A wind monitoring tower collapsed after someone cut a support anchor between May 20 and 21. The crime is under investigation.

Wind farm war escalates

Sheriff: Tower damage could be considered 'domestic terrorism'

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

KINCAID - The escalating battle over a proposed wind farm in Anderson County has approached the level of "domestic terrorism" after someone destroyed a weather monitoring tower, according to the local sheriff.

Someone apparently cut a one-inch thick metal support anchor for the Energy Windmill information tower on Tennessee Road near Kincaid, causing it to collapse and causing between $140,000 to $200,000 in damage, Anderson County Sheriff Vernon Valentine said in a press release last week. The damage apparently occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Friday, May 20, and 6 p.m. Saturday, May 21.

The tower measures wind speeds and was installed in early April; it was expected to help Calpine Corporation determine over the course of the next six months to a year if winds in Anderson County could support a wind farm with between 80 to 100 turbines. The tower also was the subject of a recent controversy regarding county zoning regulations, with questions about whether it should be allowed.

The latest incident follows reports of vandalism and theft of signs from the opposing side in recent weeks.

"This was no accident," Valentine said. "Because this could be considered a form of domestic terrorism, I have

April, May combine for 10.49 in. of rain

Biggest storm drops 2.80 inches of rain on Garnett May 23-24

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - April showers brought even more rain in May, turning 2016 into one of the wettest springs in years.

A series of storms the past couple of weeks helped drop a total of 5.3 inches of rain at the Garnett Industrial Airport, the official weather monitoring station for Anderson County, as of Friday, May 27. At least a trace of rain fell 16 out of the first 27 days of the month, with the heaviest rainfall (2.80 inches) falling between May 23 and 24.

Even so, the total rainfall for May is just slightly above the average of 5.03 inches.

The soggy May followed a soaking April, which had a total of 5.19 inches. Combined, the two months dropped 10.49 inches of rain.

That more than makes up for a very dry start to the year. Just 0.70 inches fell in January

City makes it a banner town for veterans

Garnett city manager Joyce Martin talks about the veteran banners displayed throughout the city as part of the "Garnett Remembers" project. The city kicked off the event with a celebration Wednesday evening, May 25, on the courthouse lawn in Garnett. The names of honorees of each banner were read and recognized. Living honorees, and family and friends who sponsored the banners, along with members of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion Riders were invited to the ceremony. The city, through its Garnett Community Foundation, is accepting banners for $200 each through June 1. The banners will be on display until July 4, 2016, and each year after this they will be displayed between Memorial Day and Independence. Below is an example of a banner.

Soggy ground and the threat of rain couldn't keep campers from preparing for a festive Memorial Day weekend. As of early Friday, all of the electric camping locations were taken at Cedar Valley Reservoir.

City moves forward with Internet franchise agreement

Company to provide wholesale Internet option to City of Garnett

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - City commissioners approved a franchise agreement that would allow a Wichita company to run a high-speed, underground fiber-optic Internet service line through the City of Garnett. KSFiberNet in March approached city leaders with their plans to construct the line, which would allow the city to tap into a 100 gb backbone of Internet service throughout Kansas and Oklahoma. The company would not offer residential Internet service, instead focusing on wholesale clients as well as governments, school districts and medical providers. However, company officials said their clients could use their services to serve residential customers.

City attorney Terry Solander spent the past couple of months researching such agreements, and ultimately asked the company for changes to the franchise agreement that, he said, would make it comparable to KSFiberNet agreements in other cities. For example, he asked for a provision he called "the most favored nation" that would benefit both sides by essentially ensuring neither of them could give a better deal to someone else. Solander said he modeled that provision after an agreement between KSFiberNet and The City of Pittsburg.

City leaders were interested in the proposal with the hopes of adding more services and competition for the local Internet service market. Currently, the city has a limited number of Internet providers, including CenturyLink and Vyve Broadband. They have been particularly critical of Vyve in the past, saying the company has not entirely fulfilled promises it made after it took over the beleaguered Allegiance service.

KSFiberNet would offer a "backbone" of 100 gigabyte Internet north from the Oklahoma border, roughly following U.S. 169. Representatives from the company told city leaders they hope to have construction completed by the end of the year, although they acknowledged that was an ambitious goal. They previously did not provide price estimates for their services, but said government grants allowed them to be competitive.

asked the Kansas Bureau of Investigation to assist us with the investigation."

