A great BIG move

New HVAC system at county courthouse could mean even bigger changes in office space

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A project that is expected to improve heating and cooling at the 113-year-old Anderson County Courthouse also could result in permanently relocating county offices that haven't changed much since the courthouse was built in 1902, despite a multitude of changes in the way the county conducts business.

County commissioners on June 8 signed a contract to pay $60,000 to BG Consultants for the next phase - the design phase - of a major HVAC (heating, ventilation and air conditioning) system upgrade. Under that contract, BG Consultants will begin to design a more energy efficient system that would solve long-standing problems of hot and cool spots in the county's center of government. Preliminary estimates said the project could cost as much as $1 million to $1.5 million; more accurate estimates won't be available until the system is designed.

County commissioners have spent the better part of a year working on a plan to improve the HVAC system. Although it is still early in the process, the impact of how this project could affect those who work in or use the courthouse is starting to become more clear.

Staying Cool at the Pool

Carnival, events to return to local fair

Free events increased to entice more people to enjoy annual county fair

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The Anderson County Fair will roll into town the first week of August much the same as it did last year, with carnival rides and some new events. Organizers hope to repeat the success of last year, which many say was the best fair in recent years.

Much of that success was credited to the return of a full carnival. Anderson County had difficulty attracting a carnival company, primarily because the number of carnival companies has diminished while the number of county fairs and events that used carnivals remains the same. Poor attendance in recent years at the local fair was blamed on the lack of a carnival. That changed last year, and fair organizers are sticking close to the 2014 formula. Fun Times Carnival Rides, based in southern Missouri, is returning and will expand last year's number of open carnival days. The midway will be in Garnett from Tuesday, Aug. 4, through Saturday, Aug. 8, this year, its final day coinciding with the Demolition Derby Saturday.

The carnival company requested the change, hoping to capitalize on crowds during the demo derby, which usually is one of the fair's most well-attended events. But fair board

Organizers cancel Second Saturdays

Low turn-out, support blamed but hopes continue for new events in downtown Garnett

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Organizers in Garnett are cancelling the remaining Second Saturdays promotions for 2015 due to low attendance, but they haven't written off the idea of coordinating additional special events to drive new city activities in the future.

"We've determined what we're doing isn't getting the response and the results we had wanted," said Creative Business Partnerships Committee chairman Tami Hiestand. "It wouldn't make sense to keep pressing something that people aren't interested in, so we're going to go back to the drawing board and try to come up with something else."

The CBPC started Second Saturdays more than a year ago with the aim of developing foot traffic in the downtown area throughout the day by coordinating kids games, live musical entertainment and a cash drawing. The promotion initially involved registrations at area businesses and restaurants, but interest in that part of the plan waned early. While

Rainy May likely contributed to local job losses

County jobless rate jumps in May, state overall holds steady

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA – The rate of jobless Anderson County residents increased more than half a percentage point in May, according to a report from the Kansas Department of Labor released June 19.

Statewide, unemployment was nearly steady. But in the local region, a few nearby counties found themselves in the same boat as Anderson County, while a few others – particularly those closer to the Kansas City metro area, like Franklin and Miami - were steady.

Much of the job loss could be attributed to rainy weather, as construction activity slowed in May because of adverse weather conditions. Construction trades are a primary source of jobs in Anderson County.

"Preliminary estimates show Kansas lost 3,800 jobs from April to May. Changing seasonal factors led to a decline in student workers at the State universities," said Tyler Tenbrink, Senior Labor Economist. "Also, construction activity slowed in a space analysis study of the courthouse and other county-owned buildings. The study examined current offices to determine how people use various spaces in the courthouse and other county-owned buildings. Commission Chairman Jerry Howarter said the commissioners may or may not follow the recommendations, which would move several offices either to other locations in the same building or to another building entirely.

For example, Dan Harden of BG Consultants recommends the county's road and bridge department would move their offices, including the county engineer's office, and sign shop from the county annex to a new county shop not yet under construction. The new shop will be at the site of a demolished former nursing home on Seventh Street the county purchased in a delinquent tax sale last year. Once that move is made, the annex will have 1,017 square feet of available office space.

