Orscheln's now open

Farm, home store takes place of former retail shop that closed earlier this year the former Alco discount retail store, at 700 N. Maple St. The new store will sell essential farm and home supplies, specializing in serving rural customers. Merchandise includes lawn and garden, farm supplies and livestock feed, animal health, pet food and supplies, hardware, plumbing, electrical, automotive, toys, housewares and clothing. The store will employ approximately 15 people.

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

The opening of the new farm and home store has been in the works for several months. Rumors that Orscheln would take over the store emerged not long after Alco, which sold general retail merchandise, announced in November 2014 it would close all its stores as part of bankruptcy. Orscheln purchased the former Alco distribution center in Abilene in early January 2015 and announced plans to double its number of stores. Soon, Orscheln began opening new stores in former Alco buildings in several Kansas communities. Many speculated the company would follow suit in Garnett, but that wasn't confirmed until August.

The Small Comforts

WWII vet recalls war moments that mattered the most

GARNETT - Rollin Henderson was just 20 years old, farming with his uncle near Bush City, when he was drafted into the U.S. Army in 1942. Over the next three years, he would travel around the world, fighting in campaigns in both the northern Pacific and European theaters. He would help build a military base on the Aleutian Islands, protect German civilians in Germany, travel through southern France, visit London on an all-expenses paid furlough, and even stop by and say hello to his older brother on Omaha Beach.

Now, at age 93 and living at Guest Home Estates in Garnett, Henderson is one of the few remaining World War II soldiers from Anderson County. His recollection of his time during the war jumps from one event to the next, with so many events to recall at once. He experienced a lifetime in just three years before returning to his farming roots in southeastern Anderson County.

Henderson doesn't expect to attend this year's Veterans Day ceremony at Anderson County High School Wednesday, Nov. 11. He would like to, but said his health likely won't allow it. In a similar way, Henderson enjoyed traveling to military reunions for many years, gathering with members of his company to reminisce about the war and share about their lives since. But those reunions faded away years ago as his fellow veterans aged. They're all gone, now, Henderson said. He also is the last living member of his immediate family; his older brother, Willis, also served during World War II and was part of the D-Day invasion at Normandy.

Veterans Day Ceremony will be at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 11, at Anderson County Jr./Sr. High School auditorium.

His room at Guest Home Estates is sparse, but comfortable. He pointed to the private bathroom and shower as a

Local family joins Royals celebration

Thrill of victory worth battling traffic, crowds to see baseball champs

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

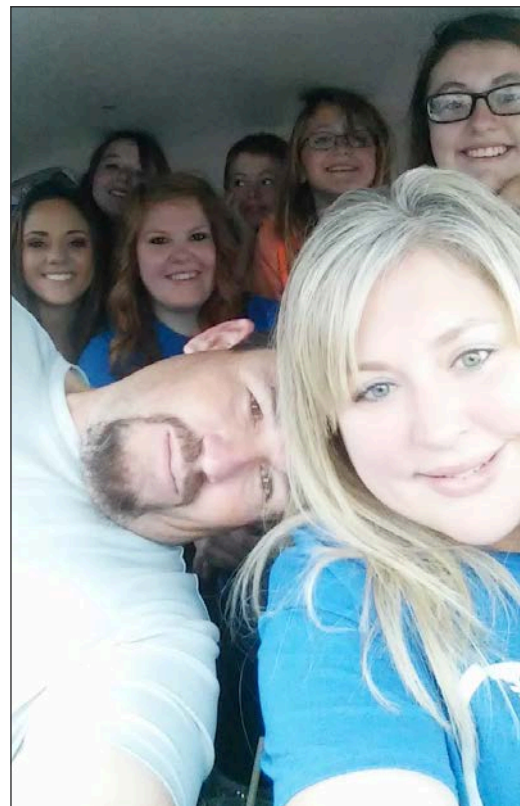

KANSAS CITY, MO. - When a sea of blue descended upon Kansas City, Mo., last week to celebrate the Royals baseball team's first World Series championship since 1985, Becca Modlin of Garnett and her family were determined to be part of the celebration.

Modlin grew up loving baseball, a tradition passed down from her father, Geno Thacker. Thacker grew up playing baseball, and hoped to join a Minor League team until he was drafted to serve during the Vietnam War. Although his military service ended his Major League Baseball dreams, it didn't end his love of the sport. Instead, he passed that love down to his five children. They celebrated when the Royals, their "hometown team," won the World Series in 1985.

Area jobless picture continues to improve

Local unemployment rate drops again after tough summer months

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Local jobless rates continued to drop in September, easing concerns from a summer that brought stagnant or increasing unemployment rates throughout the region. "Kansas economic conditions moved in the right direction, with the unemployment rate dropping to 4.4% this month. Unemployment claims remained low, and the private sector added more than 10,000 jobs over the year," Kansas Secretary of Labor, Lana Gordon said.

ROYALS...

was like a dream come true for the Thacker/Modlin families. The success of the Royals during the past two years helped Becca Modlin convert her own family into baseball fans, and they watched the series in anticipation, knowing deep down they were about to witness Royals history.

"Watching Game 5 was way exciting!" Becca Modlin said. "There aren't really words to express the emotion I felt when that final out was made. I had tears. I smiled. I had to scream and holler. I was completely overwhelmed with joy."

