Commissioner takes on city leaders at forum

Incumbent fends off city leaders, not challenger, at event

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - What was supposed to be a debate between Anderson County Commission candidates last week ended up as more of a debate between incumbent commissioner Jim Johnson and two Garnett city commissioners.

The city leaders in the crowd of about 50 attendees pressed Johnson about whether it was fair to expect Garnett taxpayers to pay for both city and county services, especially when it comes to road repairs. The questions essentially boiled down to a central theme: If city taxpayers must pay for county services, why won't the county help the city out on the ongoing, contentious

Johnson

Park Road matter?

City and county leaders have been at odds over traffic on Park Road for months. Part of the road lies in county jurisdiction and brings truck traffic into and out of town, and across a portion of the road that's city-owned but lacks a heavy enough base to effectively handle heavy trucks without causing damage the city has to repair.

Johnson and Independent First Commission District challenger Les McGhee were among several political candidates at a forum Thursday, Oct. 16. Audience members had the opportunity to ask questions, and candidates talked about their position on the issues.

During a session dedicated to the Anderson County Commissioner District 1 race, two of three audience questions came from Garnett city commissioner Greg Gwin and Garnett Mayor Preston Peine. Both times, McGhee said he did not know enough about the matter to give adequate answers, mostly leaving Johnson to deal with the

Alco bankruptcy impact unknown

Local store manager says he hasn't heard yet what will happen

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Garnett's Alco Store manager Dan Barcus said he doesn't know what impact the company's recent bankruptcy filing will have on the local store.

"They've told us very little," Barcus said Monday, more than a week after Alco Stores, Inc., filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. "We're just going to keep going like we always have."

Alco Stores, Inc., filed for bankruptcy in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas Sunday, Oct. 12. Company officials said they plan to stay in business during the reorganization. The company, based in Coppell, Texas, has 198 stores in 23 states. Most stores are in towns of fewer than 5,000 people and regions of fewer than 16,000 where there is no direct competition from national or regional retailers.

The most recent fiscal year filings show Alco had $474 million in net sales, a 2 percent decline from the previous year.

City approves hike in natural gas rate

First rate increase since 2009 will hike rate $1 per gas unit

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Residents of Garnett soon will start paying a little more to heat their homes and businesses, as city commissioners last week approved the local utility's first natural gas rate increase since 2009.

The cost of natural gas will increase by $1 per unit, from $7 per mcf to $8. For a family of four, that will translate to roughly $70 more per year in home heating costs, according to Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin.

City leaders had warned for weeks that a utility rate increase was likely. In 2009, the city decreased natural gas rates from $13.20 per mcf to $7 per mcf to account for decreased market prices. But as natural gas prices increased over the past two or three years, the city did not pass those extra costs onto customers. As a result,

Surprise savings leads to debate

City saves $30K, but commissioners can't agree how to spend it

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - A surprise savings in Garnett city employee health care costs led to a contentious debate last week between city commissioners and staff about what to do with the extra money.

City manager Joyce Martin told commissioners during their regular meeting Tuesday, Oct. 14, that city staff had managed to negotiate a deal with health insurance provider Blue Cross and Blue Shield that would save the city about 2 percent in insurance expenses in 2015. Because of that, the city's 2015 budget could drop by about $30,000. Before the savings, Martin projected a slight increase to city taxpayers; with the savings, the city could have lowered the budget by about 1.4 mills.

But because the city already had published the 2015 budget with the tax increase, city commissioners instead wondered if they should leave the tax rate

Scipio church to celebrate 150th Carmelite anniversary

Scipio is second-oldest site for Carmelite Order religious settlement

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

SCIPIO - A Roman Catholic religious order that dates back to around the 12th century settled in Scipio about 150 years ago, planting in Anderson County only its second set of roots in the United States.

A sesquicentennial anniversary for the Mount Carmelite Order, called "Carmel's Journey to the Frontiers," will be celebrated in Scipio later this week, honoring the second-oldest Carmelite order in the United States.

Father Jerry Williams of the St. Boniface Church in Scipio will welcome church officials as part of a three-day symposium in Scipio and Leavenworth Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 23-25. Attendees will visit Scipio Friday, Oct. 24, starting with a breakfast at 9:30 a.m. The current and previous Prior Generals will speak at 10:30 a.m., followed by lunch at St. Boniface Hall. After lunch, they will visit the church's cemetery, for a prayer service at the final resting place of one of the original Carmelites who migrated to the United States from Germany. Thirty-four other Carmelites also are buried at the cemetery, and they also will be recognized before the group closes the ceremony with a 2 p.m. Mass before they return to Leavenworth.

More information about the event can be found at www.carmel150.org

The Carmelite Order began in the 12th century as a group of hermits who lived on Mount Carmel in ancient Israel. They modeled themselves after the prophet Elijah, according to Father Jerry. After their holy land was invaded, the Carmelites moved to Europe, where they became mendicants, or more like beggars than hermits, Father Jerry said. A group from a struggling province in Germany came to the United States, with hopes of sending new members back to Germany. After the Carmelites settled in Leavenworth, some learned

Article 15 of the constitution of the state of Kansas is hereby amended by adding a new section thereto to read as follows:

§ 3d. Regulation of "raffles" authorized. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 3 of article 15 of the constitution of the state of Kansas, the legislature may authorize the licensing, conduct and regulation of charitable raffles by nonprofit religious, charitable, fraternal, educational and veterans organizations. Lester Keith Burris, age 82, of Garnett, passed away on Tuesday, October 7, 2014, at Ransom Memorial Hospital in Ottawa, Kansas.

Burris

He was born on September 19, 1932, at Bush City, Kansas, the son of Delbert and Polly (Sherwood) Burris. Lester graduated from Bonner Springs High School, Bonner Springs, Kansas.

Lester married Sherry Jones on March 31, 1968, in Bonner Springs, Kansas. This union was blessed with a blended family, Jeff, Perry, and Deborah. They moved to Garnett, where they took over his father's family business, Burris Trailer Sales, which they owned and operated for 12 years.

In 1980, they built a local motel, restaurant and lounge known as the Sherwood Inn. Lester took his mother's maiden name "Sherwood" to name their restaurant. After operating the Sherwood Inn for 14 years, Lester decided he needed more to do, so he opened a grocery store called Shop-Rite.

