Student threat investigated

Police check out report that student threatened to bring weapon to ACHS

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Police will be more active at Anderson County Jr./Sr. High School after a report that a student threatened to bring a weapon to the school late last week.

The report continued to be investigated Monday morning by the Garnett Police Department and Anderson County Sheriff's Department. Garnett Police Chief Kevin Pekarek said no one had been taken into custody in the incident, but did not rule out the possibility of that happening.

According to the report, a student Thursday threatened to bring a weapon to ACJSHS in connection with some type of altercation. School officials investigated the matter, took disciplinary action against the student and notified police.

A letter was sent home with students Friday afternoon.

"Many times these threats may not be perceived as credible, but school officials are going to consider all threats real," the letter, signed by principal Kenny Kellstadt, read.

The letter said there will be a greater police presence at the December weather follows 2014 pattern

Hit-or-miss rainfall continues as year comes to a close

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A year marked with weather inconsistencies is approaching its end the same way — with extreme variations in temperature and precipitation.

With only a couple weeks left in 2014, the area is more than 8 inches short of average rainfall for the year. But overall, it's been hit or miss when it comes to rain in Anderson County and Garnett. Some months have been wetter than normal, while others were extremely dry.

Late fall and winter months were no different, with October bringing in 6.35 inches of rain. That's well above average. October typically brings about 3.61 inches of rain.

But November fell well below average, with just 0.40 inches of rain the entire month. The only real snowfall of the season fell Nov. 17, when a half-inch of Workers with Mid-Continental Restoration of Fort Scott work to fix a seal between the main courthouse building and the tower Tuesday morning, Dec. 9. Separation between the building and tower allowed water to seep into the attic, especially when storms rolled in from the southwest, which often set off fire alarms in the 112-year-old building, County Clerk Phyllis Gettler said. The age of the building means it takes regular maintenance to keep it in working order, she and county commissioners have said. Commissioners also are considering a new HVAC system for the building.

County to study courthouse space issues

Commissioners want to know how space is used before deciding on HVAC system

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Before Anderson County Commissioners decide how to heat and cool the 112-year-old county courthouse, they want to see if there are more efficient ways to use the building.

For several months, commissioners have considered replacing the courthouse's old, inefficient heating system and window air conditioning units with a new HVAC (heating, ventilating and air conditioning) system. The cost of such a system could run as high as $1 million to $1.5 million, Anderson County Commission Chairman Jim Johnson said. But before commissioners make a decision whether to move forward with the new HVAC, they're going to take a hard look at space inside the courthouse and other county-owned buildings.

"If we're going to go to that kind of expense, we want to do it right," Johnson said.

Over the next few months engineers will conduct a "space analysis" of the courthouse and other county-owned buildings like the annex and county road equipment maintenance building. The space analysis will show commissioners exactly how space inside those buildings is being utilized, and where changes can be made to make the building more efficient.

Some offices at the courthouse, like the county treasurer's office, for example, are crowded and busy. Other offices, meanwhile, see little public traffic and have smaller staff in a larger space.

"There's also usable space in the basement," Johnson said, adding that at one time the basement was not usable because of foundation problems that allowed water to seep into areas. But the foundation was repaired several years ago, making it more likely that more basement space could be used.

During the space analysis, engineers

Commissioner Howarter seconded. Approved 3-0. Mid States Materials is opening a new site and they would like the county to purchase a certain amount of material that they would then crush and we could go in and load when needed. Lester is hesitate to agree to pre-purchase at this time. He has looked at the site the city is requesting the county build a road at for their new industrial site. Lester is hesitate to do the road as he feels the project is more work than the county has time to do.

will examine the building and interview department leaders before suggesting recommendations. Johnson said the study will give commissioners a blueprint for future changes. Depending on what the engineers recommend, commissioners may want to introduce changes gradually over the course of many years.

The study likely will be completed sometime this spring, perhaps by March, Johnson estimated.

Once they know where people will interact inside the courthouse, they'll know the areas that need proper heating, cooling and ventilating.

If commissioners decide to upgrade the HVAC system, it's possible the changes could be made in phases to minimize disruption to courthouse activities and county business.

The county has enough money in its reserves to pay for the HVAC system without issuing bonds or raising additional taxes, Johnson said. They also could consider using some of the $3 million owed to the county for back taxes on stored gas. The U.S. Supreme Court denied a lower court appeal in October, effectively ruling that government entities could tax stored gas held in caverns in the Colony area by Southern Star Natural Gas Pipeline.

"That might be a source" commissioners could use to pay for expensive maintenance and upgrades to the courthouse, Johnson said.

"Any time you can do a project without raising taxes, I think it's a good thing," he said.

Whatever decision is made about the HVAC system, it will be made with a different set of county commissioners. Johnson lost the November election to Independent Les McGhee, who will take over the post in January. McGhee, who has not held public office before, will need to tackle the matter with longtime commissioner Eugene Highberger and first-term commissioner Jerry Howarter.

Johnson said he believes the space analysis and HVAC system improvement will be an important part of maintaining the courthouse for future generations. In the past decade or so, the county has invested significant money into repairs like the foundation and windows. Just last week, a building restoration crew from Mid-Continental Restoration of Fort Scott worked to fix a seal on the courthouse roof because of separation between the main building and the tower. Older buildings require regular, costly maintenance, Johnson and County Clerk Phyllis Gettler said.

"I appreciate the work all previous commissions have done to maintain our courthouse. It's a beautiful building, but as it gets older, it does cost more to maintain it," Johnson said.

snow contributed 0.06 inches of moisture. November typically sees about 2.50 inches of precipitation.

December, like October and several other months this year, already falls into the "wet" category with a couple weeks to go and snow likely later in the week. So far, 2.43 inches of precipitation have been reported at the official weather collection point at the Garnett Industrial Airport. That includes a two-day total of 1.48 that was collected Dec. 6 and another 0.93 inches recorded Monday morning, Dec. 15. December typically brings 1.90 inches of precipitation.

Local rainfall has followed a yo-yo pattern all year.

January, February and March were dry months with just 1.02 inches of rain for those months combined. But April changed things, bringing in a whopping 5.60 inches, nearly double its average.

Mother Nature reversed course again in May, bringing in 5.03 inches or about half as much as average for the month.

But June added 5.4 inches, about its average, followed by two dry months. The total for July and August was 4.55 inches, about half of what normally falls during those two months.