The county attorney's office and file storage on the second floor, as well as offices for Community Corrections on the third floor, could move into that annex space. The appraiser's office then could take over the courthouse space vacated by the county attorney and community corrections. The clerk's office would move across the hall and next door to the appraiser's first floor space, while the treasurer's office would expand into vacated clerk's space next door.

In addition to the new HVAC system, county commissioners also plan to install a new, larger elevator that would travel all four floors, basement to third floor.

Howarter stressed the report offered suggestions and no decisions about whether to follow those recommendations have been made.

"Everything that came out (of the study) was positive and it gives us a bunch of options to figure out what we want to do," Howarter said.

When the courthouse was built in 1902, government functions were very different from today, the study said. License plates and vehicle registrations did not exist in 1902, the study explains. Planning and zoning needs were not yet part of the county government. Road construction and maintenance were handled at the township level. Computers, printers and electronic devices have replaced adding machines, manual typewriters and hand-written ledgers.

"No one refinanced their mortgage three times in 1902," the study said. "Anderson County is an entirely different place in 2015 than it was in 1902."

Yet, courthouse offices still exist in roughly the same spaces as when the courthouse was constructed. The courtroom, clerk, treasurer and register of deeds appear to be in their original spaces, the study said. Anderson County is not expected to grow significantly over the next 10 years, though, the study said. That means that changes made now likely will serve the county's needs for the foreseeable future.

Changing the facility, as well as the habits of those who work and do business there, will be an adjustment, Howarter said. Although the county has the option of completing all the construction at once or doing it in stages like a floor at a time, engineers have recommended it would be best to complete all construction at once. That could take more than a year, and would require most, if not all, county offices to move into mobile units that would be located on the one-way street south of the courthouse. The county already has reached an agreement with the city to allow such temporary units on the one-way.

"It's not going to be pleasant, but it will be a lot more comfortable when it's all done," Howarter said of the inconvenience to staff and visitors.

Construction at the courthouse likely wouldn't begin until the county's new shop is up and running. That project is still out for bids.

"We have a lot going on," Howarter said. "Right now, we're taking baby steps and trying to do it right."

The way things are now

The engineers for Anderson County’s plan to heat and cool the 1902 courthouse said a mouthful. Let me paraphrase: ‘Anderson County is a far different place in 2015 than it was in 1902.’

That little nugget stuck with me when I read it in today’s paper, especially in view of an email discussion I was involved in the tail end of last week as a member of the Creative Business Partnerships Committee. We were discussing the end of the Second Saturday’s promotion, why the project didn’t meet our expectations and what we might possibly do to re-fire the engines of downtown business.

Yep, the differences are dramatic. Think back to those “Little House on The Prairie” re-runs. In 1902 Anderson County was just like that.

Most of the local economy (and that’s the economy that counted, because even Kansas City was a full day away) was driven by farmers. That’s what most people did for a living. Small acreages and family farm operations abounded, to the point we built and staffed schools every few miles to educate all those farm kids.

Local businesses developed for one main purpose – to serve the needs of those farmers and the economy they survived in. They sold clothing, boots, tools, seed, harness, dresses for weddings, funerals and Sunday church; the occasional photographic portrait, ice cream cone or newspaper subscription.

A small class of professionals developed to serve mostly the farm population – doctors, lawyers, business people. Whatever happened in Anderson County – if you moved here or left here, got rich or failed outright – it was directly or nearly directly related to farming.

And those consultants for the county were right – the county treasurer didn’t spend a good chunk of its time dealing with drivers’ licenses and vehicle tags because there were only about 4 four autos in the entire county. Now my family alone owns five.

Then things changed. Technology blossomed and reduced the number of farmers and farms needed to produce as much food and feedstuffs. Farms got bigger, farmers got fewer. Highways connected towns and “time traveled” us out of town at 70 mph. Businesses in town that used to serve farmers now had to find someone else to sell their products and services to. Many of them didn’t survive, and their tombstones – vacant or vastly underused buildings now in Garnett’s downtown – mark their legacy. Our population declined – 14,000 in 1900 down to just 8,000 in 2010.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

Lots of people just want to say Garnett and the towns of Anderson County have simply died. Yet people continue to live here, to value the character of living in a small town and to tolerate its shortcomings. They continue to complain about the way things are, which says they at least care about the way things are and can see a better vision.