When Lester wasn't working at his many businesses, he loved to hunt and fish and also spend time with his family.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Delbert and Polly Burris; one son, Perry Burris; and one brother, Lloyd Burris.

the city's utility expenses have exceeded revenue by more than $100,000 each year since 2012.

In 2012, the city's natural gas expenses were $103,232 more than the city collected from its utility customers. In 2013, natural gas expenses exceeded revenue by $140,630. Martin said she expects similar numbers this year.

The average cost of natural gas this so far year is $8.50 per mcf. With utility customers paying the new rate of $8 per mcf, Martin said she expects the city can come closer to a break-even utility budget.

"They just wanted to stop the bleeding," Martin said of the commissioners' decision to raise rates.

In the past, when natural gas prices were more volatile, city leaders reviewed natural gas rates monthly and adjusted rates frequently, Martin said. She recommended city commissioners adopt that practice, which could mean rates would change quite often to adjust for fluctuating prices.

Gwin asked Johnson if he thought it was fair that property owners who live in the city of Garnett should have to pay both city and county taxes, essentially paying twice for services. Gwin said it seems as if city taxpayers must also pay for county services, but county taxpayers aren't expected to pay for Garnett services.

"All residents of the city are also residents of the county. You drive on those roads, too," Johnson answered.

McGhee added, "A lot of commerce comes to Garnett on those roads. Why would any of us want to interfere with that?"

Peine clarified the question applied specifically to an ongoing debate over damage caused to Park Road by heavy trucks; city leaders asked the county to close the road to heavy trucks, but county commissioners said their portion of the road is fine and they see no need to restrict trucks who use Park Road as a shortcut between U.S. 169 and 59, rather than drive a few more miles to Sixth Avenue or the roundabout. Peine implied the county should help pay for the repairs to Park Road if county commissioners aren't willing to keep heavy trucks off the street.

Peine asked if smaller cities in the county - specifically, Colony, Greeley, Kincaid and Westphalia - reimburse the county for services like road repair. Johnson said those cities either pay for the repairs or they work out some type of deal to swap services. Peine asked if the commissioners would be willing to offer that same type of deal to the City of Garnett.

"We can talk about it," Johnson said.

Johnson added that in many instances, city residents benefit from county services. He pointed out Garnett benefits from having the county-owned Anderson County Hospital building in its city limits. Also, rural fire departments often help the city with fire calls, and in the past year the county has invested significant money to improve rural departments. The county sheriff's department also helps city police when needed, but they don't patrol within the city limits unless asked, Johnson said.

The company closed 14 stores early in the current fiscal year. Barcus said he could not discuss the Garnett store's fiscal performance.

Locally, the Garnett Alco store employs 10 people. Company-wide, Alco employs about 3,000.

In its bankruptcy filing, Alco said it had $222 million assets and $162 million in liabilities in July. Alco said Wells Fargo intends to provide it a $110 million revolving credit line and a $12.6 million secured term loan so it can repay some debts and continue operating. Those terms will be reviewed by the bankruptcy court. Chapter 11 bankruptcy typically stays the collection actions of creditors against a company while it determines a repayment plan to pay off its debts.

The company was based for many years in Abilene, Kan. It changed its name from Duckwall-Alco in 2012.

Forget Ebola – your food is shrinking!

Most people think this “Honey, I shrunk your food” bit started with coffee containers getting smaller, but I seem to recall it was Super Bubble bubble gum first.

Back in my day a piece of penny bubble gum – Super Bubble seemed to have the market cornered in the Ozarks – was as big as a grown man’s thumb.

Then it happened; the tectonic shift that changed the lives of every little league baseball player in the country. It was 1973, so I’m sure the greedy oafs at Hershey’s tried to blame it on the Arab Oil Embargo and the sudden price increase of gasoline to an exorbitant 71¢ a gallon.

The price of a piece of Super Bubble went from a penny to 3¢. I was outraged, and swore I’d rather chew balls of hair than pay that ransom. My boycott didn’t last long though; I and the rest of the 10 year-olds in the country knuckled under and paid the toll. Years later the price would go back to 1¢, miraculously, but the size of Super Bubble would drop to 1/3 the original.

That’s when they knew they had us. Ever since then, grocery store shelves have been an amazing display of incremental displacement; packages, cans, boxes and containers reduced in size while the prices stay the same or increase. Time, it seems, is on the side of the food manufacturers, who bank on the fact that eventually we’ll forget that a 16-oz can of corn was really 16 ounces instead of 14.75.

Food companies blame it on prices of content and on downturns in the economy. I’m reminded of AMC Theaters announcement a few years back that they were going to have to increase the price of a $10 tub of popcorn – as well as hike movie tickets from $9 to $10 at evening shows – because the higher prices for corn had driven the price of the 2¢ of corn in a popcorn tub to 6¢.

Seriously? But who’s going to go to the movies and not eat popcorn?

Perhaps the other most heinous offenders are potato chips. Regardless of the brand, bags are getting smaller, crowding $5 apiece, and they’re only about 1/3 full of chips. Breakfast cereal is the runner up – boxes of cereal have gotten so small you can hardly fit a cool toy inside one. What’s going to happen to America if the childhood

REVIEW COMMENTARY

right of passage of emptying an entire box of cereal into one of mom’s mixing bowl’s just to get the toy is lost?

Newspapers too have micro-sized from back in the old days. The Review, for instance, in the old days was printed on as large as a 44-inch page. Now we’re on a 25-inch page, and we’re one of the few remaining hold-outs of the “larger” size in the region.

Ivory dish detergent: was 30 oz, now 24 oz, difference of 20 percent; Tropicana Orange Juice, was 64 oz, now 59 oz, difference of 7.8 percent; Chicken of the Sea Salmon packages were 3 oz, now 2.6 oz – smaller by 13.3 percent. Cans of tuna are even worse. Nearly all brands were 7 oz cans, then 6 oz, now 5 oz. Five pounds of sugar? No such animal anymore – those bags are now 4 pounds. Chobiana Greek Yogurt – 6 oz cup down to 5.3 oz.

