7th St. road work nears end amid complaints

County leaders, crew as well as road travelers disappointed with work

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — To say road work on 1600 Road (West Seventh Street near Garnett) has been a bumpy ride is a bit of an understatement, according to some motorists who regularly travel the road. They say the road work has been uneven, with patches of loose gravel in spots, poor traffic control and even unattended traffic cones in the middle of the road that come with no prior warning.

The director of the county's road department said he thinks the out-of-state company hired to do the work underestimated Kansas roads.

The owner of the company, Darren Coughlin of Utah-based Coughlin Company, however, said rain-saturated road base in parts of the project and a misunderstanding about traffic control gave his staff extra problems to solve once they got here.

The project is expected to be completed by the contractor soon, perhaps as early as sometime this week, but some final work to the road could continue a few days past that.

Problems with the road work began a few weeks ago, when Coughlin Company first began efforts to repair the black-top road and base on a 9-mile

USD 365 2015 budget offers slight tax relief

Higher property values help district keep tax rate slightly lower

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Despite fears that the Kansas Legislature's new "block grant" school funding program would create a financial burden for districts, USD 365 was able to slightly reduce the tax rate for area taxpayers.

The lower tax rate comes as a result of higher property values rather than decreased spending. About $2 million in higher property values, likely attributed to the end of a 10-year tax abatement for the East Kansas Agri Energy ethanol plant, meant local tax dollars stretched further. The district held the line on its Local Option Budget - the amount that districts can tax property owners above the state's standard 20-mill tax rate - at $2,484,409, the same as last year.

The district's general fund increased by more than $1.8 million dollars, an amount that is distributed by the state.

The state changed the way it will provide money to school districts, essentially "locking

EKAE Ethanol Plant Building for the Future, Celebrating the Past

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 7-28-2015 / Vickie Moss

Steel began to rise last week at the site of the EKAE renewable diesel project under construction west of the plant in Garnett. The expansion is expected to add 12 new jobs, increase the company's sales and come on line for production at the end of this year.

Plant expansion, 10th anniversary plans take shape

Ethanol officials seek ways to keep plant competitive, prepare to hire new employees

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Ten years after East Kansas Agri Energy ethanol plant accepted its first load of local corn, the plant is preparing for a major expansion that will add about a dozen employees and set the stage for the future.

The steel skeleton of the expansion began to rise last week, offering a glimpse of the plant that will sit just west of the current facility. It will include a building that was built to house a now-defunct church furniture factory. Over the next couple of months, workers will busily construct the expansion, which was delayed because of rainy weather in the late spring and early summer. Construction is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

The expansion will produce renewable diesel made from the distillers corn oil (DCO) already produced by the plant, which can be made from a number of feedstocks and allows the company to take advantage of other markets to improve margins. The fuel can be used like other diesel fuels for motorized vehicles, trucks and rail, heavy equipment and aviation fuel. The fuel meets Renewable Fuel Standards and reduces greenhouse gas emissions compared to petroleum fuel.

Last week, company officials began conducting interviews to fill 12-15 jobs, EKAE CEO Jeff Oestmann said. About 80 percent of the finalists live within a 30 mile radius, company officials said, although job advertisements also targeted Bourbon and Bulter counties to capitalize on graduates from schools that have related programs. The new employees are expected to start work immediately and will train at the Garnett plant and also with the builders to learn the specifics of this brand of diesel production.

The new employees will join about 50 regular plant employees, many of whom have worked at the plant since it opened in 2005. Oestmann said although officials already had begun to conduct interviews, he still encourages anyone interested in applying to visit the company's website at www.ekaell.com and

Few items left in Garnett sidewalk improvement plan

Work could spill into 2016; supposed to have ended in 2013

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — What was supposed to be a four-year plan to improve sidewalks in Garnett likely will stretch into a seventh year, but the items left on the list will be limited to just a few unavoidable projects.

Garnett officials have been working since 2009 on a plan to improve sidewalk access within the city to meet requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), after a citizen's complaint. That complaint sparked a multi-year plan that would provide improved sidewalk and handicapped access to key areas of the city - namely, at city-owned buildings, to the downtown shopping areas and along U.S. 59 Highway.

The plan was supposed to be completed by 2013, but for the past two years it has been extended. Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin said recently she expects a few items - like access to a physicians' office building on Fourth Street from U.S. 59, may have to be pushed into 2016. Martin said city commissioners have told her they do not want to ask for another extension, but it may be unavoidable.

"We had to address public access and the highest traffic areas," Martin said. "There will be a few things next year but my goal is to get as much done as we can."

In the case of the sidewalk to the physician's building, for example, work was hampered by a variety of issues. The sidewalk couldn't be completed until construction at the nearby hospital and at the intersection of Fourth and 59 was completed. Also, concrete contractors have been very busy and unable to schedule the work in a timely manner.