It takes more than Second Saturdays drawings; it takes more than ‘something for the kids to do,;’ it takes more than new schools. It takes an understanding that the population of our county has changed and has different needs and different ways to satisfy those needs. Yet they stay here. Why?

There is a reason, and there is a way to adapt our community and our businesses to serve people the way they are now instead of yearning back to some romantic vision of a time that’s dead and gone.

Those of us who’ve spent decades trying to develop and maintain our community need to wrap our heads around that fact, and wrestle up ideas that reflect the way things are now.

How old is he, anyway? Got to be 25, 26, 27 or even in his 30s. No job, no place to live. Can’t afford a car but got plenty of tattoos. And you’re crazy about him, nearly old enough to be his mom. Got yourself a real trophy buck there, honey.

Obama was born a Muslim and always will be a Muslim. Therefore he’s all for ISIS taking over this country and this continent in the hopes he can be the supreme ayatollah of this hemisphere. He sure is doing everything he can to make that happen, isn’t he?

I was reading about the person that wrote about the free lunches. That is the most unquestioned thing I’ve ever read. Everything’s the government’s fault, everything has to do with the government. This about kids who don’t get to eat. Yeah, maybe some of them have bad parents, but if their parents are bad what do we tell them? “You’re parents are bad so you don’t get to eat? You starve?” This is stupid. This is for kids who don’t get to eat, whether they have bad parents or not. The Bible tells us we will have the poor among us and we should take care of them. You should crawl back under the rock you came from and don’t come out until you evolve into a human being with a heart.

First I hear (deleted) is coming to the old Alco building and then I hear they’re not. Why don’t the city get hold of Wal-Mart and have them put one of those mini-Wal-Marts in there? Or are we just going to let that building grow up in weeds and fall down like our buildings downtown?

I had a visitor the other day. Well, this pig came by carrying his grade card. I started a conversation with Obama Hussein. He got aggravated, took his grade card and went singing down the road.

Two nights in a row whoever’s playing ball at the top field at the North Lake don’t shut the lights off and don’t open the gates. You have to go clear around because they won’t open the gates. How does the city afford the electricity? Don’t the coaches have any responsibility?

Who will pick the Republicans in 2016?

The election—the important one, for Republican candidates for the Kansas House and Senate in August 2016—is just starting to heat up.

No, not many candidate filings yet, no radio and Internet commercials or those little brochures stuck in the screen door—but that election is starting right now.

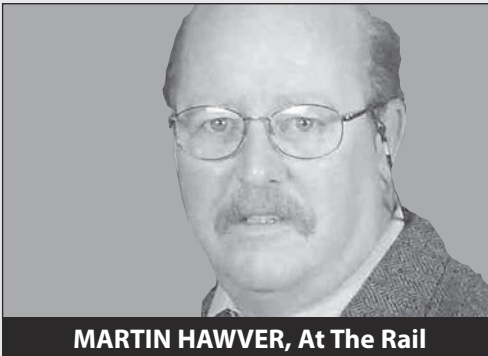

Reason? It’s that of the 97 Republicans in the Kansas House and the 32 Republicans in the Senate, the governor-approved tax package this session just passed by one vote in each chamber. That means 34 of those current House Republicans didn’t vote for the governor’s tax plan; 11 Senate Republicans didn’t, either. (No Democrats voted for the package.)

Hmmm... That can’t be good for a governor who is just one year into his second and final term in office. It means, of course, that the Republican Party of Kansas can brag about its overwhelming majorities, but the titular leader of that party, Gov. Sam Brownback, doesn’t have the solid, stable legislature that he wants to enact...well, whatever he has left on his gubernatorial bucket list.

Lawmakers are, for Brownback’s purposes, sorta like a dog that won’t heel when you tell it to.