Rain soaked the area in September (4.34 inches) and October (6.35) before drying up in November (0.40) and getting wet again in December (2.43).

December also saw extreme highs and lows in temperature, reaching its lowest temperature of 17 degrees on Dec. 2 and its highest, 61 degrees, this past Monday morning, Dec. 15. The National Weather Service at Topeka has forecasted more seasonal weather this week, with high temperatures expected to hover around the mid- to upper-30s and lows in the mid- to upper-20s. Snow could move in Wednesday night, with a 40 percent chance that the white stuff will fall overnight. A 30 percent chance of snow remains through Friday. Temperatures could warm to 39 degrees on Sunday.

Did you celebrate Dec. 15?

You probably didn't hear a bunch of balloons popping or firecrackers exploding on Dec. 15.

There likely weren't be any big speeches offered or parades through town on that day either.

But if there was ever cause for a celebration in our country, that date is it.

For it is the day we recognize as the birthday of the U.S. Bill of Rights.

Dec. 15, 2014 is the 223rd anniversary of the ratification of the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution, which spell out succinctly the individual rights we hold so dearly in America.

Our founders packed a lot of punch into the First Amendment, basically outlining the "freedom of expression" we hold so dearly in America.

Freedom of speech. Freedom of the press. Freedom of religion. The freedom to peaceably assemble. The freedom to petition government for a redress of grievances.

Certainly, we as citizens hold those five freedoms as dearly as any others because they guarantee each of us the right to stand up and be counted in America. And they undergird the other nine amendments by giving us the right to speak out if we believe our other rights are being trampled.

Those freedoms provide us with the tools to exercise that great American pastime — to dissent. If we don't like what the government is doing, we can express our opinions loudly and clearly, in print, on the street corner, online, across the airwaves or across the coffee shop table.

If we want to effect change in America, we know we can march in protest, write our members of Congress, fight City Hall, get out and vote, write a letter to the editor, create our own blog or choose a thousand other ways to get our message across.

We have seen in the past few months how exercising the First Amendment can drive our national dialogue:

- Public outrage over domestic violence by National Football League players led to a national discussion about how we can more effectively deal with abusers and educate others on the issue.

STATE COMMENTARY

DOUG ANSTAETT, Kansas Press Assoc.

- Disagreement over what constitutes justifiable reasons for law enforcement officers to use excessive force continues to spark impassioned dialogue today.

- Differing opinions over whether climate change is a real threat — or even real — have permeated our discussions.

- How our nation should deal with threats around the world often took center stage during the year.

- The Ebola virus and its potential to threaten the entire world ignited an international debate about how to stop the disease in its tracks.

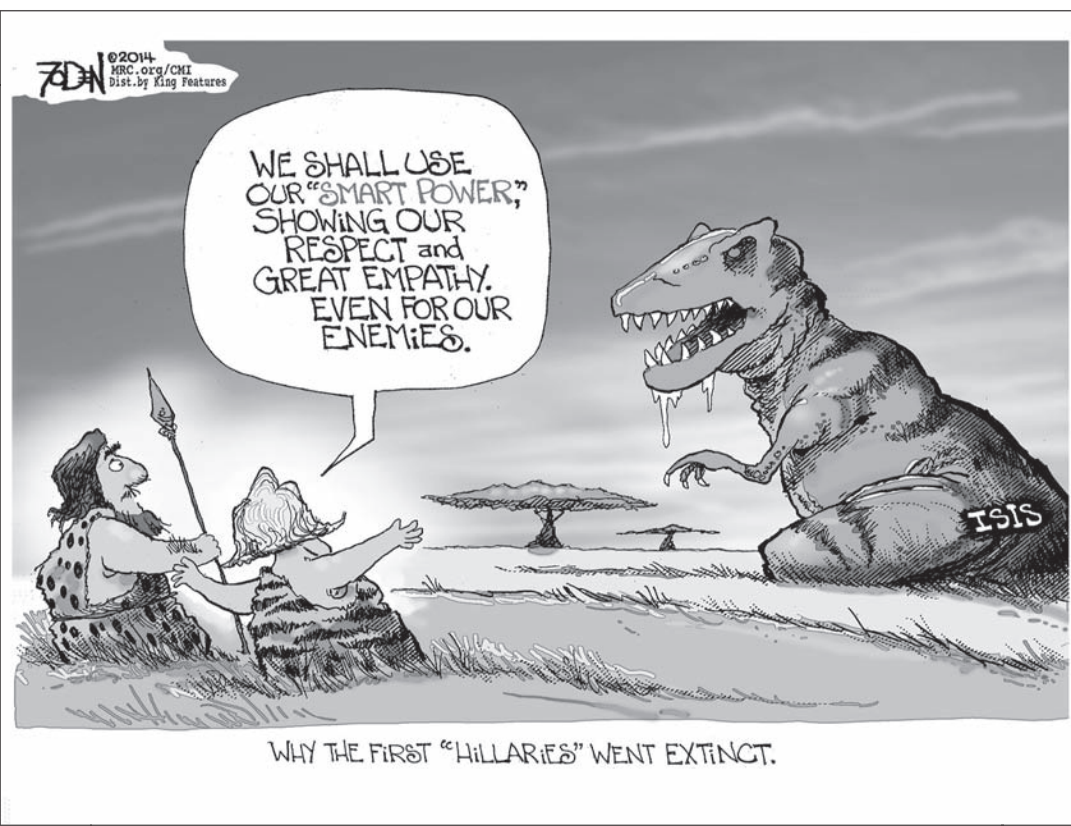

Our freedom to "discuss" is at the core of our being. We may not agree on much of anything, but we do cherish the right and opportunity to express ourselves.

So as we observe this 223rd anniversary of the U.S. Bill of Rights, say a word of thanks to George Mason, James Madison and others who made sure those rights were codified as the first amendments to our nation's Constitution.

They exhibited true foresight in recognizing that the answer to expression we don't like is not to suppress that speech, but to encourage even more speech from those with differing opinions.

We call that freedom.

This is to the person that called in about the church thing and the turkeys. I go to church every Sunday, I love to go to church every Sunday. I love to listen to God's word. But I don't like listen to people stand up and beg for money every day. So if you don't got the money to buy it, don't buy it.