Then there’s toilet paper. As our processed food and hi-carbohydrate diets have broadened our butts, paper company’s have reduced the size and number of feet on a roll of toilet paper. Does anybody notice the roll not fitting in the dispenser at home anymore? Almost always fits now, right? Problem solved by reduction of volume.

I have a theory however that competition and customer backlash against shrinking products will eventually force breakthrough-minded companies to soon market “mega sizes” that are close to the same package sizes as the old days. Hey, as long as a dime is big enough to be used as a screwdriver, there’s still hope.

We had a power outage at my house this afternoon and my PC, laptop, TV, DVD, iPad & my new surround sound music system were all shut down. Then I discovered that my iPhone battery was flat, and to top it off, it was raining outside, so I couldn’t play golf. I went into the kitchen to make coffee, and then I remembered that this also needs power, so I talked with my wife for a few hours. She seems like a nice person.

Hey you farmers and stockmen who pay such high taxes, try paying Garnett taxes for a few years. Then you might understand why we don’t want to have to always be fixing Park Road because your trucks and trailers tear it up.

If you ask me this problem with Park Road is simple to take care of. If the city doesn’t feel like it can fix their section of the road to handle the truck traffic, close Park Road there at the city limits and just let Park Road dead end. Then those trucks will have to find another way into town. Thank you.

To the person or persons who dumped the two baby kitties out by the swimming pool this morning, you are selfish and ruthless. I mean, how can two baby kitties take care of themselves? Would you do that to a child? No. Why would you do it to animals that can’t take care of themselves? You guys ought to be put in jail.

I must have missed something in the paper. I thought it was in August that the city was supposed to come out with their budget for the coming year. This is already the middle of October and we still haven’t seen anything. Must be getting harder to jibe the figures and cook the books, huh?

I’m calling about the person complaining about the mayor not wanting the farmers and stockmen to help our town, about Park Road. I moved to Garnett and lived on Park Road since the early 70s. At that time up until the early 80s Park Road from 169 to 59 was closed to all truck traffic. I bet it’s still on the books, they just don’t enforce it. I do believe they should. Also the comment they made about the truck drivers driving slower than most cars, I don’t agree with that. I see the trucks every day driving faster than they need to, faster than most cars. They take up more room, they park wherever they want to, they block the roads wherever they want to. I think it’s a good idea to close Park Road to truck traffic again.

I live down on the corner west of the Anderson County Junior-Senior High School and I and my neighbors are really enjoying the new automatic sign at the entrance to the high school. Whoever is responsible for that neat idea should get a big thank you. It gives school schedule, time of day, temperature and many other things. I understand in the future other things will be added. We should thank the workers for all the time they spent putting it in. If you haven’t yet seen this sign, it’s worth your time to drive by and see it.

Some time ago there was question about having five city commissioners. I don’t know why, because the three we have just take for granted what they’re being told is correct so they just follow what they’re told. They need to check and verify what they’re being told is the truth and not just take it for granted that everything is correct.

A war for show, that’s too passive for Carter

Compared with President Barack Obama, even Jimmy Carter is John McCain.

The former president practically synonymous with American weakness and retreat thinks Obama was too slow to act against ISIS and gives his current strategy only “a possibility of success,” provided it involves (unspecified) ground troops.

When you are too passive for Jimmy Carter, it’s time for some soul-searching in the Situation Room. The late-1970s are calling and want their foreign policy back.

The war against ISIS so far is desultory and occasional, a campaign of underwhelming force. ISIS has still been on the verge of taking the Syrian town of Khobani, abutting the Turkish border, and on the offensive in Iraq. The erstwhile JV team is defying all the military might that the world’s lone superpower is willing to muster.

There has been renewed talk of how, as former Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta put it the other day, the fight against terrorism will be a 30-year war. At this rate, it will be a generational struggle merely to get ISIS out of Mosul.

To this point, almost everything has lent credence to the skeptical interpretation of Obama’s war: That in reaction to a spectacular media event (the horrific ISIS beheadings), the president staged his own media event, an inconsequential bombing campaign

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

accompanied by a tough-sounding, prime-time speech.

The experience of the surge in Afghanistan, the red-line fiasco and now this suggest that Obama is a hawk precisely to the extent he feels the politics don’t allow him to wiggle out of it.

His talk of Afghanistan as the good war in the 2008 campaign was too fresh for him to countenance an immediate defeat. So he ordered the surge and tried never to speak of it again, and now wants to completely liquidate our military presence on the failed model of Iraq.

He had seemed determined to strike Syria after Bashar Assad used chemical weapons last year, then found a way to crab-walk away from his own earnest warnings.

The war against ISIS happens to be just enough to placate the public’s hawkish mood without getting too far out in front or taking actions that will fully commit the president. The Powell Doctrine is to use maximum military power to achieve a clear objective; the Obama Doctrine evidently is to use minimal military power to create a vague impression. Message: I care about defeating ISIS, for now.

The anti-ISIS campaign is a brilliant tactical success, in the sense that we are hitting what we target. But it is a strategic nullity.

It is too small to make much of a difference, and there are limits to how much can be done exclusively from the air anyway. We can bomb fixed targets, and perhaps tanks and large troop movements. The problem is that ISIS is a guerrilla force not highly vulnerable from the air, and it becomes even less so once it is entrenched in cities.

It caused a minor furor when Obama said a few weeks ago that he didn’t have a strategy against ISIS yet. The scandal is that, with American planes dropping bombs in two countries, he still doesn’t.

Trickle-down theory works on the ballot

Some of those folks whose names are down a ways on the ballot—say at the Kansas House of Representatives slot—are starting to wonder just what the intense, often mean-spirited and sometimes ridiculous campaigns at the top will do to or for them.

This year has the appearance of becoming one of the most active ticket-splitting elections Kansans have seen in a while. It’s likely that the diminishing number of straight-ticket voters is going to be wildly outnumbered by voters who will pick a candidate or two from the “other” party.

But...there is that family tradition, and there are still diehard Republicans and Democrats who heard at the dinner table for years that wandering across their family’s party line will be a factor come Judgment Day.

The top-of-the-ballot contests are a little unsettling for those who have watched politics for years.

