Fire destroys rural Garnett home

No one home at time of fire; cause unknown, foul play not suspected

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A family of six is staying with relatives today after fire destroyed their rural home early Friday morning, June 12.

Investigators have not yet determined the cause of the fire at the home of Adam and Nikki Sutton at 22355 NE Nebraska Road, about three miles south of Garnett. Foul play is not suspected, Anderson County Emergency Management Director JD Mersman said.

The family was not home at the time of the fire. Nikki Sutton said she was taking a class in the Kansas City area with two of her children, ages 10 and 1, when someone called and told her the house was on fire. Her husband, Adam, was fishing and their two oldest children, ages 17 and 14, were housesitting for someone else.

Nikki Sutton said she saw news of the fire on Facebook before she arrived at the scene.

"We're just glad nobody was home and everybody is safe. The things in our house are just things. Family is more important than things," she said.

A neighbor saw the fire and reported it at 12:29 a.m. Friday, Mersman said. Fire department units from Greeley, Garnett, Welda and Colony responded, as well as the Anderson County Sheriff's Department and EMS. By the time fire fighters arrived, the house was fully engulfed. A dog that was inside the house somehow managed to escape with minor burns. Nikki Sutton said the dog had been with the family for many years. They aren't sure how she escaped, but they are grateful she found a way out.

The family also is grateful for the support from friends, family and others throughout the community, Sutton said. Although many people have asked how they can help, Sutton said at this time they are not accepting donations because they have no place to store such things.

"Everyone has been so nice and supportive. That's what we need right now," she said. "As far as things, we don't need much because we don't have anywhere to put it."

The family did have insurance coverage on the house,

Man charged with busting out patrol car window during arrest

Hermreck arrested, kicks out windshield while handcuffed in car

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A Garnett man is facing criminal charges for busting out the windshield of a highway patrol car while he was in custody last week.

Jason Hermreck, 31 of Garnett, was stopped by a highway patrol officer Wednesday, June 10, and arrested on suspicion of driving while suspended. Hermreck was handcuffed and placed in the patrol car when he became upset and kicked and broke the windshield, Kansas Highway Patrol Public Information Officer Rick Wingate said.

Hermreck suffered injuries to his feet and wrists and was taken to the Anderson County Hospital for treatment.

He was booked into the Anderson County Jail at 9:15 p.m. Wednesday and released on $2,500 bond Friday afternoon.

Criminal charges of criminal damage to property regarding the patrol car, interference with law enforcement and speeding 98 in a 65 were filed against Hermreck in Anderson County District Court.

Rainy weather earlier in the day Saturday, June 13, put a damper on the Lake Garnett Cruisers' Can-U-Cruise event in downtown Garnett. Susan Wettstein of the Lake Garnett Cruisers said attendance was quite a bit lower, likely because of the weather or other similar events in the region. Some people donated more canned goods than usual to compensate for the lack of attendance, she said. About 25 cars were registered for the event, and a handful of other cars stopped by but weren't registered, Wettstein said.

ACH hopes to head off parking problems

Signs will help people navigate changing route as project nears its end

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — The new Anderson County Hospital is up and running. The old building was reduced to rubble and removed. Now all that remains is for people — mostly employees — to figure out how to get to the hospital while a new parking lot is constructed.

The final phase of the hospital project will construct a new parking lot and landscaping around it, a process expected to take about six to eight weeks. That puts completion somewhere around late July or early August, barring delays because of weather or other complications.

During that time, routes to the hospital could change. For example, plans call for construction of a circular driveway at the front of the hospital. At some point, the front parking area will be closed for construction of that driveway. Patients who need to be dropped off at the door will need to use the emergency department entrance.

Signs will be posted to help people navigate around the facility, ACH Director of Facilities Travis Rockers said in a press release. Most people enter the site from U.S. 59, and should look for signs near the highway.

"There will be changes from time to time," ACH CEO Denny Hachenberg said.

City to pay $150K to fix aging sewage station

Latest upgrade to city infrastructure comes with hefty price tag

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — The latest project in the City of Garnett's ongoing efforts to improve infrastructure will cost about $150,000.

A sewage lift station near the Garnett swimming pool and "tot lot" playground will be replaced by Tom Adams Construction of Garnett, who submitted the lowest of three bids for the project. Bids were opened June 1 and presented to city commissioners at a meeting June 9.

The lift station was installed in 1979, city sewer superintendent John Olson told commissioners at a meeting in late April. The station is identified by a white hutch near the new concession stand at the swimming pool.

"You expect to get 20 years out of a lift station. We've gotten our money's worth," he said.

