Wind farm opponents, supporters speak on proposed zoning change

Wind farm opponents outnumber supporters 10-1 at recent meeting

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Janet Stegner has come home. She returned to her family farm after 40 years away. Her father poured his sweat and tears into the place, and she wants to pass the property to her children some day.

When she does, she hopes the land won't be surrounded by windmills.

"To me, it's not about the money," Stegner said. "It's about the inheritance for my children. I don't want a wind farm for an inheritance."

Stegner was among more than 80 people who attended an Anderson County planning and zoning board meeting Monday, Nov. 21, to talk about a proposed zoning amendment that effectively would ban wind farms from operating in the county. All but about six people in the audience stood at one point to show they were opposed to wind farms. They want the board to amend the zoning rules and prohibit construction of any wind farms in the county, similar to regulations adopted in Wabaunsee County, to prevent wind farm development there. Anderson County Review publisher Dane Hicks, who opposes wind power, filed the application for the amendment last month.

If the zoning board wants to amend the regulations, Anderson County Commissioners still need to consider their recommendation and decide whether they agree.

If the board doesn't change the regulations, wind farms will continue to be weighed on a case-by-case basis. Current zoning rules allow windmills to be constructed using a special use permit.

SEE WINDMILL ON PAGE 2A

Wind farm opponent Ruth Theis tells a room full of people she would not have moved to Anderson County if a windmill operation was located near her property. Theis echoed the sentiments of several others who want the county to change its zoning regulations to effectively block future construction of a wind farm. A handful of people who support bringing a wind farm to the county also spoke about the reasons they believe the zoning board should not change its rules on wind farms. The meeting took place Monday, Nov. 21, at the Anderson County Community Building. The zoning board said it would not make a decision for at least a few months.

City answers trout questions

KDWP now stocks Crystal Lake as part of city fishing program

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - It's trout season. Trout have been stocked at Crystal Lake (commonly known as the "South Lake") in Garnett, with another shipment expected to arrive

Wednesday and another Feb. 8.

City leaders last week offered an update on the city's trout program, after concerns from some local fishermen that the program was abandoned or significantly changed.

Some changes to the program have been made, City Manager Joyce Martin said. The fish now are provided by the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks, and because of that the city no longer "tags" the fish nor offers prizes. She brought up the topic in order to clear any misconceptions.

"Some fishermen are upset at the size of the fish. They're too small," she said.

Despite a misconception that trout must be between 10-15 inches, there is no requirement about the size

City cuts power after homeowner refuses to comply with orders

GARNETT - If you ignore warnings from city officials and your power is shut off, don't expect the city to pick up the tab when your food goes bad.

That's the lesson city officials sent to a man who ignored repeated requests to fix his home to the city's satisfaction.

Chris Kanawyer, who recently ran for a seat on the city commission but picked up the lowest votes out of four candidates, asked the city to reimburse him for food lost when his power was turned off after failing to complete home remodeling repairs as required by fire and building officials.

The problems began early in 2016 when Garnett Fire

Holiday homes tour adds extra magic touch

Four homes, church, library part of group's 30th celebration event

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The holidays are a magical time of year, and the Friends of the Garnett Public Library plan to spread that magic around with an expanded list of homes on its traditional "Holiday Homes Tour." The expanded tour is in honor of the celebration of 30 years of the Friends of the Library organization.

This year's tour will be from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4. The library's theme is "Embrace the Magic of Christmas," although each stop along the tour route has its own unique theme.

The tour features stops at four festive homes, a church and the library. Each home is decorated for the holiday season. Guests can visit the homes to get a personal view of how others decorate and celebrate.

Tickets are $8 in advance at the Garnett Public Library, 125 W. Fourth Ave., Garnett. Tickets will be available for $10 each the day of the tour and can be bought at the library. Each ticket will have a suggested order to visit the stops on the tour.

Each year, a church is chosen to have a special program. This year's church, the First Baptist Church at 417 S. Walnut St., features a program called "Because of Bethlehem," from 1 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The library will offer entertainment and refreshments from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Homes on the tour and their theme include:

WINDMILL...

Zoning board chairman Grant Corley said a decision should not be expected soon, estimating it could be as early as January or February before the board researches the matter and finishes deliberations.

"We are looking into this and we want to do what is best for the county," Corley said.

The move comes after a year-long effort by Houston, Texas-based Calpine Corporation to lease ground in eastern Anderson County for some 100 windmill sites. But company officials have not pursued the project in recent months, have not responded to media calls, and some lease holders say they've not heard from the company either.

Even though they were outnumbered more than 10-1 and the Calpine project may be dead in the water, wind farm supporters also made their pitches to the zoning board. They argued in favor of the economic potential of a wind farm, the need for "green energy" alternatives and the rights of landowners to harvest the wind over their properties.

"Some 300 or so people want to change the laws so our neighbors can't participate in (wind farm development)," Travis Rockers, a wind farm supporter, argued. "You really need to take a look at our community and what this could do. ... If we shut doors like this, we've completely taken ourselves out of the game."

Jack Hiner argued that he left the area for a while in order to make a better living, and there is little industry or economic growth in Anderson County. A wind farm would allow the county to compete with others across the state for alternative energy source jobs.

"The future is not in fossil fuels. The future is in green energy," Hiner said. "We've got to start the ball rolling."

But one argument against the wind farms became a recurring theme: "I wouldn't have moved here if a wind farm existed." Again and again, rural residents told stories like Stegner's. Following is a brief sample of a few of them:

Darren Johnston: "I moved to the country for the country."

Ruth Theis: "We would not have done it (moved here)."