So, while there is still a legislative session left before August 2016, plans are probably starting now to prune out those legislators who campaigned under the Republican party label, but didn’t line up to vote for the governor’s tax package. They become the problem, and for Brownback’s purposes, might just as well have been Democrats, or children or illegal aliens or

STATE COMMENTARY

Practically, in most House and Senate districts in Kansas, because a majority of Kansans are registered as Republican voters, once you get the GOP nomination for the general election ballot, chances are good that you will get to spend winters in Topeka. That’s just the numbers.

So, for the governor, it is time to sort out the Republicans in the Legislature, and the governor is good at it. Look at the Kansas Senate in 2012, when Brownback and political and financial backers pruned the State Senate of most moderate Republicans and boosted the GOP majority to a near-record 32 members.

But the conservative shift in that election didn’t give the governor the certainty of passage of everything he could think up, and while he was involved in the House elections last August and November on behalf of Republicans, he was...how do you say it...distracted by his own reelection campaign.

For 2016, the governor has little to do except to dabble in the House and Senate primary elections and the general election.

So, that sorting has started: Which legislators are keepers and which need to be thrown back into the stream of the general public?

For moderate Republicans, this year’s tax votes show that they are close—with the help of Democrats, of course—to the majorities needed to repeal some of the conservative/Brownback inspired legislation passed this year and last.

But, that comes down to those pesky voters, the ones who, having gone out to lunch or were on vacation during the primary, just look for the letter behind a candidate’s name in November.

While Brownback and crew are pruning, voters might want to read those brochures, those e-mails and such, and identify that there are conservative and moderate Republicans, and maybe figure out where they personally stand. There’s R, of course, and then there’s R-squared.

And Democrats? They’ll benefit from Republican angst, when voters can’t decide whether the GOP candidate is too liberal, too conservative, or just about right. Ever think Republican-dominated Kansas would come to the time when voters might have to consider a Democrat vote the “safe” vote in determining where the government goes? It might get there next election cycle...

Summer Food Program helps kids

Letter to the Editor:

The Summer Food Service Program (SFSP) was created to serve nutritious meals to children when National School Lunch and School Breakfast Program meals are not available. SFSP is administered at the Federal level by the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS), an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). FNS decides overall program policy and publishes regulations and payment rates. State education agencies administer SFSP. The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) administers the SFSP in Kansas.

This is a vital program that seeks to ensure that children do not go hungry during the summer months when they do not have access to the National School Lunch and Breakfast programs. According to the 2012 Kansas Hunger Atlas, a report published by the Kansas Association of Community Action Programs, the childhood food insecurity rate in Anderson County is 24.3%, meaning that nearly 500 children residing in Anderson County are food insecure. Food insecurity is defined as lacking reliable access to a sufficient quantity of affordable, nutritious food.

In a perfect world this many children would not be hungry. Likewise, each of their parents would have a good job making a living wage. Sadly, the world in which we live is anything but perfect. While our nation’s wealth is great, many of our fellow citizens, many of them children, continue to suffer from the hideous conditions of poverty. ECKAN has been on the front lines of the War on Poverty since its inception in 1966. We remain determined to make a difference in the communities that we serve and sincerely believe that the Summer Food Service Program is a making a positive difference in Garnett.

Sincerely,
Richard Jackson,
ECKAN CEO

LibertyFest approaches

Libertyfest 2015

It is that time of the year to celebrate our independence with Fireworks on July 3rd at the North Lake (raindate July 5th).

This celebration doesn’t happen without you and your donations for the lights, explosions, bangs and bright colors that light the sky.

Please feel generous again this year by making donations at the Chamber office and/or the front gate of the North Lake entrance. Come enjoy the Community Band, have a picnic with your family and friends or just come and enjoy the beautiful park and experience the fireworks display.

This event is put on by the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce with the help of a lot of volunteers from the Chamber Board, City of Garnett, Fire Department, Trent McCown, Police Department, volunteer shooters and many, many more people.

Please help us reach our goal to pay for the fireworks. Thanking you in advance for your donation so that we can continue bringing Libertyfest to Anderson County this year and many years to come.

1985: Why can't people swim at new reservoir?