The lift station is made of all metal and includes an underground pump. But the metal has shown serious rust problems over the past 15 years to the point a ladder is virtually unusable. A plate that holds all the pieces of the station in place has nearly rusted away, Olson said. The station is inaccessible during rain storms. A seal that blocks sewage smell has deteriorated, and sometimes an unpleasant odor wafts over to people using the swimming pool or playground.

The pump is the city's major lift station and serves most of the northern part of the city. If the station were to fail, it would cause major problems with sewage backup and sanitation and would require someone to keep watch at the station around the clock, city staff said.

At the April meeting, city commissioners agreed the station needed to be replaced but were concerned about the cost.

City Manager Joyce Martin said at the June 9 meeting, when bids were opened, the cost was a little higher than she expected. She said many cities across the state also are upgrading infrastructure, and companies are busy with this type of work. Because of that, prices may be a little higher. She recommended the city proceed with the project, however, because a failure at the station could be even more expensive.

Tom Adams Construction's bid was $157,800, but city staff could do some of the electrical PARKING...

Parking areas near the hospital will be reserved for patients and visitors, he said. That's been the primary goal since the new building opened, and Hachenberg said most people have learned how to navigate through and around the hospital. At times, however, people who parked on the north side of the building often confused the locked cafe doors for an entrance.

Most parking inconveniences will affect employees, he said. Because parking areas near the hospital are reserved for patients, employees will need to find parking places that could require a healthy walk. For example, a parking lot at the former rehabilitation center at U.S. 59 and Third Street about three blocks away will be offered as a temporary parking lot for some employees. Others must find temporary parking on streets near the site.

The hospital has about 200 employees, although not all need to park at the hospital at any given time. The majority of the employees work the day shift, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., but others work at night or various other shifts. That makes it a little easier for them to find available parking near the building, Hachenberg said.

"I think patients are doing fine. We have adequate parking nearby," Hachenberg said. "The employees will be everywhere, but we've got to provide for our patients first."

Once completed, the new parking area will include landscaping and a memorial garden with walking trail. The Anderson County Hospital foundation has launched a $135,000 fundraising drive to create therapeutic "green" space near the parking areas and the front of the hospital. Donation options, including steel benches and trees, will allow locals to memorialize loved ones or others at various points along the path.

The new hospital building, approved by voters in August 2013, opened in January at its location just west of the former hospital building. Demolition of the old building, which was constructed in about 1949 and opened in the early 1950s, began in mid-March and was completed recently. A rainy

May delayed some of the demolition and parking lot preparatory work, but Hachenberg said he is pleased at how much progress was made despite the wet weather.

Rockers, the facilities director, said his team will post clear directional signs to help people find their way to the appropriate location, and define restricted areas during the final construction.

"We appreciate the patience of our visitors as we get through the final phase of the new hospital project and are able to complete a large parking area for our guests and employees," Rockers said.

How could Kansas have survived?

The legislative session is over and the lights are still on in Kansas. How can this be so?

If you followed the garment-rending tirades of the liberal editors at Kansas' daily newspapers these past months and the rants of the oft-interviewed bureaucrats at the publicly-funded agencies which make up the raft of Kansas government, you'd have thought there'd be nothing left in Kansas after the close of this legislative session but three skinny steers and Cawker City's largest ball of twine.

The whole presentation of the budget issue in the state's liberally dominated "major" media was more reminiscent of a kid throwing a tantrum at the grocery store than it was insightful analysis, but that is, after all, what we've all come to expect from a media establishment whose political bias has it withering in influence and straining for relevance. And don't think the ballyhooing will stop just because the 2015 session is over - there's plenty of ink and broadcast time left to fight the battle for Big Government.

Just to be sure civilization is still intact with the end of the session in Topeka, we better run a quick check on ourselves:

- Turnpike closed from Lawrence to El Dorado? Nope.
- Public schools boarded up? Huh-uh.
- Ness County Fair cancelled? Don't think so.
- KSU Extension's yard mole eradication programs put on hold? Absolutely not.

But, how can this be? The screaming, sky-is-falling message from the Kansas media the past two months was that Governor Brownback and all those rich Republicans were just an Ove Glove away from serving up the state's poor folks, single moms and elementary school kids on a platter, while us wealthy business owners used our new-found tax-free dollars to invest in A-1 Sauce. I mean, shouldn't we all be living in a Mad Max movie right now with us rich private business owners - plumbers, welding shop owners, insurance agents, farmers and horse ferriers atop the heap, just a smidge under the Koch brothers?

Maybe it was never really that bad? Maybe all the howling was a cover for something else?

Do you suppose this had very little to do with the state's budget and everything to do with the larger battle we see taking place across our country right now between smaller-government, free enterprise conservatives and socialist-leaning affiliates who believe the only answer that works is to have government dictate your economy and your lifestyle - you know, "community organizer" types who know success is always just a government grant away?