According to the FBI, "domestic terrorism" means activities with the following three characteristics:

- Involve acts dangerous to human life that violate federal or state law;
• Appear intended to intimidate or coerce a civilian population; to influence the policy of a government by intimidation or coercion; or to affect the conduct of a government by mass destruction, assassination, or kidnapping; and
• Occur primarily within the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S.

Valentine said written evidence left at the scene helped officers determine the incident was done intentionally by an unknown organization or organizations against windmills.

Mike Burns, the leader of a group Landowners Against Windmills, said his group was not responsible for the damage.

"We will never condone or support any type of destruction or anything along those lines. We condemn this action and hope that whoever did it is caught," Burns said.

Brett Kerr, Calpine's director of communications and government affairs, said this is the first time the company has been victim of such an act. Calpine officials were at a national conference in New Orleans when they learned about the incident, and Kerr said other energy company's confirmed that such destruction was unprecedented.

"This is the first time anything like this has happened, to our knowledge, not just at our site but at any site," Kerr said. "While it is discouraging, we are not stopping our development efforts."

Because the matter is under criminal investigation, Kerr could not comment on specific details about the incident.

Calpine late last year proposed building between 80 and 100 wind turbines that stretch about 500 feet into the sky on a ridge east of Greeley and Garnett that roughly parallels U.S. 169. The proposed project would generate about 200 megawatts of power, enough to power more than 50,000 homes. Many steps remain before the wind farm could be completed, though, including approval by county officials for special use permits to allow the wind turbines to operate.

Wind farm supporters point to the economic benefits of such projects, such as $6,000 or more annual long-term lease payments to property holders, an economic boost in terms of construction and jobs, improved county roads and a promised $500,000 annual payment in lieu of property taxes to the county since wind farms are exempt from property taxes.

But critics say wind farms are a blight on the landscape and to property values, a noise disturbance and a threat to wildlife. They say any environmental or cost-saving advantage is offset by a continued reliance on coal and other types of power plants when the wind doesn't blow, and on federal tax credits for companies that build them, and purchase mandates that force distributors to buy wind farm power at higher than market rates.

Earlier this month, a nearby landowner, John Greenlee, protested construction of the weather monitoring tower, saying construction violated Anderson County's planning and zoning regulations, even though the former zoning director authorized it without a special use permit. Calpine officials checked with former county zoning director Tom Young, who said they didn't need a special use permit because the tower did not conform to structures regulated by local zoning codes since it did not transmit, receive or relay an electronic signal.

But Greenlee and others protested Young's interpretation, and attended a May 16 meeting of the planning and zoning commission to discuss the matter. It was expected the question over the tower would continue to work its way through various zoning and legal channels. Because of that, Burns said it was in the opposition group's best interest to let the matter play out through the proper legal procedure.

"We believed it would come down through the permit process. This does not fit into our game plan. In fact, it's a setback," Burns said.

Burns pointed to comments he made to The Review in January about fears that the fight over the wind farm eventually would pit neighbor against neighbor.

"This speaks volumes to the passion and amount of opposition to this project in Anderson County."

In recent weeks, the

"Landowners Against Windmills" group began distributing yard signs that read "No Windmills" and said more than 350 signs were given out. Soon after, some of those signs were reported damaged or stolen.

On Monday, May 23, hours after The Review went to press for the May 24 edition with an article about the sign vandalism, news broke about the damage to the wind monitoring tower.

Valentine said law enforcement will seek to find those responsible for damage on both sides, and will seek to prosecute those responsible to the fullest extent of the law. That could include reimbursing the property owners for damage caused.

"I am asking - whether you are against or for the windmills - that everyone keep the protests and the campaigning within the law," Valentine said. "Being this was a wind test tower only, what if the test would have shown in your favor regardless of what side you may be on?"

The tower was covered by insurance and likely will be replaced.

Anyone with information about this or any other crime is asked to contact the Anderson County Sheriff's Department at (785) 448-5678 or (785) 448-6823 after hours, and ask to speak to Det. Wesley McClain or Sheriff Vernon Valentine. Every effort will be made to protect the caller's anonymity, if possible, Valentine said.

and 0.61 in February. March wasn't much better, with 1.75 inches. The three-month total was just 3.06 inches, about 2.67 inches shy of normal for the first three months of the year.

The area normally has received a total of 14.74 inches of rain at this point. So far, the area still is just a little short of average with total of 13.55 inches, with another 1.19 inches to make up.