As soon as plans were announced to celebrate the victory with a parade in Kansas City, Modlin knew she would do whatever it took to be part of it. While most schools in the Kansas City metro area canceled classes so students could attend the parade, that wasn't the case in Garnett. Even so, Modlin decided the experience was worth a day out of school or off work, and the entire family loaded into two vehicles for the trip. In all, their group of 11 people traveled from Garnett to Kansas City: Becca and her husband, Andy Modlin, and their children, Maci, Lexi, Kami and Andrew; her mother, LeAnn Thacker; Becca's brother Geno Thacker Jr. and his son, Albert Thacker III; and Becca's niece, Tavia Wittman and her friend, Quincy Yeubanks, who both took a day off from college to attend. The family patriarch, Geno Thacker, had other commitments and was unable to attend.

Getting to the parade route was perhaps the most difficult part. The family left at 9 a.m., anticipating they'd have plenty of time before the parade at noon. But traffic crawled, as it appeared all of Kansas City was headed in the same direction. Although some motorists were forced to abandon their vehicles along the interstate, the Modlin/Thacker families found a place to park but still faced a long walk to the parade route. They found a spot to watch at 20th and Grand, and soaked in the atmosphere as they waited.

They were surrounded in blue, from the brilliant blue sky above them to the blue T-shirts and ball caps worn by nearly every person they saw. Chants of "Let's go, Royals!" were heard constantly. Fans clad in blue hung from every window in every building along the parade route. Becca watched as a man, determined to reach the front of the crowd, carried his child's stroller above his head while he made his way through.

In some ways, the crowded streets reminded Becca of a visit to New York City. Those streets were just as crowded, although perhaps with a little less blue. She commended the fans for being polite, as everyone shared in the excitement of the historic moment.

She watched the team members roll by, with each player and family member in the back of a different pickup. She felt proud of the team, watching for glimpses of key players like MVP Salvador Perez, Eric Hosmer, Mike Moustakas, Alex Gordon, Wade Davis and many others.

"I felt so proud of the Kansas City Royals. Proud of where they've been, proud of what they've done, and proud of who they are," she said. "It was like the proud parent feeling you get when your child takes their first step. Pure joy."

And although this year's baseball season may be over, Becca Modlin believes there is much more in store for the team.

"I believe the Kansas City Royals are the new 'All American Team' for our country."

JOBLESS...

reported 200 people were jobless in September out of a labor force of 4,234 people, a rate of 4.7 percent. That's significantly lower than August, when the rate was 5.1 percent, and more than a full point lower than July, when the rate was 5.8 percent. Compared to the same time last year, however, it's only slightly lower. In September 2014, unemployment was 4.8 percent.

The state's September seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 4.4 percent, down from 4.6 percent in August and increased from 4.3 percent in September 2014.

"The construction industry continues to be a major contributor to growth in the state, both in jobs and hourly wages. Due to strong growth in specialty trade contractors, construction jobs have increased by 9.5% over the year and average hourly wages have increased by 6%," Emilie Doerksen, Labor Economist, Kansas Department of Labor said.

Other area counties typically reported results similar to Anderson. They are:

- Allen County: 4.7 percent in September, 5.6 in August, 4.5 in September 2014.

- Coffey County: 5.2 percent in September, 6.4 in August, 5.7 in September 2014.

- Franklin County: 4.2 percent in September, 5.0 in August, 4.8 in September 2014.

- Linn County: 5.5 percent in September, 6.4 in August, 6.4 in September 2014.

- Miami County: 3.8 percent in September, 4.3 in August, 4.2 in September 2014.

All around, a great post-season

It was great while it lasted. Unlike a lot of other falls in Anderson County, we had something to cheer about in the Review's sports department this year. We had teams in the game long after the game is usually over – and this particular year I think that's worth noting. I have the info somewhere, but I don't honestly remember when the Anderson County Bulldog football team went into the post-season play, much less when it last did so with a winning record. Maybe some people will say 5-4 is nothing to write home about. I say when you were 1-8 the previous year, yes, it certainly is something to write home about.

Those aren't just wins; those are marks of validation for a football program which, let's face it, has been worn pretty thin for a lot of years. Maybe it's the bizarre power football has over small towns and their high schools – a town with a good high school football program simply thinks more of itself and accomplishes more civically, politically and socially than those that don't. AC needed a winning season in a bad way. Thanks to the efforts of the coaching staff and to that group of hearty young men, we got one.

That was just one of the flavors of our local fall season in sports. Although she's only a sophomore, people seem to have gotten used to the idea that Averi Wilson is going to state in something that involves running – and running a long way. She was the sole qualifier last year from AC to the 4A state cross country meet. She went back to the 4A state track meet last year in a distance race, and last month she made her latest appearance at state cross country. That's a lot of experience at the upper levels of competition for a kid who isn't even old enough to have a full drivers license yet. Butterflies over state appearances are probably gone by now for her, and we have two more exciting years to see what accomplishments Averi will earn.

Then there was volleyball. Again, Garnett volleyball has seen a lot of water go under the bridge and a lot of failed sub state tournaments since AC's last squad made it to state in 2000. True, a handful of powerhouse players will graduate this year, but we like what we see coming up in the ranks of AC volleyball. The 15 year-old glass ceiling has been broken, and I expect a resurgence in the program at ACHS is afoot.

We've gotten used to AC golfers making their mark individually in state performances on and off in the past several years, and Sammy Jo Walter kept the tradition alive for us this fall. She's just a freshman as well, and hopefully she'll motivate some additional golfers for the team next year – this fall we were a missed flu shot away from not being able to field a team. Regardless, Sammy Jo got us into post-season.