The essential mechanics of state government have a way of working themselves out, even when Mean Old Republicans are in charge. Despite what liberal editors tell you, no one in the legislature wants to starve poor children or reduce highways to rubble or melt down the Indian on the top of the capitol dome. What this legislature is (or was) bound by is a conservative philosophy that says taxes on businesses keep them from investing in themselves and creating jobs; that you more so than the government are entitled to handle your money; that the more government takes care of you the more you will expect it to.

Where Brownback and Republicans failed was in trying to press a conservative agenda too quickly and in underestimating the effect lingering debt had on Kansas companies that used their tax-free "wind-fall" to pay off credit lines and satisfy their vendors. Lower tax, tighter government works here the same as it works in other states; but it can't race to the finish line when the effects of a recession are still being felt.

Pro Big Government types can't debate the tenants of this philosophy without essentially telling you government is smarter than you are, so they focus their attack on hyperbole and sensationalism - like "only the poor pay taxes", "cuts" will debilitate your local school system; "stealing" short-term money from your highway fund will cripple transportation. What really irks the liberal editors of the state's daily newspapers is that, despite their best election year attacks, us low-brow, unwashed, ignorant voters of Kansas re-elected Brownback.

The reality is your Kansas as of July 1 won't really be any different than it has been. The failure for Republicans is that it won't be any better; the failure for liberals is that it will still be here at all.

Well, here it is the 7th of June and I just got my city utility bill to come in the mail. The mail service is a lot like our cable TV service- pretty worthless.

Yes, on Obama rather fighting climate change than ISIS I'll tell you this. It's just like a bunch of pie-in-the sky liberal academics to want to fight something theoretical and which can't be pinned down specifically, that way you can always imagine endless ways to create agencies and spend tax money to attack it. It's a lot harder to fight something concrete where you have to show success or analyze and be accountable for failure.

The grade card on President Barack Hussein Obama. It is not that Mr. Obama is a bad person that makes him a bad president. It is not that he is stupid, he is far from stupid, that is not what makes him a bad president. What makes Barack Obama a bad president is the complete lack of experience and networking contacts that he had as a senator who had not yet even finished one term in office when he was elected president. A complete inability and unfamiliarity with government. We like to think government is full of stupid people, full of lazy people, full of inept people who cannot get the job done. Quite the contrary - government is filled with people who know precisely how to get the job done. The difference is, it's the job they want to get done unless you lead them. As you recall his cabinet secretaries were not appointed until late in his first term. He simply didn't know who would be competent at those jobs. It was as though he took over an implement dealership and had no idea how to drive a combine, work on a combine, when corn gets planted. There is a saying about teaching a pig to sing, that it wastes your time and besides, it aggravates the pig. Well, here we are.

The police keep saying that writing speeding tickets is not about generating revenue, but rather about getting people to slow down to make the streets safer. I can get people to slow down by flashing my headlights a few times when there's police in the area. Why do they get so bent out of shape when I get people to slow down? Thank you.

Will driving a vehicle with a recalled Takata air bag in it make you a safer driver?

A huge 'thank you' to all those involved in the planning and preparations for the Westphalia High School reunion and 135th birthday celebration on June 7. It was a wonderful day enjoyed and appreciated by many.

I just looked at the back of your paper and I think what they're doing out there in front is really pretty and everything, but I think the main thing is get some decent parking so it's closer to that front main entrance. Thank you.

Recommended reading from the Garnett Public Library: "Gifted Hands: The Ben Carson Story," by Ben Carson, M.D., and Cecil Murphy, first published in 1990 but currently in the new arrivals at the library. If you plan to vote in the presidential race you should read it to make an informed decision before just going to the voting booth and voting for whoever the newspapers, television or your parents tell you to vote for. Great inspirational reading for anyone of junior high or up and no politics is involved.

If fast food workers start making 15 bucks an hour, they're going to have to tip me to come through the drive through.

Driving down Oak Street I see a sign that says "Free Lunch" in big print. The smaller print indicates this is a federal government program for children up to 18 years of age, so we the taxpayers are paying for another socialistic giveaway. This is another step toward the government controlling and eventually dictating family responsibility. This follows the free breakfast, free lunches and take home food backpacks during the school year. When will this ever stop? Wouldn't it be reasonable for parents to step up and take responsibility for their own children? I realize free is hard to turn down and there are some hard pressed families in this town, but perhaps this summer program is another example of government overkill.

