Friday Night Memories

Garnett Stadium retired as USD 365 plans 2015
football at new facility

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — It was a place where high school passions reigned on crisp fall Friday nights ever since the 1930s; a place where homecoming queens' dreams came true, where wins were sometimes big and losses sometimes bitter; where young warriors mixed their blood with the grass and the mud and the powdery lime that marked its yard lines.

But its time has passed — a victim of decades of local political wrangling over who should pay for its upkeep and the construction of a near million dollar upgrade to the "new" football field and track complex at Anderson County Junior-Senior High School. As of this fall, high school football at Garnett Stadium will be no more.

The news — dribbling out through scheduling notes and school board meetings in recent months and without a formal public announcement — is being met with bittersweet memories by hundreds of Garnett High School and ACHS alumni for whom the stadium was a huge piece of their high school eras.

In better days of winning Garnett football teams the stadium was like a carnival every Friday night game in the fall. Doug Archer, a 1973 GHS graduate, had his last hurrah on the field in the famed state playoff game against Wichita Kapan Mt. Carmel when the Bulldogs led 21-0 in the third quarter but lost in the end 24-21. Kapan went on to win the state championship in the division.

"What I remember most about the stadium was that for

The Garnett Stadium will no longer be used for high school football games, replaced by a more modern facility near ACJSHS.

'Flatiron Spectacle' to rock stadium in October

Garnett Chamber, Review to host music event during classic sports car weekend

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Local organizers are planning a concert night, food vendors and beer garden in tandem with an October 10 classic car event at Lake Garnett Park — a two-band, free concert outing at Garnett Stadium called the "Flatiron Music Spectacle."

The concert will cap off Saturday events of the Lake Garnett Grand Prix Revival, which is expected to draw more than 100 classic sports car enthusiasts and their rides from around the Midwest for the two-day driving and display event.

"We'll be dovetailing with the downtown sports car show and music event they're planning for that afternoon," said Burt Peterson, one of the concert organizers. "We're hoping to enhance their event and draw from it at the same time. It's going to be an amazing day of classic sports cars and rock and roll in Garnett."

The Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce will co-sponsor the event along with The Anderson County Review — a part of the newspaper's year-long celebration of its 150th anniversary. Tami Hiestand, chairman of the Creative Business Partnerships Committee within Garnett's community development division, said the event would help exploit a nugget mined from recent "Second Saturdays" events in Garnett.

"One of the successes of Second Saturdays was that we discovered sort of a Garnett musical underground," Hiestand said. "People found out we had a lot of talent around the area and we want to keep promoting it and capitalizing on it."

Headlining the concert will be Atomic Possum, a Eudora-based rock and roll band with a following in Northeast Kansas and featuring Bush City's Leonard Louk, a former principal in The Uncle Sam Band of the 1970s. Another band with local ties, Free Range Chicken, featuring Burt Peterson and Adam Caylor of Garnett, will be the opening act.

Organizers got the thumbs up from Garnett City Commissioners last Tuesday night after presenting the basics of the plan. Commissioner

Free cotton candy, hot dogs, sno-cones and inflatable games were the rule on a warm but energetic evening Friday when the Garnett Church of the Nazarene hosted its annual Back To School Bash. A large crowd attended the event, which was also a finale for the church's Vacation Bible School last week.

ACSO easing through bed freeze at state hospital

Sheriff says reduction of space at facility has yet to affect county detainees

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

OSAWATOMIE — A temporary reduction in bed space due to remodeling at the Osawatomi State Hospital hasn't affected Anderson County law enforcement yet, and county sheriff Vern Valentine hopes his luck holds out until the construction is completed in October.

Law officers in the region have faced a logistical and administrative conundrum since the state hospital announced in late June a remodeling project would reduce its available beds from 206 to 146. Law officers and others like mental health workers in the area typically admit patients to the state hospital who may not have committed chargeable crimes or who may be judged to be a threat to themselves after some sort of event or incident that sometimes involves law enforcement.

Valentine said low volume of such cases in Anderson County has meant the situation is less a problem locally than for some other more populace jurisdictions.

"Our average of sending someone to Osawatomi is less than one a month," Valentine said last week. "It has not affected us at all, yet."