Only an idiot would suggest the city get rid of its police department. Are you really that stupid or did you just get a speeding ticket this week and now your shorts are in a knot about it? I'll bet if your kid was in a car wreck and laying there in the road bleeding you'd sure want someone to get there before a highway patrolman could drive in from Westphalia or a county deputy could drive in from Kincaid. And slamming a cop because he lives with his parents? What business is it of yours who they live with? Sounds like you just a jealous jilted spouse. Get a life or at least some common sense.

Yes, I wanted to say thank you to the businesses downtown and out on the highway that have decorated their windows and inside their stores so pretty for the holidays. You have really made our town look beautiful this holiday season. Thank you.

Yes I'd just like to say I'm with the person that called to the Phone Forum this week. If you don't like your church, just quit and go somewhere else. Don't just stay there only to bad mouth it. Thank you.

I have every right to flash my lights and warn other cars about a speed trap coming up. Cops are supposed to be doing their jobs for public safety not just to fill the coffers of the city or county with money from the fines and the court costs they get for writing tickets. When Garnett laid that speed trap down by the ethanol plant a year or so ago when the highway was torn up and the detour ran through there, the paper said they wrote $10,000 in tickets in just a few weeks. If they arrest me for flashing my lights I'll sue their (deleted) and we'll go all the way to the Supreme Court because it's a violation of my rights. Thank you.

Christmas at the Battle of the Bulge

"Sir, this is Patton talking ... You have just got to make up Your mind whose side You're on. You must come to my assistance, so that I may dispatch the entire German Army as a birthday present to your Prince of Peace ..." -- Prayer of Gen. George S. Patton, Dec. 23, 1944

It is with Patton's plea to the Ultimate Commanding General that Stanley Weintraub opens his book, "11 Days in December: Christmas at the Bulge, 1944." It's the tale of the worst Christmas for American soldiers since Valley Forge.

The Allied breakout from Normandy after D-Day had convinced Gen. Dwight Eisenhower that the war with Germany would be over by Christmas, but as the Allied advance slowed, the Germans planned a counterattack through the Ardennes forest. Behind the cover of the thick forest and the horrid weather, the Germans scored initial successes, creating the "bulge" in the Allies' line.

The troops fought in conditions that would, in other circumstances, have been a winter wonderland, among evergreen trees freshly covered in snow. The inclement weather favored the Germans, delaying reinforcements and neutralizing Allied air superiority. American casualties reached at least 80,000 throughout the course of the battle.

Soldiers who were lucky created makeshift Christmas trees by hanging grenades on pine trees. But GIs who were captured by the Germans were packed into boxcars in unsanitary conditions and got almost nothing to eat. "They filled the time wanly singing carols," Weintraub writes. "The Germans complained that it kept them awake and threatened to shoot if the songs didn't cease."

At the front, German loudspeakers broadcast across the lines, "How would you like to die for Christmas?" Americans didn't intimidate so easily. One American soldier in the encircled city of Bastogne commented to another, "They've got us surrounded -- the poor bastards." When a German commander demanded the surrender of the Americans at Bastogne, Gen. Anthony McAuliffe famously responded "Nuts!"

Gen. Patton, who had been looking forward to thrusting toward the Saar region of Germany, instead had to relieve Bastogne. Earlier, he had badgered his chaplain to pray for optimal conditions for an offensive. The chaplain noted "that it isn't a customary thing among men of my profession to pray for clear weather to kill fellow men." Undeterred, Patton asked, "Are you teaching me theology or are you the chaplain of the Third Army?"

Patton distributed a printed prayer for good weather to his troops and made his own appeal, noted above. The weather improved, and Patton wrote in his diary, "A clear, cold Christmas, lovely weather for killing Germans, which seems a bit queer seeing whose birthday it is." By early January, the Germans were forced to withdraw from the Ardennes, and the Allies were at the Rhine by March.

One schoolmaster returning to his blasted classroom after the battle found a message scrawled on the blackboard from a distraught German officer: "From the ruins, out of blood and death shall come forth a brotherly world." Unlikely as it seemed at the time, he was right. The Allied victory created the predicate for a free Europe at peace.

Brownback will get what he wants... so what's that?

Gov. Sam Brownback: Fiendishly clever...or not.

Boy, how often do you get to write that about a governor?

Here's how this shakes out.

Brownback, of course, signed into law massive income tax cuts two years ago, and while the cuts were bigger than he wanted, he's got them. And, for a very conservative governor, he is safely into a second four-year term (unless some more attractive job pops up).

From that position, Brownback can pretty much decide how much government he wants Kansas to have. Brownback is a small government guy, or at least a smaller government guy.

So, he's proposed that because the state can't spend more money than it takes in each year, he'll meet this year's projected $278 million shortfall largely by drying up all the excess cash sitting around in state agencies. His tactic? Transferring about $200 million in those funds—ranging from the Bank of the Kansas Department of Transportation to new appropriations to the state's pension system to the State General Fund, and actually cutting some expenditures this fiscal year.

If the Legislature goes along, Brownback will have met the duty to balance the state budget...and drained the state of virtually all spare change for use in the upcoming fiscal year.

If the Legislature goes for the plan (and some lawmakers want to go back into this year's budget and make cuts, which Brownback is expected to discourage), Kansas will have to finance next fiscal year's budget, which starts

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

July 1, with just the tax revenues it takes in.

We're looking at estimated spendable revenues for the upcoming fiscal year of $5.8 billion, compared to the $6.3 billion that the Brownback plan would see spent for this fiscal year which ends June 30.

Just doing the subtraction won't show it, because there are other expenditures that are automatically going to rise, but it means the state will have to cut about $650 million from this year's comfortable budget. That's a dab over 10 percent in cuts that legislators will be looking at in the upcoming session.

If you're a fan of smaller government, this is a brilliant ploy. If you're not a fan of smaller government, well, Brownback has made sure you'll have to prove it by raising revenues while mid-term Brownback gets to watch what sort of campaigns lawmakers muster for election to the House and Senate.

Here's where the fiendishly clever business may come into play.

Brownback can suggest a budget that makes those cuts to keep the state in the black, which automatically means dramatic spending cuts or program shrinkage, or the elimination of programs...or he can restructure the state's taxes to finance a smaller cut in state spending.

That's taxes, yes, but taxes Brownback is interested in. Not income taxes, of course, or any increase in corporate taxes, but maybe sales taxes. And, hey, they'll gripe, but cigarettes and booze probably don't cost what they're worth if you gotta have them...