Last week the Phone Forum had some good articles in it from the disgraceful person in the White House, our bad streets and our not-so good football team and even our school administrator who thinks we need a mill levy increase so they can have more money to waste on the schools. This new bus with the Bulldog on it and the million dollar bleachers at the football field isn't going to do a darn thing to improve the Bulldogs chances of winning a game. The school people think money grows on trees and all they have to do is shake the tree for more money. We need to can them from the administrator down to the school board and put people in there who know the value of a dollar.

Would somebody investigate and tell us the story behind the sign on the small door of the building on Catalpa Street that was once part of the Astro Truck Cover complex. The sign reads "Hillary Clinton Campaign Headquarters." Just curious?

The end of the Clinton Coalition

Every time Hillary Clinton makes a left-wing policy pronouncement, it is, in effect, another eulogy marking the death of the coalition and style of politics that twice made her husband president.

Bill Clinton got elected by peeling off working-class whites and suburbanites from the Republican Party, while holding traditional Democratic voters. He made significant geographic inroads, winning a handful of Southern states both in 1992 and in his 1996 re-election, when he narrowly won the popular vote in the region as a whole.

This is all very interesting, but the Clinton coalition is rusty and up on blocks in some overgrown backyard like the El Camino pick-up he once boasted about. And Hillary knows it.

As Sean Trende of the website RealClearPolitics puts it, President Barack Obama has narrowed but deepened the Clinton coalition.

He blew the doors off it among base Democratic voters. As Philip Klein of the Washington Examiner points out, Democrats had won the 18- to 24-year-old vote by 11.5 points on average and the 25- to 29-year-olds by about 7 points on average from 1992 to 2004. Obama won those groups by more than 30 points in 2008 and 20 points in 2012.

He outdid himself among minorities, liberals and upper-class suburbanites. Obama, Klein notes, amped up not just his margin among African-American voters, but their turnout. Elsewhere in the former Clinton coalition, though, his support collapsed, with older and blue-collar whites continuing to flee the Democrats.

Even if Hillary wanted to try to recapture those kinds of voters, it's not clear that she could, and the effort would risk alienating the Obama supporters she needs.

So the question for Hillary is whether a 67-year-old candidate who's not a racial minority or particularly exciting can re-energize the electoral coalition defined by a youthful African-American who rose to prominence on rhetorical flights of fancy about hope and change.

She's certainly not going to do it by recapitulating the politics of Bill. He hewed to the political center. He played defense on cultural issues. He balanced the budget (at the insistence of a Republican Congress). He touted, at least after his first two years, small-scale government programs of symbolic significance. He was tough on crime and relatively hawkish.

Everything indicates she's going to do and be the opposite. Hillary will make herself a paladin of the left, and hope to energize and frighten the constituent parts of the Democratic base enough to walk the treacherously narrow electoral path of President Obama.

This is the price of victory Obama-style. Despite his rhetoric of unity, Obama depends on a politics that writes off much of the country and depends on turning out voters already inclined to support him. It is less a politics of persuasion than of mobilization.

For Hillary, this means the centrism and practicality of her husband have to be jettisoned, so what remains from the Clintonism of yore is mostly the shady dealings and shameless insincerity. But she really has no choice. It's go left or go home.

Let's be heard; share your story about ethanol

Growing up in Garnett is a memory I cherish, and I have shared many stories about small town life with people all over the world. If you speak with someone from the big cities, they just assume some of the stories are fiction, but we know they are true. Unlocked doors, safe walks, and friendly people that always wave. You learned about loyalty, importance of family and became well-rounded. You could see the stars, not know what real traffic is and enjoy many simple things. Unfortunately, for most small towns, recent generations have been forced to leave and look to bigger cities for gainful employment.

I was proud to be part of two big things for my hometown, the start of Cornstock and the ethanol plant, East Kansas Agri-Energy. My dad was once quoted as saying the ethanol plant was the biggest thing for Garnett since the railroad. Well said. The ethanol plant not only employs several in the community, it has helped some of my friends return to the area, and it has been an injection into the local economy for many businesses, farmers and every taxpayer through things like lower utility rates and fuel prices. This is not unique for just Garnett though, this theme has repeated itself over and over with the construction of more ethanol production facilities across the country. I am proud to work with these facilities daily.

All of this renewed rural development

LOCAL COMMENTARY

is under attack, and it is coming from Washington, DC. In 2005 Congress passed into law the Renewable Fuels Standard, or RFS. In 2007, the RFS was expanded and now requires 36 billion gallons of renewable fuels to be in our fuel supply by 2022. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) administers this program, and the program is simple. If you produce or import gasoline, you either have to blend renewable fuels like ethanol, biodiesel, renewable diesel and cellulosic ethanol or buy credits from those that do, think independent fuel retailers and their suppliers.