Crest football lended its weight to the 2015 post-season as well when it made it into bi-district last week. Every few years Crest football muscles up and reminds us there's still a football tradition to be fulfilled in USD 479. If you've never been to a closely contested 8-man post-season football game, you haven't really experienced small town high school football. It's better than a new James Bond movie and a dang sight cheaper. Crest has some growing to do after this year, but I don't think banging around in the post season is beyond them.

Like I said, just about everywhere you looked this Fall we were seeing teams and talent in post season. How 'bout we do it again next year?

I just wanted to say the 4th of July I was so proud of this town. Everything was being utilized – the tennis courts, the picnic areas, camping areas, the pool – everything was being utilized and this was a busy little town. I'm calling to give my support to fixing the race track road. That weekend I saw so many people in local businesses and motels. I am just thrilled. I'd like to keep as much action going here as we can because I know that event brought a lot of revenue. I know the 4th of July brought a lot of happiness.

I think there's been too much talk in the Phone Forum lately about decrepit properties. Drive around town and look. Sure, there are some bad looking properties but certainly not the majority. Most people work hard to keep their places looking nice. I know I do and my neighbors do. This is a very nice appearing town with a lot of pluses, and we should be talking about this in the Phone Forum instead of always talking about the negative. If someone read this Phone Forum and then drove through our town they'd think they were in the wrong place. Please, let's look at our glass as half full for a change. Thank you.

Instead of spending a whole lot of money to hire a consultant to tell us how much the ethanol plant is worth, what they should do is just put a value of, say, a half a billion dollars on it. That way the ethanol plant would hire a consultant to tell us why its not worth that much. That would save the county whole lot of money. Thank you.

How many people will want to move here or open a business here after reading the Phone Forum?

You should have taken the time to learn more about codes, ordinances and property rights before you gave us your legal opinion on those topics last week. This may be a novel suggestion for you, but try reading a book or taking a class sometime. Not only will it help you crawl out of your tiny closed mind, it might also help you increase your vocabulary.

I along with the other drivers would like to thank the city commissioners and the chief of police for informing the public that the only time they'll be watching the traffic on Park Road is before school starts and when school lets out. That way the other times we can drive any way we want, it sure saves a lot of time and we can get where we're going a lot quicker. Thanks again for the heads up.

2015 ECKAN Spirit of Christmas approaches

Last year over 124 families applied for and received gifts and food from the Spirit of Christmas effort or through adoption. That number amounted to close to 391 individuals, of which 205 were children. Over $3,000 in monetary donations were given. Food sacks were provided to every household, along with gifts to every child through the kindness of many, many businesses, organizations and individuals in Anderson County and the surrounding area.

This effort would not be successful without the help and donations from individuals, businesses, clubs, schools and churches that provide for others all year long, but especially during the holidays. Because of your kindness we were able to help all families that asked for assistance. Your help is needed again this year! ECKAN and the Spirit of Christmas Countywide Committee have begun plans for this season. Applications for the Spirit of Christmas are available at ECKAN starting November 2, 2015 through December 2, 2015.

To support this effort, look for Angel Trees at City Hall, ECKAN and Orscheln in Garnett and Yoder's Country Store to adopt a child for Christmas. Angel Trees will also be available at the banks in Kincaid, Colony, Westphalia and Greeley. You can adopt an entire family if you wish. Many individuals, families and groups adopt each year. When you have purchased a gift or gifts, please bring them to the ECKAN office in Garnett. Garnett Mayor Greg Gwin's Christmas Tree will once again be at City Hall. He will accept canned goods and non-perishable items, as well as toys to be given to ECKAN. Visit Brandi Lopez, Human Service Coordinator or Jennifer Hartle, Anderson County Food Program Coordinator, at the ECKAN office in Garnett if you would like to donate money, a toy or adopt a family. The Anderson County Office is located at 132 E. 5th. Their hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. They are closed from 12 to 1 over the noon hour. Their phone number is 785-448-3670. If possible, please call before stopping by in case of schedule conflicts.

If you prefer to make a cash donation, please make the check to ECKAN. If you would like to donate to ECKAN for the purpose of providing funds for any items necessary to serve the needs of the community, please do not note anything other than ECKAN on your check. If you would like to make a donation for Christmas items only, please note Christmas on your check.

From ECKAN and the Spirit of Christmas Countywide Committee, please accept their thanks for all you do.

Obamacare is still failing

For the press, the debate about Obamacare is over. There may be a few proverbial Japanese soldiers wandering on isolated islands yammering on about the failure of Obamacare, but word will eventually filter down to them, too.

This assumption is so deeply embedded that it is impervious to new evidence that Obamacare is an unwieldy contraption that is sputtering badly. Yes, Obamacare has covered more people and has especially benefited those with pre-existing conditions (to be credible, Republican replacement plans have to do these things, as well), but the program is so poorly designed that, surely, even a new Democratic president will want to revisit it to try to make it more workable.

Enrollment is falling short. The Obama administration projects that it will have roughly 10 million people on the state and federal exchanges by the end of next year, a staggering climbdown from prior expectations. The Congressional Budget Office had predicted that there would be roughly 20 million enrollees.