Plans to construct a sidewalk from Seventh Street to Crystal Lake (commonly known as the "South Lake") were post-

They are still working on correcting the problems. They milled the chip seal off the top of Cedar Creek Bridge and they have found holes in the cement that needs repaired. He will be taking bids on the repair but it will be higher to close one lane at a time rather than closing both lanes at once. If both lanes are closed it will be closed for about a month and traffic will have to go to Hwy 31 and Kiowa. Final decision will be made after bids are received. Lester presented an agreement for the state to pay for rock that was put on a road while the state repaired the bridge on Hwy 31. Commission signed agreement.

Mick Brinkmeyer, Rural Fire Director joined the meeting and stated he called Lybarger and S&S Propane and got the same quote from both places. Terry stated that if he talked to the office it was just a quote from the truck that day. Mick reported he signed a contract with Lybarger last week for 4500 gallons. James Campbell, County Counselor informed Mick that a bid sheet needs to be created and used before bids are taken. Lester Welsh joined the meeting and Terry informed him that his company also bids oil if the county shop is interested.

PSAP

stretch of road beginning at the Garnett city limits on West Seventh Street and heading west; Seventh Street later becomes 1600 Road. The resulting road work was rough and uneven, leading county commissioners to instruct Road Department Director Lester Welsh to demand Coughlin correct the mistakes.

Welsh said he also heard from several people unhappy with the work, and assures people the road will be fixed.

"It's not what we thought it would be. It's not what we expected," Welsh said. "They're not satisfied with the way it's gone, either."

Darren Coughlin said problems began when the company arrived and discovered they would not be able to close the roadway and instead would have to handle their own traffic control as they maneuvered traffic through the site.

"There was a misunderstanding between us and the county about that," Coughlin said. "We weren't really prepared to handle that (traffic)."

Coughlin also said the "cold in place recycling" project the county bid was designed for cost savings - about half the cost of standard hot-mix repaving. But portions of the roadway were saturated from heavy rains to the point they wouldn't support the paving equipment, so the base had to be repaired in those spots before the resurfacing could happen. He said a "profilograph" scanning of the road before and after their completed segments showed they reduced the road deficiencies by 50 percent.

"I know we had some black eyes out there," Coughlin said, "but we stuck by it and figured out a solution without any more expense to the customer."

Welsh said he first was introduced to the company last year, when a salesman visited and pitched Coughlin as a road work option. Company officials took core samples and examined the road a few months ago. Coughlin had a good reputation and mostly has experience building roads in Utah, California and Nevada.

"This type of process is new to Kansas and I really think they dropped the ball on what kind of base is needed here," Welsh said.

The base of 1600 Road was built in the 1950s when there was little to no semi-tractor traffic.

Because the base wasn't designed to handle current traffic conditions including heavy corn-loaded semis enroute to the local ethanol plant, it needed significant repairs and Coughlin was expected to fix those problems, Welsh said.

Once Coughlin repairs the blacktop, county road crews will cover the road with a chip-and-seal process.

in" funding for the next two years via block grants until the Legislature can determine a new school finance formula. Their action has been challenged in court, but it does not appear as if the state Supreme Court will rule on the matter until next spring, according to information released last week by court officials. Oral arguments on whether Kansas funded schools in low-income districts equitably with higher-income districts are scheduled for Nov. 6. The court won't take up whether total funding is inadequate until spring 2016.

Total expenses for USD 365 are expected to increase to $18,947,628 for the 2015-16 school year, up from $16,584,691 last year. District officials have said previously the cost of health insurance in particular hit them hard, as well as increased costs for special education and "at-risk" students. Other areas that showed a significant increase included food service, which is expected to cost about $121,000 more than last year and driver training, which increased from just less than $10,000 last year to $44,400 this year. Capital outlay, or money set aside for physical improvements to the district, increased by just less than $100,000.

The total tax rate expected to hit taxpayers in the district is 52.333 mills, down slightly from last year's rate of 52.568. That rate includes taxes levied by the state, at 20 mills; the Local Option Budget at 13.363 mills (down from 16.839 last year); the capital outlay at 8 mills (up from 6.797 last year); and debts including bonds and interest at 10.970 (up from 8.932 last year).

poned because of a major electric line improvement project that saw the removal of several large trees and installation of new utility poles and upgrades electric wires. Martin said she doesn't want to begin the sidewalk project there until that work is completed.

Most residential sidewalks have been completed under the plan, but some property owners have been unable to find a contractor who could complete the work before the city's deadline. Martin said she attempted to hire a crew to replace the sidewalk at her personal property, but the contractor won't be able to get to it until the fall or first part of 2016.

By law, the city required improvements to only one side of the street in residential areas. As a result, some property owners were required to update their sidewalks, with an assistance program offered by the city. But neighbors across the street didn't necessarily need to make improvements. That also has created some confusion about what the city is required to complete as part of the ADA plan.

On the other hand, the multitude of sidewalk improvements across the city have sparked interest in fixing sidewalks that apply.

The work on the diesel plant comes as EKAE officials plan to celebrate 10 years of operation in Garnett since the project evolved from the city/county economic development group. An official celebration is planned for Aug. 15 at Anderson County Jr./Sr. High School and is expected to attract dignitaries including U.S. Sen. Jerry Moran and possibly U.S. Representative Lynn Jenkins, among others. More details about that event will be announced later.