City electric customers will pay an added surcharge for their electricity after Garnett City Commissioners approved a method of recouping the city's spiking energy costs. Based on prices for January through April, someone using 1,000 kilowatts of electricity would have paid an extra $18 over that period and can expect to pay even more as the weather gets hotter.

It may have been used to kill Allied soldiers in Germany, but the 60-year trip to Anderson county, then to Missouri and back to Garnett for a German machine gun came to an end last week. Family members of Stephen J. Peine, a one-time Garnett resident now deceased, discovered the gun at his sister's residence in Nixa, Mo., recently while moving other guns out of the house. A search of records showed the Bergmann MP34 had been brought back to the U.S. by Peine as a war prize after WWII and in 1948 had been donated to the Anderson County Sheriff's Department for use in the department. How it got to Missouri is anybody's guess.

A 60-year-old water line originally designed to bring water from Lake Garnett to the city's water treatment plant at Crystal Lake was working Wednesday to supply raw water for the production of ethanol at Garnett's EKAE ethanol plant.

For the fifth month in a row, Anderson County Hospital has posted a profit. The hospital had an excess of revenue of $19,075 in May after non-patient revenue, which includes county funding from property taxes, were added. For the year, the hospital is $246,501 in the black. That figure may decrease in coming months since summer is historically a slow period for the hospital.

A fight in Anderson County jail left a Garnett man with a broken kneecap and a Crawford County prisoner with a broken knuckle. Jailers heard the fight and quickly broke it up. The injured inmates refused medical treatment. The Garnett man reported that a Crawford County man and a Topeka man beat him up and threatened to kill him. No charges have been filed.

July 1, 1985

Discussion turned immediately to the recommendation of the Garnett Cedar Valley Reservoir Advisory Board when Garnett City Commissioners met Wednesday. The reservoir advisory board recommends the city recognize their responsibility as the law enforcement at the reservoir immediately and take whatever steps are necessary for adequate protection of the area. The board asked the city to reconsider their no stand on swimming and allow swimming in designated areas only and post no swimming in the remaining areas. In response, Mayor Claron Cole reiterated the original purpose of the reservoir was to provide Garnett with an adequate water supply. Second to this reason was it could enhance businesses that might consider establishing operations in Anderson County. The third objective was for recreation and enjoyment by the public. There are no funds to establish beaches for swimming and there is probably not enough money anyway to provide enough insurance to protect the city, Cole explained.

As indicated on the tag, this promotional corkscrew was found on the home site of Henry Roeckers' grandfather.

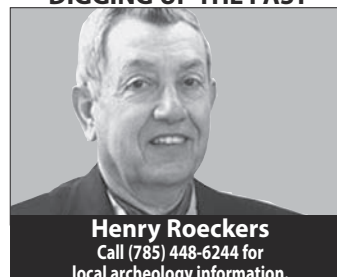

Promotional corkscrew has family connection

In the late 1960s, I had the opportunity to pay a visit with my metal detector to my late Grandpa Roeckers' home site, located on a small hill between Greeley and Scipio, Kansas.

This is one of the artifacts I found that day while there. It is a Casper Whiskey Company Corkscrew which dates between 1906-1916. It was a Promotional Corkscrew produced for the Casper Company by Cincinnati, Ohio Bottle Supply Company. The Casper Company moved to Roanoke in 1906 from Winston Salem and operated there until prohibition began 1916.

At one time this Corkscrew had a wooden holder which slid over the screw to protect it from damage and also personal injury. Normally, on one side was this slogan, "We Are The Largest Mail Order Whiskey Concern In The World."

Finding an artifact that has family ties is so neat!

Job trusted in a sovereign God

The book of Job is a personal and theological drama of suffering and faith. Job lived in or before the days of the Patriarchs in the land of Uz, east of the Jordan River. We are not told how Job came to know and fear God but there is no doubt he had an understanding of God. He was a very wealthy man with many flocks and herds. We are told in Job 1:1 that "Job was blameless and upright; he feared God and shunned evil." This means simply that Job lived according to the light he knew of God, not that he was sinless.

