Local Alco store to close

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 11-25-2014 / Vickie Moss

City hopes early interest in building will result in new business for Garnett

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - With reality setting in that Garnett soon will lose one of its major retailers, city and economic development leaders are considering how to attract a new business to the site. The closing of Garnett's Alco store, along with the closing of all 198 Alco stores nationwide under terms of its bankruptcy, was announced late last week. The local store is expected to be closed by the end of January, and already has started a "Going Out of Business" sale with merchandise discounted between 5 to 30 percent. Store manager Dan Barcus twice said he was too busy to talk to The Review, but said previously the store employs 10 people. Company-wide, Alco employs about 3,000 according to a press release on the closing.

The loss of Alco is an economic blow to the city, and will result not only in the loss of a major retailer and employer but also a loss in property tax, sales tax and utility income. Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin said Alco pays between $2,500 to $3,500 per month in utilities, which would result in a loss of city utility revenue between $30,000 to $42,000 per year. She didn't have a breakdown of what Alco pays in sales tax, which also helps the city pay for projects like street repair and helps the

EKAE celebrates ethanol plant addition

New product lines to add 10-15 jobs at Garnett ethanol plant by next fall

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Blustery cold didn't cool the spirit of a gathering last week that kicked off East Kansas Agri Energy's new renewable diesel production facility, an addition that will expand the company's product lines and create an estimated 12-15 new jobs when it goes online next fall. "It's cold, but it's a pretty exciting day for us," said EKAE chief executive officer Jeff Oestmann. "This is a major step for our company, our investors and our community." The new project will add a facility that produces diesel fuel from corn distillers oil, which is already produced at the ethanol plant. It will also be able to use other inputs like soybean oil, animal fat and grease and so-called "yellow" grease - waste collected from commercial restaurants and other cooking facilities. The flexibility of inputs will allow the EKAE to use whichever is cheapest at any given time to produce its diesel, and to opt whether to sell its own corn oil or use it for diesel production. That option, Oestmann said, would allow the plant to monitor different markets and maximize overall margins. "The addition of renewable diesel production expands the product portfolio for the EKAE plant and will add value to the products we already make," said EKAE board of directors chairman Bill Pracht. Company officials said the move is a component plan that dovetails well with the gist of ethanol production. "It will allow us to leverage the strengths, technology and relationships that have made EKAE successful," Oestmann said in a press release on the event. "This project will help us grow our business sustainably and further mitigate risk by giving us greater flexibility in the renewable fuels marketplace." Oestmann said the company will invest between $12 million and $16 million in the project once complete, and should start using its own corn oil for production by September 2015. The new plant will require additional hiring of 12-15 workers, Oestmann said. Renewable diesel qualifies under both the "biomass-based diesel" category and the "other advanced biofuels" category in the EP's Renewable Fuel Standard, which is the mandate that requires certain amounts of renewable fuel be part of all transportation fuels. This diesel dramatically reduces greenhouse gas emissions compared to petroleum. Additionally, renewable diesel has a very low carbon intensity score under the low carbon fuels standard established by the California Air Resources Board (CARB), which provides West Coast market opportunities for EKAE.

USD 365 tries again on ACHS track facilities

Building put on hold for new bids, but bleachers approved

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - High construction costs have prompted USD 365 officials to make a course change in a plan to build an addition to the track and football field facility at Anderson County Junior-Senior High School.

Plans to build a new addition to the track and field on the west side of the school stumbled earlier this month when school board members learned the project would cost more than expected. Initially, Superintendent Don Blome suggested a project that would build new restroom facilities, locker rooms and concessions in a cinder-block building underneath a new set of bleachers. And although he

Judge rejects same-sex marriage applications

Recent court decision doesn't address all Kansas counties

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

OTTAWA - Same-sex couples in Anderson County and other counties in the Fourth Judicial District will have to wait a little longer to find out if they can get married, after a recent court decision failed to decide the matter statewide. Judge Phillip Fromme decided to wait to approve any same sex marriage licenses until further order either from the U.S. Supreme Court or the Kansas Supreme Court, Fourth Judicial District Court Administrator John Steelman said Monday. Fromme's decision will affect

ANDERSON COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS NOVEMBER 10

Chairman James K. Johnson called the meeting of the Anderson County Commission to order at 9:00 a.m. on November 10 at the County Commission Room. Attendance: James K. Johnson, Present; Eugene Highberger, Present; Jerry Howarter, Present. The pledge of allegiance was recited. Minutes of the previous meeting were approved as presented.

Road and Bridge

Lester Welsh, Road Supervisor, met with the commission. Discussion was held on contracting for diesel. Lester has contacted LeRoy Co-op to see if they were willing to bid for a year. LeRoy bid $2.75 and Lybarger bid $2.90. Commissioner Highberger moved to accept LeRoy Co-op's bid of $2.74 a gallon for Ruby Fieldmater Dyed from December 1, 2014 through December 31, 2015. For the months that require #1 Diesel the differential of Dyed #1 over the Ruby price will be figured every week. Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0.

Noxious Weed

Commissioner Howarter moved to purchase a new furnace for the Noxious Weed office at a cost of $1,970 from Wolken Plumbing and Electric. Commissioner Highberger seconded. Approved 3-0.