Premiums are rising. Not everywhere, but steeply in some states. Indiana is down 12 percent, but Minnesota is up 50 percent. Health-care expert Robert Laszewski points out that it is the insurers with the most enrollment and therefore the best information about actual enrollees who have tended to request the biggest increases -- a sign that they don't like what they're seeing in their data.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

Relatedly, the economics are shaky. According to a McKinsey & Co. analysis, last year health insurers lost $2.5 billion in the individual market that Obamacare remade. Obamacare co-ops that were supposed to enhance choice and lower costs have been failing, and almost all of them are losing money, a victim of the absurd rules (no industry executives on their boards, no raising capital in public markets, etc.) imposed on them by the law.

The problem with Obamacare in a nutshell is that on one hand, by imposing motley regulations and mandates, it increases the price of health insurance, and on the other hand, by providing subsidies, it tries to hide the cost -- but not enough.

According to an analysis of the health consultancy Avalere, the poor or near-poor have been signing up, but enrollment steeply drops off further up the income scale as the subsidies fall away. It found that three-fourths of uninsured people earning less than 150 percent of the federal poverty level got coverage through Medicaid or the exchanges, while a small fraction of the uninsured making more than 250 percent of the federal poverty level have enrolled.

For them, it's just not a good deal. A study of the Obamacare exchanges by researchers at the Wharton School concluded that "even under the most optimistic assumptions, close to half of the formerly uninsured (especially those with higher incomes) experience both higher financial burden and lower estimated welfare."

As Robert Laszewski points out, on the individual market, Obamacare is essentially a monopoly. It gives money to people to buy its product and through the individual mandate punishes those who don't. And yet it is still having trouble making the sale.

The soldiers who haven't given up yet are right -- this isn't over.

How will state's budget shortfall play out politically?

Wonder how this budget shortfall for the current and next fiscal year works out politically?

Wait, this is a real dollars-and-cents problem here, revenues for this and next fiscal year falling about $159 million in the remaining seven months of this fiscal year and $194 million in the year that starts July 1.

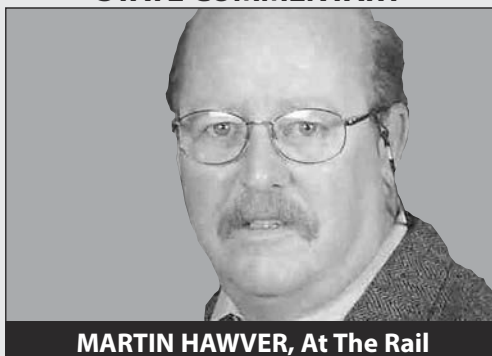

And, remember, we're in a two-year budget, so when legislators approved the spending plan last session (it was June) they were thinking: Maybe a little touch-up for the second year and we're out on the campaign trail.

Well, that's all gone now. The governor is taking the lead with about $109 million of spending cuts in the current year, including another $48 million nick of the Kansas Department of Transportation budget, for a total of $350 million in this year alone, and some other cuts and shuffles that most of us won't notice.

Look for that touch-up of the budget this coming session to include more cuts in spending and maybe, just maybe in an election year, a tax increase or two.

But practically, the state constitution calls for a balanced budget, if even just $1 is in the bank every July 1, so it's going to be done. No telling what happens if the Legislature and governor don't put together a balanced budget. Do they lose their parking slots? Are they arrested? Does the Kansas Supreme Court or someone dock legislators' pay? As we said, there's no telling because it hasn't happened since the earth cooled enough that the Statehouse could be built and restaurants started popping up so lobbyists can take lawmakers out for lunch and dinner and drinks.

STATE COMMENTARY

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

So, ugly as that might be, there's still the politics to be wrestled with.

Those politics started in 2012, when the Legislature passed a vastly expanded version of an income tax bill Gov. Sam Brownback proposed, and though it probably wasn't a good move, he signed the giant tax cuts into law.

It has taken three years, but those tax cuts have come home to roost, not spurring the increased revenues that was the goal, resulting in revenue shortfalls.

The politics? Well, Brownback doesn't stand for re-election, so he's in the clear.

Do Republicans call the cuts in spending to balance the budget a long-overdue reduction in the size of government which most people who vote Republican revere? Who isn't for cutting wasteful or maybe just unproductive spending of our tax dollars—for those who haven't figured a way to turn themselves into Limited Liability Companies so they don't have to pay state income taxes?

Do Democrats, who don't have enough votes in either chamber to pass or kill legislation, just complain and blame Republicans as they have the past three years? Or do Democrats come up with a plan, a budget or the tax increases necessary to prevent further cuts into programs and aid to local units of government?

It's a matter of weighing which is the politically most advantageous.

Republicans, of course, with the legislative majority can assert that they tried a dramatic new taxation philosophy that didn't work, but led to massive spending cuts that they can sell as efficiencies. And, so far, the spending cuts haven't shown up in the everyday lives of most Kansans—unless they build highways for a living.

Democrats can point fingers at shaved expenditures for K-12 education and highways. But don't look for a Democrat-proposed budget because it is going to require tax increases which they probably don't have the votes to hang on Republicans, and they don't want to cut social programs that are needed by the poor and the ill and their children.

Where do the politics of this revenue shortfall go? It's going to depend on who thinks up the catchiest phrase for their campaigns. Wonder what it will be?

Local police aided agents from the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Wednesday in seizing the entire handgun and long gun inventory from Garnett's Cedar Creek Outfitters bait and gun shop, but so far no one involved will say why. An ATF spokesman said the search warrant issued was part of an ongoing investigation. They seized 98 long guns, 43 handguns and an assortment of ammunition and other items from the store's inventory.