In 2014, the major petroleum companies started to cry foul, and suggested the RFS was in need of modification or repeal and cited there was no market for more renewable fuels and the cost of the aforementioned credits was too high. Translation - we don't want to use renewable fuels. The credits are free, just blend the renewable fuel with your gasoline and you have no credits to purchase. Congress knew that and why we have the law today, but apparently EPA is fine with changing it. They don't have the authority to change statutes, period, but they are trying. EPA has now released a proposal that will lower the statutory volumes of renewable fuels prescribed by Congress, allowing more expensive, non-renewable, fossil fuels to be utilized in our country, a true step backwards.

EPA is holding a public hearing in Kansas City, KS on June 25th. Anyone can speak. You don't have to be part of the ethanol industry to participate. If you believe that ethanol as a fuel, or as an industry, has benefited your community and livelihood, you should be there. The event will start at 9am at the Jack Reardon Center at 520 Minnesota Ave. You must sign-up in advance by contacting Julia MacAllister from EPA's Office of Transportation and Air Quality, Assessment and Standards Division, with an e-mail address of macallister.julia@epa.gov.

On June 25th, you need to share YOUR story! Don't let me be the only one talking about our community at this public hearing.

1915: No sympathy for mother who left baby

June 14, 2005

When the month of June began with a burst of rain, most Anderson County farmers didn't seem to mind. After all, May had been a slightly dry month. Then it rained. And rained again. And rained some more. The first nine days of June had only 3.19 inches, but picked up an additional 4.57 inches between Thursday and Monday. Additional rain and sporadic flooding probably caused crop loss anywhere crops were underwater for more than eight hours.

USD 365 Superintendent Gordon Myers said Friday's ruling on school finance by the Kansas Supreme Court was very good for education, because it would allow districts to add programs and teachers.

This is the third year that the city has received money for the program, which teaches grade school students about the dangers of drug and alcohol use.

Each farmer may be growing enough to feed 78 people, but Kansas farmers aren't making enough to feed their own families. Their net farm income dropped again last year. Kansas State University extension economists just completed an analysis of 1984 state Farm Management Association records. Their analysis indicates association members' average net income plummeted to $6,334, down 85.5 percent from their annual income in 1979. Compared to the economists' "benchmark" figures for sound business, the members were $25,786 short of covering the amount their own labor and management were worth.

Mrs. Ruby Stephens, charged with abandoning and exposing her infant child by placing it on the porch at the W.M. Dary home in Kincaid May 26 was not given a chance to plead guilty when district court opened. The Judge said he wanted more time to study her case. Believing Judge Smart intends to be too merciful with the woman and may sentence and parole her, a petition was drafted to be circulated among the citizens of Kincaid calling on Judge Smart to give the woman a light punishment. Dary, on whose porch the baby was left, was in Garnett today. He says the people of Kincaid do not sympathize with her; they believe she should be sentenced to at least one year in the penitentiary. He is not convinced that Cliff Kistner, arrested in connection with the case under the white slave act, is the right party. He hinted that the woman probably accused Kistner to shield others and declared more arrests will likely follow in a short time.

Headed home where our heart is

I have a passion for collecting western calendars. Not all the pictures are real meaningful to me but once in awhile I find one that is. On one of the calendars in the house there is a picture of a couple of riders crossing a shallow stream and heading to a cabin in the woods.

The cabin is set back among the trees and by all appearances it appears to be late fall. There is smoke rising from the chimney and the caption simply reads "Heart and Home."

Two simple words yet they speak volumes. In my case the two cannot be separated for where my home is you will find my heart. So what makes a home special? First and foremost it is having someone special to share my home with. In fact it is our home. When the boys left home I relented on my long time stand against pets in the house and a dog and cat moved in.

Also a home needs to be a place of rest. Everyone who owns and maintains a home

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

By David Bilderback

knows of the responsibilities that go along with that privilege. Yet for me I'll take those responsibilities for the times of quiet secluded rest I get.

A home is also a place to build memories. I remember as a boy my grandfather's house. For me it was as special as the home I grew up in. It was a place of love and encouragement. As time passes so do all our special treasures. Grandfather's house still stands but it has been changed and many of the people who brought that love and encouragement have passed on.

And so will go my home someday. Even though our homes are classified as real property our occupation of them is only temporary. That is what makes Jesus' comment in John 14:2-3 so relevant. Jesus is talking to his disciples and he says. "In my Father's house are many rooms; if it were not so I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am."

This is the most important promise Jesus makes in the Bible. As believers some day we will be like the riders in the picture. We will see our eternal home. We will be going home not just returning from some journey. Jesus removes all doubt about our eternal existence and says we will be with him for eternity. When Jesus takes us home it will not be to an empty home but to a home filled with love and encouragement from him and our loved ones who passed on before us.

