a project of Kids for Wish Kids, a Make-A-Wish program designed to be a hands-on learning experience for youth organizations. The program teaches young people the value of community service and gives them the opportunity to learn organizational and teambuilding skills. Student groups, churches and youth organizations interested in enrolling in the Kids for Wish Kids program may call Lisa Capps at 316-838-9474.