"We say we're celebrating 10 years of success here in east Kansas," Oestmann said. "It's also a sound business decision. This is about maximizing revenue, reducing risk and leveraging activities that we already do every day," Oestmann said.

"We've got a bright future in front of us," he said.

The significance of 10 years particularly impacts Anderson County and Garnett taxpayers from a financial standpoint. This year marks the end of a 10-year tax abatement on the original plant; the end of the abatement is expected to add millions of dollars to local government coffers, and could result in a lower tax rate for individual taxpayers. Expanding the plant also is expected to add to the county's tax base, further reducing the burden on local taxpayers.

Despite the current growth of the company, Oestmann is concerned about a proposal from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) that reduces the amount of renewable fuel to be produced. The EPA plan would slash the volume of corn ethanol in the nation's fuel supply by nearly 4 billion gallons through 2016, or about 1.5 billion bushels of lost corn demand. That plan could hinder the progress EKAE has made over the past 10 years, Ariel Gum, Kincaid, was arrested July 21 on suspicion of giving tobacco product to a minor.

Timothy Phillips, Garnett, was arrested July 22 on a warrant.

Time for video gambling in Kansas

Kansas needs some creative revisions to the state's casino gambling laws to allow small town businesses far removed from the major casinos a chance to invigorate themselves with a little gambling revenue.

Where were the advocates for small town business when the Kansas Legislature chiseled out the state's casino gambling law in 2007? Towns like ours, along with the Eries, the Halsteads, the Jetmores, etc., got plowed under in the discussions and starry-eyed legislative yearning for gambling taxes. The law should have been encompassing enough to consider economic benefit in every Kansas town, not just the four destined to host the state-owned casinos.

South Dakota, for instance, does it right. The state's 814,000 souls are spread out even thinner over the state's 77,000 square miles than we are in Kansas - 2.8 million over 82,000 square miles. Towns are smaller and further apart. Property taxes are an issue there too. Like in Kansas, everybody expects paved roads and government services, but property owners don't want to carry the full lug.

The Mount Rushmore State leaves casino ownership to the Indians - there are 10 such operations in the state - but allows any restaurant or tavern with a liquor license in any town regardless of size to have up to 10 "video lottery" machines on its premises. Though they're regulated by the state lottery (not the pari-mutual wagering regulators who ride roughshod over horse & dog racing and the Deadwood gambling operation) the games are basically video poker, all wired in to a central IT hub that maintains and monitors the software and the machines to make sure everything's on the up & up. There's a $2 per bet limit, and the most you can win on your luckiest day is $1,000.

South Dakota's gambling machines pay out - as a percentage of credits won as a percentage of credits played - between 88 and 92 percent. The state currently splits net machine income with 50 percent going to licensed operators and their establishments, 49.5 percent deposited in the state's property tax reduction fund, and 0.5 percent used by the lottery for administration costs.

So this means the corner bar in Corsica (pop. 592) can sling PBR and Busch Light by the can and have a handful of video gambling machines that allow folks to hang out on a Saturday night and try their luck. Maybe in the process they get the burrito special and tip the waitress. The customers have a little fun without leaving town, the bar has extra traffic and makes some extra sales, the waitress pays her college tuition; the state picks up some non-tax revenue that doesn't lean so hard on the property owner. In Kansas it would be the same "win" we were promised with the state-owned casinos, just in littler doses - and in Westmoreland as well as Wichita.

The advantage of the South Dakota model is that it de-urbanizes gaming and offers an opportunity to small businesses in small towns that have a hard time keeping their local grocery store or drug store or flower shop open. It also accesses dollars in small towns that don't make the drive to larger casinos. Kansas, even with the constant refrain of "what can we do to save our small towns" echoing throughout the statehouse in Topeka, gave all the advantages of gambling to a handful of urban areas and the gambling industry which runs the casinos.

It isn't too late for Kansas to expand either its lottery or casino legislation and provide a chance for small towns to reap some benefit from wagering. With its obvious revenue options for the state budget it should be a priority in the upcoming session.

I wonder if some of these same people who worked hard to get the boat races in Garnett at Cedar Valley Reservoir could now work just as hard to clean up the trash, litter, broken bottles and garbage that was left behind. This place is absolutely disgusting. I don't think I've ever seen Cedar Valley look as bad as it does now.

The bidding on the sewer lift pump down at the swimming pool somehow doesn't pass the smell test. First of all they said the bid was mailed out on June 1 and they made a decision on the 9th. As slow as the mail is somebody would have had to know about the bid before it was mailed out and I think they decided was going to get the bid before it was mailed out. Plus there was a lot of people who could have bid and didn't get a chance to bid. Then the estimate was lower than the bids and they said they had to take it because they had to get it done right now. It sounds to me like there's under the table bid rigging going on in Garnett and it's been going on for years. But what can you do when you have a lot of people down at city hall who aren't honest.

Before Obama leaves office he will have pardoned all his Muslim brothers down at Guantanamo Bay, give it back to Cuba, released and pardoned all black prisoners, and make sure all illegals become citizens, and that's it.