They are the races for the biggest jobs in Kansas politics—say the U.S. Senate seat and the governorship—the contests that in many years wouldn’t be much of a decision for most voters but have turned out to be a little grimy.

Between lap dances and parsing just what is school finance and what isn’t, the governor’s race is almost an accountant’s choice...The definition and redefinition of what comprises state aid to education is one of those classic “which side of the fence you stand on” battles that most Kansans haven’t yet parsed out.

The tax cuts? Irresponsible if you didn’t get one, responsible if you believe that the measure will bring more jobs to Kansas.

But...it’s the tone of the commercials, that

STATE COMMENTARY

makes it difficult to learn what the new Fords will look like this year, that is unsettling in what has traditionally been more straightforward “vote for me” not “vote against him” campaigning.

At the Senate race level, it’s more about whom each candidate’s friends are and whether shifting the political control of the U.S. Senate is going to produce any results that will matter to us folk who live in Kansas.

That control of the Senate issue: Three-term Republican Pat Roberts, R-Kan., wants Republicans to run the Senate, and he’s a solid vote for GOP leadership. Independent Greg Orman of Olathe says he’ll see who has the numbers and caucus with the majority party, whichever it is.

Practically, if the U.S. Senate is split so that Orman’s decision chooses which party runs the chamber, you’d think that he would be in a pretty good position to—is extort too strong a word?—bargain for what he thinks Kansans would like. Roberts, with his decades of Washington experience, probably would pick up an important committee chairmanship which Orman has little chance as a freshman to get.

But the tone of the ads and the debates appear to have little to do with Kansas. Nobody arguing for new roads, that aqueduct to get water from east to west Kansas, or something that would make much difference in our daily lives.

So it gets down to who knows whom, who attended or missed committee hearings and such.

And, those ballot-top campaigns have some Kansas House candidates wondering whether voters, after those exhaustive choices, will just return to the party of their parents for the rest of the ballot, vote out incumbents whose names they recognize, or figure they ought to pay some homage to the party they grew up with.

It’s probably worth remembering while that top of the ballot scrap is interesting, and there’s more money there for commercials and such, it’s your state representative who is going to be voting on that off-ramp that you want, or the distance that a school district will send a bus to get your kids or grandkids to and school each day, and whether roofers are adequately vetted before they get the ladders out of their trucks.

Down-ballot isn’t the Super Bowl, but it’s closer to where and how you live.

where it was. Instead of passing the savings on to taxpayers - Mayor Preston Peine said the savings would amount to about $20 per year per property - commissioners wanted to use the money as a type of bonus to pay for a project the city otherwise could not afford.

What followed was a lengthy and at times heated debate over the best way to handle the extra money. Because the savings was discovered late in the budget process, city commissioners needed to make a decision Tuesday night in order to meet legal parameters for budget approval. At one point, Peine said he would debate the issue all night, if necessary.

"I'm not willing to short-change people because we're tired," he said.

"We can talk until midnight and not come to a decision," commissioner Gordon Blackie countered.

When the discussion between commissioners got a little heated at one point, Martin said she almost wished she hadn't spent five hours working to negotiate the savings.

Commissioner Greg Gwin first suggested the city keep the money, noting it was a role reversal for him because he's usually one of the most fiscally conservative commissioners.

He wanted the city to use the extra money for either street repairs or sidewalk improvements, but eventually settled on street repairs after learning from Martin that sidewalk repairs to meet ADA requirements already were on schedule to be completed in 2015.

Peine proposed the city consider a radical new proposal, something that had been done successfully in other communities and was seen as a way to make taxpayers feel more involved in governmental decisions. He proposed setting the money aside and having some type of community vote to let residents decide how to spend it. His proposal initially was cheered by the other commissioners and a couple of people in the audience, but fell apart as they debated the logistics. The expense to organize such a vote could eat away at the extra money, and commissioners would need to narrow the options ahead of time to make sure any approved project cost less than the $30,000 available.

There were several legal restrictions to consider, as well. Because the budget had been published, the city could not exceed tax limits. Martin said the commissioners would have to pick a fund for the money, such as recreation, and stick within those parameters.

"We need more time to see how the process works," Martin said after the meeting. "You can't just levy a tax without having some purpose for it. I think they really need to think about it a little more."

Commissioner Gordon Blackie initially seemed to favor not using the extra money, essentially giving taxpayers the $20 break. He said it was too late in the budget process to introduce a radical new idea, and commissioners couldn't seem to agree on the best course of action for the money.

In the end, commissioners agreed to set the money aside for street repairs. They noted people often complain about poor streets, and the money to fix streets is limited.

"We felt at the end, streets was a good, safe place to put it," Martin said. "We didn't think anyone would argue about the need to repair more roads."

Martin said commissioners likely will consider Peine's proposal next year, and perhaps at that time it would be easier to find a process that would let city residents vote for a project they would like the city to accomplish.

This year's theme from National Fire Prevention Association (NFPA) was "Working Smoke Alarms Save Lives: Test Yours Each Month!" Alarms should be placed on each level of homes, including the basement, outside and in every sleeping area and bedroom. Replace their batteries yearly is recommended, before it begins to chirp. Two thirds (62%) of reported home fire deaths resulted from fires in homes with no smoke alarms or no working smoke alarms. The alarms make a difference between life and death - they need to be working! Working smoke alarms cut the risk of dying in half in reported home fires.

Colony Fire and Rescue will be hosting a FREE FRIENDS AND FAMILY CPR class at the Colony Fire Station on Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 6 p.m. This is not a CPR certification class, but instead focuses on teaching community members to help their friends, family and/or neighbors in case of cardiac arrest. Please sign up in advance at the Colony City Hall or by calling the Decker's at 852-3577.

Prepare for health insurance open enrollment beginning Nov. 15

MANHATTAN – If you haven't already, it's time for you and your family to review your health insurance options, as annual open enrollment in the Kansas Health Insurance Marketplace for 2015 coverage begins Nov. 15. Many employers and some public programs, such as Medicare, also use the fall as a time for annual enrollment or the renewal of health insurance plans.