The storms that moved across Kansas last week created several tornadoes, but none hit the local area. A tornado near Minneapolis, Solomon, Abilene and Chapman Wednesday, May 25, was reported to have destroyed or substantially damaged between 15 and 25 homes, with no fatalities or injuries.

As of Friday, damage to property in Anderson County appeared minimal.

Rain was expected to continue to be a daily occurrence at least through much of this week, according to forecasts from the National Weather Service in Topeka.

Valedictorians by the dozens

The passing of Memorial Day signifies the beginning of summer and the end of the parade of high school graduations, but distracting ourselves with the change in the season doesn't solve the notable questions surrounding the proliferation of valedictorians each year at those high schools.

In fact critiques of high schools and grading systems and the fears that competition for such honors is being melba-toasted down to "everybody gets an award" may have been more pronounced this year than in years past.

The fact is, being one of 10 valedictorians – or one of 17 in a class of 350 as was the case at Free State High School in Lawrence last week – is not the same honor as being the single honoree was a few decades ago. Like the villain in the Pixar classic "The Incredibles" reveals when explaining how he'll sell his technology to make everyone a superhero: "And, when everyone's super no one will be."

The deeper story is that these kids are indeed super – they massed those 4.0 and better grade point averages by taking Advanced Placement courses that are tougher and qualify as college credit; and not just taking them but doing well in them – and by working their tails off through the rest of their high school careers as well. There are more AP classes than there used to be, and that fact saves substantial money for college-bound kids and their families since they don't have to pay for those course hours. For some kids academics come easy – others have to plow through it to make grades – either way, they earn their stripes and should be honored.

The problem is, the system now relegates all those highest performers to the same honor. That's like fighting your way to the goal line for a tie-breaking touchdown just to find out your opponent's been given 6 points too.

Despite the mantra of the politically correct disciples of the Church of Self Esteem who are bent on de-gendering and socially restructuring our country, there is intrinsic value in competing to a final winner – both for the winner and even those dismissed along the way. Seeking an exclusive reward helps define in the seeker just how much he or she wants it, and what he/she is willing to sacrifice to get it. Being forced to consider that question fosters the self-definition of character and helps establish one's own expectations of one's self for the future. More eminently, the window on this development of character closes not too long after high school graduation age. Once established, it can often be set for life.

Unfortunately, some high schools like the Blue Valley District in Johnson County are going the opposite direction, doing away with class ranks that order students by performance in order to soften the disappointment sometimes felt by lesser achievers and to put all performers on more equal ground. Actions like this are a travesty perpetrated by public education designed more to minimize headaches for the school district than to help students. The real world after high school will not be so powder-puff.

Qualified valedictorians should be recognized with some terminology signifying the honor they have earned, but their test scores should be analyzed to establish a clear winner of the first in class honor. The top student and only the top student should wear that sash.

Hey, I heard they are selling drugs out on East Seventh Street, any time of the day or night, right in front of the kids and everything. Cops are hardly ever out there, just do what you want. Just thought I'd let people know. Bye.

The Chamber Players play was excellent, but the meal leaves a lot to be desired. The last two meals have not been very good at all. I wish they would go back to the catering. The price remains the same but the meal is very inferior.

Your newspaper is so attractive, well-written and professional looking. I'm glad it represents Garnett.

Reading between the lines in your story a couple weeks ago about the wind farm test tower that was supposed to have a special use permit but never got one but got put up anyway. This was, at least according to your story, at the direction of the county zoning man. But now, what? Now I'm told the county zoning man is retired but going to come back to work for the county so he can milk KPERS for his retirement and still draw a check from Anderson County? Never mind the legalities of that test tower. I'm wondering if this double dipping from tax money is why our KPERS system is in such a mess and always out of money? Thank you.

I was reading in the paper in the county minutes the other day, and they're already cutting this and that out and downsizing this and that on the million dollar Taj Mahal. What's the matter, Mr. $50,000 a year man? Are you going over budget?

So let me get this straight. The city wants to keep fixing the residential roads, which is a good thing and we sure need to fix a lot of the streets. But at the rate they are going and if they keep on some sort of rotation schedule, they'll never get around to the lake road. And then the cars will stop coming for that revival thing. Sounds to me like we need to rethink this whole system.

Our gravel roads and low-water bridges sure are taking a beating with all this rain. I've noticed the county road crews have been a lot better the past couple years at getting the roads fixed real quick after a bad storm. I really appreciate that, and I hope they can keep up the good work.