Grain and cattle producers now have reason to hope farm commodity prices will rise - latest by spring. But farm expenses will continue to eat into optimism about net profits. That was the message Kansas State University extension economists had for statewide farm audience.

Kansas drivers found good and bad news at gasoline and diesel fuel pumps in October. The good news was that gasoline prices were lower until the last few days of the month. The bad news was that diesel fuel prices rose steadily all month and gasoline prices jumped as

Fall Fling meant fun with metal detecting

WOW! I just got back from a three day fling. Oops! I had better explain myself. I really did just get back from the three day Kansas Anthropological Association (KAA) 2015 Fall Fling held at Fort Larned, Larned, held Oct. 30-31 and Nov. 1. This year's Fling was to establish the practical, responsible and ethical use of metal detectors in and around archeological sites. Fort Larned, a National Historic Landmark, is a federal property under the direction of the National Park Service. The project area where we conducted a complete metal detector survey on was a 77 acre tract of land just south of the fort on private property.

The Principal Investigator (PI) of this survey was Gina Powell, archeologist at the Kansas Historical Society and the Lead Technical Advisor was Doug Scott, archeologist for the Park Service (retired).

Personnel from the KSHS teamed up with Volunteers from the KAA, the Wheat State Treasure Hunters Club, and others performed this survey.

The field was divided into 100X100-m squares to make sampling and recording easier. Three teams 1-2-3 were assigned as follows: 6 metal detector operators, 6 diggers, 1 or 2 recorders, photographer & a Team Leader per team. I was assigned to team 2 as a metal detector operator. The three teams were each assigned to one of the 100X100-m squares and conducted a survey until completed.

Here are the instructions given to all metal detector operators.

1. An experienced or novice metal detector operator should be matched with an experienced metal detector operator.
2. All metal detector operators should carry extra batteries for their own machines.
3. No metal detector operator should operate, move or otherwise disturb a metal detector that is not theirs without permission.
4. Any metal detector found malfunctioning should be removed from use.
5. Metal detectors that interfere with each other's signals should be placed as far apart as possible.

Starting next week I will write my columns from my daily journal notes, telling you all about my trip to Fort Larned and my amazing Fall Fling.

VETERAN...

perk, compared to other places he has lived. As Henderson shared story after story, a running theme quickly emerged: He clearly enjoyed having a comfortable place to sleep.

There wasn't much comfort aboard a riveted metal ship taken from the Germans during World War I, a ship that bounced Henderson through the Bering Sea en route to the Aleutian Islands in 1942; or even worse, on a smaller boat on the return trip that always seemed to be underwater thanks to the cold, rough sea.

"It was always covered up with water, and they didn't let you out on deck," he said. "The little boat we came back on, with just two companies, I think that thing was covered up all the way home. When we came back to Seattle, the trees didn't stop moving for four or five days."

The trip to Europe was quite luxurious in comparison; Henderson bragged that he was able to sleep on A Deck, the best quarters on ship, and the weather was nearly perfect. But again, the return trip wasn't nearly as comfortable. He and about 8,000 other soldiers boarded the USS George Washington, which made its final run carrying American servicemen home as part of Operation Magic Carpet in 1945.

"It was hard to find a place to sleep. They had hammocks four or five men deep, and you had to crawl up everybody to find a place to sleep," he said. "I stayed on deck. It was better on deck."

On land, Henderson slept in lavish quarters in Germany, while stationed at a hospital that covered about 80 acres. He had a nice warm bed, in what was once the office of a doctor, with a beautiful crystal chandelier hanging above his head.

"I had a good place to sleep," he said. "It was better than a fox hole."

It also was a far cry from the cold, brutal conditions on Attu, an island near Alaska on the eastern end of the Aleutian Islands, where he served during the first year of the war. Snow, often 10 feet deep, surrounded the quonset huts where soldiers lived. The overnight snow blew drifts away from one quonset hut to cover another; if their hut was uncovered, the soldiers would spend their mornings digging snow away from huts that had been buried. The next morning, they'd likely be in the reverse situation.

One of Henderson's most memorable nights came on Omaha Beach, some time after the D-Day invasion. His unit was passing through France, not far from a rock quarry where his brother, Willis, was stationed as a combat engineer. He walked three miles to visit Willis, and spent the night there. The next morning, soldiers with Willis' company escorted him back to his own group.

When Henderson joined the war, he was just a farm boy from Kansas, with only an eighth grade education at a small country school. He attended basic training in Texas and studied first aid, where he placed first in his exams. That surprised many of his classmates, especially those who had graduated from college.

"When they asked how to take care of patients, I wrote just like I was talking to them," he explained of his test-taking ability.

After his training was completed, Henderson boarded a boat for the Aleutian Islands. The chain of rugged, volcanic islands are located about 1,500 miles from Alaska, and were part of the package when the U.S. purchased Alaska from the Russians in 1867. Two of the islands, Attu and Kiska, were the only U.S. soil Japan would claim during the war in the Pacific. It was important for the U.S. troops to retake the island, both for the symbolism of such action as well as to prevent Japan from gaining access to the North American continent, Henderson said.

Most of Henderson's time on the islands was spent building structures in the rocky, volcanic soil. At times, troops faced off with Japanese forces, retaking military bases built by the Japanese or fighting off assaults from Japanese ships nearby. In their down time, U.S. troops played with baby blue foxes, an animal native to the Aleutian Islands and prized for their fur.