"The Affordable Care Act requires that you are insured for at least nine months out of every year, or you will have to pay a penalty at tax time for being uninsured," said Roberta Riportella, Kansas Health Foundation professor of community health at Kansas State University. "There are some exceptions to the penalty, but for the most part, you should consider the benefits of being insured as compared to paying a penalty."

Generally, you can only buy health insurance coverage during annual open enrollment periods, but there are exceptions.

If you have a qualifying life event, such as losing coverage through a job, getting married, or having a child, you can change your health insurance outside of the open enrollment period. This is called a special enrollment period, Riportella said. It is best to take advantage of the open enrollment period, though, because it is difficult to change coverage if you don't experience a qualifying life event.

Specifications for enrollment in health insurance coverage, by type of coverage, include:

- Insurance coverage through an employer: your employer determines the open enrollment dates. The dates will likely vary from employer to employer. If you have a spouse, you will likely have two different open enrollment periods to keep track of each year. If you are not sure when your next job-based open enrollment period is, ask your employer.

- Insurance from the marketplace: for plans starting Jan. 1, 2015, the marketplace open enrollment period is Nov. 15 through Feb. 15

- Insurance through Medicare: Medicare's initial enrollment period is a seven-month window surrounding your 65th birthday, or for those under 65 and disabled, the seven months surrounding the 25th month of disability. Special enrollment periods for Medicare vary, and specific rules and timing can be found on the Medicare website. If a beneficiary has missed the initial enrollment period and is not eligible for a special enrollment period, the Medicare general enrollment period runs Jan. 1 to March 31 each year, with coverage beginning July 1 of that year.

- Insurance through KanCare: this is Kansas' Medicaid program. Applications for KanCare can be submitted at any time.

Tips for comparing plans and choosing the right plan

A health insurance plan, also called a policy, is a legally binding contract of usually one year between an insurance company and the insured. You should be given details of how the plan will work. Those details should include the benefits covered, how much you will pay and a selected set of health care providers called a provider network.

You should review several aspects of insurance policies before you choose which one is right for you and your family, Riportella said. Also, since health insurance plans change from year to year, it is important to review the details of your renewal contract. The plans could change on items such as provider networks and prescription drug coverage, as examples.

Different medical situations require more care than others, she said. Before examining the benefits in each plan, you need to first understand your current health care needs and identify if you're at risk for a particular need within the next year. You will be trying to match as best you can your predicted needs against the coverage and costs of eligible plans.

"Some future needs are not as predictable," Riportella said. "The best we can do is plan around the needs we know we have today."

The benefit packages within different plans will likely differ, but because of the Affordable Care Act, all plans are now required to cover at minimum the same basic set of benefits.

How much the plan will cost you in a typical year will likely weigh in your health insurance coverage decision. The premium is the monthly fixed charge you pay for the plan, regardless of how much medical care you use or do not use, Riportella said. That makes the premium the most predictable of all the costs.

If you are purchasing health insurance in the marketplace, bronze level plans will likely have the least costly premiums, and silver, gold and platinum plans will have higher premiums.

"As with anything, you get what you pay for," Riportella said. "If you pay more upfront in premiums, you will pay less for each service you use down the road. You also may get a more complete plan that covers more benefits."

"If you are relatively healthy and comfortable with carrying risk, you can choose a policy with a low premium such as a bronze plan," she added. "Those policies, however, are likely to have the highest cost-sharing arrangements. That means you could be paying large copayments or coinsurance for your care expenses. If you have a significant health event, that might bring you close to the out-of-pocket maximum—the maximum amount a person will have to pay for health care expenses within the year."

You could be in a situation where you and your family members are better off with different policies, she said. As an example, younger adults typically don't need the same coverage as their middle-aged parents. Policies for younger adults are usually much less expensive, which makes separate policies a reasonable choice. Further, sometimes spouses have different health care needs, so considering different policies might be the best option in that case also.

"If situations exist where family members might benefit from different plans, you should look at a variety of options," Riportella said. "Usually an employer offers only an individual plan or a family plan. Depending on income level and tax credit eligibility, you might benefit from finding a plan in the marketplace for the children or the spouse. This would especially be true if there is a young adult in the family who might be best off with a low premium cost but high deductible catastrophic plan."

Young adults under age 30, and some lower income individuals, are eligible to select a catastrophic policy with a low premium but high deductible. This type of plan requires you to pay out of pocket most of the everyday costs of health care except for preventive services, which are free of charge to the insured. But, for other health care services, the insurer begins paying for care after you've paid all of your health care expenses up to that high set deductible.

Those who are purchasing a plan in the marketplace might also be eligible for tax credits to help pay for premiums, which can make their plans more affordable.

Riportella said a family of four with an annual income less than $94,200 is eligible for this premi-

Golfers slosh through regional to state berth

COFFEYVILLE – AC golfers fought wind, wet conditions and nerve-racking rule changes last week at the Coffeyville 4A regional golf tournament, but came away with a 2nd place finish and trip to the 4A state tournament held yesterday at Dub's Dread in Kansas City.

"The girls had a challenging start to their day," said coach Nicole Wiehl, noting torrential rains which had soaked the course and the rest of the region previous to the meet. A change in tournament play had AC's sole senior, Samantha McCullough, playing with the four best players in the region instead of the typical team format.

"She held her composure and played very well," Wiehl said. "Through the first three holes she was only a stroke over par and leading the tournament. Course conditions and fatigue played a large role on the back nine where we started to struggle."

The 18 hole round took seven hours to play, Wiehl said.

AC shot a team score of 448 for an overall 2nd place finish. McCullough finished 5th with a 98. Sydney Holloran won a one playoff to take 8th with 108. Abbey Barnes was 14th overall with a 120. Miranda Akes was 15th with 122.

The outcome of yesterday's state golf tournament was unknown as of presstime Monday afternoon.

Chetopa blows out Crest 54-6

CHETOPA – The Hornets manhandled the Crest Lancers Friday night, allowing only a single Crest score early in the game and controlling the scoring in the 54-6 point-ruled win from that point on.

Crest's Brandon Brallier managed to find the end zone late in the first period on a 1 yard run. At that point the future had possibilities with a 16-6 score, but Chetopa opened up the throttle and encapsulated Crest from that point on.