Oh, and remember that there is more than $6 billion in economic activity that is exempt from sales taxes including most services ranging from legal and accounting to, apparently, lap dances, but nobody's ever gotten a receipt for those...

So, it appears that Brownback is putting legislators into the position where they approve the spending cuts that are in the future—and how often have we heard the phrase "living within your means"—or finding some new revenue source. Or, of course, just not financing services Kansans demand, which means local units of government will have to pick up the cost of those services which means higher local property taxes or fees or some such.

This might just be devilishly clever. Or not.

Bulldogs seek redemption in 2014

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – It took the Bulldogs a while to wake up to the 2013 season last year. But the team lost seven seniors to graduation, and like they say – 2014 is a new ball game.

Garnett suffered through a 4-18 season in 2013 but came alive in the sub state tournament, dumping Burlington in the opener and then leading Iola in the finals until dropping the win in the 4th period. Head coach Steve Lyon hopes the memory of that sub state tournament has stayed with his returning lettermen from last season.

“We should be fighting for league champs and making a run at sub state,” Lyon said of 2014-2015. “Wellsville, Osawatomie and Prairie View look to be the favorites in the (Pioneer) league, but we hope to surprise some teams this year.”

The Bulldogs return with some juniors who’ve been consistent on the court since they played local Bidly Ball as tykes. Returning lettermen include juniors Derrick Nelson, Chase Ratliff, Jake Rundle, Mason Skiles and Trey Ahring, along with seniors Josh Potter, Andrew Vaughn and Jacob Anderegg, Zeke Hermreck, Nick Levy, Trevor Johnston, Zane Phelps and John Rundle round out the underclassmen Lyon says the team will be depending on this season as well.

“We will play an aggressive man to man defense all over the floor,” Lyon said, hoping to make the most of the team’s basketball knowledge, speed and quickness. “On offense we plan on taking advantage of our speed and outside shooting to win games.”

AC girls approach season with strategy

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – The key for the ACHS girls team this year is going to be a defense that forces shots from the outside and an offense that is aggressive but patient.

“We want to stop the dribble penetration and allow only one shot,” said head coach Tim Bremerman, who starts his fifth year at the helm of the Lady Bulldogs. “We’re encouraging more girls to be scoring threats to make it difficult for teams to stop more than 1-2 girls.”

It’s a strategy that’s taken a while to coalesce. AC was 10-13 last year, managing a second place finish in the Pioneer League. The squad lost veteran player Tayler Porter to graduation but brings back a host of seasoned talent and some solid varsity newcomers – all of whom Bremerman said will all be key to the team’s plan for 2014-2015.

Senior forward Smantha McCullough is back this year with a 8.7 point-per-game and 4.8 rebound/game average that earned her an All-Pioneer League Second Team selection last year. She’s the only senior and will have to lead her team as well as perform on the court. Junior forward Paige Scheckel was a First Team All League pick last year as a sophomore and AC’s second leading scorer last season. Three years of varsity experience makes her a force on the court.

Additional lettermen coming back to the season include juniors Maci Rockers and Madison Ratliff and sophomore Maycee Ratliff. “They’ve gotten another year old and another year better,” Bremerman said. “They have a better understanding of what we are trying to accomplish here and we look to them to get more shots up and be even more aggressive on defense.”

Others making a home on varsity this year are sophomores Katie Lybarger, Lexi Lickteig, Jasmine White and Emily Fritz, who Bremerman expects will be working to earn playing time.

Bremerman said a major advantage AC has this year is a team chemistry that has connected its members and helped with the flow of play.

“It’s looking good right now with everyone on the same page creating offensive opportunities for each other.” He said that chemistry will have to continue for the team to meet its goals in a league which has taken on a new look this year.

“We’re looking to get 15-plus wins this season and fight for a league title,” Bremerman said. “We are also keeping our eyes on a sub-state championship and making the trip down to Park City for the 4A DII state tournament. With the addition of Santa Fe Trail to our league and (with games scheduled with) Parsons and Girard, we’re going to face a couple of teams we haven’t faced in the past. It’s always good to play someone different.”

He said he thinks graduation losses were heavy on most of the Pioneer League teams from last year, except for league champs Iola, which has nearly everyone back from last year’s solid team.

Members of the AC junior varsity include: Emma Porter, Jasmine White, Adri Pedrow, Tregon Tuersey, Alexis Feuerborn, Shylie Scheckel, Emily Fritz, Gabby Spring, Samantha Nickell, Jade Todd, Kathryn Williams, Lexi Lickteig, Miranda Akes, Katie Lybarger and Grace Urquhart.

Vikings reboot with new coach, new starting five

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND — Every now and then a year comes around when graduation or circumstance wipes a team's slate clean, and you start all over. It's a clean start, but the advantages of the past are over.

That's more or less the theme at Central Heights this year, after the team lost all five of last season's starters to graduation last May and started over with a familiar face — CHHS athletic director Doug North — as head basketball coach. That means a new system and new direction with players who gained experience last year but will now have their own potatoes in the pressure cooker.

"We have to play at a faster pace and control the tempo of the game," North said. "Our strengths are our perimeter play — our ability to play hard and Jacob Pryor (a junior) in the post. We're not as big in the post as we were last year, so we are a more outside team this year."

"We're learning a new system of play which will be a process during the season," North said. "It'll take time to implement. We just want to try and improve each time out."

The Vikes lost Jordan Horstick, Tyler Hendron, Tristan Davis, Tanner Erhart

and Koby Robertson to graduation. Last season's Vikings went 10-11 and lost their first sub state tourney matchup to Osage City.

Returning lettermen along with Pryor include Chase Brown and Gavin Holler, both seniors, and junior Merrick Brown. North said he'll also be looking for playing time from juniors Matt Percy, Marcus Watson, Zele Smith, Logan Speaks, and sophomores Cole Speaks, Cameron Hampton, Ethan Shields and Cade Masingale.

North said he expects Wellsville and Osawatomie to be the top returning teams in this season's Pioneer League.

Vikings need to solve mental equation

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND — It wasn't that the Central Heights Viking girls didn't have the metal to make a success out of last season — but they may not have had the mental.