"The boys liked to play with the pups, but they'd bite you," Henderson said.

In Europe, Henderson's unit moved to the front lines as often as his colonel could find the opportunity.

"We had a colonel who always wanted to be on the front lines," he recalled.

The unit made its way into Germany, charged with protecting German civilians. It wasn't an easy job. Henderson recalled having to take part in a high number of amputations, and he was responsible for carrying the removed limbs to disposal near a power plant, a potentially hazardous trip in a hostile country. While in Germany, he was tasked with burying 14 German civilians in a cemetery, where he was surrounded by other Germans. It was an eerie situation, he recalled.

Even as the war was ending, Henderson's colonel wanted to move to the front lines in southern France, so the unit moved there. Henderson was the winner of a drawing for an all-expenses paid furlough to London, where he and another soldier enjoyed fine dining, fine lodging and visiting some of the most historical sites in England. Traveling around Europe at the time was inexpensive, and Henderson enjoyed several sight-seeing visits during his time in the service.

The war ended before his unit found action on the front lines in France, and soon Henderson headed home aboard the USS George Washington.

Once back home, Henderson used money earned from the service to buy 80 acres of land, and lived in the Selma/Kincaid area. He returned to farming, and other than trips throughout the country for military reunions, never again left the U.S.

Bulldogs struggle in regional matchup

COLUMBUS – Columbus caged the AC Bulldogs in the second quarter Friday night during the 4A Division II Regional tournament matchup, salting away a 41-7 halftime score on their way to a 55-7 victory.

Columbus advances to play Santa Fe Trail this coming Friday in Columbus in the 4A Sectional. Sub State contenders play in two games Nov. 20, with the 4A DII championship game set for Saturday, Nov. 28.

Chase Ratliff breathed a moment of hope into the Bulldogs when he broke loose on a 28 yard run late in the first period to score AC's first and only TD. Columbus had already put 13 points on the board, but it was the closest the Bulldogs would get to them for the rest of the game.

AC struggled to move the ball, and not consistently enough to mount a significant drive. Ratliff totaled 151 yards rushing on the night out of 258 yards total offense. Quarterback Jacob Rundle hit Devin Katzer and Kyle Lamb for 29 and 25 yards passing respectively. None of it was enough to stop Columbus' dominance on either side of the ball, racking up two more TDs to seal the deal in the fourth period.

Lamb, Ratliff and Grady Schuster led the tackling stats with 7, 6 and 4 stops apiece. AC finishes the year 5-5.

Author of Kansas murder mystery to speak at Friends of Library annual meeting

Diane Staresinic-Deane will be presenting at the Friends of the Library annual meeting, Tuesday, Nov. 10th at 7:00 p.m. at the Garnett public library. A brief business meeting will be held and refreshments served. Everyone is invited to attend.

Staresinic-Deane

Unsolved 1925 Kansas murder reexamined in book, Shadow on the Hill: The True Story of a 1925 Kansas Murder

On Decoration Day in 1925, John Knoblock returned to his Kansas farm to find his wife, Florence, slaughtered on the kitchen floor. Within hours, dozens of lawmen, family members, well-meaning neighbors and gawkers paraded through the Knoblock farmstead, contaminating and destroying what little evidence was left behind. A small team of inexperienced lawmen, including a newly elected sheriff who had never run a murder investigation, attempted to reconstruct and solve the most gruesome murder in the history of Coffey County, Kansas.

What begins as the murder of a very private and somewhat sickly farmwife and mother turned into a multi-county fiasco. Two different pairs of bloodhounds were called in and pulled investigators in two different directions. Florence Knoblock's family disobeyed the sheriff's orders and scrubbed clean the crime scene before the investigation was complete. Fingers began to point in so many directions, neighbors saw everyone else as a potential suspect. In a county where many residents didn't have locks to latch at night, women began to keep shotguns by their stoves to point at anyone who knocked on their doors.

With no obvious motive and no known enemies, Florence Knoblock's murder caused an entire county to panic as man after man was arrested and then released. Desperate for a conviction, the law would arrest John Knoblock and try him twice before he was acquitted.

Then the story vanished from the headlines and the memories of all but the old-timers.

In 2007, Diana Staresinic-Deane, then a library assistant at Emporia Public Library in Emporia, Kansas, discovered an abandoned folder of newspaper clippings about the murder and trial. The dramatic headlines—"May have Murder: Burlington Awaits Report on Fingerprints," and "Call Out a Posse: Burlington Thought Murderer was Captured, Night Ride Only to Find Weary Pedestrian"—were captivating. As someone who helped others research local history, Staresinic-Deane was fascinated.

"It was the kind of tragedy that shook an entire community," Staresinic-Deane said. "I remember reading those clippings and thinking, 'Why haven't I heard of this?'"

What began as a curiosity turned into a mission to try to understand the murder case and the impact it had on the community. As she spent hours reading newspaper articles, courthouse documents, and interviewing descendants of the people involved, Staresinic-Deane heard a rumor that there may have been a witness who saw someone approach the Knoblock house that fateful morning.

"As I sifted through information, I realized there was a lot of evidence to substantiate that rumor," Staresinic-Deane said. "In fact, I began to suspect that John Knoblock was tried not because there was enough evidence to convict him, but because the community desperately needed to feel like someone had paid for a crime that, months later, still had people on edge."