Yes, about the police scanners. Valentine says 'its not something we've chosen to do and we're not trying to hide anything from the public.' What a crock of (deleted). Right there in the story it also says 'Valentine said he will not provide the code to the public.' Sounds like he's making a choice there to me.

What kind of drug is that guy doing talking about parking at the gas station across from the hospital? Dude must be doing some serious drugs.

How in the world did those people get shot in that Louisiana movie theater? There was a no guns allowed sign on the door for crying out loud.

I just found out one of our local attorneys knows how to lie. If he was in the military they'd probably put him on KP. One thing that just burns me up is when somebody lies to your face. I just happened to be in his office the other day and that's what he did to me. Anybody wants to know who that is they can just get in touch with me.

Ladies and gentlemen we have new entertainment in Garnett. Nice new obstacle course in the new hospital sidewalk. Must be for kids and their tricycles. Ain't that cute? The sidewalk man must have been drunk when he was laying that sidewalk from Maple Street. How many feet could we put in and how much cheaper could it have been if we'd put a straight sidewalk in? We're paying for it. Maybe we could have saved the money and had better services than just a fancy hospital.

If human life was as important as most people think it is, the speed limit on highways would be 5 mph.

Yes I'd just like to say with all that's gone on in the past with our local cops and deputies in Anderson County I for one can certainly understand why the sheriff wants to scramble their radio traffic. I mean, when somebody's 10-7 with a high school girl out at the North Lake, would you really want everybody with a scanner to know it?

Obama kneecaps Congress (again)

If only President Barack Obama were as hard-nosed and clever in undermining our adversaries as he is in kneecapping the U.S. Congress, the country's strategic position might be transformed.

The Iran deal just went to the United Nations Security Council, months before Congress will vote on it, and got unanimous approval. The U.N. vote doesn't bind Congress, but it boxes it in and minimizes it -- with malice aforethought.

After the U.N. vote, President Obama urged Congress to get with the program: "There is broad international consensus around this issue," he said, adding that his "assumption is that Congress will pay attention to that broad-based consensus." In other words, follow the lead of the United Nations on a matter of utmost importance to the national interest of the United States. Secretary of State John Kerry issued his own warning about the dangers of going our own way: "If Congress says 'no' to this deal, then there will be no restraints on Iran. There will be no sanctions left. Our friends in this effort will desert us."

And who's responsible for that? The Obama administration cut a deal eviscerating the international sanctions regime and got it blessed by the U.N., then turns around and tells Congress it has no alternative but to assent because there will be no meaningful sanctions regime left regardless.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

The agreement is written to favor business with Iran. It grandfathers in all commercial deals cut after the initial lifting of the sanctions, even in the unlikely event they are reimposed. Plus, Iran isn't going to give back its windfall of tens of billions of dollars handed to it under the agreement.

Kerry seemed offended by the notion that Congress should get to vote before everyone else locks the Iran agreement into place: "It is presumptuous of some people to say that France, Russia, China, Germany, Britain ought to do what the Congress tells them to do." This is admirably internationalist, but Kerry is supposed to be the secretary of state of the United States, not a representative of the interests and prerogatives of its allies and adversaries.

The New York Times reports that during the negotiations, Kerry actually pushed to delay a U.N. vote until Congress reviewed the deal. Predictably, the Iranians balked (they're not fools), and so did the Russians and the Europeans. Equally predictably, Kerry resorted to his solution to most every knotty negotiating problem -- he caved. Amazingly enough, the agreement with Iran doesn't mention the U.S. Congress or its review of the deal, but specifically cites the Iranian Parliament and its role in approving the pact.

It is President Obama's curse that he doesn't have a legislature as compliant as that of Iran's supreme leader. The president clearly disdains Congress as a body that harbors several hundred Republicans and that can only complicate his grand legacy-defining initiatives. He didn't want Congress to have a say at all over the Iran deal, but accepted the Corker bill that requires a near-impossible two-thirds vote to block it.

The administration's message to opponents is that even that supermajority would be too little, too late. Submission is the only option.

A look into the next Legislative session

Wonder what's coming at us from the next Kansas Legislature, when members of the House and Senate are going to be trying to think up things that will make us remember them fondly when it comes time to vote the following fall?

Well, the just-approved list of interim study committees which will meet this summer and fall may give us—and them—an idea of the support and the opposition to ideas that they'll consider.

Interim committees, generally seven- to 11-member panels of representatives and senators, have dozens of topics to take a look at, and those committees make recommendations to the full Legislature for next session. There won't be as many of those interim committees this year, to save money, but some of the issues that they'll take a look at are intriguing. Oh, and some aren't.

The concept: Those small panels look at ideas to see whether they should become bills for the upcoming session and to learn enough about the topics to make reasonable suggestions for those bills.

Wonder what they'll look at? Here are some topics that have been assigned:

Whether law enforcement officers should wear body cameras so we can learn how interactions between officers and the public go. Lots of national interest in cop-citizen interactions; we've all seen the photos on TV. The concept is relatively simple: If you believe you've been harassed or dealt with badly, well, there's the film. And, if the complaint is unreasonable, well, there's the film to show that the officer acted reasonably. Best result: Everyone is a little more polite because it's on camera. The side issue: Will the state pay for those cameras?