"We started out the season 3-1 with a big win against Spring Hill," said fifth-year head coach Scott Lane. "After that we lost confidence and lost a bunch of games by three points or less." CHHS ended the season 7-14. The mental angle is an area Lane says will be a focus this season.

"We want to continue to get better at the fundamentals and hope that gets us over the hump this year. I think another goal is to be a confident bunch and not let close losses affect us like last year. We need to be stronger mentally."

The Vikes lost Kenzie Hayward and Whitney Kraus to graduation in May, but return a core of lettermen with decent height and some unique qualities.

At 6'1", senior Sydney Meyer earned first-team Pioneer League honors last season and a statewide 3A honorable mention. Lane says she's a rare find of commitment and dedication — hard worker always bent on getting better.

Tami Schaefer is a 5'7" senior forward with a blue collar attitude — an energetic post player with a make-it-happen approach to the game.

Lane says 5'5" junior guard Regan Markley is another player to watch in the 2014-2015 season. "She has the potential to be a great defender and scorer," Lane said. "She has a lot of intangibles that can't be coached."

Other returning lettermen from last season include 5'2" sophomore Sara Bell; 5'7" sophomore Megan Davis; 5'9" sophomore Tess Cotter and 5'7" senior Amanda Raby. Rounding out the roster are freshmen Emilee Sheldon, Jasmine Clancy, Lindsay Burson, Shelby Hettinger, Olivia Stockard, Jency Woods and Paige Stockard and junior Lindsay Folsom.

In terms of competition, Lane says the Vikings won't have to look far to find tough teams this season.

"I think our league will be very competitive and very even," he said. "Iola looks to have the best team in the league based on last year's results."

For the Vikings, Lane said success will be achieved by increments.

"Our goal is to get a little bit better every practice and every game," he said. "We have to be solid every night on the defensive side of the court. We can't afford to play a game in the 50s this year."

Speed, shooting key to Lancer season

BY DANE HICKS

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COLONY – The 2014 Crest Lancers don't have a lot of size on their side, so head coach Travis Hermreck is banking on a "blitzkrieg" style approach this season to overcome opponents with one of the Lancer's advantages – speed.

Only three of this year's Lancers top 6 feet. One of them, Hayden Seabolt, at 6'0", is a freshman.

"We're quick, and we can shoot the ball from outside," said Hermreck, who's starting his 9th season at the reins of the Crest basketball program. "A big key for us will be our ability to defend despite our lack of size."

The 2014 season will have a push-back feel for the Lancers. With last year's 10-12 win/loss record, it was the first losing season for the team in eight years, and the team ended its season in the sub state finals at the hands of Chetopa. Brock Ellis, who shot at 13.2 average on that season, as well as Landon Stephens, were both lost to graduation last year.

The 2014 squad returns some solid experience in senior Austin Green and juniors Hunter Frazell, Kellen Ramsey, Evan Godderz, Brandon Brallier, Garrett Sipe and Colton Strickler. They'll face a schedule that Hermreck says is one of the toughest they've have seen in a while, with the 1A Lancers matched primarily against 3A and 2A teams.

"We have to play fast and bring a lot of defensive pressure," Hermreck said. "A key to our success will be wearing out our opponents."

Three goals will guide them, Hermreck said: getting back to a winning season, making it to the state tournament and grasping a lower division Three Rivers League Championship.

Bulldog grapplers aim for season of control

GARNETT – The 2014-15 Bulldog wrestling squad is young and small, but 3rd year head coach Jason Brown says tough conditioning of the body and mind – and the examples of a couple of state qualifiers last year – will make the Bulldogs formidable this season.

Lee Koch and Dallas Cox both qualified for the 4A wrestling tournament last year, and Koch managed a 5th place finish at the 182 pound mark. Both, along with varsity letterman Storm Pracht, were lost to graduation last year.

This year the team sports 21 wrestlers, but no seniors.

“We’re going to be open at two weights, which will hurt at some of the duals,” Brown said. “We’re young and small but we’re going to be tough from 120 to about 170 pounds.”

A focus this season has been conditioning, Brown said, and the mental goal of controlling every match from start to finish.

“We have to be mentally tougher than our opponents,” Brown said.

Returning lettermen include juniors Tyler Belshe, Blade Marmon, Matt Kirkland and Shiloh Sutton, along with sophomores Caleb Belshe, Michael Bachman and Kyle Lamb. Landon Thacker is a new move-in to the district, who will be able to wrestle starting in January. Junior Maddie Goode lettered last year as a sophomore but will be out of competition due to injuries from an auto accident. Brown said adding Santa Fe Trail to the Pioneer League lineup throws a new dimension into the competition this year.

“Our league is always tough and adding Santa Fe Trail is only going to make it more so,” Brown said. “We feel that we will be able to compete with everyone on the mat year in and year out.”

Look for Caleb and Tyler Belshe to be among the leaders at the 138 and 132 classes this year, Brown said. He said he expects to see some solid performances from Lamb and Marmon as well.

“We want to win more duals than last year, build on the success of last year’s state placing wrestler and build a program,”

Brown said.

Assistant coach is Michael Belshe. Wrestlers and their weight classes include: Seniors Asa Young (182), Landon Thacker (285) and Josh Hermreck (160); juniors Tyler Belshe (138), Blade Marmon (126), Shiloh Sutton (132) and Matt Kirkland (152); sophomores Caleb Belshe (132) Caleb Anderegg (106), Manny Jackman (145), Kyle Lamb (170), Michael Bachman (220) and Zac Land (132); freshmen Ryan Gettler (285), Cole Denny (120), Dalton Duke (145), Kamryn McMannis (138), Sydnee Bond (138), Zach Arvin (132), Isaiah Levy (152) and Audrie Goode (113).

Crest drops to Erie 53-34

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

HUMBOLDT – The Lancers couldn’t get their motor warmed up against Erie last week and lost 53-34.

“The one constant we should have is effort,” said Crest coach Travis Hermreck. “We played with very little of it against Erie.”

Crest just couldn’t work out any shooting until the second half and by then it was too late. Austin Green hit the Lancers’ only 6 points in the first period, and the second was limited to a three-pointer by Evan Godderz, a bucket from Hunter Frazell and a free throw and a 2-point shot from Kellen Ramsey. The Lancers trailed 26-14 at the half.

Frazell nailed a couple of treys and a bucket in the third period to score 8 of Crest’s 10 points in the quarter but it still wasn’t enough to fire the Lancers’ pistons. Erie snapped back with 16 points in the period to widen the lead. Crest banked another 10 in the final period but, Erie put up 11.