The Trump-Sanders two-step-to-the-left

The upshot of the Bernie Sanders and Donald Trump phenomena is that both parties are moving to the left.

Sanders' and Trump's styles and affects are very different -- the ruffled, oddball lecturer in Socialism 101 vs. the boastful, power-tie-wearing business mogul -- but they have worked in tandem to ensure that the center of gravity in this fall's presidential election will be further to the left than it has been in decades.

By seizing the initiative in their race from the beginning to what looks like an increasingly bitter end, Bernie Sanders has made Hillary Clinton, the cautious inheritor of a family political legacy built on centrism, into the mouthpiece of a watered-down version of his left-wing populism.

No matter how much Bernie Sanders hates the banks, Hillary Clinton despises them just as much (past paydays notwithstanding).

In effect, Sanders and Trump have executed a squeeze play on the Madam Secretary. Sanders pushed her to the left on trade and Social Security in the primary, when she disavowed the Trans-Pacific Partnership that she helped negotiate and embraced increasing Social Security benefits. She probably won't be snapping back to the center on those issues in a general election because it would open her up to Sanders-like attacks from Donald Trump.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

If the grass-roots movement that Sanders has built will pressure Democrats all the way to the Philadelphia convention and beyond, Trump has arguably done more to pull the country's politics portside. He has, for now, managed to do what the Democrats and the media have been attempting for most of the Obama era: to kill off the tea party as a national force.

By dividing it, eclipsing it and making its animating concerns of limited government and constitutionalism into afterthoughts, Trump has neutered a heretofore potent vehicle against Big Government. With or without Sanders, the Democrats were going to drift in a more progressive direction. It was far from inevitable, though, that the Republican Party would de-emphasize its opposition to growth in the size of government. That is entirely the doing of Trump.

The irony is that an era of Republican politics characterized by insistence on doctrinal purity and anger at Beltway deal-making is ending with Trump at the helm of the GOP. It's a little like the agitation of the French Revolution, all aimed at achieving more liberte, egalite, fraternite, concluding in the rule of Napoleon Bonaparte.

However ideologically indistinct Trump was during the primaries, he has gotten fuzzier since becoming the presumptive nominee. The lazy line on Donald Trump is that he's a far-right populist. Not at all. He's a centrist populist.

The key to moving the GOP to the center wasn't high-minded scolding about its tone and unreasonableness, as Jon Huntsman, John Kasich and Jeb Bush all attempted, but an extremely combative tone and a few signature unreasonable positions. Once Trump established his reputation as a bomb-thrower, it didn't matter that he was to the left of everyone else in the field.

Between Sanders moving Clinton further from the center and Trump moving the GOP toward it, the socialist and the mogul have forced American politics to take a collective step to the left.

The 'Daisy ad' and the differences then and now

I wonder if the Democrats' plans against Donald Trump include reprising the "Daisy" ad. It was a major success in 1964 when Lyndon Johnson's campaign released it in an effort to portray Republican nominee Barry Goldwater as a dangerous wild man. It simply featured a 3-year-old girl innocently counting flower petals and ended with a nuclear explosion, then a voice-over: "Vote for President Johnson on November 3rd; the stakes are too high for you to stay home."

The Democrats have made no bones about the fact they will hammer at Trump as an even wilder thing, one who has already blown up the rest of the Republican candidates with hateful rhetoric and insults. Come to think of it, the 1964 campaign was kind of tame compared with the nastiness we can expect this time around. The attacks against him they've already launched make the "Daisy" ad look like, uh, child's play. (By the way, it had a huge impact, even though it ran only once. In this Internet era, nothing runs only once.)

Of course, the Trump forces are already planning their own barrage, hammering at Hillary Clinton's negatives. When the Clintonistas charge misogyny, the Trumpsters will dredge up Bill Clinton's record with women. When the Clinton people hammer at The Donald's inconsistencies and lies, his troops will storm right back by unloading on The Hillary's reputation for dishonesty.

It won't be pretty, but it's worked so far for Trump, who has taken the Republicans and turned them upside down, leaving party regulars in a pile. But his adopted party is not the only one with unity problems. Witness the Democrats' recent melee in Las Vegas.