The Lancers managed a mere 80 yards on offense and only 6 first downs in the game. Brallier led rushing with 42 yards on 6 carries. Austin Green had 16 on 11. Green also led the defense with 4 tackles.

The Bulldogs secured another bloc of times further back in the pack to score solid points as well. Paige Scheckel was 13th at 19:33.69, Eliza Sibley 14th at 19:50.17, Remi Hedges

Richmond UMC sets annual supper date

Richmond United Methodist Church will serve its traditional Beef-Noodle Supper Saturday, November 1st, 5-7:30 p.m. at the church. Prices are $8 for adults and $4 for children with carry-out boxes 50 cents added.

Co-hosts Sarah Peters and Linda Horstick said the menu includes locally grown beef, with noodles, and the usual side dishes which feature Brookville Slaw made by Janice McIntosh.

Along with the supper are a bake sale and drawing for prizes which will include art work by Mary L. Hall, framed photograph by Pamela Peters, needlework by Sarah and Frieda Peters, three books he's written by Todd Mildfelt, a K-State basket by Vinings, and other items.

The Richmond supper began in about 1983 or 1984 when Albert Dunbar offered to furnish the beef if everyone else would do his or her part. The Dunbars continue to supply all or most of the beef through the years, and others have found their specialties to prepare.

Golden Achievers 4-H Club members help with serving as a thank-you for the club meeting at the church. Marie Gardner is club leader.

An evening of great food and fellowship awaits you on November 1st at Richmond.

Facebook is dead; long live LinkedIn

Has your business erected the tombstone on its Facebook page yet?

Might as well. Since FB earlier this year started allowing only 1 or 2 percent of the posts on its free business, organization and musician/band pages to be seen in the news feeds of people who "like" your page, Facebook has effectively become a non-player in the realm of free advertising and promotion for businesses. The changes mean instead of your posts going directly onto the news feeds of your followers, folks now actually have to frequent your page to see your posts, which almost nobody does. Facebook would rather you pay them to "boost" your posts by varying degrees, which most of us don't want to do.

Enter LinkedIn. It's more business oriented in its origin than Facebook, and it's quickly eclipsing FB in terms of viability as a networking medium.

The key to LinkedIn for businesses and business people is to be active, build your network and get noticed by potential customers and clients. Here are some tips on generating sales leads:

- Share your knowledge. Participate in the discussion groups that are specific to your product or service. These are populated by people with problems or questions about topics in your realm. Since you're a qualified problem solver in your own niche, this is a natural environment for the leads you want.
- A straight Boolean search can yield direct contacts defined by your search criteria for LinkedIn or any other networking site. Let's say you've developed your own awesome salsa recipe that you want to promote to caterers in a certain area, and you want to pitch it to them. In the Google search bar, type www.linkedin.com, the word "AND" catering "AND" Kansas City.

Use your status update to ask questions, offer advice and industry-specific info, and to generate conversations with your connections. By maintaining a weekly post, you help to establish yourself as top-of-mind in the event that a connection moves into the market for your product or service.

After all, social networking is just like live networking without the chance of catching someone's cold - be present, be positive, and be ready to make a sale.

BUSINESS BEAT

Watt opens KC legal defense firm

Greg Watt, formerly of Garnett, recently opened The Watt Law Firm in the Kansas City, Mo., area.

Watt

Watt, a 1997 graduate of Anderson County High School, spent five years in the Jackson County Prosecutor's office prosecuting violent offenders in the Kansas City area. As a criminal defense lawyer, Watt received acquittals in the last three cases he took to jury trial with the most recent in Topeka where his client was found "not guilty" of two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

In its September 26, 2014 issue, the Kansas City Business Journal selected Watt for the prestigious "best of the bar" award in criminal defense. The selection was based upon nominations from his peers in the Kansas City legal community and his reputation as one of the most aggressive criminal defense lawyers in Kansas City.

He is the grandson of Estella Watt and Bob Boots. The Watt Law Firm can be found online at: www.kcmetrodefense.com

The alleged killing of four dachshund dogs last week by a Harris man to keep the dogs from being seized by state animal health authorities has made Garnett the target of outrage and legitimate interest from animal rights supporters nationwide. Danny Berry faces charges today in Anderson County District Court in connection with the incident in which he allegedly smashed one dog with a pipe and swung three others by their feet to smash their heads against dog houses and fencing, all apparently to keep state officials and a county deputy from seizing some 40 animals from his unlicensed kennel near Harris.

Saint Luke's Hospital has signed the first of three operating lease extensions with Anderson County Hospital. The original agreement, signed in 1995, has proven to be very beneficial for both Saint Luke's and Anderson County Hospital, according to the chairperson of the hospital board of trustees.

Kansas City Power & Light may be in the market for some windmill-generated electricity, and a proposed project to build a wind farm in southeast Anderson County may be a prospect for that business.

cal technician for Anderson County, and his former employer, Anderson County Hospital, was settled out of court late Tuesday afternoon prior to the beginning of the trial. The terms of the settlement are secret as part of the out-of-court settlement. Court records say Leinweber was suing the hospital for allegedly firing him in retribution for a report that he filed Feb. 10, 1993, after transporting a patient that had been involved in a vehicle accident to Lawrence Memorial Hospital. Leinweber was fired for filing a false report and alleged that the firing was retaliatory and in violation of state law. In a reply to the complaint, Anderson County Hospital said that he report was not accurate and was not filed in good faith.