Valentine said under the circumstances options were limited however when confronted with a need, and some cities and counties in Southeast Kansas had been forced to admit detainees to their local hospitals for a few days until space opened up at Osawatomi.

That could be a budget-busting proposition for cities and counties, Valentine said, but he said officers might not have any choice because it was the only monitored, full-time care available outside of jail — and laws prevent jailing someone without charges or a court order. Law officers passed that concern along to state hospital officials and elected representatives last Monday at a special meeting at Osawatomi to discuss the situation.

"Our comments were that we are only allowed to hold someone so long without charges or a determination from the courts that the individual needs to remain in custody for their own or others' well being," Valentine said. "If we don't have that from the courts (and if no

City leaders ponder spillway damage

Damage to Lake Garnett Dam backside likely caused by 2007
flood; engineering study needed

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Heavy erosion on the spillway of Lake Garnett Dam has worried city commissioners about the degree of damage to the structure that holds back the 48-acre lake, so they commissioned an engineering study last week to inspect the dam.

Commissioners approved an expenditure of $3,200 to Shafer, Kline & Warren of Lenexa to begin the study immediately to determine the dam's condition and make recommendations on possible repairs.

The damage was brought to the city's attention by hikers on the wilderness trail north of the dam in recent weeks. The spillway east of the dam appears in good shape in the area that can be seen from the roadway, but the steep drop down the back side Torrential rains in 2007 did heavy damage to the spillway at Lake Garnett dam. City commissioners last Tuesday commissioned an engineering study to assess the structural integrity of the spillway and the dam and to try to determine if problems there need immediate attention.

all the home games during that undefeated regular season my senior year the Garnett fans would take their cars out in the afternoon and park them on the east side," Archer said. "They'd have someone shuttle them back and forth so they'd have a great place to watch the game from the comfort of their cars."

Archer recalled the stadium was always full, with extra benches pulled over from the baseball fields and placed behind the east sidelines. People would sit on the east rock wall and fill it to the max.

"You literally could not find a place to park or sit for that matter around the stadium," Archer said.

Even the stone the stadium and surrounding wall is made from tells a story of local history. It is native rock, cut from the basin of what would become Lake Garnett by workers in the Civilian Conservation Corps, when the Depression-era public works program set up a work camp in what is now Lake Garnett Park in 1934. Before they left in the summer of 1937, they'd build the lake, nearby shelter houses, swimming pool building and football stadium with its rock wall out of the same stone, giving the whole complex a common, rugged look.

But the stadium was a point of contention for years between the city, which actually owned

'I remember Bill Craig announcing. Especially in the 1985 season when Garnett had not won a game. In one game that September we were losing so bad he stopped announcing in the second half and tuned a radio into the loudspeaker to pipe in the Royals game because they were in the playoff hunt.'

the property, and the local school district, which leased it for activities. Keeping a football field crowned up and covered with real turf is expensive; wooden stadium benches rotted away and were replaced with aluminum. Detached restrooms were added. The two entities bantered over who should pay for what off and on for years.

It was cost in fact that first hinted the stadium might be retired. Present-day USD 365 Superintendent Don Blome told school board members last February the district could save $20,000 a year if it didn't have to keep up the field. The comment came during worrisome money talks when the district estimated it could lose some $67,000 in projected state education funding under new state budget concerns. Though those cuts never came to pass, the plan to build the new stadium addition at ACHS was already underway since December of 2014 – a harbinger of the old stadium's coming abandonment.

But the memories made on the field remain. Bud Fraker, who graduated from GHS in 1943, remembers dawning a leather helmet to play football ago those games came with the loudspeaker's signature booming baritone of the Bulldogs.

"I remember Bill Craig announcing," Archer said. "Especially in the 1985 season when Garnett had not won a game. In one game that September we were losing so bad he stopped announcing in the second half and tuned a radio into the loudspeaker to pipe in the Royals game because they were in the playoff hunt."

Though football may be history at the stadium, its life as an entertainment venue will no doubt continue. Already, a music concert is being planned by the local Chamber of Commerce in tandem with a custom car event this October.

"It's still an entertainment venue," local musician and event organizer Burt Peterson told city commissioners last week in a briefing about the Flatiron Music Spectacle on October 11. "The place is an amphitheater. Whether it's football or music or what have you – football's just a bigger stage."