Executive Session

Commissioner Howarter moved to recess into executive session for 15 minutes for the discussion of trade secrets with Dennis Arnold on conference call and Phyllis Gettler, County Clerk, in attendance. Open meeting to resume at 9:35. Commissioner Highberger seconded. Approved 3-0. No action after executive session.

HVAC

Dan Harden, BG Consultants, met with the commission. Discussion was held on issues that will come up with the HVAC project. It was suggested to acquire a coordinator that would work towards making sure all aspects of the project are covered in terms of moving the offices and coordinating the work.

RWD #5

Paul Stephens, RWD #5, met with the commission. A public hearing was opened to annex land into the water district. Commissioner Howarter moved to approve the annexation of additional land to RWD #5. Commissioner Highberger seconded. Approved 3-0.

Appraiser

Marion Johnson, Appraiser, and Steve Markham, Assistant Appraiser, met with the commission. Marion informed the commission that Steve has completed all the course work for becoming a County Appraiser. He is currently waiting for the certificate from the state. Marion questioned if the commission were in favor of waiting until March for Steve to take over. Steve would like to have Marion remain until then to get through another appraisal cycle. They will be needing an additional employee in the office and would like to bring someone in January 1st to start learning before the switch takes place. Commission approved.

Marion informed the commission there is a level in GIS that was not included in the original implementation. They presented estimates for continuing to have R & S Digital do all the GIS work or purchasing the additional layer and training a current employee to maintain the program. Commissioner Highberger moved to take the appraisers recommendation and purchase additional GIS software. Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0.

Project 17

Heather Morgan met with the commission for an update on Project 17. She reported that they are working on improving the economy in SE Kansas. There are four levels they are working on: economic development, education, work force, and health.

was pleasantly surprised to find bids on many parts of the project - including the bleachers - met expectations or came in under expected costs, he and board members balked at the high cost of the actual building.

As a result, school board members are sending the building back out for bids and will move the building out from under the bleachers. Board members decided to go forward with the rest of the project, however, and approved several phases of construction, including dirt work and utilities, as well as the bleachers.

Blome said he expected the 3,000 square foot building would cost about $150 per square foot, or roughly $450,000. He didn't provide exact figures from the initial bids, but said they came out to about $200 per square foot. That translates to a cost of about $600,000. Blome initially projected the entire project could cost about $1 million, but the district has enough money in its capital outlay fund to pay for the project and still have money left.

At a Nov. 7 meeting, board members said the building was their priority and would not approve other phases of the project until they learned more about their options for the building. At a special meeting Nov. 20, they met again to discuss the project and approved all phases except the building. Blome is waiting on new architectural plans for a less-expensive building that will be separate from but near the new bleachers, and then will send the building out for bids.

"We felt we can get a better project," Blome said of the change in plans.

Construction on the bleachers is expected to be completed this spring. Blome said previously the building could be built at the same time if it were in a separate location, but did not provide a timeline for completion of the entire project.

The property, including the building and land, is valued at $588,030, according to information provided by the Anderson County Appraiser's office via a website. The company paid a total of $27,147.37 in real estate taxes and $944.12 in taxes on personal property like office equipment last year. The property is owned by Realty Income Corporation of Abilene.

The goal now is to find a company or business for the building, Martin said. She met last week with Dennis Arnold, economic development director for the city and county, to discuss the situation. They plan to put together a prospectus on the building, including its value and available square footage, in hopes of attracting new business to the area.

Since news of Alco's bankruptcy was announced Oct.

12, city staff have fielded what Martin called "gentle inquiries" from companies looking to move to Garnett. However, at that time, everyone was hoping the Alco store could remain open, she said.

"We responded that we had no buildings the size they would need, but now there is one," she said.

In addition to the economic impact of the store's closing, the community also will lose an advocate and supporter, Martin added. The company made donations to help with various community groups, and each year at Christmas was the site of the Angel Tree to help people give gifts to families in need. The Angel Tree also is at Garnett City Hall. Martin said she did not know impact the store's closing would have on the Christmas collection effort.

Alco opened in Garnett Sept. 20, 1997, at 700 N. Maple St. along U.S. 59. At the time, it was part of a series of developments on the northwest part of the city that started with the new Anderson County Jr./Sr. High School on K-31 in 1992. Around the same time Alco opened, plans were announced to build Country Mart at the intersection of U.S. 59 and Park Road/K-31.

The Alco company was founded in Abilene in 1901 and its headquarters remained in Kansas for decades. It changed its name from Duckwall-Alco in 2012. Last year, the company moved its headquarters to Coppell, Texas. Most of its stores were in towns of fewer than 5,000 people and regions of fewer than 16,000 where there is no direct competition from national or regional broad-line retailers.

Alco had $474 million in net sales from continuing operations in its latest fiscal year. That represented a 2 percent decline from the year before. The company closed 14 stores early in the current fiscal year.

The company filed for bankruptcy in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas on Oct. 12. At a bankruptcy hearing Thursday, Nov. 20, the court approved an order from the company's creditors to close all 198 Alco stores, including 23 in Kansas.

Sales at the stores began Friday, and the company plans to sell more than $260 million of inventory, fixtures and equipment. Assets at the company's 352,000-square-foot distribution center in Abilene also will be sold.

