Adopt - A - Pet. Just because animals come in together, doesn't always mean they need to go home together. Jed and Rowdy are an exception. They are siblings and very bonded. They are 7 year old Pointer mixes and both have black and white coats. Rowdy looks to her "big" brother for guidance and Jed has clearly taken on that role for her. We would love to see these two find a home soon. They would do best as farm dogs. For adoption information, contact the Lawrence Humane Society at (785) 843-6835 or visit lawrencehumane.org. That guy's a real card

Use your business card as a modern business weapon; think of it as a tiny 3.25x2 inch ninja star you can fling with Jackie Chan precision and speed. It's a great, but underused tool to help you sell stuff. A quick warning though: If you're using your home computer to print your own business cards - BE SURE they are of proper quality. Nothing says "I do this on the side" more than a cheesy-looking home-made business card complete with tear-away perforation edges, ink smears and typographical errors. I print business cards so I can't say I'm unbiased - but when you have a professional printer print your cards you get the benefit of his grammar and language skills and a higher quality product. A decent set of 500-1,000 cards will cost you $50-$70 and will be well worth every penny. You may already have a great set of cards, and they may be pushed back to the back of your desk behind that old sandwich wrapper and the "D" batteries which have probably gone bad by now. Take them out and set them somewhere you'll see them every day. Put some in your shirt pocket (or somewhere they won't get dog-eared from wear every day) and follow these tips to use them to generate sales.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

By: DANE HICKS

- 1) On the counter: If you have a storefront with a register counter, be sure to put them out for the taking, and be sure your clerks drop one in every sack or bag that a customer takes out. 2) Anytime you leave a tip, leave your card. 3) There's obviously a fine line between card drops and littering, so don't overdo this, but be sure to leave cards on public bulletin boards or at coffee shops, etc. You can even go into neighborhoods or door-to-door in business areas and leave a card. Some may get tossed, but some may not. 4) Slip your card into video cases when you rent movies. And don't forget when you mail a bill or pay your taxes or send anybody a check for anything - drop in a card. 5) If you go to a fair or an expo - even if you don't have your own booth - chat with vendors and give them your card. Make it a game with yourself. Carry cards with you everyday, and think of a new place each day to leave a card. It's one of the cheapest ways to market yourself and generate sales.