No doubt new memories and new football passions will be made at the ACJSHS stadium as well, as coming generations of high school students get used to the new complex as their own.

"Progress or lost heritage?" Jim Hills pondered. "I don't know. But let's hope they make their own memories."

of the waterway shows tons of displaced concrete guide work, washed out gravel base under the concrete and twisted, broken rebar. Damage to either side of a dam weakens its ability to hold back the weight of the water impounded upstream.

"You're sitting on a time bomb there," said commissioner Gordon Blackie.

The mainstay of the damage may have been done by a 2007 summer rain deluge that dumped some 26 inches of rain from Thursday, June 28 through Saturday, June 30. By the time rushing water began to recede, Pottawatomie Creek had peeled some 80 feet of pavement off Scipio Road in northeast Anderson County. Local rescuers had executed four swift water rescues at area creek crossings, cars were found swamped on Maple Street in Garnett and debris was found hanging in trees 25 feet above the Pottawatomie.

June is typically Anderson County's wettest month with around 6 inches of rainfall. January statistically is the driest.

A Federal Emergency Management Administration publication from 2005 entitled "Dam Owners Guide to Animal Impacts on Earthen Dams" details the level of destruction that can be done to dams due to burrowing of wildlife, into either the upstream side or the downstream side of the struc-

Dams like Lake Garnett are engineered to hold back the pressure of the lake water they impound, and that hydraulic pressure is a constant but usually forgotten presence on the upstream side of a dam. Burrowing by animals allows the chance for seepage from the upstream side and additional erosion on the downstream side of a dam.

Though wildlife damage has not been suggested as an issue with the Lake Garnett Dam, the dam's spillway empties into a wooded area on its downstream side, and large erosion cratering areas are visible underneath the damaged concrete in the wooded area.

Bill Rein, chief counsel for the Kansas Department of Aging and Disability Services, told the audience at Monday's meeting some of the rumors of long waits or an admissions freeze at the state hospital were overblown. He said the average wait for a bed at the facility is 23 hours, and 80 percent of patients on the waiting list are admitted within two days.

Rein said the renovations to the facility were slightly ahead of schedule and the affected areas were expected to reopen in October.

Waverly's wind power fairytale

At the new wind farm at Waverly, Ks., its owners have tapped the Latin root of the Kansas state motto and named the operation the "Ad Astra Wind Farm." A more fitting name in that vein would be: "Eyes Pull The Wool Overus."

Indeed, the only thing going "to the stars" with Waverly's wind farm will be the monthly electric bills of the KCPL customers who will be forced to pay for this silly venture into environmental conscience cleansing.

The real value of the Ad Astra farm is that it provides for the eastern side of the state a nearby example of the overall farce of wind farming - a visual representation of the half-truths and snake oil so relentlessly sold by the wind industry and its lackeys in the environmental movement; a touchable, feelable manifestation of the pointless spending of your hard-earned dollar. What the Little Big Horn was to the U.S. Cavalry, the Ad Astra Wind Farm is to your household budget.

Seldom has so simple and poignant a fact gone so blatantly and purposefully ignored by so many - from the manufacturers of wind equipment to the pitchmen in the companies selling it, to the state regulators who eventually forced KCPL and other power companies to buy it, to the electric customers who will shoulder the rate increases to pay for it: Wind power only works when the wind blows.

Most of us would like to charge our cell phones, toast our Pop Tarts and run our kidney dialysis machines all the time - not just when the wind is blowing. But take what the wind company websites tell you at face value and the reality is you'll get to watch the milk in your fridge turn to cheese way before you see less Co2 emissions.

Let's work the math: Ad Astra opens up and the wind blows, so KCPL shuts down its LaCygne coal powered plant and lays off those workers since power from LaCygne is no longer needed. Local developers buy the old "Fairylant" park off Prospect Avenue in Kansas City and relocate it to the former LaCygne plant site to become Linn County's biggest tourist draw.

Then the wind stops. Some towns have no power, some towns are in perpetual brown-out. Emporia and Cottonwood Falls battle it out in a Flint Hills Mad Max-style epic for the last plug-in at the Flying "J" truck stop on Highway 50.