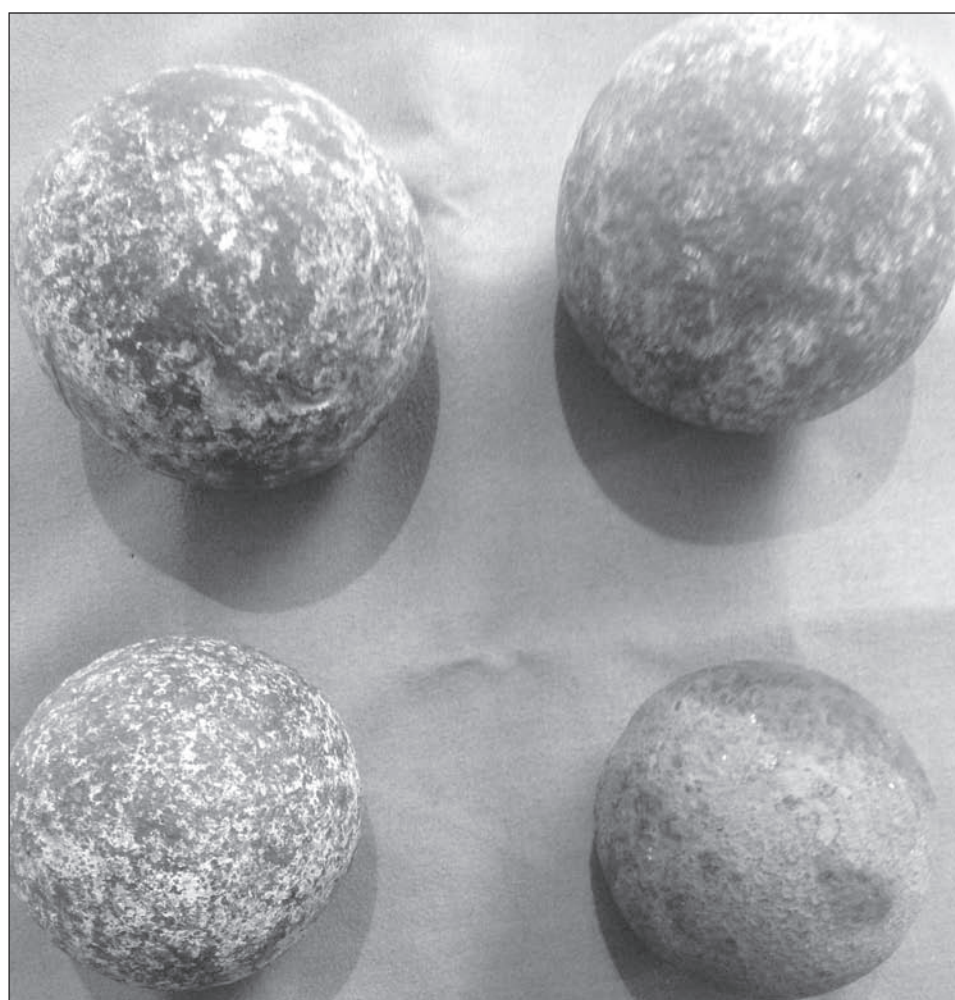

Telephone customers across Kansas will have to dial 1 plus the area code on all long distance calls, even those originating from within the caller's area code, starting Nov. 1. The new dialing pattern is required to handle future demand for telephone lines. The new dialing will free up the number of combinations of historically used area codes and add them to the pool for use as local number prefixes.

Lazy eye, the malady where the two eyes do not work together is a great matter of concern to parents in Anderson County, the Lions Cub members discovered Wednesday. Parents from all across Anderson County brought their children to Longfellow school in Garnett to be given the three tests which will turn up the affliction.

The Garnett Jaycee Women will be operating Casper's Friendly Castle for three evenings prior to Halloween. The project is to provide a safe and friendly atmosphere for those children who do not like haunted houses.

These four cannonballs are made of solid cast iron.

If these cannonballs could talk...

Surely by now you have figured out what these four artifacts are. If not, they go by different names: Field projectiles, Round shots, Solid shots and Cannonballs. For this column I will refer to them as Cannonballs.

Actually these four cannonballs have several things in common. First of all they are all round and made of solid cast iron. They all have a Civil War connection, even though each of them were found at different Civil War sites. Oh yes! Speaking of found, you guessed it! I found all of them with my trusty WHITES metal detector while stationed at NAS Memphis, Millington, Tenn. The two larger ones were found: one on a battle area near Holly Springs, Mississippi and the other one at the old CW Hospital/Retreat site near LaGrange, Tenn. The smaller two were found near earthen redoubts (forts) and narrow Gauge railroad lines near Moscow and Germantown, Tenn.

If only these cannonballs could talk, what a history lesson that would be.

Right now I just enjoy them being a part of my very small Civil War collection and they are truly neat conversation artifacts.

Chair Rock Bison Co LC, Greeley, ranked as seventh largest in registering the most Angus beef cattle in Kansas with the American Angus Association® during fiscal year 2014, which ended Sept. 30, according to Bryce Schumann, Association chief executive officer.

Angus breeders across the nation in 2014 registered 298,369 head of Angus cattle. "Our

Farm Bureau members serve on state committees

MANHATTAN - More than 75 Farm Bureau members of Kansas have taken leadership positions within their farm organization and will serve on the organization's agricultural advisory committees. Members on the eight state ag advisory committees surface commodity-specific issues, discuss solutions and make recommendations to the Kansas Farm Bureau board of directors.

"Having a solid group of committed members serve on our ag advisory committees means we have a strong grassroots organization," Steve Baccus, Ottawa County farmer and president of Kansas Farm Bureau, says. "Each committee represents an ag commodity that is important to our state, and our committee members represent the entire state of Kansas. That's KFB at its best."

Committee members include:

• Randall Bunnell, Anderson County, on the Wheat Committee

Committee members serve through Sept. 30, 2015 with one year appointments.

Kansas Farm Bureau represents grassroots agriculture. Established in 1919, this non-profit advocacy organization supports farm families who earn their living in a changing industry.

Candidates agree 'craphole town' comments uncalled for

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

LAWRENCE - Whatever their differences, opponents in the Kansas 2nd District Congressional race agree on one thing - the suspension of the communications director for the state's Democratic Party over online insults to three 2nd District towns was a good thing.

The Kansas Democratic Party fired Dakota Loomis Tuesday after a now-deleted post he made on a KUBasketball website in which he referred to Columbus, Cherryvale and Galena as "craphole" towns.

The towns, along with those in Anderson County, are in the 2nd Congressional District, and Republican candidate Lynn Jenkins and Democratic office seeker Margie Wakefield had plenty to say about the transgression.

"I am furious with the remarks Mr. Loomis made about the towns of Southeast Kansas," Wakefield said in a statement to the Review. "His comments show poor taste and even poorer judgment, and, to be quite honest, I do not find his remarks to be humorous at all."

The Pittsburg Morning Sun.