The investigation stayed on the front page of several local newspapers for nearly a year. Two of Kansas' most prominent reporters, William Lindsay White at the Emporia Gazette and John Redmond at the Burlington Republican, brought the story to life through colorful commentary and excruciating detail, amassing hundreds of pages of clippings between the first article announcing the murder and the last article announcing the outcome of the trial.

Diana Staresinic-Deane is a Kansas-gone-Californian-gone-Kansan. Fascinated by little Kansas towns and their histories, she's happiest when she's digging through old newspapers and exploring old cemeteries. She is the author of Shadow on the Hill: The True Story of a 1925 Kansas Murder. She is currently researching a series of old murders in 1909 and 1910 Kansas and is working on a novel set in Kansas. ## ACHS presents 'Emma! A Pop Musical'

The ACHS Theatre & Music Departments will showcase the talents of many young performers in "Emma! A Pop Musical," a high-octane retelling of the familiar novel by Jane Austen, Emma, set in a modern day prep school. Performances will be 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13, and Saturday, Nov. 14, at Anderson County High School Auditorium.

Emma (Remi Hedges), a senior at Highbury Prep, is certain she knows what's best for her classmates' love lives, and is determined to find the perfect boyfriend for shy sophomore Harriet (Gwen Sibley) by the end of the school year. But will Emma's relentless matchmaking get in the way of finding her own happiness? Based on Jane Austen's classic novel, this sparkling new musical features the hit songs of legendary girl groups and iconic female singers from The Supremes to Katy Perry. Girl power has never sounded so good!

Suitable for the whole family, the comedy follows several prep school attendees (Adam Kropf, Shane Figgins, Nate Gainer, Grace Urquhart, Bel Sibley), a nervous principal (Bethany Powls), the dishwasher/busboy (David Pozzie), and a chorus of students (Samantha Hicks, Jenna Schmit, Jasmine White, Lexee Feuerborn, Abbie Fritz, Ellie Lutz, Adrianna Pedrow, Devin Peine, Kristen Simpson, Sammy Walter, Averi Wilson, Lizzy Comfort, Tim Comfort, Daniel Dougherty, Hayden Hermann, Owen Lutz, Zane Phelps) on a journey to find love and happiness.

Directors are Gessica Tastove and Vicki Markham. Stage manager is Lauren Egidy. Ticket price is $5 for adults and $4 for students.

Make window displays sell for you Notice of tax levies for Anderson County

Even though everyone raves about the increasing amount of shopping that's done online, it's still true that some 90 percent of retail purchases are made at a store. That means the old-school efforts - like window displays - still matter a bunch.

Dane Hicks
Review Publisher

After all, if you're in business and if you have a window, it should be working to sell something for you. Here are a couple of ideas to make window displays work for you.

display full of items. Use odd numbers - one or three or five - they deny symmetry and stand out to the viewer.

1) Stand outside your window with an index card or piece of paper roughly the proportionate dimension of your viewable window area. Sketch your idea to make it a plan you can work from. With color, think in terms of background, foreground and feature. Half your color use should be background; 10 percent should be feature, with the rest devoted to secondary items.

3) Don't forget about lighting and movement. Directional lights at the base of the display can be used to light the backgrounds even during daylight hours, and you can play with them to make the shadows give even more appeal. Be sure to have the display lit for night time viewing. Put an electric train in the display running in and out of your featured items and you'll pull even longer glances. You can find little electric motors to add movement, or even a small fan placed out of view and blowing a mannequin's hair or some streamers adds animation to an otherwise static display.

4) But the granddaddy of all tips - always, and I mean always put some kind of signage in your window with your phone number, website and email info - if you use a QR code, don't forget to put it in the window. Be easy to contact even in your window display. Cinderella should never dazzle the prince and not leave a slipper behind.

Your window displays can be powerful selling tools, so take a little time and treat them right.

Local students take part in ESU Theater drama

EMPORIA — Area students are part of "Creating Claire," the second show of the Emporia State University 2015-16 theater season.

Under the direction of ESU faculty member Theresa Mitchell, "Creating Claire" by Joe DiPietro is the story of a middle-aged natural museum docent, Claire, who comes under fire when her tour-guide patter deviates from the strict scientific beliefs of Victoria, the director of the museum.

As Claire heads down a path that embraces intelligent design, many visitors are attracted to her spiritual slant; it soon leads to legal action in a powerful exploration of what happens when science, faith and politics collide. It also takes a real toll on the lives of her husband and their daughter.

Students from this area and their roles are:

• Heather Kropf of Westphalia, Kansas, a junior Theatre major, is on the box office crew.

Nancy J. Pontius is the lighting designer. Amanda Dura will design the costumes.

"Creating Claire" runs November 18 through 21 at 7:30 p.m. There will also be 2 p.m. matinees on November 21 and 22. All performances will be in the Ronald Q. Frederickson Theatre on the Emporia State University campus. Tickets can be reserved at the Memorial Union box office or by calling 620-341-6378.

Jesus invites us into the light

In Genesis 1:3 God said, "Let there be light," and there was light.

In the book of Revelation John the Apostle was on the island of Patmos and he is shown a new heaven and a new earth and the Holy City of Jerusalem and John says, "The city does not need the sun or the moon to shine on it, for the glory of God gives it light, and the lamb is its lamp."

Light was the very first thing that God created and we are told he separated the light from the darkness. Light is defined in the dictionary as rays issuing from some illuminating body as the sun, a fire or a lamp.