The answer to the equation is always the same: KCPL still has to power its electrical grid at 100 percent regardless how much wind power state regulators force it to buy to please the environmentalists. The reason? Because people still want electricity whether the wind blows or not. Companies have to generate for the whole grid all the time, because no one knows when the wind will blow and when it won't. Grid power can't be stored and used later.

Not a single chunk of coal is saved; the Wolf Creek nuclear plant still has to keep generating. The net electrical and environmental impact of Ad Astra will be a big, fat "0."

Except for the impact on your electric bill of course. Power companies eventually have to raise rates to pay for the wind power they're forced to buy, as KCPL requested of the state corporation committee in 2012. Those rates are paid by the customers, so we're funding wind projects that do no good except to placate regulators and warm the bosoms of tree-huggers.

Had the wind industry focused on home-based wind mills that let you generate free power for your house, then kick over to the paid power grid when the wind stopped, consumers might have seen some benefit. Instead wind companies pushed for "farms" where the big money could be "farmed" from power companies, who in turn "farm" the added cost from your wallet.

Wind power is an inflationary fairytale that no one is willing to tell.

I think its BS they are letting all these four wheelers run around the streets with no tags, 90 percent don't have tail lights or head lights or turn signals. There's one over here at the hospital driving right through the new parking lot even though they've got cones all over it, blocked off. I guess he's privileged he's got a four wheeler he can go drive wherever he wants. I just think it's BS these people driving these things and not paying taxes for the roads by not buying tags. I hope I'm the guy that jerks one of them around by the rear end one of these days.

Just heard on the news that the dentist is under police protection because he is receiving death threats. I guess it would be different if Planned Parenthood was selling puppy parts.

Just for information, is the sheriff that pleased with the digital radio service? They cannot talk to the ambulance service or the fire department, and the fire department and ambulance service cannot talk to the sheriff's department or the police department on their radios. Now, how stupid is that?

I hope everybody is planning on coming out to the Anderson County Fair this week. There's a carnival again this time for five nights instead of four, all the exhibits and the shows and the entertainment. It's going to be a big time so please come on out and celebrate Anderson County with us. Thank you.

There seems to be lots of projects getting done around Garnett recently and here while back somebody had an article wondering why none of this had happened in the last 20 years or so. Is somebody at city hall trying to build a legacy before they leave office or is this guilty conscience about not getting it done and where the money went?

The article in last week's Review about the sidewalks is kind of misleading. They failed to mention that since 1991 the city has been in violation of the ADA law, and in 2009 they made up their own 6-year transition plan and they haven't completed what they said they would do either in 2013, 14 or 15, and now they want to extend it another year or so. It seems like this leadership is taking a page from Obama about stalling and misleading people. The leadership of Garnett has ignored the handicapped people and the sidewalk contractors say some of them haven't been approached yet. Something very misleading going on here in Garnett.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sheriff defends cloaked communications

I, Sheriff Vernon Valentine, would like for the person who wrote the article in the July 28th Anderson County Review Phone Forum about what I released to the media about not being able to hear law enforcement on your scanners as being a crock of, (deleted), and others to know the following.

What I released to the media is what I have been told by the professional that is assisting us with our upgrades to the 911 center and the new digital radio system. The color code that I advised I would not release, would give full access to our radio system, (transmit and receive) and that can not happen.

An individual said, well its against the law to transmit on your frequency. I agree, but laws are broken everyday and in today's world it is not worth the risk to allow anyone - including terrorists - access to law enforcement or government radios by just freely handing over the code they would need to do that. Surely everyone can understand that and that is also why it is not open public record.

The digital system we are operating under is known as TDMA, (Time Division Multiple Access) I don't know what that means or how it works but you can Google it for an explanation. We not only hire but the state provides professionals to take care of that for us so we do not violate any Federal Communication rules.

With today's technology I am sure it will not be to long before someone comes up with a way to monitor / receive our transmissions on our frequency without being able to transmit on them. State Law Enforcement is a prime example.

When they went to the 800 digital frequency it took awhile to come up with a specific code that you enter into a digital scanner to be able to hear them.

Digital scanners are available and cost around 300 dollars but be warned, even if you buy a digital scanner you will not be able to monitor our radio traffic until someone comes out with the specific code for scanners for the TDMA system. Welcome to technology as all my 911 employees will have to go through hours of training once the upgrade to our 911 communication center New Generation is completed.