Trump and Sanders both have tapped into the fury of those who are finally realizing that the system has ripped them off. That has particularly helped insulate Trump from the constant accusations that he's way over his head. Millions of Americans are disgusted by the performance of those who present themselves as all-knowing, but have only a world in shambles to show for it. Trump and Sanders both campaign, in their own ways, against the status quo. Assuming Sanders finally gives up the ghost, a YUUUGE question is whether his millions of supporters will be too alienated to support Hillary Clinton's crusade to deny Trump the keys to the White House.

What an obnoxiously negative campaign this will be. It will make that "Daisy" ad look quaint. If you haven't seen it before, call it up and watch. It should be pointed out that it was Lyndon Johnson, after his landslide victory over Goldwater, who used deceit to drag the United States into a full-blown war in Vietnam from which we never really recovered. We were left with a cynicism that cripples our country to this day. Certainly, campaigns have long concluded that politeness is for suckers, and so are ethics.

Winning is everything, and selling out to the special financial interests is acceptable -- corrupt, but acceptable. As we enter the final dash for the presidency between Clinton and Trump, the bombardment will be brutal. The outcome is truly in doubt, but whoever gets elected will be taking over a country that is largely scorched earth.

Here's how to find Native American artifacts locally

For my next few weekly columns, I want to share with you some of my tips and experiences as a 30 year amateur hunter of Native American artifacts here in Anderson County. These columns are for those who say, "I sure would like to find one of those arrowheads like you do" or "I'd sure like to try hunting for arrowheads someday". So, through my next few columns perhaps I can help someone do exactly that. My tips will be very basic, simple and from my own experiences.

Read and study all about the different Native American tribes that lived in Anderson County. Learn as much as you can about where and how they lived, hunted, worshiped, etc. One of the best sources is to go thru the Anderson County History book and pick out and read anything telling about the Native Americans in this area.

Tip No.2
Study up on what rocks/stones were used to make tools, etc. out here in Anderson County. Remember only about 5% of the tools made here, were made of "FLINT" and the other

95% were made of "Flint Like Materials."

In Anderson County the two main sources were "Cobble Stones" and "River Rock" (what we call gravel), because of no immediate source of true flint. During your hunts in Anderson County you will occasionally find true flint, jasper, Wyoming jade, glacial debris, etc. artifacts.

I collected a few nice cobble and brown gravel stones, took them home, broke them open and studied all the different colors and patterns in both wet and dry conditions. This helped me greatly while in the field conducting my walking sight surveys.

Next week I will continue on with my tips and experiences.

1996: Kincaid city councilwoman concerned about abandoned wells

May 30, 2006

County commissioners have sent a rezoning request back to the county planning and zoning commission after a protest from landowners who previously planned to allow a rock quarry to be built on the property near Garnett.

Members of the group pressing for redevelopment of Garnett's downtown business area are proposing a facelift to the grounds of the Anderson County Courthouse as part of a multi-faceted plan for the area. The plan entails replacement of sidewalks, building landscaping, planting trees and adding pedestrian lighting to the courtyard in an effort to repair and beautify the downtown square's main feature.

The Anderson County Hospital will cease to operate the county's ambulance service in late July of this year if it cannot successfully negotiate a new ambulance contract with the Anderson County Commission within the next 60 days.

About 50 Central Heights patrons found out how firm the school's resolve was Tuesday night, when they were turned away without answers as to why two popular teachers were denied tenure and dismissed at the end of this year.

A Kincaid city council member says abandoned wells and cisterns still present in the city are a danger to children and in violation of state laws, and she says the lack of a county tax sale and tepid support from the city council is helping to stall her efforts to fix the mess.

The USD 365 board of education voted unanimously to raise district administrator salaries by $1,300 each for the coming year.

Fr. Bernard Lickteig will celebrate the 40th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood Sunday at St. John's Catholic Church in Greeley. Born in Greeley Jan. 6, 1921, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lickteig, welcomed the seventh of their 10 living children. Years later it could not have been so big a surprise to them that he should embrace the religious life and priesthood. These vocations have a tradition in the Lickteig clan. In the past 100 years, the various branches of the family have given 26 priests and 65 nuns to the church. Fr. Bernard and his younger brother, Fr. sions throughout the day that included financial information, nutritional information, Medicare resources, diabetes care, dementia resources, and physical fitness.

A guest speaker, Dr. Mark Johnson, Pittsburg State University, spoke to participants after lunch about enhancing memory throughout life. He taught attendees key skills to use to enhance their memories in order to remember things like names, errands and things to get at the store.