Rail trail group meets

Eighteen members of the Prairie Spirit Rail Trail met at the depot on Wednesday evening, June 10, 2015.

President Ruth Theis asked for a moment of silence in memory of trail member Karen Showalter. Karen Showalter was a very active and dedicated member of the trail group for several years.

Rick Doran gave a committee report on the welcome sign for the battery box along the trail north of Park Road and the sign to be placed on the trail near the south lake. Bob Mills and Doug Mader will be manufacturing the battery box lid to place the sign on. They will also make the sunflowers for the signs.

The trail group voted to pay for an advertisement for the trail in the 2016 Kansas Travel Guide.

Former President Bill Ratliff was participating in the 2015 "Bike Across Kansas" this week.

The July 8, 2015 meeting will be at the country home of Dave and Ruth Theis starting at 6:00 p.m. with a potluck meal

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 6-16-2015 / Photo Submitted
These old plow shears were found metal detecting near Mont Ida.

Every farmer should recognize these two old antiques. About three years ago I found these old Sod Buster Plough (plow) Shears while metal detecting along an old rock pen or corral not far from Mont Ida.

As a matter of fact they were under one of the huge rocks making up the wall.

Plows were initially Human powered (pulled), but the process became considerably more efficient once animals were pressed into service. The first animal powered plows were pulled by oxen, and later by horses (generally draft horses) and mules.

"It's planting season and now is just a time when we people are thinking about farming," was an old saying heard across the Great Plains.

John Deere, an Illinois blacksmith, designed and manufactured the very first case steel plow, "The Sod Buster" in 1837, paving the way for farmers all across the Great Plains to plow through the tough prairie ground.

The Sod Buster's significance to the development of the American West is important, because its steel construction allowed it to cut through the soil easier, which meant it could be pulled by a horse instead of oxen. Previous plows had been made with cast iron or even wood, which required farmers to clean them after every few hundred feet of plowing.

By 1855, John Deere was selling more than 10,000 steel plows per year.

Hyatt Club meets in April, May

Hyatt Club met at the home of Hilda Lankard on April 15. Thirteen members enjoyed a potluck luncheon and viewing a display of six quilts made by Sondra Greishaber.

Mary Ann Umbarger guessed the mystery gift and won a set of measuring cups. Three hostess gifts were presented by the hostesses, Hilda Lankard, Glenda Tastove and Sondra Greishaber. The recipients of the gifts were Betty Penn, Rosemary Turner and Pat Mosher. Betty Penn received a gift from her Mystery Pal. Rosemarie Miller received a potted geranium plant as a special thanks from the club members for her work preparing the Hyatt Club Directory.

Members were reminded the Hyatt Hens team planned to participate in the Healing for Health Walk in honor of Lois Miller.

The next meeting was hosted by Shirley Benjamin and Ruth Ann McDonald.

Fifteen Hyatt Club members met on May 16 at the home of Shirley Benjamin. The hostess and her co-hostess, Sherry Benjamin, served a delicious lunch of pulled pork along with a variety of potluck dishes contributed by the other Hyatt Club members. Hilda Lankard correctly guessed the Mystery Gift which was a jar of pickled beets. Rosemary Turner won a table centerpiece hostess gift.

The June meeting will be held at the Yoder Country Store at 5 p.m. June 25.

You name it, we print it.

Morrison receives Masonic scholarship

Regan Morrison of Crest High School received a $1,000 scholarship from the Kansas Masonic Foundation, Inc., the charitable arm of the Grand Lodge of Kansas and Kansas Masons. The award was presented to Morrison by the Kincaid Lodge No. 338 May 15.

The Kansas Masonic Foundation awarded 283 scholarships to students of 44 institutions of higher learning across Kansas. The awards totaled $286,000. The scholarships, which range from $500 to $5,000, are awarded to graduating high school seniors and students already attending four- and two-year universities and colleges, including vocational and technical schools, throughout the state.

"It is with great pride that we, as Masons, are able to provide this type of financial support to our future leaders," said Michael J. Tavares, President of the Kansas Masonic Foundation. "Our commitment to the scholarship program and to the numerous other programs that benefit Kansas and Kansas communities through the Foundation and the Masonic Lodges throughout the state - is at the core of our belief that charity beyond ourselves strengthens our community."

Over the nearly 50 years of its existence, the Foundation, along with the Grand Lodge of Kansas, its 227 statewide lodges and more than 18,000 Kansas Masons, have given thousands of scholarships and millions of dollars to deserving students in Kansas.