Will we publish gay weddings – again?

Like Yogi Bera said, it's déjà vu all over again. But this time for real.

That's what I was thinking when I saw a question come across our Kansas Press Association publisher's email listserve last week from a friend of mine who owns a small paper out at Sterling.

In a nutshell, he wondered with the ensuing probable legalization of gay marriage in some if not all the counties in Kansas, if any of the state's newspaper publishers had determined what their policy would be toward publishing gay wedding announcements or stories from their ceremonies.

Hmm. Cue flashback sequence.... We've sort of already been there, as some of you recall. In a sense, we're far ahead of our time.

You may remember the spring of 1990. I had a photo of two of my buddies from college I'd shot at one of their recent weddings with both of them all dolled up in their tuxedos. It was almost April Fool's Day and I guess the Muse of Mischief had my full attention.

I ran the photo in The Anderson Countian, one of the predecessors of The Anderson County Review, with a write-up from their faux wedding and a tiny "HAFD" (happy April Fools Day) typeset beneath the photo as the only lead that the notice was bogus. The cue slipped by most of our readers. The response was immediate and, shall we say, vigorous.

Some people laughed. Some people didn't. Our readers ran the gamut from outright hilarity to angry indictments of my parentage. A sociology professor at KU got her Bierkenstocks in such a bunch she tried to have me thrown out of the Kansas Press Association for gay bashing. So much for tolerant, free-thinking academia.

But that backlash provided an opportunity for readers of our papers to gather and explore their own opinions on homosexuality and what would eventually be their acceptance or non-acceptance of gay marriage. The ensuing 24 years has brought a lot of water under the gay bridge (which I'm betting is sort of lavender in color?).

It's always been and will probably always be at least a social oddity, but the idea of "gay" isn't as taboo in our community as it was in 1990. We've all felt revulsion at the antics of the likes of the Westboro Baptist Church; easier research available these days through the proliferation of the Internet has yielded the common knowledge that gays have played a prominent role in science and culture dating back centuries, from Leonardo da Vinci to Elton John to Doogie Houser.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

Openly gay people make up our community in Anderson County the same way they do others everywhere. Just about all of us have figured out we either know or have known somebody who was gay, and we figured out there was no secret gay ray gun they were going to use that could turn any God-fearing straight person gay.

Having said all that, I have to say personally, I'm not 100 percent comfortable with homosexuality or gay marriage. But I don't like the mess that modern Country Music has become either, and I'm not trying to drive a stake through its heart. Will I still smirk at gay jokes and laugh when Cam on "Modern Family" flicks his wrists? Of course I will. No matter how acceptable "gay" becomes, men of my era are always going to think it's funky.

So the short answer is, yes, The Review will publish gay wedding announcements and stories when they're submitted to us – not because we're placard carrying gay rights supporters, but because there isn't any reason not to. I don't expect an onslaught of them, but after the first one or two I don't expect it to be any big deal.

There are, in my opinion, bigger fights to fight in our community and better reasons to get upset. And that's no foolin'.

This is not to hurt any of the churches feelings in this town, but I came from a dynamic church in Oklahoma and they preached fire and brimstone. I have yet to find that here in Garnett. I go to these churches, they're talking about money or they're talking about politics. We need to get back to fire and brimstone. You need to come out of church feeling like you need to improve your life, not that it's okay. Just a suggestion. Thank you. I'm still looking for that right church.

Is Black Friday racist? Just wondering.

With ALCO closing I think the city fathers should talk to Wal-Mart about putting a store in Garnett. They put a Wal-Mart Express into Columbus, which is about the same size as Garnett and about 25 miles either way from the nearest Wal-Mart store, about the same as Garnett. I hope somebody in charge is doing something about this because all we need in this town is one less place to shop.

Is it just me or does the new generation of kids these days not believe in sending thank-you notes for weddings or baby showers? Back in the old school everybody always did that, but nowadays you don't see that very often. I just wonder if it's just me or something else. Please respond. Thank you.

Why Jonathan Gruber deserves our thanks

The epic search of the Greek philosopher Diogenes for an honest man is finally over. His name is Jonathan Gruber, an MIT economist once known as an intellectual architect of Obamacare, although his status is being rapidly downgraded by the law's supporters with every one of his uncomfortably frank utterances about President Barack Obama's signature initiative.

Video surfaced of Gruber saying at a panel discussion at the University of Pennsylvania last year that the law was written in a deceptive, nontransparent way to exploit "the stupidity of the American voter." Gruber swiftly went on MSNBC to explain that his comments should be discounted because he was speaking "off the cuff." Then two other videos surfaced of him saying much the same thing at different venues.

Gruber has done us all a favor by affording us an unvarnished look into the progressive mind, which values complexity over simplicity, favors indirect taxes and impositions on the American public so their costs can be hidden, and has a dim view of the average American.