In addition, about 30 local service providers were set up in a vendor area to provide information on their services. They also provided door prizes for attendees and helped lead breakout sessions for participants. Attendees were able to ask questions, pick up resource materials and learn about services in the area that can help them stay healthy and active in their local communities. It was a great event for all who attended, organizers said.

Nancy Schuster, Frontier District Extension, and Peggy Tucker, Frontier District Extension Volunteer, welcome attendees to the event at the registration table and direct them to the vendor booths set up for morning and afternoon visits.

Networking: The 'who you know' of business

Maybe you're brand new in business; maybe you're a veteran who's looking for a way to boost your sales. No matter your level of experience you either know or will soon find out how valuable networking is to generating sales and business revenues.

It's a "business hip" term that deserves some dissecting, so let's take "networking" apart and see how it works.

First, why network? Very simple. We network to make positive personal impressions on prospective customers or on others who might refer us to prospective customers. It's backslapping, flesh-pressing, good-ole-boy socializing in true capitalist tradition; because like it or not, "face-to-face" helps you sell stuff.

Unfortunately some business people eschew networking because they don't see themselves as "social" people. True, for some people it's hard to come out of your shell. But if you're going to be in business, you'd better find a way. If you don't network in some form or fashion, you're cutting yourself off from what is probably the most direct and primary source of sales.

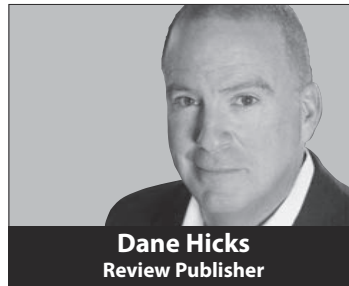

Here are a couple of tips to make networking more comfortable and effective.

1) Target yourself to networks that can impact your business. If you have a custom olive oil shop, you probably wouldn't want to network with the local dirt track racing group in town. Pick a bridge club or instructors of cooking classes or other local shops frequented by women customers.

2) Don't forget to chat up the other nearby businesses in your community or area. You should get to know these folks and they should get to know you so you can both feel comfortable cross-promoting each other. Also remember local civic clubs, library groups, etc., who are always looking for information programs.

3) Always be ready. Carry business cards with you - enough to give away two each time you have the opportunity; one for the contact and one

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks

he/she can pass along to anyone else who might use your service. Have your "elevator speech" memorized or at least outlined in your mind - the long and the short of who you are, what you do and what makes you special, which you can relay in a couple of sentences.

4) The secret to being comfortable making chit chat is always to ask questions. Show some interest in the person you're talking with and ask them about their business, line of work, hobby, interests, etc. People love to talk about themselves, and it gives them the chance to segue into asking about you. If they don't ask (some people are too interested in talking about themselves), look for an opportunity to insert your info into the conversation.

5) Don't forget to network online as well. Find your opportunities in forums or blogs, Twitter and other places your customers hang out or ask questions you can help with.

6) Follow up immediately on your contacts. If you swap business cards with a good prospect shoot him/her an email the next day with an article or tip pertaining to their business or interest (Google their business or service to find one) and to confirm your line of communication.

Networking skills are vital to marketing yourself and generating sales. With just a little effort, face-to-face can really help you sell stuff.

Jones files to keep 5th District House seat

TOPEKA - Kevin Jones of Wellsville Kansas filed Tuesday to run for the Kansas House of Representatives surrounded by his wife and 7 children. "I believe one of the greatest acts that we can do on this earth is to serve one another, and it has been my pleasure to serve the people of Kansas as the 5th District Representative."

Jones will be running for a third term and explained that although much has been done for jobs, 2nd Amendment rights, and the unborn, "We must continue to focus on family, protecting our state sovereignty, and rebuilding the integrity and reputation of our mental health system."

Jones first filed for state office in 2012 and has been elected twice for service by the 5th District. He and his family returned to his hometown after a deployment with 1st Special Forces Group in Tacoma Washington. He is a graduate of Kansas University as well as Johnson County Community College and Southwestern Christian University. Besides raising a specialty crop at Wellsberry Farm and running a small eCommerce business, Kevin currently serves on the USD 289 school board, the Franklin County Planning Commission, and Legion Post 194.

Former state senator Walker to challenge Jones

OSAWATOMIE - Democrat Doug Walker filed May 16 to run for the Kansas House against incumbent Rep. Kevin Jones in the 5th House District. Walked previously served in the Kansas Senate from 1989 to 1996.