STATE COMMENTARY

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

Another issue that may go lots of ways in those hearings is considering whether there are ways to supervise potentially dangerous people with drug or mental health problems short of putting them in jail. It's a combination of both helping those people in the least restrictive setting possible and making sure that they aren't a danger to society or themselves. There are budget implications here.

Related...somewhat, though for a different set of Kansans, is looking at whether everyone who is now in prison for crimes really needs to be there, or whether there are ways to monitor their behavior and actions in a less restrictive, less costly manner. Ankle bracelets so we know where they are? Figuring out whether something less than iron bars will punish them and make sure they don't hurt others? That one has a lot of ways to go. And, look for opposition to cutting imprisonment, especially from crime victims.

On the general public safety side—and legislators like making us feel safer—there are several issues bubbling in the pot for interim study. They range from making sure that the state's—and nation's—power grids are safe and dependable to whether there are security problems in ensuring that power grid. School security becomes an issue, too, and what the state is doing to make sure that students are safe there.

Other topics: Are there some loose ends to be buttoned down on the change of local government elections from the spring to the fall of odd-numbered years? So many ways that could go wrong, or that something has been forgotten. Better get all the details nailed down in the upcoming session rather than when voters are standing in line in November 2017 to vote on the city council and school board.

And, there's also a move among conservative legislators to make local units of government report publicly in budget documents the money spent on hiring lobbyists to represent them before the Legislature. The deal here: Legislators want their constituents to believe that they know those local issues and will take care of them...but experience shows that it never hurts to have a lobbyist watching out for an issue, and those lobbyists are generally cheaper than sending the police chief or the surveyor or the mayor to hang around the Statehouse to make sure that some bill doesn't unintentionally wreck or make more expensive local programs. And, that can happen.

Might be an interesting fall; at least we'll get an idea of what to look—and look out—for...

1995: ACH signs letter to work with Saint Luke's School offered great artifact hunting

July 26, 2005
The good news for Anderson County's two school districts from the new school finance law passed by the legislature is a total of $596,047 in new state aid next year, plus another $93,195 in property tax relief. The bad news is the two districts will be losing around $277,000 in income as a result of Missouri Gas energy's ongoing tax appeal.

Less than three years after it last traded owners, Southern Star Gas Pipeline has been sold by its AIG Highstar Capital to a partnership of General Electric Commercial Finance Caisse de depot et placement du Quebec. The purchase price, according to company reports, was $362 million plus $476 million in assumed debt and preferred stock for the pipeline that includes 6,000 miles in seven states. The Anderson County portion of that pipeline generates some $480,000 in local tax revenues every year - some 13 percent of Anderson County's annual operating bud-

A letter of intent drawn up by Saint Luke's Hospital of Kansas City was signed by the Anderson County Hospital Board of Trustees Wednesday night. The letter states that ACH intends to enter into a 25-year contract with Saint Luke's, which will at first manage the hospital, then operate it. ACH administrator Jim Johnson said he is very satisfied with the contract. The contract is broken into two basic parts: What will happen under the management agreement and what will happen under the operational agreement. For the first two years Saint Luke's will manage the hospital. After that, Saint Luke's will enter into an eight year operational agreement which it can extend for up to 15 additional years, at five year intervals, at its own leisure. Only Saint Luke's will be able to terminate the agreement with a one-year advance of the termination date.

Fed up with what they described as a bad relationship with some Anderson County Hospital staff and management not following written procedures, three-full time Anderson County emergency medical technicians and one part-time EMT resigned. The resignations followed a long list of complaints registered by the four EMTs who resigned; they also followed the firing of the former director of the ambulance department.

The Santa Fe pumping station at Scipio was the scene of a fatal accident yesterday morning, about half-past 8 o'clock in which James McMahill, the pumper, lost his life. The pumping plant was in a small building on the west side of the big artificial lake made by the Santa Fe on the Gretencord farm, about a mile west of the station at Scipio. Under the building, was a pit, 12 to 14 feet deep, with concrete walls and floor. In this pit was the gasoline or gas pump that furnished power to pump the water to the tank at Richmond, about three miles north. In this pit was also the gasoline supply. Just outside of the power house was a small pond, which answered the purpose of a settling basin, from which the water was taken.

Dynamite 4-H Club meets

The Dynamite 4-H club met on July 19, 2015, under the direction of President Samantha Nickell. Samantha led the club in reciting the Pledge of Allegiance. The song leader, Tristian Ewert, led the club in singing "Father Abraham." The secretary, Austin Ewert, took roll call by asking each member to state their favorite subject in school. 7 members, 1 leader, and 4 parents were in attendance. After roll call, Austin read the minutes of the June 21 meeting. The President approved the minutes with no corrections of additions.

The meeting business started with reports from club officers and leaders. Treasurer, Autumn Ewert, gave an update on the monthly income and expenses. All balances were recorded and approved. Club leader, Tanya Ewert, informed the group of some upcoming events. There will be Pre Fair Judging on August 1, at 8:30 a.m., at ACJSHS. Also, on August 5, the club is going to have a meeting at the fairgrounds, at 12:00 p.m. After the reports, Samantha announced the next meeting will be held on August 5, 2015, at the fairgrounds.