Viking girls beat Osage in OT

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND – The Central Heights girls proved what tenacity means last week in the consolation round of the Trojan Tip-Off with a 37-35 win over Osage City in overtime. It was a back and forth tug-o-war all night, but the scoring combo of Regan Markley and Sydney Meyer managed to push Central Heights into the OT and a nudge beyond. Markley hit 16 points to lead the Vikes with Meyer kicking in 14. Sarah Bell had 3, Tess Cotter 3 and Megan Davis 1.

Greeley Elementary School Celebrates

The Greeley students performed their winter program Tuesday night, Dec. 9. The program titled "Santa's Workshop Chapter 2" and directed by Mr. Russell, was a short play combined with traditional holiday songs. The bell choir also performed Silent Night and the evening ended with the arrival of Santa Claus who patiently listened to the wish lists of all the children. Top photo: Greeley first and second graders sing "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer." Above: Alison Brown played the part of Mrs. Claus in the program.

Wednesday, Dec. 10, a graduation ceremony was held for the fifth-sixth graders who completed the D.A.R.E. program. D.A.R.E. essay winners were presented by officer Max who also spoke to students about bullying. Mya Miller and Alex Driever are pictured with D.A.R.E. Officer Max Skelton. Mya and Alex were awarded "Best Essay" winners during the graduation.

Stop now! Make your plan for 2015

Stop what you're doing right now and find a 2015 calendar.

Following the too-often-proven theory that many of us in small business face more struggles because we fail to plan effectively, we're going to take a quick jaunt through 2015 to figure out what happens, when, and what we want to do about it.

Obviously every business will be a little different, but as you skim the following, think about it in the context of your business and what you do every year - various promotions, fast and slow times - anything special that means a special opportunity for your business or even perhaps a pitfall like a notoriously slow cash flow period for which you can prepare. Keep in mind if you're doing a sale or special promotion, the rule of thumb is to start planning 60 days out and be flexible enough to change closer to D-Day if need be.

Valentines Day, for instance is always February 14, but this year the 14th falls on a Saturday - a bonanza for restaurants and actually a more competitive time. Valentines is always a big restaurant night no matter what day it falls on. Saturday is usually big as well. This year two big nights will combine on one night, but actually restaurants will be competing for a crowd that's now funneled from two nights into one. See why looking ahead is important?

Similar thing with Easter - it's about where we expect it this year instead of late or early - first Sunday in April. Mother's Day falls on May 10 in 2015 - always a Sunday, of course. Memorial Day is May 25. Father's Day June 21.

The Fourth of July falls on a Saturday, which for most of us means we don't get an extra day off that week due to the holiday falling on a weekday, but others will get that Friday off.

Labor Day Weekend will start Friday the 4th and run through Monday the 7th of September. Halloween will be the last Saturday of October. Veterans Day, November 11, will fall on Wednesday, and Christmas is on Friday in 2015.

Now tweak this general outlook with your major local dates where ever you are - get copies of your local school calendar, your chamber of commerce of local tourism board calendar for major local events, etc., and run through it the same way. As ideas pop up, write them down on your calendar and when you're done - voila- you have your own personal plan for 2015!

Make a plan, work your plan, and it'll help you sell stuff in 2015!

Modlin Gets Service Award

Mayor Preston Peine presented Andy Modlin, Journeyman Lineman, with the League of Kansas Municipalities 15 Year Service Award at the Garnett City Commission meeting on December 09, 2014.

1984: Kincaid gets unique teaching tool

The man who generated outrage from animal rights groups over the killing of several dogs in his kennel in October pled no contest when he finally appeared in court on animal cruelty charges last week, but the real courtroom argument may come over his sentencing. Danny Berry, 45, of Harris, faced 53 misdemeanors in all. In a plea agreement, 47 of those were dropped. The prosecutor said he plans to ask for one year in jail. The defense is expected to argue for probation. Sentencing is Jan. 4.

A tense meeting Wednesday between city and county commissioners and the owners and financial consultants of Garnett Church Furnishings failed to determine when the company will take over the city/county-backed financing deal for the company's $1.3 million factory building, and another meeting has been set for Jan. 5 in hopes of resolving those issues.

Planned cuts in the number of county offices operated by the United States Department of Agriculture probably won't affect the federal office in Garnett. Anderson County Office of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Director Leo Wiederholt said that the office will remain open. In Kansas, 12 of the 116 USDA offices will close. The local office will soon be called the Farm Service Agency and will incorporate a broader range of services.

The Kansas Supreme Court took action Dec. 2 that has made many area superintendents and school officials happy. The court upheld the state legislature's right to dictate how schools in the state are funded and therefore kept intact, for the time being, provisions that give smaller districts more money per pupil than larger districts. About three years ago, the Kansas Legislature passed a law that drastically changed the way school districts are financed. Districts now have a mill levy for their general funds that are set by the state. That money basically goes into a big pot and then is redistributed back to the school districts on a weighted, per pupil basis. Obviously, many school districts in the state saw the new way of raising funds as more equitable while a few, the ones that were hit with higher taxes or less funding, didn't like the new law.

The Board of Trustees of the Anderson County Hospital met to open the bids that had been submitted by contractors to install heat/air conditioning equipment in the hospital kitchen and small dining room areas. The bids did not contain sufficiently detailed lists of equipment and cost breakdowns for the board to award the contract, according to board chairperson Ann Calahan. Instead, she suggested the board prepare a specific list of the board's requirements for equipment.