Complexity is a staple of liberal policymaking. It is a product of its scale and reach, but also of the imperative to hide the ball. Taxing and spending and redistributive schemes tend to be unpopular, so clever ways have to be found to deny that they are happening. This is what Gruber was getting at. One reason Obamacare was so convoluted is that its supporters didn't want to straightforwardly admit how much the law was raising taxes and leveraging the young and healthy to subsidize everyone else.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

Gruber crowed about the exertions undertaken to make an unpopular tax on expensive health-insurance plans, the so-called Cadillac tax, more palatable. It was levied on employers instead of employees. No one realized, Gruber explained, that the tax would be functionally the same even if not directly imposed on workers. This wasn't a one-off deception. This kind of sleight of hand is crucial to the progressive project, which always involves imposing taxes, regulations and mandates at one remove from the average person so he or she won't realize that the costs are passed down regardless.

The debate between conservatives and liberals on health-care policy and much else comes down to how much average Americans can be trusted to make decisions on their own without the guiding, correcting hand of government. An assumption that Americans are incompetent is woven into the left's worldview. It is reluctant to entrust individuals with free choice for fear they will exercise it poorly and irresponsibly.

So Gruber deserves to be listened to, even if he ultimately got it wrong. The public is smarter than he and other Obamacare supporters give it credit for. It has never believed the magical, deliberately deceptive promises about Obamacare, or supported the law that continues to be a drag on the Democratic Party.

Rather than congratulating themselves on their cleverness, the law's architects might better reflect on how, even with crushing majorities in the House and the Senate, they had to lie and obfuscate to get Obamacare passed. That is damning commentary, not on the American public, but their misbegotten handiwork.

Can Legislature 'fix' low voter turnout in spring elections?

What's wrong with this sentence?: Voter turnout at spring elections for school boards and local government offices is too low, less than turnout at fall elections for state and national government offices, and that's a problem the Legislature can fix.

The grammar is fine. What's wrong with the sentence is that while grammatically good, it just doesn't matter.

Legislators are looking hard at moving those spring elections where school board members, city councils, mayors and some other local officers are elected in fall elections in either the even-numbered years state and federal officials are elected or maybe the odd-numbered years when there are virtually no elections but voters could at least enjoy fall foliage when they drive to their voting places.

The issue that is being touted is that at those spring elections the voter turnout is low, half or less than the turnout at the August primary elections or November general elections.

And, that is described as a problem, or so Kansans are being told.

Now, it would be nice, of course, if every voter voted. But not every legal registered voter has to vote. It's optional. Sure, we've all been brought up on the power of the vote, the responsibility of citizens to choose their leaders, but practically, some of those citizens just don't care. And that, too, is their right.

Local candidates typically have less money to spend on campaigns than do state and national candidates. But, we're thinking that if a city council candidate put out a flyer that he/she will have your street snowplowed first, or boosted the water pressure so you didn't have to move the sprinkler as often, that might be a reason to vote in the spring. Or a school board candidate might propose that grade cards be simplified, just even letters, so your neighbor doesn't brag about his kid's C+ grade when yours brought home just a flat C. Might be a reason to make the drive to vote in the spring.

STATE COMMENTARY

But, while voting is a right, it's optional, and if people aren't bright enough to figure that the level of government that has the most direct effect on their lives isn't worth the time and work to vote, well, that's their decision.

Interestingly, one part of a potential "fix" by the Legislature for this presumed problem is making those local elections, once they're moved to a fall ballot, partisan. Yes, a Republican or Democratic mayor or city councilman or school board member.

Why partisan? Well, one likely reason is that if a school board member is elected as a member of a political party, rather than just someone interested in education, at some point, the party will "claim" responsibility for that candidate and presumably encourage the candidate to govern the schools in a way the party likes. More taxes, less taxes, teacher unions or discouraging teacher unions, shorter cheerleader skirts or whatever.

Suddenly, the school board member or council member or mayor is getting direction from the party. Good thing or not, that's how things will move with making those elections partisan.

And, for those folks who don't bother voting on local officials in the spring election, well, they've already parked the car and shown their photo ID, so they might as well go ahead and vote on every race on the ballot. That's whether they know the candidates or have read about them or know or care about the local issues those local candidates campaign on.

Is there an upside to November elections and partisan local officials? That's hard to tell. Local officials generally aren't enthusiastic about it. Maybe that's because they know their voters, or maybe because they just aren't sure about putting the city council race at the bottom of a ballot with highly charged political races.

Or, maybe it's because they think that the people who care enough about their local government to make a special trip in the spring to vote are the people they want deciding who makes the local government/school decisions.

If there's no problem, what do you fix?

Now that Garnett is losing its ALCO store, maybe it'd be a good idea if our city leaders would get together and get an ALDI's store in that building. It would bring people from the towns around Garnett to do their shopping here in Garnett and we could use the tax revenue. Just an idea our city leaders will reject, because it's a good idea.

I don't know whether I missed it or not but there are boxes out at the hospital to save your medicine bottle caps to be used for something out there. Yet there's been nothing in the paper about it. Let's put something in there so people know they need to save these.

Garnett BPW meets for holiday meal

The Garnett Business and Professional Women met on November 20, 2014. As usual, the United Methodist Women of Welda provided a wonderful Thanksgiving dinner.

Agenda items this month included discussion and planning of events for the Holiday Boutique to be held at Prairie Belle's on December 7, upcoming Woman and Business of the Year awards, and the Women's Fair in March. Those attending state conference in October also shared with the rest of the members their experiences at conference and spread the enthusiasm of attending a conference.