Vernon Valentine
Anderson County Sheriff

Quilt guild makes plans for the fair

The Pieces & Patches Quilt Guild was called to order by President, Charlotte Lutz, on July 23, 2015, at 9:30 a.m. in the Archer room at the library. Roll call was answered by 26 members and one guest, Reita Welton. The minutes of the May meeting were approved as printed in the newsletter. Terrie Gifford gave the treasurer's report.

salad or desert along with needed serving utensil. The committee will provide the table service. Roll Call that day will be answered with a quilting tip or show a useful quilting gadget.

• Block of the Month—Several members showed their blocks from the May pattern. Joleata Kent showed the June block, June Block, and distributed the pattern. Cynthia Fletcher showed the July block, Rolling Pinwheel, distributed the pattern and demonstrated its assembly.

• New Business—Terrie Gifford reported the following slate of officers: President Bonnie Deiter, Vice President Sandra Moffatt, Secretary Ruth Theis, Treasurer Terrie Gifford, Newsletter Carrie Rulon and Historian Joen Truhe. Judy Stukey moved and it was seconded by Cynthia Fletcher to approve the slate of officers and to cast a unanimous ballot. Motion carried. The new officers will be installed in August.

There was discussion regarding the role of the Historian and what happens with the scrapbooks that are kept along with the books of minutes. Charlotte requested that members consider future options such as transferring the information to the computer.

• Secret Sister—gifts were received by Bonnie Deiter, Ruth Theis, Joleata Kent and Marlene Walburn.

• Show & Tell—The following items were shown: Charlotte Lutz the president's blocks received today; Terrie Gifford a charity quilt and a quilt; Joyce Buckley microwave bowl covers and a red & white quilt; Janie Paxton apron made from pillow sham; Bonnie Deiter a baby quilt and a cobbler's apron; Violet Holt a July 4 wall hanging and a snowman wall hanging; Marvelle Harris a Christmas wall hanging. # Chamber director resigns

GARNETT - The first-ever staffer of a new joint venture between the City of Garnett and the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce to pursue local community development has resigned.

Brummel

City manager Joyce Martin said yesterday GACC and city administrative assistant Jennifer Brummel had resigned and provided the city 30 days notice prior to her departure. No other details were provided, and Brummel, who took the job in March, did not respond to queries from the Review by press time yesterday.

The city and chamber entered an operating agreement in February that brought the local chamber office into a new home at Garnett City Hall. Commissioners agreed to staff a full-time employee who would split his/her time 50/50 between city and chamber duties, with the GACC reimbursing the city for half the salary and benefit costs as well as Chamber expenses. The move was made after chamber officials pitched the deal to the city as a means of helping stop the revolving door of part-time paid staff the organization had endured in recent years, and to combine development efforts with projects undertaken by the city's tourism committee and community development department.

Martin said city officials and chamber board members would begin reviewing applications received earlier this year for Brummel's replacement.

Ads that work, ads that don't

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks
Review Publisher

I've seen advertising that works and advertising that doesn't work. But as a business owner or manager how do you start out with a better-than-average bet that the advertising you're getting ready to do is going to work?

It doesn't matter where you advertise - Facebook, Yellow Pages, the newspaper, billboards, a sign stuck in your yard - the success of your advertising depends on how you approach a handful of basic business principles.

What do you want? What do you want your advertising to do? Do you want customers to flock in to your store to a heavy discount clearance sale? Do you want your advertising to establish a brand identity for your business to build long-term customers (like McDonalds)? Do you want to create good will? Do you want some kind of combination of the above? Prioritize your expectations and understand your own objectives.

The market: Who's the customer for your product or service and why do they want it? Is it a big general market with lots of customers in it like for groceries or gasoline, or is it a narrow market with few customers like the one for prosthetics? In short, who buys what you're selling, and why?

The competition: Who is your competition and what is their approach? What advantage do you have over your competitor (price, expertise, location, convenience, testimonials from satisfied customers) that you can maximize, and what disadvantages do you have that you need to minimize?

Budget: What's it worth to capture the customers and sales you want your advertising to generate? A new customer for an auto mechanic, for instance, will be worth hundreds, maybe even thousands of dollars in service work if the relationship stays positive. Is that worth $50? $1,000? Your budget is obviously contingent on what you can afford, but you also need to consider what you realistically expect the investment to return in terms of dollars/profit.