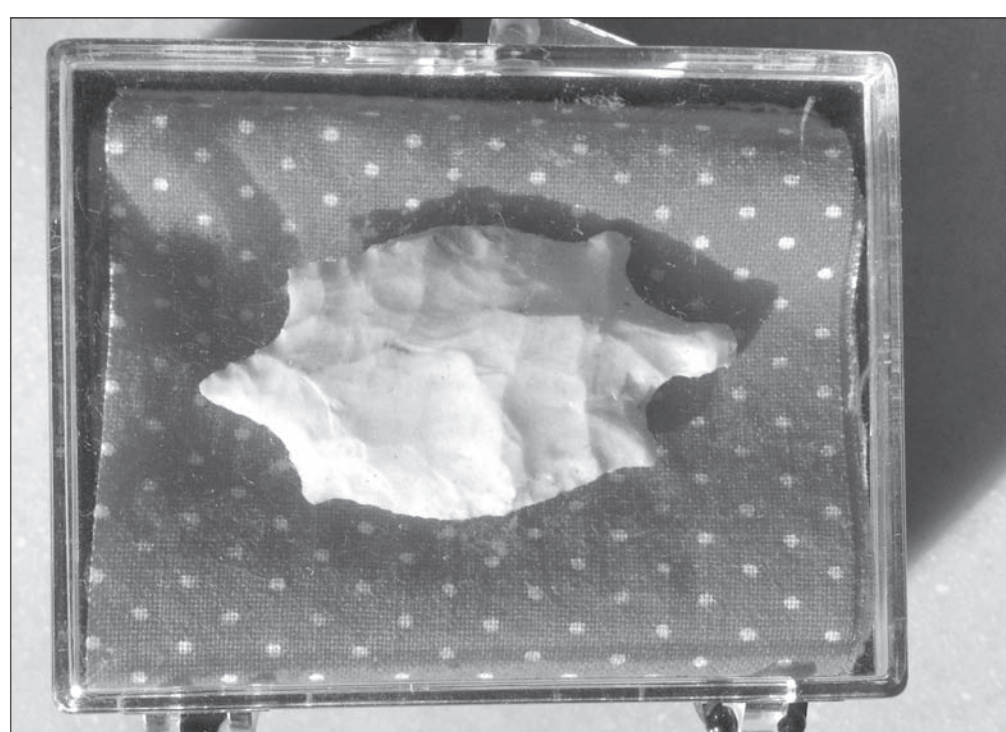

The Kincaid schools are in a school consortium ownership of a planetarium with several other schools. The Starlab planetarium system is an inflatable "tent-like" igloo, which inflates into a room by use of a regular box type room fan to pump air. When inflated, the teacher sets up a projector which various geographic and astrological maps, constellations, etc., on the rounded ceiling of the igloo.

Students may be instructed by a teacher with a script or via cassette tape which is timed to describe the phenomena in sequence with the rotation of cylinders which are "films" to project the images from a special type slow movie opaque film.

Garnett needs a cold-storage plant - has needed it a long time - for taking care of eggs, meats, produce, fruits, etc. It has been suggested that the farmers of the neighborhood, or of the county, join together and build and maintain such a plant. Grocers and meat market men would also find such a plant of value to them, and they should "get behind and push." They could join with the farmers in establishing the institution.

Some of the wheat, which is beginning to need rain badly, is also infected with Hessian fly to such an extent that some of the fields are being plowed under. In the fields where the plow is working, all hope of the crop maturing has been abandoned.

The turtle design was used by many Native American tribes as a symbol of courage.

Flint turtle made by Native American

Isn't this a cute little fella? Would you believe me if I told you this precious little flint turtle was flaked/chipped, out of native stone by a very gifted and skilled Native American craftsman several hundred years ago (The Woodland Period 1000 BC-800 AD)

I found this little turtle during one of my many routine walking sight surveys for Native American artifacts several years ago. In fact it was when our local farmers were chiseling their fields in preparation for planting. I actually discovered this little turtle protruding out of a rather large piece of over turned soil.

The Turtle Effigy: The magical animal-reptile that never sickened. The turtle brought health and good luck. He disappeared with the coming of the winter gales, crawling down into the Mother Earth, returning when Father Sun brought spring and life to the world.

The turtle design was often used by several Native American tribes, including the Pottawatomie of our county as a sign of Courage.

The turtle was also used as a signature by a Pottawatomie Chief on a treaty in the early 1800s.

Found peace on earth, goodwill toward men

In Matthew 1:26-33 we read how the angel appeared to Mary. In the sixth month, God sent the angel Gabriel to Nazareth, a town in Galilee, to a virgin pledged to be married to a man Joseph, a descendant of David. The virgin's name was Mary. The angel went to her and said, "Greetings you are highly favored! The Lord is with you."

Mary was greatly troubled at his words and wondered what kind of greeting this might be. But the angel said to her, "Do not be afraid, Mary you have found favor with God."

Gabriel is the ARCH ANGEL and is one of the only angels who stand in the very presence of God. His name means God is great. All appearances of Gabriel in the Bible are connected with the promise of the coming Messiah. He brings news of the coming birth of Jesus. The first thing Gabriel does is to assure Mary she has nothing to be afraid of. There is nothing more difficult to deal with than fear. Fear robs us of our ability to think and reason and understand. Fear interrupts the whole decision making process. Maybe that is part of what makes Christmas time so special, fear is not an emotion that is present at Christmas. All of our hymns and services focus on peace on earth and good will toward man. There have even been times during war when a cease fire has been proclaimed on Christmas Eve.

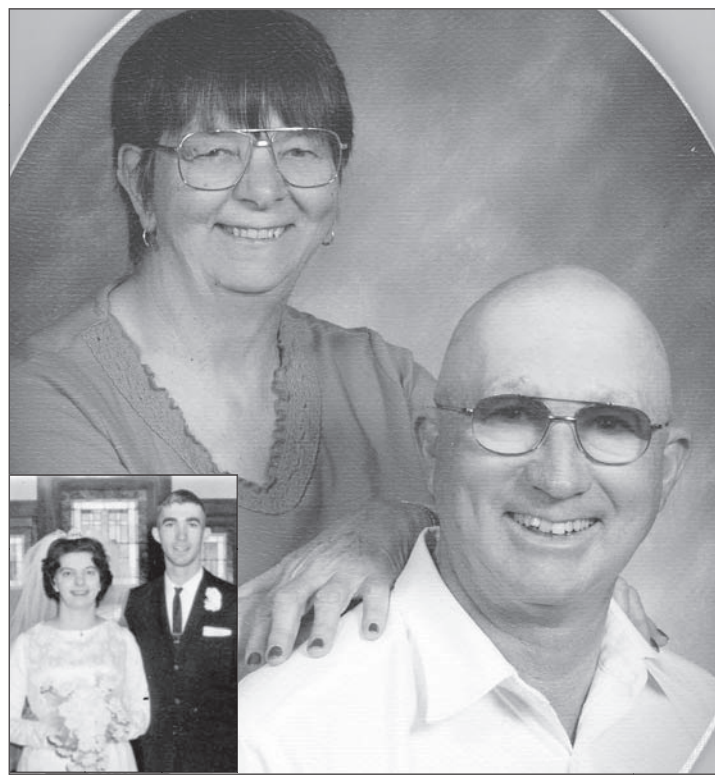

Weekly Devotional by David Bilderback

So what is it that causes us to lose the peace on earth good will toward man mind set that develops through the Christmas season. I believe it is fear. Fear for our health, fear of economic hardship, fear of failure and fear of death. For some reason at Christmas people are able to drop their guard and embrace a couple of days or a season when what happens is not as important as it has seemed.