"Our community has suffered under the destructive policies of Gov. Brownback and Rep. Jones," Walker said. "My candidacy gives hope to all those who want to stop the erosion of our Kansas values; values such as quality schools, well maintained roads, a tax structure that is fair and balanced, and providing the best social services, including mental health care."

Walker, who taught at Osawatomie and Paola high schools for more than two decades, said he understands the importance of education. If elected, Walker indicated he would fight to stop the attacks on our schools and teachers that have persisted under Gov. Brownback and Rep. Jones.

Walker

"When the state legislature fails to adequately fund our schools, local school boards must raise property taxes just to stay even," Walker said. "I will be a strong advocate for adequately funding our schools at the state level, which in turn helps keep local property taxes down. I will also support restoring the rights teachers have lost and oppose any further attacks."

Walker served on the Osawatomie State Hospital Citizens Advisory Board for several years and said he is disturbed the erosion of the hospital under Governor Brownback's leadership.

Walker will be a forceful advocate for the hospital and its patients.

"Rep. Jones sat idly by as the quality of care declined at Osawatomie State Hospital, putting patients and employees at risk and ultimately leading to Medicaid decertification" Walker said. "I understand how vitally important the hospital is, not only to the economy of this area, but to the treatment of the mentally ill in Kansas. I will do everything in my power to stop the privatization of the hospital and return it to the premiere treatment facility it once was."

Walker said he takes a pragmatic approach to governing. "You cannot reelect the people who got us into this mess and expect change. I am driven not by ideology, but by what works. I will do what is necessary to improve the state of Kansas, and that starts with listening to the concerns of the citizens of the 5th district."

81-year-old wedding dress to be presented to Richmond Museum

After nearly 81 years of traveling, a wedding gown will return home to stay on June 1st when the grandchildren of Everett and Ruth (Spencer) Atchison will present their mother's wedding dress to the Richmond Community Museum, 119 E. Central Ave. The public is invited to this time of nostalgia and visiting to start at 1 o'clock, Mary Tooley, Museum president, said.

Mildred Atchison, daughter of Everett and Ruth, was married to Clarence Spong at her parents house on N. Ransom Street in Richmond on July 15th, 1935. Mildred and Clarence met while students at Ottawa University.

Since then the wedding dress has been in its box in various locations, first with the bride, and then with Virginia Reid, daughter of Mildred and Clarence. Reid, who is coming from Georgetown, TX, will be joined by her brother, Ken Spong, of Overland Park, for the afternoon of sharing memories about their parents and grandparents and presentation of the wedding gown.

Atchison Drug Store was on Richmond's main street from 1905 until 1945. It was owned by four different families after that, the last ones being Merritt and Roannah McDonald. Then the building was used for a laundromat for some years but was demolished in 1996, Barry Rockers said.

History of the Atchison family and drug store is told in photographs and news clippings in a display prepared by Charlie Prue at the Museum.

Another new display this year is artifacts from Fairview School, two miles south of Richmond at the Strobel Farm intersection. The school was built in 1870 and used until W. Scipio School was built in 1905. Henry Roeckers located many artifacts at the old school's location and these were given to the Museum by land owner Leland Kueser.

The Richmond Community Museum is open each Saturday and Sunday, 1-4 p.m., from Memorial Day through Labor Day. There is no admission charge but donations are appreciated.

The beginning of the church

In Acts chapter 2 we read of the coming of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. Pentecost is the fiftieth day after the Sabbath of the Passover week. All of the apostles and probably some of the other followers of Jesus were all together. A sound like a mighty rushing wind filled the entire house where they were sitting. In Acts 2:4 we read as follows; "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance."

The coming of the Holy Spirit is the fulfillment of Jesus' promise in Acts 1:8; "But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you, and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria and to the end of the earth." The blowing of this mighty rushing wind was a sign that the Holy Spirit had begun to exercise control over the lives of the apostles. The localized ministry of Jesus was about to become a worldwide ministry.

Peter preached the first sermon at Pentecost. Within this sermon Peter says, "This Jesus, delivered up according to the definite plan and foreknowledge of God, you crucified and killed by the hands of lawless men. God raised him up, loosing the pangs of death, because it was not possible for him to be held by it." Peter made it plain the Jews could not pass their guilt to the Romans; they had asked the Romans to crucify Jesus. As a result of this and other events the persecution of the believers began in earnest. This set in motion the means for spreading the gospel which Jesus had referred to in Acts 1:8. The apostles and believers scattered to protect themselves from arrest by the Jewish authority.