After the announcement, President asked for a motion to adjourn. Daelynn Peine made the motion and it was seconded by Stephen Dorrell. The meeting was adjourned by reciting the 4-H Pledge. After the meeting, the group enjoyed the refreshments provided by the Ewert family.

Library to discuss 'The Magician's Lie'

The Garnett Public Library will hold a book discussion on Wednesday, August 26th at 7 p.m. This month's book is "The Magician's Lie" by Greer Macallister. Water for Elephants meets The Night Circus in The Magician's Lie, a debut novel in which the country's most notorious female illusionist stands accused of her husband's murder - and she has only one night to convince a small-town policeman of her innocence. Leading our discussion will be Paulabeth Henderson.

The Amazing Arden is the most famous female illusionist of her day, renowned for her notorious trick of sawing a man in half on stage. One night in Waterloo, Iowa, with young policeman Virgil Holt watching from the audience, she swaps her trademark saw for a fire ax. Is it a new version of the illusion, or an all-too-real murder? When Arden's husband is found lifeless beneath the stage later that night, the answer seems clear.

But when Virgil happens upon the fleeing magician and takes her into custody, she has a very different story to tell. Even handcuffed and alone, Arden is far from powerless-and what she reveals is as unbelievable as it is spellbinding. Over the course of one eerie night, Virgil must decide whether to turn Arden in or set her free... and it will take all he has to see through the smoke and mirrors.

The books are available for checkout at the library. The discussions are held the fourth Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Archer Room at the library. Notification is posted in case of cancellation.

Penny has held positions as Executive Director of Head Start Programs and Community Action Agencies which included Area Agencies on Aging services.

Penny left the non-profit sector about 8 years ago and purchased a small motel in Lincoln, Kansas which she operated until 10 months ago when she sold the business and moved to rural Overbrook, Kansas.

Penny has one son who lives in Missoula, Montana. Her mother and three brothers all live in the Fergus Falls, Minnesota area.

Penny says she is very pleased to be working with the Mid-America Nutrition

Stras

Program in Ottawa and that everyone has made her feel very welcome.

Mid-America Nutrition Program (MANP), is a comprehensive full service program dedicated to meeting the nutritional needs of the elderly through home-delivered meals and senior dining site meals. The mission of the agency is to provide the nutritional support that will help older people stay healthy and independent in their own homes.

The program is a cooperative arrangement between six counties: Franklin, Anderson, Osage, Linn, Miami and Coffey. Serving six counties allows Mid-America Nutrition to take advantage of "economies of scale" there by saving each of the counties money in providing essential services in their area. The meals are funded in part by the Older American's Act, the State of Kansas and each of the counties served, as well as client and individual donations. The state and federal funding is administered by the East Central Kansas Area Agency on Aging and Disability Resources.

County attorney attends professional training

On June 17, 2015, Anderson County Attorney Brandon L. Jones, joined senior prosecutors from across the state in Wichita, Kansas to represent his jurisdiction in a statewide committee recently established to lead efforts for positive improvements in the criminal justice system. Fourteen counties were in attendance.

The Kansas County and District Attorneys Association (KCDAA) Best Practices Committee provides a forum for prosecutors to collaborate on emerging issues by encouraging positive discussion and providing access to policy resources in order to continue to improve the overall prosecution function and the criminal justice system. The charge of the committee is to identify and advise the KCDAA Board of Directors on new and emerging statewide issues for prosecutors and make recommendations to the Board for appropriate statewide initiatives dedicated to positive change and improvements in the criminal justice system.

The Kansas Best Practices Committee was officially established by the KCDAA Board on March 26, 2015. The committee will meet at least twice annually and will address issues such as prosecutor media relations, law enforcement techniques, prosecutorial ethics, and discovery. The committee's next meeting will be held during the KCDAA fall conference in October.

This leadership by Kansas prosecutors mirrors a nationwide initiative, "Best Practices for Justice" led by Kristine Hamann, Visiting Fellow at the Bureau of Justice Assistance. Hamann is a former Assistant District Attorney in the Manhattan District Attorney's Office.

Approach, and be approachable

So you've finagled your way into a great networking event that may give you lots of great sales leads for your small business. How do you make the most of it?

Like anything else there are right ways and wrong ways, and one sure way to turn the opportunity into a disappointment is not to have the proper "buy in."

By "buy in" I mean you must have already come to the conclusion that this event is in fact an opportunity and that you intend to maximize it. If you don't have a commitment to your business and to the concept of using this event to help generate sales, you'll probably be out-shown by someone who has.

I knew a doctor once who worked for a small town hospital clinic. Management was trying hard to work its physicians into the fabric of the local community so people felt comfortable enough with them to become their patients. The guy was a fine physician but simply had no public relations skills and saw no value in having them. He felt like it was beneath him - "inauthentic" he told me once - to have to schmooze at the Rotary club in order to build his business. He had no "buy in" - no appreciation for the big plan and how the little plans contributed to the goal. He didn't last long.