Loomis, of Lawrence, was vice-chair of the Douglas County Democratic Party in 2012 when Wakefield was elected chairman. The Jenkins campaign and other Republicans were quick to refute the comments last week before Loomis' suspension was announced.

"This joker is the mouthpiece for Paul Davis, Margie Wakefield and the entire Democrat party," a post on Jenkins Facebook Page relayed last Wednesday. "I call on Mr. Davis and Margie Wakefield to fire Loomis and issue an apology to the people of Southeast Kansas."

Apologizing for the incident state Democratic Party Chairman Joan Wagon termed the comments a "lapse of judgment" by one of the party's "hardest working employees."

"His action in no way reflects the attitude or feelings of the Kansas Democratic Party or myself," Wagon said.

In a press release issued Thursday, Loomis said, "I must first and foremost apologize for my callous, insensitive, and frankly asinine comment. I also realize as an employee and representative of the Kansas Democratic Party that my actions reflect not just on myself, but on all Kansas Democrats. I would ask that you not hold my own immaturity and stupidity against the great Kansas Democrats who are working every day to restore Kansas, especially those in Southeast Kansas. It is a privilege to work for such incredible candidates and party members and it pains me deeply to know I have insulted them and undermined their tireless effort."

The time has come for me to pay for 'Yesterday When I Was Young'

The song "Yesterday when I was Young", sung by Roy Clark recalls the life of one who went to great length to please himself. The artist sings, I ran so fast that time and youth at last ran out, I never stopped to think what life was all about, and every conversation I can now recall, concerned itself with me and nothing else at all.

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback than to be happy and do good while they live. That everyone may eat and drink, and find satisfaction in all his toil--that is the gift of God". This concept is missing in the words of the song. The song writer speaks of a life lived to please self. There is not enough money, pleasure or fame that one can acquire that can replace God in your or my life.

Don't forget to vote Nov. 4

As the 2014 election races toward the finish line on Nov. 4, candidates from both parties have stooped to their old tricks of slinging mud, name calling and finger pointing at one another. Why can't candidates do what's right for this nation and focus on issues?

Instead we are forced to put up with elected officials who grow the government, do-nothing and engage in gridlock.

What Kansas and this nation sorely needs is leadership and a willingness among all elected officials to work together for the good of this country.

What do you think the framers of our constitution and this republic would say about what's going on in all three branches of government today?

What would Washington, Hamilton and Jefferson think about our way of conducting the nation's business?

What would Kansas's own favorite son, Dwight D. Eisenhower say about the way we're conducting this state and country's business today?

What would Ike, Alf Landon, Andy Schoepel and other Kansas leaders of yesteryear think?

Profound?
Enlightening?
Telling?
Absolutely.

Where are the ideas for leading this great state and nation? Isn't that what they're supposed to be doing?

Farmers, ranchers and businessmen cannot, and do not want to engage in the same game of blaming one party for the charade going on in Washington and among some of our own state leaders. This is a shared shame and a weakness that is ruining our state and nation.

In spite of claims to the contrary, taxes continue to increase. The only way for the tax-and-spend cycle to be broken is to hold candidates accountable. The citizenry of Kansas and this country must demand candidates clearly state their positions on the issues.

Today's politicians and the

majority of the candidates have become so adept at ducking the issues. They rival a young Muhammad Ali's ability to float like a butterfly, always out of reach and accountability.

Not only do voters rarely have a chance to ask candidates questions, they have even less chance of receiving a worthwhile answer.

Some candidates also talk out of both sides of their mouth. They tell one gathering of voters one thing and others just the opposite.

They also barrage voters with wave after wave of rhetoric, hoping to obscure their real views. They're not called politicians for nothing.

At the end of the day, this year's election is just around the corner. Whether we like what's been happening in government or not, the mess we're in remains our own.

It's our system, and while it may appear broken, we still must vote. Past elections demonstrate rural voters can make a difference by their willingness to go to the polls.

Fiscal responsibility, a reduction in the size of government and increased productivity remain a sound prescription for this country's economic troubles. The bigger problem of cooperation and compromise while working together for the good of this country must be addressed as well if these remedies are to work.

Urge your friends, family and neighbors to cast their votes Nov. 4.

Improving safety can help put the brakes on fatalities

For the past several years in Kansas nearly two-thirds of those killed in crashes were not wearing seat belts.

"How many people in those crashes would have lived if they would have been wearing their seat belt? How many families and friends would not have had to suffer such utter devastation?" Kansas Department of Transportation Deputy Secretary Jerry Younger asked.

Younger spoke about improving safety as part of the national safety campaign Put the Brakes on Fatalities Day at a news conference at the Capitol today. The campaign strives to decrease traffic fatalities.

More than 120 members of Students Against Destructive Decisions from high schools across Kansas, as well as other transportation safety partners and law enforcement officials, attended the event.

Younger was joined by crash survivor Rachel Tharman, Lawrence Memorial Hospital Trauma Coordinator Kenna Young, and From the Land of Kansas Director Stacy Mayo.

Afterwards, students participated in a quick click challenge to show how quickly and easily seat belts can be fastened.

Organizations that work together on the annual Put the Brakes on Fatalities Day campaign with KDOT include the Kansas Turnpike Authority, Kansas Highway Patrol, AAA of Kansas, Kansas Contractors Association, Kansas Family Partnership, Kansas Traffic Safety Resource Office, Federal Highway Administration and the Kansas Society of Professional Engineers.

Trails can help rural economies

TOPEKA - Entrepreneurs and their communities know the challenge of attracting customers and visitors. Outdoor recreation is booming in Kansas, and the Flint Hills Nature Trail and the Kansas River National Water Trail attract large numbers of enthusiastic trail-goers looking for nearby services and activities. What can be done to attract and serve this market? That's the central question driving a series of four community meetings to be hosted by the Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism (KDWP), in partnership with USDA Rural Development, NetWork Kansas, the Kansas Small Business Development Centers, Advancing Rural Prosperity and the Center for Rural Entrepreneurship.

Attendees will learn how to leverage the trails to grow their businesses, attract visitors to their communities and boost the local economy. Businesses, organizations or groups interested in trail-related development opportunities are encouraged to attend one or more of the free meetings being held in their area.