As always, members would enjoy having you at a meeting. The club will not have a business meeting in December - instead we will celebrate the Christmas holiday with a dinner and Secret Sister gift exchange at the home of our local President, Bonnie Deiter. The next business meeting is January 15, at 6:30 pm in the Archer Room at the Garnett Library. Start the new year off on the right foot and join us for a wonderful year of fun, community building meetings and events.

Notice of city zoning hearing

(Published in The Anderson County Review, Tuesday, November 25, 2014)

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE GARNETT PLANNING COMMISSION

The Garnett Planning Commission has received a request from staff to consider a general amendment to the Zoning Regulations to allow limited residential uses in the B-1, B-2 and I-1 zones and has received one application for a variance. TAKE NOTICE that both matters will be considered on the 16th day of December, 2014, commencing at 7:00 p.m. at the Commission Room at City Hall, 131 W. Fifth Ave., Garnett, Kansas.

Sitting as the Planning Commission, to consider the request from City Staff to amend in general the Zoning Regulations to allow certain residential uses as accessory uses to the primary business, commercial and industrial uses now permitted in the B-1, B-2 and I-1 zones.

Sitting as the Board of Zoning Appeals, to consider the application for Variance filed by Richard Parks to permit placement of an accessory building on the corner lot, adjacent to applicant's residence at 103 S. Elm St., Garnett, Kansas.

The particulars of the staff request for amendment and the complete application for variance may both be viewed during regular business hours at City Hall.

The purpose of the hearing is to take comments from the public which will be considered by the Planning Commission in making its recommendation to the governing body or its decision regarding the two matters. At the hearing, any party may appear in person or be represented by an agent or an attorney.

Davis wins national swine production proficiency award

LOUISVILLE, KY -- Tristan Davis of the Central Heights FFA Chapter in Kansas was named the national winner of the Swine Production - Placement Proficiency award program at the 87th National FFA Convention & Expo, Oct. 29-Nov. 1, 2014, in Louisville, Ky. Proficiency awards recognize FFA members who excelled as agricultural entrepreneurs, employees or volunteers while they gained hands-on career experience. Swine Production - Placement is one of 49 FFA proficiency award categories offered at local, state and national levels. This award is sponsored by Akey, as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. Tristan Davis works for his fathers show pig operation. They have fifty sows and they focus on breeding, farrowing, and selling seven different registered breeds and crossbreeds. Tristan began by learning how to medicate and grind feed. Today, he assists in everything from selecting boar semen to marketing the show pigs. Tristan is a member of Central Heights FFA and is supported by his parents Jack and Lisa Davis and FFA advisors Aaron Cubit and Trent Page.

ACHS FFA places in national contest

Members of the Anderson County FFA Chapter in Kansas were one of 39 teams participating in the National FFA Milk Quality and Products Career Development Event (CDE). The event was held in conjunction with the 87th National FFA Convention & Expo in Louisville, Ky. The team, led by advisor Jeff Gillespie, was awarded 2nd Place and a Gold emblem. Members also competed for individual awards with 151 other participants. Adam Kropf received a Gold emblem, Melissa Kropf received 10th and a Gold emblem, Alexis Pedrow received 4th and a Gold emblem, and Bailey Wolken received a Silver emblem. The top ten individuals and the national winning team members received cash awards to recognize their success in the event. The Milk Quality and Products CDE is sponsored by Culver's and Dairy Farmers of America. The National FFA Milk Quality and Products CDE is a competitive event that allows students to prove their knowledge about the recognition, selection and management necessary for quality milk and dairy products. Participants must complete a written exam on milk production and marketing, evaluate milk samples for flavor and quality, identify cheeses and characteristics and complete milk acceptability tests in the team activity. Each team competed at local and state levels to earn the privilege to represent their state at the National FFA Convention & Expo. This event, held at the Kentucky Exposition Center in Louisville, Ky., is one of many educational activities at the national convention in which FFA members apply classroom knowledge to real-life situations.

LOUISVILLE- James (Scooter) Kice of the Central Heights FFA Chapter in Kansas was one of 46 participants in the National FFA Extemporaneous Public Speaking Career Development Event (CDE). The event was held in conjunction with the 87th National FFA Convention & Expo in Louisville, Ky. The participant, led by advisor Trent Page, was awarded a Bronze emblem.

select one topic from a choice of categories, have thirty minutes to prepare a four to six minute speech, and respond to five minutes of questions following delivery. This event, held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel and Kentucky Exposition Center in Louisville, Ky., is one of many educational activities at the National FFA Convention & Expo in which FFA members practice the lessons learned in agricultural education classes.

The top four individuals received cash awards to recognize their success in the event. The cash awards and the extemporaneous public speaking event are sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Federation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. The American Farm Bureau Federation is proud to sponsor the National FFA Organization and its members as they pursue their mission of premier leadership, personal growth, and career success.

The National FFA Extemporaneous Public Speaking CDE is designed to recognize outstanding FFA members for their ability to prepare and present a factual speech on a specific agricultural issue in a well thought-out and logical manner. Members

Japanese Drum Duo Entertains GES Students

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 11-25-2014 / Photo Submitted

Garnett Elementary School students enjoyed a Japanese drum ensemble, One World Taiko, on Wednesday, Nov. 19. This talented duo performed on a variety of drums. It was interesting to find out how these taiko drums are a part of the Japanese history and culture. This assembly was made possible by the GES PTO. Several GES students were taught a song during the assembly. At right, Tyler Feuerborn, Gracelyn Whalen, Caleb McDonald, Samuel McAlpine, Ireland McLeod along with Mrs. Foltz (3rd grade teacher) perform for their peers.