When Jesus spoke to the people he said, "I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness but will have the light of life." (John 8:12)

When God created light he created something that has power over darkness. Light completely overwhelms darkness. If you go into a dark room and turn on the light the darkness disappears, and when you turn the light off the darkness reappears. The question then becomes where does the darkness go when exposed to light? The darkness is unable to overcome or extinguish the light. Only by extinguishing the light can the darkness reappear. Jesus made the statement whoever follows him will never walk in spiritual darkness. Jesus contrasts light and darkness with good and evil.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

By David Bilderback

To walk in the light is to follow Jesus. To walk in darkness is to follow evil ways. How important is it to walk in the light. Light was the first thing that God created. By saying he is the light of the world Jesus says he can turn darkness into light. Jesus also said anyone who follows him will, "never walk in darkness but will have the light of life." Jesus is talking about eternal life. Life where there is no need for the sun or moon for the glory of God gives the light. Jesus invites us to step out of the darkness into the light.

Crest High School Play

For the last few weeks, the Crest Drama Club has been working on their fall play, called A School Like Ours, written by Joe Cherubino.

The new kid in town, Chris (played by Austin Hendrix), is starting to get on with his life from a traumatic shooting at his old school. He meets new friends: the girl with big heart, Alison (played by Camryn Strickler); the most popular kid in school, Trent (played by C.J. Ward); and the "odd" kid, Randy (played by Bryce Atzbach). A School Like Ours is about the individual lives of students and their personal issues, mixed with problems between each other.

The play was chosen by the students because it is set in the teenage world, with no adults, to relate more to high school life. The Drama Club is excited about putting on this show which demonstrates typical high school life, including relationships, self-image, the need to belong, and violence. Karlee Hammond says, "I am really excited about this play. It is very realistic and inspiring."

The play will be on November 15 at 2:00 p.m., with an approximate run time of 90 minutes, at Crest High School. Others involved in the play are Kaden Strickler, Ashley Geary, Karlee Hammond, Breyanna Benjamin, Caleb Stephens, and Maya Piper. Lupita Rodriguez is the Student Director, who is in charge of costumes, props, and helping direct backstage. The backstage crew is in charge of sound, light, and set design: Preston Utley, John Hartman, Travis Wilson, Nate Berry, Kadyn Utley, and Hayden Seabolt.

Colony Volunteer Fire & Rescue History

When the Colony Fire Dept. was founded by local residents of Colony and the surrounding rural community, they used horses to pull the water tanks. There was no funding for the departments at that time, so many of the expenses came from the volunteers personal donations. Once cars and trucks were more available, the volunteers made water tanks and used their personal equipment, many were known to fill the trucks with fuel from their own pockets.

The county began the Anderson County Fire Dept. in the 1970's. This allowed for some funding to be supplied by the county budget. This provided upgrades to trucks, equipment, personal safety equipment and gear.

In the mid-1990's, first responding and EMT programs were added to the fire department under the Emergency Preparedness branch of the Anderson County. Since then, Colony has added 7 EMT's and 1 EMR to its roster.

There are two meetings & trainings each month, with additional trainings provided by the county through KU and other training facilities. Training is crucial to keeping the firemen safe and keeping our insurance premiums lower. This training is tracked and has an impact on homeowner insurance rates.

Each fireman carries a pager and radios and voluntarily takes call 24/7, responding to medical calls, fire calls, dive rescue and recovery, swift water rescues & motor vehicle accidents. They also provide mutual aide to surrounding departments when needed. As an example, several members responded to the Joplin tornado providing search and rescue teams.

Currently there are 22 active members.

The Colony Fire Department would like to express their gratitude to the Colony and surrounding community members for their continued support of their efforts to keep the community safe. Without community support, there would be no reason to train and volunteer countless hours to be prepared to respond to each emergency.

City Council

Mayor Melissa Hobbs presided at the August 26 city council meeting. Council members attending were Donna Westerman, Roger Culler, Richard Buckle and AJ Silvey. Debbie Oswald was unable to attend. Amy Ray, city clerk, Tim Dietrich, superintendent, Jesse Randall, lawyer, and Bill Goodell, city marshal were also in attendance.

Street and Alley reported the plan to sweep Broad Street for less dust in lieu of the upcoming Colony Day event. Water Works Dept. did not have any report, Parks & Recreations were still mowing and weed eating and the city clerk's reports were accepted as presented. Past due water bills were followed as usual. Colony Little League Association needed a building permit for the bathroom at the ballpark which was accepted. It was voted to accept a website for the city, also voted to pay city treasurer $15 per hour for assisting in clean-up with city books and will also look for a new auditor. The meeting closed upon accepting the purchase of a work belt for Dick Crabtree.

Around Town

Dennis Allen now serves as postal carrier for all of Colony and Ryan Tastove serves the Welda Rural Route. Serving both rural routes as substitute carrier is Holly Ellington.

Visiting Morris Luedke the past few weeks have been Stanley Luedke, Jerry Luedke, David and Dakota Milner, Wallace Strickler, all of Colony; Randy Bunnell, Welda, Ron Luedke, Garnett and Vernon Sprague, Lone Elm.

Sympathy is expressed to the family of Gene Kessler, 78, who passed away Oct. 21 at Windsor Place in Iola. Funeral services were Oct. 28 at Waugh-Yokum and Friskel Chapel, Iola Burial followed at Geneva Cemetery.