Attention: So you know your objectives and your budget and your customers and you know where you rank with the competition - now, what gets the attention of your target customers? Are they driving down the highway passing billboards and listening to the radio? Are they sitting down with a cup of coffee reading the paper? Are they 16 years old with their noses stuck in their smart phones? Wherever your customer has his/her attention - that's where your ad should be.

Benefit: Craft your ad with a benefit for the customer in mind. If you're a lawyer, simply putting your name or your firm name on a billboard is a snoozer... but a headline that says "Learn the three biggest mistakes men make in divorce - call Joe Blow attorney" - that has more impact to a defined market.

Once you work through those foundational aspects, you'll have advertising that really buys results instead of being ignored.

Hays site turns up more stone artifacts

11 June 2015

A beautiful morning in Hays. Another day of finding more nice little arrowheads, hide scrapers, a Mano (grinding stone), a midden filled with fresh water mussel shells and bones of all kinds and sizes. The find of the day was a bead, which later was identified as a shell button. The talk this evening was "The Crooked Creek Expedition 2015" by Norman Dye. It was so interesting. Bedtime with weather warnings close by.

12 June 2015

It did rain during the night. A cool 61 degrees this morning. Another trash midden found, which contained 4 beautiful little arrow heads, lots of mussel shells and hackberry seeds. Bones of all kinds were being found. Several people left this evening to be home for the weekend. Would you believe it was 64 degrees at noon and the high for today was a very pleasant 71 degrees.

The best find today was a large bison bone with a hole drilled thru it (used as some type of tool). Tonight was a tour of the St. Fidelis Church by Theresa Gerritzen in Victoria, Ks (Cathedral of the Plains). There's an 80% chance of rain tonight.

No rain. Very foggy this morning. Finds today were 8 little arrowheads, 2 grinding stones, bones and shells. We had watermelon during our afternoon break. I was invited out to dinner (supper) with State Archaeologist Bob Hoard and his daughter Anna. We had a wonderful meal at a Mexican Restaurant called the "Cancun." At 7:30 pm was a Talk: "George Sternberg an Old Fashion Fish Story" by Chuck Bonner and Barbara Shelton in the lobby of the Sternberg Museum. Very interesting. Sure looks like rain.

Finds today included 6 small arrowheads, a large hide scraper, a large stone knife and the usual bones and shell. We were rained out of the field at 3 p.m. Everyone reported to the lab in the Hays Middle School, where we worked from 3:30-5pm. Tonight was a Certification Meeting by Al Petz. Lingering showers all around.

1995: Welda ballfield becomes plowed field

August 2, 2005

Archaeologists flanked by state and local law officers started with a backhoe and ended up with hand trowels Thursday in the exhumation of an anonymous man's grave which they hope will lead to clues in his 30-year-old unsolved homicide case. After four and one-half hours, officials retrieved the skeletal remains from the body bag in which the unknown man was laid to rest in 1973 and transported it to the Shawnee County Coroner's Office in Topeka. There, Kansas Bureau of Investigation officials hope a facial reconstruction and possible DNA samples will reveal the man's identity and put law on the path to finding whoever caved in his skull and dumped his body near Garnett in 1973.

Anderson County Commissioners hope a bed tax will help recoup property taxes that will be abated on a new motel development in the city, but the sole local company now paying a similar city tax says it won't yield as much as planners think. County commissioners in recent weeks discussed instituting a "bed tax," which would be paid by the new motel development locating off U.S. 169 just east of Garnett. Set for opening in

THAT WAS THEN

Send historic photos, information to review@garnett-ks.com

February 2006, the new motel would be funded by city-issued industrial bonds which would abate some $340,000 in city, county and school district taxes over its first five years of the 10-year plan.

A little piece of community history at Welda, the town baseball field, will soon be claimed by the plow and planted in soybeans. That's not uncommon for a small town where the population has moved on to search for better opportunities, but it still seems a little sad. The field was the home turf of a tough bunch of semi-pro players called the Welda Pirates. The Pirates were mostly a collection of college baseball players who spent their summers in Anderson County. Sometime in the 1960s, the Pirates took on a barnstorming team that included Kansas City Monarch's pitcher Satchel Paige.