Disruption gets you attention

Occasionally you should do something in your business to make people say, "hey, did you see..."

This is one of the prime precepts of Guerilla Marketing – the idea of doing effective, attention-getting advertising without paying much or anything for it. And the mindset you develop by doing it is the prime driver of how to sell stuff.

Three simple, cheap ideas that I stole from creativeguerillamarketing.com:

1) Have a fake protest: People become alerted and respond to things that are out of the ordinary. If you saw a bunch of people marching, chanting and carrying placards outside a local business – it would get your attention, right? Get some of your employees (or family members if you're a mom & pop operation) to stage a protest outside your office for an hour or so some morning – just make sure it stretches over the lunch hour when there's generally a little more traffic. What do you protest? Let's say you own a flower shop – your protest might be against bad lilies. You can show anybody who stops by what good lilies are and what they smell like. Protest the problems that your business solves!

2) String coupons on your trees or frontage: Again going for the visual disruption caused by the out-of-the ordinary – you can use the tree branches or tie a piece of fishing line between the nearest utility pole and your business and string coupons on it (just make sure it's above head-high, so you don't clothes-line anyone). They'll flutter in the breeze and create an attention getter, and people can tear one off and keep it to use. You'll make the sale prompted by the coupon, and you'll stick out in your customers' minds.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks
Review Publisher

3) Poster-ize the place: With today's desktop publishing software on just about everybody's computer, you can create cool posters (or better yet, find an art student at your local high school, university or community college) in 11x17 size. Just take the PDF file of the art to a local print shop that has a color copier, and they'll print them usually for $1 or less- you'll probably need no more than 20. Stick them en masse to your building, your neighbors building (with permission) or vacant structures. Don't leave them up more than a week, however, because they lose their visual spice after people are exposed to them a few times.

The net of it is: Think visual disruption, and you'll get attention.

Free concert set after Garnett parade

GARNETT – The musicians who highlighted outdoor events this past summer at Garnett's Second Saturdays promotions will mass together for a free concert Saturday night after the Christmas parade in downtown Garnett.

"This will be the first time we've gotten to see them all in the same place at the same time," said Tami Hiestand, chairman of the Garnett Creative Business Partnerships committee, which sponsored Second Saturdays. "We had them spread out at different times and locations during Second

Saturdays, so we're excited to be able give people a chance to see them all in one show.

The concert will be held at The Studio at 107 W. Fourth, just off the Garnett Square. There's no admission but seating will be limited and first-come, first-served. Start time will be 7:30p.m.-8p.m., after the conclusion of the Garnett Chamber of Commerce Christmas Parade, which begins at 6:30 p.m.

Performers include solo artists Ethan Marshall of Shawnee, Ks., and Jordan Rickabaugh from Garnett, as well as duet acts Angie Huff and Tori Ponce of Wellsville, and Honkytonk Legend, comprised of Garnett musicians Eric Brummel and Dane Hicks.

Creative Business Partnerships is a gathering of area businesses, city leaders and the local chamber of commerce with a mission to invigorate the Garnett business community. Meetings are held the third Wednesday of each month and new members are welcomed and encouraged. Contact Tami Hiestand for more details at tamih2008@yahoo.com.

Second Saturdays 'Second Chance' drawing set for parade night Nov. 29

GARNETT - Don't feel like a loser because you feel like you never win when you enter a drawing. Second Saturdays participating businesses want you to feel special! Not only do these participating Second Saturday businesses offer exclusive specials and sales inside their stores and restaurants on the second Saturday of each month, but they are giving you a second opportunity to win a fabulous basket of prizes PLUS $50 in GOLD DOLLARS!

The Creative Business Partnerships Committee, in conjunction with Garnett Tourism, have saved all of the Golden Ticket drawing tickets that were turned in during the past Second Saturday activities. All of those tickets will be combined into one large drawing that will take place just prior to the kick-off of the Garnett Christmas Parade on Saturday, November 29, 6:30 p.m.

Another great reason to be sure you attend the 44th Annual Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce Christmas Parade. For more information about Second Saturdays, the Golden Ticket Giveaway, and other special events, please visit www.ExperienceGarnettKS.com.

Happy Thanksgiving, and giving thanks

Thanksgiving 2014 is here and it's a special time to stop and give thanks for everything we have. For those who read the Holy Bible and believe God's word is true, know that he tells us pray without ceasing and to give thanks for ALL things.

Every year at this time, I love to personally thank everyone who has touched my life concerning my hobby of archaeology in so many different ways during the past year.

As with every year that passes by my first three Thank You's never change.

They are to my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, my precious wife KAY and to the entire Staff at the Garnett Review.

As I write this column there is no particular order of names and please forgive me for the misspelling of names.

Gardner earns degree from K-State

MANHATTAN—Wes Gardner of Garnett was among nearly 570 students who completed degree requirements from Kansas State University this summer. The graduates hail from 63 Kansas counties, 39 states and 28 countries. Of the university's newest graduates, 23 also earned graduation honors for their outstanding academic work.