Job's integrity had not only been noted by God but also by Satan. Satan insisted to God that Job only served God because it paid him to. In his words (Satan), God had "built a hedge around Job and his household and everything he had." This is the age old accusation that one of mankind's greatest temptations is to love the gifts greater than the Giver, to try and please God merely for the sake of benefits.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

By David Bilderback

The Lord permitted Satan to try Job's faith in God. Blow after blow fell on Job: his children, his servants and his livestock were taken from him and he was left penniless. Nevertheless, "In all this Job did not sin or charge God with wrong." (Job 1:22) Satan's response to God was Job's faithful response was due to his own life being spared and if God afflicted Job's health he would curse God to his face. God then allowed Satan to afflict Job with boils from head to foot. Job's response was, "Shall we accept good from God and not trouble?"

Job's worship was not a bargain for blessing but was founded upon trust in God's sovereign care. In Job 3:25 Job says, "What I feared has come upon me; what I dreaded has happened to me." Job understood the dilemma man faces because of his sinful nature. In Job 5:7 Job says, "Yet man is born to trouble as surely as sparks fly upward." We are born to trouble as well. I don't believe God induces trouble on us but he certainly allows it to occur. Job was not sinless just as we are not sinless. We can suffer because of our faith or because of a lack of faith.

Job suffered because of his faith in God. Followers of Christ may also face that kind of suffering but can rest on the work of Jesus Christ on the cross. If we remain faithful to God he will replace the darkness of our existence with the light of his presence. If we suffer because of a lack of faith there is a chasm or gulf of alienation between God and us that cannot be bridged.

On June 16, 2015 the Pieces & Patches Quilt Guild sponsored a bus trip to the Missouri Star Quilt Company in Hamilton, Mo. There were 55 members and friends on the trip. During the bus ride members enjoyed games related to quilting provided by Bonnie Deiter and homemade cookies provided by the club's scholarship winner, Seth Wolken. The group shopped the day away in the six quilt shops affiliated with the Missouri Star Quilt company. Since the club has no scheduled meeting in June, the nominating committee reported on the slate of officers to be voted on at the July meeting.

Optimist Club Gives Scholarships

Pedrow receives Bud White scholarship

Alexis Pedrow was named the winner of the 2015 Bud White Memorial Scholarship sponsored by the Garnett Optimist Club. Alexis will attend Kansas State University majoring in Pre-Veterinarian Medicine and Veterinary Medicine School. She is the daughter of Jeff and Teresa Pedrow, Garnett.

The Bud White Memorial Scholarship was established in honor of Bud White a longstanding member of the Garnett Optimist Club. Bud was instrumental in overseeing many of the projects conducted by the club for Anderson County youth programs. Bud helped organize and manage the Optimist Club's beef raffle in conjunction with the Anderson County Fair to help raise funds for the scholarship fund. After Bud's death the beef raffle was renamed and the raffle proceeds will be used to help fund the $500 scholarship in addition to the other scholarships that the Optimist Club issues each year.

Students awarded this scholarship are representative of the citizenship traits that Bud White exhibited through his years of work and dedication with the Garnett Optimist Club.

Young receives Wayne Penn scholarship

Asa Young is the recipient of the 2015 Wayne Penn Memorial Optimist Vocational Scholarship. He plans to attend Cowley County Community College for Non-Destructive Testing (NDT). NDT students develop the knowledge and skills required to perform sophisticated testing techniques such as eddy current, x-ray, liquid dye penetrant, magnetic particle, and ultrasonic testing that are currently required in many different industry fields.

The Wayne Penn Memorial Optimist Vocational Scholarship was established in honor of Wayne Penn, a longstanding member of the Garnett Optimist Club. Wayne was always a proponent of the projects undertaken by the Optimist Club that helped advance the youth in Anderson County through educational trips, scholarships, leadership activities and volunteer opportunities.

To be eligible for the Wayne Penn Memorial Vocational Scholarship applicants are required to be residents of Anderson County, enrolled in college to pursue a degree in a vocational field, be of good academic standing and be representative of the citizenship traits that Wayne exhibited through his years of work and dedication with the Garnett Optimist Club.

Asa is the son of Gabie Dominiq and Tom Young.

How to influence the influencers

I got an oversized postcard in the mail the other day from a roofing contractor who obviously wanted to sell me a new roof. I threw the card away. Why?