So when you have the chance to network, do it right.

1) Remember the tools. Have fresh new business cards (not the dog-eared ones from your wallet) in your shirt pocket or outside pocket of your purse where you can get to them quickly.

2) Bring your research. You've known about this event for a week or so - plenty of time to learn a little about why you're there, who's going to be there and what their interests are and what you have to offer - so you have some conversation points.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Review Publisher

3) Remember the cues. Don't cross your arms; it says "don't approach me" to the people around you. Hold a pen in your hands or a cup or glass to give them something to do, or put your hands in your pockets if you have to in order to keep from crossing your arms. Don't sit unless you have to - staying on your feet makes you more mobile and more approachable to others.

4) Forget your nerves. You may think you're not the kind of person who can walk up to a stranger and introduce yourself, but you are. That's why you're there after all, and probably why the other person is there as well. And if you get "rejected" by a stranger, who cares? It's a stranger!

5) If someone approaches you with a "How are you" or a "What's up," etc., don't throw them in the "fine" swamp. Don't answer with "fine," answer with "Outstanding" or "Phenomenal" or "Delicious" (well, if it's the right kind of event) - something that engenders followup conversation. "Fine" is a dead-ender. It stands for Feelings I'm Not Expressing. It's what you say to someone you don't want to talk to.

So be ready with the right plan for your networking opportunity, and it can help you sell stuff!

Make the most of mealtime, despite busy schedule

In today's harried world, it seems like everyone's schedule is filled to the brim with activities. Both parents work, kids go to school and participate in student government, sports or any number of events. Seems families meet each other coming and going. Still, most parents believe it's more important than ever to dedicate the dinner hour to developing and nurturing relationships with family members.

While most of us are fortunate enough to eat every day, the abundance of food in our country is still something to be thankful for and not taken for granted. Farmers and ranchers provide us with the meat, vegetables, fruits, milk, juice and other items we eat each day.

Our food is safe and wholesome. It is also a real bargain with most families paying less than 11 percent of their annual income on food.

That said, it is important that time spent at the dinner table also be something we as families look forward to and appreciate. It is a time to give thanks for the bounty we enjoy. Make each and every evening meal memorable with your family.

Carve out a few moments of peace and quiet for these family gatherings. It's important to limit distractions during mealtime. Turn off the television, radio and cellphones. Make the family the center of attention.

Have each member of the family talk about an activity in his or her day and discuss it within the family. This initiates conversation and helps keep the family connected. By carving out a moment of peace in the day, you communicate that dinner is a special, family time.

Mark milestones at meals. Throw away the old rules of calendar holidays and make your family dinner a time to remember. Use place mats and table decorations and themed meals to note special days including birthdays, test days and any other significant event worth highlighting. Remember it's about spending time with your family.

Include teamwork at the table. Everyone should play a part. This includes menu planning so children will have a voice. They can search for recipes in cookbooks and help by setting the table, washing vegetables and cleaning up after the dinner meal is complete.

Packing the pantry is a key to dinner success. This means having an assortment of condiments on hand including plenty of mustard, barbecue sauce, salad dressing, jams and jellies, herbs, spices, olives and garlic. These will all help pull a flavorful meal together. Today with all of the convenient ingredients available at our fingertips, it's easy for children to participate in whipping up sauces and marinades.

Don't forget to create a bevy of flavors. This means adding variety to meals that also encourage youngsters to select and eat different foods. Remember to add color to the dinner table. By filling a plate with fruit and vegetables, colors like green, orange and red will ensure a meal that's rich in key vitamins and nutrients. Hopefully the kids will eat and enjoy these foods too.

No doubt there are plenty of other ideas and tips that will foster family togetherness through meal preparations, rituals and traditions. These are simply a handful that are tried and true. Come up with your own. Make them part of your own family's tradition. More importantly enjoy the food and time with your family.

We are as sheep without a shepherd

In Matthew chapter 9 Jesus is going about healing. We read, "Jesus went through all the towns and villages, teaching in their synagogues, preaching the good news of the kingdom and healing every disease and sickness. When he saw the crowds, he had compassion on them, because they were harassed and helpless, like sheep without a shepherd." By nature sheep are helpless creatures. They depend on shepherds to lead them to water and to pasture and to fight off wild beasts. Shepherds always led their flocks and even a large flock could be handled fairly easily by one shepherd. Typically the shepherd would lead the sheep out of the sheepfold and the sheep would be content to follow the shepherd as they knew he would lead them to pasture and water.

When Jesus saw the crowd he referred to them as sheep without a shepherd. The people flocked to Jesus to be healed of their diseases and sicknesses or to have their loved ones healed. Jesus knew that the people were in dire need of something besides healing of their bodies. We read Jesus had compassion or mercy on the people which is the aspect of God's love which causes him to help the miserable. Many of the people were miserable because they had broken God's law and many because of circumstances beyond their control.

When Jesus says in John 10:1, "I am the good shepherd", he linked his own divine nature with one of the most ordinary occupations in Israel. Jesus is still the good shepherd today. But as we read the shepherd leads the flock. Sheep follow the shepherd, they cannot be driven. They follow because they trust the shepherd for their pasture and water and protection.