Degrees earned include 313 bachelor's degrees, 206 master's degrees, 52 doctorates and five associate degrees. Some students earned multiple degrees. Gardner graduated with a bachelor of science degree.

For outstanding academic performance, five students graduated summa cum laude, the university's top graduation honor; eight students graduated magna cum laude; and 10 graduated cum laude. Summa cum laude graduates earned a 3.95 or higher cumulative academic average at Kansas State University. Students qualify for magna cum laude with an average of 3.85 to 3.949, and students with averages of 3.75 to 3.849 graduate cum laude.

four counties in the judicial district: Anderson, Franklin, Coffey and Osage. At least 25 counties in 12 judicial districts in Kansas have started issuing marriage licenses in the state amid confusion over a series of recent court decisions and pending lawsuits.

However, Gov. Sam Brownback's administration said state agencies are not recognizing same-sex marriages while the state defends its gay marriage ban in federal court. That means even if a couple gets married in Kansas, they could have problems with such things as adding a spouse to health insurance, filing income taxes or changing a name on a driver's license.

Fromme has denied three same-sex marriage applications filed in the district in the past several weeks. An Anderson County couple applied for a marriage license in October after a court decision appeared to clear the way for same sex marriage in Kansas, but Fromme denied the application because of various conflicting legal opinions at the time. Within the past week, he denied same-sex marriage applications from a couple in Franklin County and another in Coffey County, Steelman said. Only those three same-sex marriage applications have been received in the district, he said. The state requires a three-day waiting period before a marriage license can be issued.

The issue of same-sex marriage in Kansas has been constantly changing in recent weeks, requiring judges and court officials to stay abreast of the latest rulings.

In early October, the U.S. Supreme Court said it would not intervene in a lower court decision that overturned same-sex marriage bans in five states. The ruling applied to Kansas, which was part of the same federal circuit, and essentially would have allowed same-sex marriages to proceed. Two days later, on Oct. 9, a Johnson County district judge told clerks to start issuing same-sex marriage licenses. Attorney General Derek Schmidt filed a lawsuit against Moriarty and asked the Kansas Supreme Court to temporarily halt issuing same-sex marriage licenses.

The ACLU Foundation of Kansas then filed a lawsuit on behalf of two couples denied marriage licenses. A U.S. District Court judge ruled Nov. 4 that Kansas' ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional, but stayed his order until Nov. 11. The U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday, Nov. 12, ruled that Kansas must allow same-sex marriages to go forward while the state defends its ban. However, Attorney General Derek Schmidt said that decision applied only to the two counties in the ACLU lawsuit.

Tuesday, Nov. 18, the Kansas Supreme Court said Johnson County could issue same-sex marriage licenses but did not address whether same-sex marriage should be allowed in all Kansas counties. As a result, some counties began issuing same-sex marriage licenses while others have not.

Kansas voters in 2005 approved a constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriage.

Same-sex marriage now is legal in 33 states including Kansas, plus the District of Columbia.

Behind all bluster of the German press we may read a resolute Teuton determination to continue attacking and a confidence in ultimate triumph of German, which are almost sublime. An effort is to be made this week to burst through to Calais. Upon this task a half a million German troops will be engaged within the next few days. Perhaps 100,000 Germans will lay down their lives to the frantic effort to form a pathway for their survivors in obeying the kaiser's desperate order that Calais be taken by Dec. 10. Give thanks each and every day

Every Thanksgiving I spend some time reflecting on Psalm 100 which says, "Enter his gates with thanksgiving and his courts with praise; give thanks to him and praise his name. For the Lord is good and his love endures forever, his faithfulness continues through all generations."

Our Thanksgiving holiday was established as a day to give thanks. This Psalm is for giving thanks also. When the writer was inspired to compose this Psalm I believe that God had in mind that thanksgiving would be a part of our daily lives. God did not create us just to give thanks to him as we feel like it. In Psalm 139 David says to God, "Where can I go from your spirit? Where can I flee from your presence?" This Psalm illustrates we can never be far from God. God desires communion with us and this is one thing we should be thankful for.

Many times we fail to see all the things we should give thanks to God for. It is natural for us to dwell on those things that seem to cause us problems. God is fully aware of our problems but in spite of these problems we are to praise him. I have found that the best remedy for my problems is to count all the things I have to be thankful for not dwell on my problems.

The second part of the Psalm explains the goodness of God.

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

In John 6:37, Jesus says, "All that the Father gives to me will come to me and whoever comes to me I will in no wise cast out." This is made possible by the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ. God did the planning, Jesus implemented the plan and the Holy Spirit empowers each person with the ability to accept Jesus Christ.

Sometimes God works in us and through us in ways we don't understand. It is not always for us to understand what God is up to. It is up to us to accept by faith he is right and good. In 1st Timothy 4:45 we read; "For everything God created is good, and nothing is to be rejected if it is received with thanksgiving because it is consecrated by the word of God and prayer"

Jesus said in John 6:37, "Whoever comes to me I will in no wise cast out." There is the invitation. If you come you will begin to experience the thanksgiving of God which will lead you to the goodness of God.