I threw it away for a couple of reasons, and if you're a small business looking for ways to sell more of your products and services (which I assume is why you're reading this) I want you to explore those reasons with me.

For starters the roof on my house and the one on my office building are both just a few years old, so I'm not in the market. Secondly, I didn't know the company – never heard of them before. Roofing companies can be dubious, and I wasn't about to spend $20,000 based just on a postcard. In short, they had little or no influence on me.

Everything you buy is a result of influence of one kind or another. You're hungry, so you buy a hamburger; but you don't go to the place where you found the hair in your French fries that one time. There's a new burger place you've seen coupons for in the paper and your buddy told you was really good.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks
Review Publisher

Hunger is an influencer. The hair in the French fries was an influencer. The coupons for the new place and your buddy's recommendation were both influencers. But probably the biggest influencers were your buddy and ... well... that hair.

We all know negativity carries more weight than positivity. A bad experience at your business is hard to get over, and many customers never will. Likewise, a referral from someone you trust, that that business he referred, is worth its weight in gold.

So the key to developing your sales is to influence the influencer.

If I owned a restaurant, I'd have a drawing every week among all the convenience store clerks within a 5-block area for a free meal. Why? How many times do you think someone passing through your town has stopped at a convenience store and asked the clerk "do you know of a good restaurant in town?" There may be a number of places to eat in your town, but I want mine to be "top-of-mind" among those clerks who influence that traffic.

Influencers by definition always have the assumption of credibility, and there's something about them that puts them in the position of influence over your product or your customers. To identify them, you sort of have to walk backwards along the path of one of your sales and examine who and what were present at the pivotal points along the way.

Just remember two things: Avoid bad influence by making great customer experiences; and generate good influence by building relationships with critical people. By understanding influence and its effect on your business, you can sell more stuff.

Local students win first place in the NSDAR JAC contest

The Four Winds Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution is proud to announce that three entries that won first place at the local chapter level, Kansas state level, and the south central division (KS, OK, TX, MO, AR, and LA) level placed first place in the National level. The Junior American Citizen Contest theme for the year was Focus on the Future. There were over 2,200 entries that placed from around the United States. Kansas had over 1000 entries and from those that went on to the National Competition we had 20 first place winners, 7 second place winners, 5 third place winners, and 2 Honorable Mention winners.

In the first grade level of the Individual Community Service Project Division, Kyzer Lehmann from the LeRoy Home School Group placed first place above all other division winners in the United States. Kyzer volunteers every Monday at God's Store House in Burlington. He helps sort and hang clothes, carries food to be boxed or shelved, sorts books and toys and puts them away. His favorite part is bringing food up front and talking to the people who come into the store.

In the second grade level of the Group Community Service Project Division, the LeRoy Home School Group won first place in the national competition. The members of the group were Allison and Katie Kurtz, Kaitlyn and Jonathon Koenig, and Kyzer and Ashdynn Lehmann. Their project was earning money, purchasing gifts, and filling shoe boxes for Operation Christmas Child. Together the group filled fifteen shoeboxes. They were happy to know that the children who received these boxes were able to have Christmas.

Sarah Gray, seventh grade home school student from the Gray Home School in Garnett, had the winning essay entitled "Freedom Lost and Freedom Gained." She developed the idea of a young girl who found out the true meaning of freedom by watching a parade and then finding an old flag with an American history textbook and learned how our freedom was earned and that freedom is for all people young and old.

The winners were presented with first place medals and certificates from the chapter, state, regional, and national competitions. Four Winds Chapter of NSDAR is very proud of our local national winners in the first year that we have entered the contest.

The new theme for the contest next year is "Celebrating America."

Information announcing all the contests will be coming out in the next eight weeks.

Congratulations to all the winners for a job well done!

president Jess Rockers said the change will create some concerns for organizers because derby participants typically utilize space near the carnival area.

Another change last year, aside from the return of the carnival, was a focus on offering free events every night of the fair. That includes the parade and the return of a free petting zoo, "Two Girls and a Zoo," on Tuesday, Aug. 4.