In addition to the $150,000 sewer lift project, the city also has agreed to pay about $443,000 for an electric line upgrade. A study of the city's underground sewer pipes and manholes was expected to cost about $1.6 million over the next 10 years.

Historical society learns about Rev. Smith, Presbyterian Church

The Anderson County Historical Society met at the Berea Fellowship Hall in Greeley on June 4th, 2015 at 6:30 p.m. Thirty one members and guests enjoyed the carry in dinner and a fascinating program presented by Marilyn Bieck, San Diego, CA, about her family's roots in Anderson County.

Ms. Bieck's great-great-grandfather, Rev. James Nelson Smith, was a Presbyterian minister in the Kansas Territory. Rev. Smith arrived from Ohio and settled in the community that came to be known as Berea, between Richmond and Greeley. He was instrumental in the founding of Presbyterian churches in Berea, Garnett, and Americus. He came as a free-stater, active in the fight against slavery, and supported the underground railroad. He was elected to the KS Legislature in 1864, became a county surveyor, and owned a grist mill. He helped to found Garnett's Presbyterian College in 1871. Although over 30 students were enrolled, it failed to open for the fall term due to lack of funding that had been promised from the Presbytry.

Rev. Smith's strict religious beliefs and his demands for adherence to the Principals of Coveting led him into conflict with the pioneer members of his congregation. A specific point of controversy related to his objection to all secret societies, and his intolerance toward their members.

The Grange was formed in 1867, when the railroads were being built, to protect the farmers' interests. The group worked for free mail service and founding of land grant colleges, supported the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the suffrage movement, and granted membership and voting rights to women. It also had a secret ritual. Over his objections, many members of Rev. Smith's congregation became active in the Grange. The organization addressed many of their survival needs on the frontier.

Rev. Smith's convictions conflicted with the pioneer settlers relating to the church and college finances, problems with the railroads, and the temperance and suffrage movements. However, the primary conflict arose from his opposition to secret societies, specifically the Grange. The controversy between his religious beliefs and a changing society grew until in 1874, Rev. Smith was dismissed as minister of the Presbyterian Church in Garnett. The newspaper reported only that Rev. Smith, who had settled here shortly after the founding of Garnett, was assigned to another charge.

Ms. Bieck also related humorous stories about Judge James Hanway, a free stater who lived near Rev. Smith in the Berea community. Judge Hanway was a friend of John Brown's and assisted with the movement of escaped slaves on the Underground Railroad.

He also was in opposition to the Temperance movement. Through ongoing letters to the local newspapers he pled his case for the need of an adequate supply of whiskey. He claimed that within a five mile radius of Greeley, there were more rattlesnakes than anywhere else in the country. He further stated that since whiskey was the only known antidote for a rattlesnake bite, that it was most important to keep whiskey available to all pioneers.

Marilyn presented Kristie a copy of her newly released book, Courageous and Dedicated Pioneers: Rev. James Nelson Smith and Elizabeth White Gailey. It is available to visitors at the museum for more in depth and very entertaining reading about this period in our county's history.

President Kristie Kinney called the business meeting to order and gave an update of ACHS Board actions through the winter, the spring banquet, the March Civil War re-enactors, our May visit to Mineral Point, gifts to the museum from the Anderson County Hospital, and repairs to the museum building and grounds. The security system is now upgraded at both the museum and the Harris House. The museum opened for the season on May 1st, and Kristie thanked the numerous volunteers who are assisting with that schedule. Both the museum and the Harris House were open during the Square Fair on May 9th, and attracted numerous visitors.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Friday from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. For all who are interested in the preservation of the history of Anderson County, we welcome visitors to monthly meetings, volunteers at the museum and the Harris House, and new memberships for $5 annual dues. Please contact the museum if interested. Location and date of our July meeting will be announced in the newspapers.

Connie Becker, Four Winds DAR American Flag Chair, presents the American Flag Award to Phil and Cathi Temple.

Four Winds announces flag award winner

The Four Winds Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution Announces the American Flag Award Winner for 2015

The Four Winds Chapter of the NSDAR has chosen Phillip and Cathi Temple of Aliceville as the winners of the American Flag Award for the proper use, correct display and Patriotic Presentation of the Flag of the United States of America. The Temples have created a veteran's park on a corner of their property in Aliceville. The display has a Battlefield Cross with a bridge to cross over from the street into the park. When you enter you see the American Flag proudly flying in all its majesty. You will see the flags of each branch of the United States Military flying by the fence outlining the property. There you will also find the seals of all the branches mounted on a display fence. There is a picnic table, a park bench, and a fire pit. Many people visit the park and sit, relax, and reflect on the display and think of veterans who have honorably served in the United States Military Forces.