If Gabriel was so careful to eliminate any thought of fear from Mary's mind maybe we need to be mindful of the affect fear can have on our relationship with God. You see in a right relationship with God there is no room for fear. Paul says in Philippians 4:7, "And the peace of God which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and you minds in Christ Jesus." This is a Christmas gift you can only give yourself. This Christmas season receive Jesus as your Savior and then as Jesus said, "Fear not for I will never leave you or forsake you."

RX farmers. Who knew?

File this under the heading of, who would have ever think it?

What I'm referring to is the notion that today's farmers need a prescription and a degree in chemistry to apply herbicides, insecticides and fertilizers to their land in order to grow and produce the food we eat every day.

About this time, you're probably chuckling to yourself, smiling and thinking, "Ah that can't be happening. What's he writing about now?"

Read on. Some environmentalists remain mighty concerned about the plant food, bug and weed control methods our farmers use today on their wheat, corn, beans, vegetables and other crops. They're also concerned about chemical residue and how application exposure affects them and their fellow human beings.

As technology continues to improve, the tools producers require to grow food fall under closer scrutiny. Some clamor louder for stricter control or even elimination. Others already believe pesticide use should be by prescription only.

Here's an example. Say a farmer has a corn borer problem. If these radical environmentalists succeed, the producer might have to call in a specialist to look over the problem. Once the situation is diagnosed, the government specialist would write the food grower a prescription for chemicals, just like a doctor would for a sick patient.

The farmer's next step would be to call a chemical applicator who would come to the farm and apply the designated herbicide or insecticide. This additional help would subtract from the farmer's bottom line.

If you're thinking this may be a bit extreme - could be, however, it's a safe bet we will see farmers losing the use of more and more chemicals. It happens every year.

Today, some chemicals are being lumped into the restricted-use category. This removes them from the hands of the general farming public. Some of these chemicals will never be used again.

It seems every year there are more stringent requirements for applicators who apply chemicals. Farmers must plan ahead and take part in the development of new rules and regulations that will strongly impact the way they grow our food in the future.

John Schlageck is a leading commentator on agriculture and rural Kansas. Born and raised on a diversified farm in northwestern Kansas, his writing reflects a lifetime of experience, knowledge and passion.

Deck the halls safely this holiday season

TOPEKA - For most of us, the holiday season represents a time for family festivities and good cheer. What few of us consider is that the holiday season is a time when there is an increased risk of home fires and other injuries. The Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM) and Safe Kids Kansas reminds parents and caregivers to take a few precautions when decorating for Christmas, Hanukkah, Kwanzaa and other winter festivities.

Christmas trees, candles and holiday decorations significantly contribute to the seasonal causes of home fires. Add to that the hectic nature of the holidays, when people are trying to accomplish multiple tasks at one time, and the chance for home fires grows even more.

"As everyone gets busier during the holidays, we often become rushed, distracted or tired," says Doug Jorgensen, State Fire Marshal. "That's when home fires are more likely to occur."

Holiday celebrations often include cooking or baking. It's important to know that unattended cooking is the leading cause of home fires and home fire injuries in the United States. Most cooking fires involve the stovetop, so keep your counter space nearby free from anything that can catch fire. Turn off the stove when you leave the kitchen, even if it's for a short period of time. If you're simmering, boiling, baking or roasting food, check it regularly and use a timer to remind you that you're cooking. Also, create a "kid-free zone" of at least three feet around the stove and areas where hot food and drinks are prepared or carried.

Candles are widely used in homes throughout the holidays, and December is the peak month for home candle fires. According to the National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA), two out of every five home decoration fires are started by candles. Consider using flameless candles, which look and smell like real candles, and will keep children safe from burns. If you do use traditional candles, keep them at least 12" away from anything that can burn, and remember to blow them out when you leave the room or go to bed.

If you decorate a tree, be sure to take these precautions:

- Never leave a lit Christmas tree or other decorative lighting display unattended. Inspect lights for exposed or frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets. Do not overload extension cords or outlets and do not run an electrical cord under a rug.

- Decorative lighting should be labeled with the seal of an independent testing lab. If it's not labeled for outdoor use, don't use it outdoors

- Natural Christmas trees always involve some risk of fire. To minimize the risk, get a fresh tree and keep it watered at all times or consider an artificial tree. Do not put the tree within three feet of a fireplace, space heater, radiator or heat vent. LED lights burn cooler than incandescent lights and pose a lower risk of fire.

- Do not burn Christmas tree branches, treated wood or wrapping paper in a home fireplace.

- Never leave burning candles unattended. Don't put candles on a tree or a natural wreath, or near curtains or drapes. Keep matches and lighters locked out of reach. Battery-operated flameless candles are an alternative that does not have a fire risk.

- Have working smoke detectors on every level of your home and in every sleeping area.

Safe Kids Kansas also offers these tips to prevent accidental poisoning:

- Keep alcohol (including baking extracts) out of reach and do not leave alcoholic drinks unattended. Don't forget to store all medications, including those for children, out of reach.

- Color additives used in fireplace fires are a toxic product and should be stored out of reach. Artificial snow sprays are also harmful if inhaled.

- Holly berries, mistletoe berries, poinsettias, amaryllis, boxwood, Christmas rose, Crown of Thorns, English ivy and Jerusalem cherry are all potentially harmful if eaten. If a child eats any part of a non-food plant, call the Poison Control Center at 800-222-1222.

- Have furnaces inspected annually, and install carbon monoxide detectors in your home.

"If children will be spending time in your home this season, do some basic childproofing in advance," said Cherie Sage, Safe Kids Kansas. "For example, keep ornaments and other decorations that have small parts, metal hooks or look like food out of reach of small children." Simple precautions can help ensure your family stays home for the holidays, and out of the Emergency Department.