The Anderson County Fair Tent returns Wednesday, Aug. 5, with a bigger grand prize of $300 as well as individual merchant prizes. A pie baking contest and auction also return Wednesday.

musical entertainment gravitated toward the evening hours and enjoyed some success, business support trailed off and public attendance for daytime events never blossomed. Helen Norman, who worked with the committee as a board member of the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce, said Second Saturdays built a brand of sorts even without universal public support.

"I know a few people did a lot to make this work and a lot of ideas were generated to make it successful, but attendance was lacking," Norman said. I know the words 'Second Saturdays' has become a household phrase."

Organizers said "Second Saturdays" fought a 'chicken

at the State FFA Convention. Mahon attended the USA Conference.

Business meeting conducted by President Tadd Goodell included the acceptance of the audit contract by Diehl, Banwart and Bolton CPA, P.A. in amount of $4,425.00 for the 2014-15 school year; voted to increase student lunch prices by (.10) ten cents per meal for 2015-16 school term; accepted the resignations of Alex Nuss as teacher and coach and Terina Platt as NHS sponsor and Kerry Ryman as route bus driver; following an executive session, adopted the 2015-16 board/teacher negotiated agreement; adopted 2015-16 school calendar; following executive session hired Cody Kramer as teacher and middle school student council sponsor, Zach Mason as a teacher, head middle school football coach and assistant high school track coach, Rachael McGee as freshman class sponsor and National Honor Society Sponsor, Brock Ellis as part time maintenance at $10 per hour and set salary of Alan Newton at $17.50 hourly for 130 contract days; following executive meeting voted to increase Principal Hermreck's 2015-16 contract by $2,500, pay KASSP dues and set his contract days to begin August 3, 2015 and increased Superintendent Mahon's 2015-16 by $3,750 and to pay USA dues; increased the 2015-16 clerk salary by 2 percent; increased all classified salaries by 2% and to adjust contract days to the 2015-16 school calendar and lastly to close the books for the 2014-15 school year.

Others attending the meeting other than aforementioned were Bryan Miller, David Milner, Jeff Strickler, Richard Webber and board clerk Leanne Trabuc.

to Thursday, Aug. 6, at the request of participants. The shodeo previously was held Wednesday evening before the horse show Thursday morning, and the order apparently confused some horses who thought they were still in rodeo mode and not show mode.

Also on Thursday will be a new event, "Touch-A-Truck." This free event encourages children to get up close and personal with a variety of trucks, from ambulances, patrol cars and fire trucks to tow trucks and construction vehicles. Rockers said similar events are quite popular at fairs and festivals across the country.

Rockers said he also encourages people to visit the 4-H and open class displays throughout the course of the fair. The displays showcase the talents of or the egg' battle. Downtown businesses didn't see much point in staying open later on Saturdays because there was no traffic, and members of the public didn't attend events in part because there were no special events at local businesses. Even so, Hiestand said one big success to come from the events was development and promotion of local musical talent.

"We found out we have some very talented musicians in this part of the state, and that they can fill up a building with a show," Hiestand said. "That's a big resource for us."

Committee members said they may look toward the fall as a new target date for another downtown event. Committee member Dane Hicks said the committee needs to consider how often an event is scheduled

Anderson County residents. The fair wraps up with the livestock sale Friday, Aug. 7, followed by the demo derby Saturday.

Rockers said he hopes people will be just as excited to attend this year's fair as they were last year. Ultimately, though, the success of any outdoor event is dependent on the weather. Temperatures were quite pleasant last year, which likely helped boost attendance just as much as having a carnival did. It's too early to predict what the weather may be like at fair time. Typically, early August is hot and muggy. However, this spring and early summer has been marked by a series of rainstorms. This weekend was dry, however, with very warm temperatures.

and how big a deal it can be. "Square Fair works, but it wouldn't work every weekend or every month. The same thing with Cornstock," Hicks said. "Maybe we plan an event twice a year downtown and make it a bigger deal - a line up of music or a talent show with a real prize like $1,000 or something. Maybe even have a beer garden downtown in the evening," he said. "If it was more infrequent and a little bigger she-bang, it might draw more traffic and more energy."