Sewing club meets for lunch

Zig-Zag Sewing Club had a carry-in luncheon meeting Nov. 5 in the First Presbyterian Church hall in Osawatomie. Jackie Leach and Grace Donham were hostesses. Fifteen members and three guests attended. Guests were Darla Peterson of Greeley, Linda Prothe and Norlita Kaul of Osawatomie. Rev. Kaul later joined as new member.

President Grace Donham conducted the meeting. Treasurer Wanda Roberts has asked to be relieved of her duties due to personal issues. Jackie Leach was today elected as new treasurer for 2015, and will also fill in for the remainder of this year.

Ms. Leach reported last month's revenues, including proceeds from the annual white elephant auction. Today she began collecting 2015 membership dues.

Midland Hospice of Ottawa will be the recipient of lap quilts and head coverings for cancer patients. Members will bring those items to our next meeting.

Joyce Scovill presented a membership report, noting needed changes and additions.

Election of 2015 officers was held. Congratulations to President Grace Donham; vice president Nancy Machnicki; secretary Tootie Russell and treasurer Jackie Leach.

Ideas for 2015 community service projects were offered. No decision was made. Discussion will resume next month.

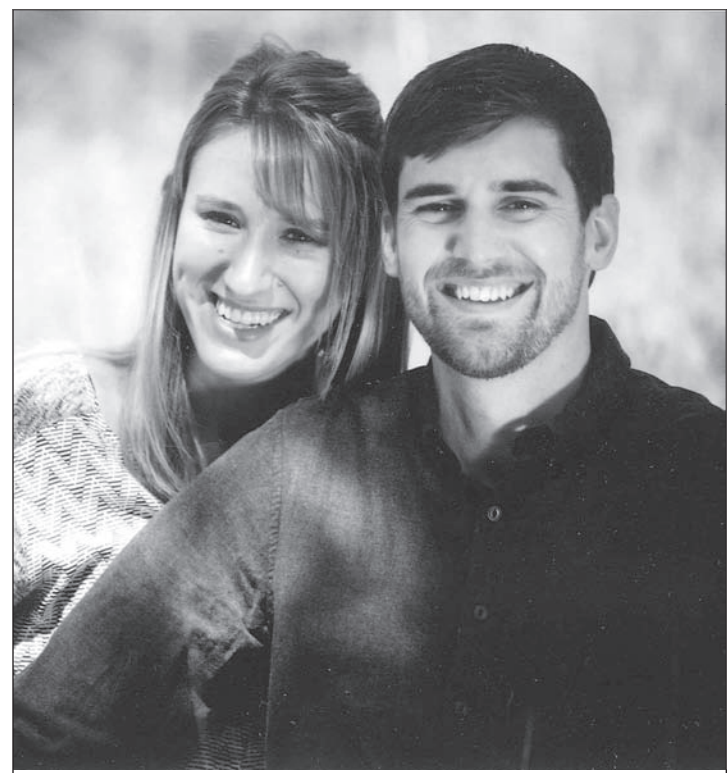

Zig Zag members brought their annual donations of non-perishable food items for a local pantry. President Donham shared a new request telling of the urgent need of a local family for any and all assistance. Members agreed unanimously to give the food items to that family. Further, they approved a $200 donation to them from the club treasury.

Margery Hunt showed a variety of beautiful quilt tops she's completed, both hand-and machine-pieced. Wilma McIntosh showed a lovely purple quilt, and Gayle Metobo displayed several fun children's quilts.

Mildred Burk and Berneice Peterson will host our Christmas luncheon party and gift exchange. It will be Dec. 3 At the Greeley Cafe.

to hunter's education to health-related activities.

The couple married in November 1967 and have lived in Garnett since then. They served on the original steering committee of the Anderson County Relay for Life and continued in that capacity throughout the event's lifespan. Bonnie also served on the original steering committee for Healing for Health.

Both of them served with the Boy Scout Troop 126. Don became Scout Master in 1989 and served in that position for more than a decade. He received the National Lamb Award from the Lutheran Church for his work with the Church.

He also helped for the first hunter's education classes in Anderson County in 1973, and helped teach the class since 1976. He recently received the Kansas Hunter's Education Instructor of the Year Award for Region 5.

Don also is a member of the Sons of the American Legion and the Patriot Guard.

Even at Christmastime, the couple never slowed down. They currently serve on the Spirit of Christmas committee. For more than 16 years, Don served as a "Santa's Helper" who visited parades and area schools.

They are members of the Trinity Lutheran Church of Garnett, where Don serves as an elder and president of the congregation and Bonnie serves as treasurer.

Don is retired from the Kansas Department of Transportation and currently works for Cook, Flatt & Strobel Engineers and for Anderson County. Bonnie retired recently from Goppert State Service Bank, but continues to work there part-time.

The couple's son, Nathan, died in 1996. They said the people of Garnett and surrounding communities did more for them at that time than they could ever repay.

This year's parade also will feature a few surprises, including a "Second Chance Second Saturday Drawing" before the parade at 6:30 p.m. The Creative Business Partnerships Committee, which organizes the Second Saturdays events will give away $50 in gold dollars and a gift basket featuring items from local businesses. Tickets have been collected from all past Second Saturdays activities, and tickets will be drawn until someone wins.