Garnett city commissioners approved the issuance of $520,000 in industrial revenue bonds for Astro Cap Manufacturing West Inc., when it met for a short meeting July 25. The IRB will be used to purchase the building that Astro Cap is presently renting. The bonds will be paid off by revenue from Astro Cap over a period of at most 20 years. During that time the building will be owned by the City of Garnett, and, as such, exempt from property taxes for about a 19-year period during the repayment of the bonds.

Garnett Publishing Inc., Garnett, will be among those newspapers advancing into the futuristic era of computer and laser-writers in the near future, according to Don Stimble, owner and publisher. The economy of the laser writers can be used to offset the expected periodic raises of postal rates and permit small, independent newspapers to hold subscription increases to smaller amounts. The laser writer will permit publishers to handle job printing and display ads for newspapers in greater volumes because of the speed with which laser-printed advertising copy or job work can be completed.

Anderson County Sheriff Tom Hermreck said at a news conference Thursday afternoon one of the suspects of the Colony State Bank robbery had been apprehended at a truck stop in Arkansas Tuesday. The suspect was also wanted in the robbery of a bank in Oklahoma in May of this year. Two other suspects are being sought in the Colony bank robbery and it is believed that their arrest will be accomplished in the near future.

Aug. 4, 1915

The fifth day of the Chautauqua was intended, and expected to be, the big day. That was the date for Thavius' big band of 26 members. In the Chautauqua bulletin, the whole back was a picture of Thavius' band. With them were the European Grand Opera Singers, a woman and two men. The Europeans sang with the band, and showed that, as a musical instrument, the human voice can hold its own with the other instruments. While a minor feature of both performances, they did what was expected of them, adding variety to the program. The opera singers made a fine appearance, and those competent to judge declare them the same high class as the band.

Meet your neighbors at the Anderson County fair!

Fair a family tradition for Foltzes

GARNETT – The Anderson County Fair was always one of the high points of the summer for Charlie and Carol Foltz and their girls. The couple will be honored this year as the fair parade grand marshals.

The fair parade is 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Their daughters, Deb, and husband Dean McSpadden, Melissa, and husband Steve Daggett, Stephanie, and husband Mike Moore, Angie, and husband Joe Kennedy, and Chris, and husband Brian Weller, were all members of Star Shooting 4-H club.

They all were involved in sewing, foods, cattle and horse projects, and dancing at county 4-H days. The girls participated in the state fair on several occasions. They all served in a variety of leadership roles, holding about every office possible. The girls always enjoyed riding their horses in the fair parade. Charlie and Carol were both members of the Extension council and Carol taught some cooking classes. They have been avid supporters of the livestock sale, purchasing

Jackson Abstract and M.L. White Abstract Co, and combined them in 1980 to establish the Anderson County Abstract Co. In the summer of 2012, she decided to retire and spend

City, Missouri; Stephanie and husband Mike, and son, Will, live in Colorado Springs, Colorado; Angie and her husband Joe, and children, Finn and Lochlyn, live in Overland Park, Kansas, and Chris and husband Brian and sons, Tristan, Dylan and Aidan, live in the rural Hillsdale lake area.

Charlie and Carol are members of Holy Angels Catholic Church and have been active in various community activities. Charlie is secretary of Kansas Corn Board, member of American Legion, Optimist Club, Knights of Columbus, and a member of Anderson County Farm Bureau board of Directors; Carol was a member of Kansas Land Title Association Executive Board; City of Garnett Zoning board, Economic Development Committee; Holy Angels Altar Society, and helped with Garnett Friends of the Library Christmas tour.

Both Charlie and Carol keep busy enjoying their children and grandchildren. They enjoy traveling, Charlie works in a couple fishing trips a year, and Carol enjoys working in her garden and yard.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Sam Harris would like to thank everyone for the cards, on-line condolences, lovely flowers, delicious food and the monetary donations made in Sam's memory. Also, thanks to those who stopped by to visit and those who attended the visitation and funeral. A special thank you to Dr. Frank Porter for all the care he gave Sam through the years, to the Allen County Regional Hospital staff for the excellent care given to Sam and making his family comfortable, and to the Reverend Honeycutt for visiting Sam at his bedside and comforting his family. We deeply appreciate the kindness and support shown to us during this difficult time.