In essence this movement, which ultimately turns out to be the church, had jumped the reservation. The hope the Jewish authority had held when Christ was crucified, to end what they perceived was an attack on the established Jewish beliefs, was now gone. In the Old Testament the Holy Spirit was the agent for the fulfillment of prophecies. In the New Testament we see the Holy Spirit as an active presence among the people of God inspiring prophets and workers in order to work his, (God's) will on earth.

ties that will build on things they achieved last year as they prepare for next year's season. One thing missing from that list, is the most important activity they do at school each day-reading and writing. To repeat a well-known and used phrase "reading is fundamental." My challenge to all Crest students is to read a minimum of one book or novel over the summer and write in a journal at least two times weekly. We don't care what you read or what you write, just do them both. Why is this important? These are two skills everyone will need the rest of their lives. Summer is a time you can read and write what you want. There will be no grades just the satisfaction that you did something academic that will have a positive impact on you. I hope all of our students choose to reflect once school is done for another year, but more importantly that they work hard to build some reflective writing. A good educational quote is: "The only place success comes before work is in the dictionary". -Vince Lombard

Library
The regular meeting of the Colony Library Board was held May 17. The SEKLS Annual meeting will be in Iola on June 3. A few board members hope to attend. A gift was purchased for Charlotte Wallace. She served many years on the library board.

Books added in April: "Free Winds Blow West" by L P Holmes, "The Poacher's Daughter" by Michael Zimmer, "The Whiskey Traders" by Wade Everett, "The Savage Hill" by D B Newton, "Five Easy Theses: Commonsense Solution To America's Greatest Economic Challenges" by James M Stone, and "Booking Along Since '66: A History of the Southeast Kansas Library System" by Roger Carswell.

Lions
Twelve members answered roll call at the May 4 meeting. President Sue Colgin conducted the meeting, Kenton King read the treasurer's report. Members have collected 300 pair of glasses this year. President suggested we hold them until 1,000 pair are collected before presenting them to Lion Terry Weldin, Burlington. Gene Anderson stated that some of the medical equipment has been returned. None of the equipment is marked. It was decided to label the equipment when loaned so it could be returned. Al Richardson will print some test labels using DeDe McMullen's phone number.

A discussion was held on members who do not attend the meetings. Several suggestions were proposed on encouraging these members to attend. It was suggested hosting a picnic to help with attendance and also with new members. President Sue presented Silver Centennial Awards to Gene Anderson and Ron McMullen in recognition of their efforts to recruit new members. DeDe McMullen stated she was contacted by Tim Dietrich about using a couple of picnic tables. Members agreed to let them use the tables. Butch Lytle inquired about the status of the saw. Gene Anderson will pick it up from Kenton King and take to Steven Weatherman.

The drawing was held for the Henry Golden Boy rifle. The rifle was won by Kyle Griffith. The next meeting will be June 1 at 7 p.m..

Around Town
Sympathy is expressed to Paul and Cathy Stephens at the sudden death of her father, Richard Crabtree, 80, who was killed in a highway accident May 18. He will be missed by many. He always led the annual Colony Day parade, annual Christmas parade and served in the annual Memorial Service at the Colony Cemetery. Graveside services were held Monday, May 23 at the LeRoy Cemetery.

They returned to Colony May 21 and Craig to Hot Springs the following day. Mark Luedke and his mother, Allene, decorated at cemeteries near Polo and Lawson, Mo on May 22.

Summer Food Program will feed kids for free

With summer right around the corner, it's time to think about keeping children eating healthy while school is out. ECKAN provides free meals to children during the summer.

This summer, meals will be served at the Ray Meyer Gym, 305 N. Oak, Garnett, Kansas from May 31st-July 29th. 2016, Monday - Friday, 12:00 noon-12:30pm. There are no income requirements or registration. Any child age 18 or under may come to eat. All children are welcome and encouraged to participate.

The Garnett Ministerial Association, USD #365 and Mid-America Nutrition Program are working in cooperation with ECKAN to provide this program for young people.

The purpose of the program is to ensure children receive adequate nutrition during the month of June when school lunches are not available, and children are sometimes caring for themselves while parents work. The program is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture through the Kansas

Department of Education. Mid-American Nutrition Program will provide the meals. Meal patterns are based on the Food Guide Pyramid and requirements of U.S.D.A.