What keeps most of us from following Jesus is the very reason the sheep follow the shepherd, trust or belief. To place ones trust in God's truth, one takes God at this word and trusts him for salvation. Just as the sheep trust the shepherd we must trust the finished work of Christ alone for salvation. Believers are those who have made a personal decision to trust God with their will as well as their mind. Unless we make this decision we are as sheep without a shepherd.

Kansas tax amnesty program starts soon

TOPEKA - Taxpayers who owe personal or business back taxes accrued before December 2013 have an upcoming opportunity to erase their debt with Kansas. The state is offering a tax amnesty program where the state will waive penalties and interest assessed by the state for unpaid taxes if the tax debt for an approved application is paid in full between Sept. 1 and Oct. 15, 2015.

"The amnesty program allows taxpayers who have delinquent taxes to erase their debt without the added cost of the penalties and interest that might have been assessed," said Revenue Secretary Nick Jordan.

The amnesty applies to:

- Income tax (individual, corporate and fiduciary)
- Privilege tax
- Estate tax

- Withholding and estimated tax
- Sales tax (state and local)
- Compensating Use tax (state and local)
- Liquor enforcement tax
- Liquor drink tax
- Cigarette and tobacco products tax
- Mineral severance tax

The program applies to penalties and interest on tax debt accrued for tax periods ending on or before Dec. 31, 2013 and does not apply to matters that are in appeal.

Eligibility information and answers to frequently asked questions are available at www.ksrevenue.org/taxamnesty.html. An application form for the tax amnesty program will be available online at the end of August.

Spiders and ticks and mosquitoes ... Oh, my!

Despite Mother Nature's recent attitude, it is summer time! Summer is the perfect time to enjoy a day out in the sun, swimming in the pool or fishing at the lake. However, we humans aren't the only beings enjoying the great summer weather! Along with these warmer temperatures come various types of insects that enjoy "bugging" us. I will briefly go over these annoying animals and inform you what they do, and why.

Shelton

Beginning with spiders; these creepy crawlers are a fear to many – and for good reason! Nearly all spiders are poisonous (excluding 2 species). However, most of these spiders are unable to penetrate human's skin.

Three main species can break through the skin and cause us harm. These spiders are the Hobo Spider, Black Widow, and Brown Recluse.

Hobo spiders are the least venomous of the three and tend to stay in their funnel-shaped sheeting waiting for prey. Unfortunately, their traps are sometimes disturbed which causes them to become aggressive and bite anything near them. Even though these bites aren't fatal, they can cause a quite painful and slow-healing wound.

Black Widow spiders are easily identified as they have a bright red hourglass shape on their abdomens. These spider bites can be fatal and cause joint stiffness and severe pain.

Brown Recluse's are tricky to spot and differentiate from other spiders. This makes them even more dangerous. Their bites are similar to the black widow, except the ulcerated wound at the site of the bite can spread. If you suspect you've been bitten by one of these spiders, seek immediate medical attention!

Next are ticks. These annoying bugs feed on both human and animal blood. When they come into contact with skin, they place their fangs deep into the skin so that they can hold on to the host firmly.

It's important to remove ticks within 36 hours to prevent Lyme Disease and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. A thorough search should reveal any hiding ticks.

However, some may feed and drop off before you can get to them. This results in a rash that looks similar to a bull's-eye.

To remove ticks still feeding, use tweezers to grasp near the tick's head and pull gently until the entire insect is removed. Some other methods exist but don't work as well and may even cause more damage, such as: heating, taping, and painting over the tick.

Lastly are mosquitoes. These pesky creatures are easily found in the warm and humid climates and come out in the morning and at dusk. When they land on a host, they inject their saliva to prevent blood from clotting around the site of the bite. They then continue to feed (unless you kill them!) and fly off to find their next unfortunate victim.

If that's not enough reason to dislike these insects, here's another! Mosquitoes transmit more diseases to humans than any other biting insect. A few of these include: Malaria, Yellow Fever, West Nile Virus, and many more!

Realistically, it's going to be difficult to avoid insect bites entirely throughout summer. Repellents such as DEET can be great to keep bugs away, but don't always do a good enough job. To ensure that you are properly taken care of, be sure to see a health care professional to assist you in picking out repellents and proper treatments.

Have an awesome summer!

There are many laws that have been passed during our nation's history that make you think that some of our legislators have a bit too much time on their hands. For example, in Alaska it is illegal to look at a moose from an airplane; an Illinois law states that a car must be driven with the steering wheel; in West Virginia, you can be imprisoned for cooking sauerkraut or cabbage, due to the offensive odor; and a California law of 1925 made it illegal to wiggle while dancing.

Day lilies galore. Roy Wools began his hobby in 1997 when his wife, Deb's mother gave him a start. He has around 150 names of lilies in his backyard located on 7th St. (between Cherry and Maple Streets). Drive by some morning to see this beautiful view. So many beautiful colors, well manicured and so healthy. Roy retired as custodian at Crest USD#479 and thoroughly enjoys his hobby.