Phil is a twenty-four plus year veteran of the United States Air Force. He enlisted immediately after graduating from high school. His father had a career in the Air Force after serving six years in the Marine Corp during WWII. His brothers served in USAF and US Army. His sister served in the US Navy.

Phil's wife, Cathi, had family members in the military also. Her father, Roger Crome, served in the Marine Corps during WWII. Their son served in the served in the US Army. Her brother served in the USAF. Currently, she has two nephews in the USAF.

Phil decided to make his veteran's park after an old house was torn down on the corner. He wanted to make something that would honor the sacrifices of the veterans within his and his wife's family as well as all the veterans in the Aliceville community. He hopes to keep the park attractive even though his current health issues make it difficult.

The memorial park is a great place to visit and honor the United States Armed Forces that have kept our nation free and the great nation she is today!

Review sponsors exhibition of historic newspapers

GARNETT - A deadly downtown natural gas explosion, the assassination of President Kennedy, Garnett "race riots" in the 1960s and the 9/11 attacks are some of the events retold from local newspapers in a new historical exhibit at the Garnett Public Library.

The collection of 11 front page newspaper reproductions spanning from the 1870s through 2001 is sponsored by The Anderson County Review as part of the paper's 150th anniversary celebration this year. The reproductions will be displayed in the library's hall through July.

"It's a sampling of local and national events as told by the various newspapers in our lineage starting in 1865," said Review publisher Dane Hicks, who coordinated the project. "It's interesting to see not just how the papers looked back in those days, but also in the way the news was presented."

Prior to the 1930s, local papers and word-of-mouth were the primary sources of news in small communities until radio became prominent, Hicks said. Most papers of the last century, even weekly papers in small towns, ran national news from larger papers and from other sources. Local news really only became a primary focus of small town papers in the 1950s, Hicks said, as radio and television took center stage as national news conduits.

No less than 17 newspapers make up the family tree of today's Review. It all began in 1865 with The Garnett Plaindealer, founded by Issac Olney, a former county clerk of Coffey County, Ks., who published the Hampden Expositor in the now-forgotten town of Hampden, Ks. When Hampden lost a contest with Burlington to be the county seat of Coffey County, Olney moved the paper to Garnett. That spring he founded the Plaindealer and published its first edition April 26, 1865, the same day John Wilkes Booth was shot and apprehended in Port Royal, Va., for the killing of President Lincoln.

The exhibit's reproductions were photographed from crumbling historic volumes now held by the Anderson County Historical Society at its museum in Garnett, and include historic notes and bits of trivia as addendum. The museum also holds the only existing collections of other newspapers not affiliated with the Review and those of other small towns in Anderson County. No original copy of The Plaindealer is known to exist, Hicks said. The Review has an 1870 edition on exhibit in its office.

Hicks said the most noticeable difference between the vintage displays and modern newspapers is the near total absence of photographs.

"Photography was still a very rare science even into the early 1900s," Hicks said, "and we really don't find a lot of local staff-produced photos in the papers even into the 1950s. It was a very expensive and labor intensive process to get timely photos into the paper, although there were a number of local photographers in our area at the time who did commercial work."

Anderson County Review Publisher Dane Hicks displays a reproduction of The Garnett Plaindealer from 1870. The piece is part of a collection of historic front pages from the Review's lineage and part of an 11-piece exhibition which opened last week at the Garnett Public Library in honor of the Review's 150th anniversary in 2015.

Most all photos published up until the 1960s were shot by those commercial photographers and published later, Hicks said.

Among the events depicted in the exhibit is a downtown gas explosion in January 1905 which killed two upstairs apartment dwellers, although Hicks said it was rare for editors of the day to publish "bad" news for fear of tarnishing the community to outsiders. Another exhibit details arrests of rowdy partiers made in 1963 during the weekend of Garnett's famous grand prix auto races - an incident mischaracterized as a "race riot" throughout the country by national wire services.

JUNE is National Dairy Month

Dairy Month is an annual tradition

National Dairy Month started out as National Milk Month in 1937 as a way to promote drinking milk. It was initially created to stabilize the dairy demand when production was at a surplus, but has now developed into an annual tradition that celebrates the contributions the dairy industry has made to the world. After the National Dairy Council stepped in to promote the cause, the name soon changed to "Dairy Month."

National Dairy Month is a great way to start the summer with nutrient-rich dairy foods. From calcium to potassium, dairy products like milk contain nine essential nutrients which may help to better manage your weight, reduce your risk for high blood pressure, osteoporosis and certain cancers. Whether it's protein to help build and repair the muscle tissue of active bodies or vitamin A to help maintain healthy skin, dairy products are a natural nutrient powerhouse. Those are just a few of the reasons that you should celebrate dairy not just in June, but all year long.