Greg Perry: "I moved here last year. ... I would not have moved here."

Mike Hook: "I moved here to retire, not to look at windmills."

Discussion on the matter lasted about an hour and a half, with the board giving plenty of opportunity for people to speak for or against the proposal. Much of the discussion centered on the pros and cons of wind farms and wind energy in general instead of the application for the amendment. Supporters Jim and LouAnn Shmidl, who were not present, submitted a three page letter in favor. Another supporter, Omer Rockers, gave zoning board members stacks of papers he said included research on the issue.

A multitude of issues were brought up, including such factors as the differences and similarities with oil leases; what happens if the company that builds the wind farm abandons the project; whether the value of the land increases or decreases with windmill construction; global warming; landowner rights; the history of wind farms in other places; the impact of government subsidies to help support wind farm construction and purchase wind power; the aesthetic value of the landscape with or without windmills; the potential economic benefit to the county from the wind farm company in the form of an annual payment to the county in lieu of paying taxes; and other matters.

Anderson County Counselor James Campbell compared the wind farm controversy to rock quarries. Rock quarries, he said, provide many benefits to governing bodies but neighbors typically don't want them nearby. Governments must weigh the costs and benefits, he said, which is difficult to do on wind farms because it's impossible to put a value on the aesthetics of the landscape.

Campbell also discussed the process for amending the zoning regulations, and said they could be adapted as necessary in the future. He said if the state or federal government takes over the issue, such as the Kansas Corporation Commission did with oil leases, es, the county's ability to control wind farm development would be limited.

He also assured those in attendance that no wind farm proposal has been presented to the county at this time. That came in response to concerns from some that Calpine could retaliate and sue if the county changed its rules.

Calpine officials have not returned calls for several months, leading some to speculate they may have abandoned their plans. Another separate plan for wind farm development in the county started by a Lenexa company about 10 years ago quickly fizzled out.

"Why don't you let sleeping dogs lie?" Hiner asked at one point. "If they hear we've changed the laws, they'll come after us. ... I think this is a knee-jerk situation. ... The local objections are pretty bogus because the game's already started and it's in play. Now you're going to change the rules of the game?"

She married Gene Wallace on February 12, 1989 at Garnett.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Hershyl and Norma Ballard; two brothers, Charles "Skipper" Boyd and Terry Ballard.

Survivors include her husband, Gene Wallace, of the home; daughter, Natasha Weaver of Paola; son, Ashton Wallace of Colony; three grandchildren, Sebasteian, Patrick, and Hershyl Weaver; two brothers, Tom Ballard of Madison; Roy Ballard of Madison; one sister, Lucinda Witt of Iola, Kansas.

The family will have a memorial service at a later date.

MEYERS

JANUARY 5, 1926-NOVEMBER 22, 2016

Opal Mae Meyers, age 90, of Garnett, Kansas, passed away on Tuesday, November 22, 2016, at Eastar Hospital in Muskogee, Oklahoma.

She was born on January 5, 1926, in Osawatomie, Kansas, the daughter of Frank and Ethel (Bodenhamer) Bryan.

Opal attended Earnest Schools and then Garnett High School, graduating in 1943. She taught one year at Springfield School, then went to work in Kansas City at the North American Bomber Plant #7, where she worked as a riveter.

After that, she worked in the Farmer's Insurance Office until her marriage to her beloved sweetheart, Earl A. Meyers on January 4, 1946, in Garnett, Kansas. This union produced five children; Sheryl Lavonne, Terry Lynn, Earl Bryan, Laurel Ann and Cara Sue.

During her life, she served in the PTA in several capacities, including one year as president. She also volunteered as a campfire leader and a Den Mother for the scouts. She taught Sunday School at the First Christian Church up until just a year or so ago. She has been a member of FCC for over 60 years since 1948. Opal also worked in the office of the Anderson County Treasurer, and then as the County Treasurer itself for 40 years.

She did her best to be a loving wife, mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother. She was a wonderful friend to many people and she did her best to always be there if someone needed something. Many have loving memories that will last forever. She will be missed but always remembered by her family and friends.

Opal was preceded in death by her parents, Frank and Ethel Bryan; her husband, Earl A. Meyers; her daughter, Laurel Ann Wichman; and sons-in-law, Don Wichman and D.A. Holcomb.

She is survived by four children; Sharyl Holcomb of San Marcos, California; Terry Smelser and husband Gary of Lancaster, Ohio; Earl B. Meyers and wife Sue of El Dorado, Kansas; and Cara Sharpe and husband Michael of Fort Gibson, Oklahoma; ten grandchildren, and twenty-six great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 1:00 p.m. on Thursday, December 1, 2016, at the First Christian Church in Garnett, Kansas. Burial will follow in the Garnett Cemetery. Family will greet friends from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday evening at the Feuerborn Family Funeral Service Chapel in Garnett. Memorial contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society and left in care of the funeral home. # Castro Day at Hampshire College

What an irony that the U.S. flag controversy at the kooky, leftist Hampshire College in Massachusetts should come so close to the death of Cuba's Fidel Castro – a guy they idolize but who wasn't so hip to such civil protest and free expression.

Castro reached room temperature Friday night, an apt Thanksgiving Day-after gift to both expatriate Cubans living in the U.S. and to the free world in general, but apparently not to folks who adored his spunky personality and the mass graves of his countrymen. Revolutionary communists and socialists the world over, and Canada, got all teary-eyed in their eulogies for the dictator, extolling him as a great leader and man of the people... at least of those he didn't have executed.

But in lauding the now cremated communist and recounting with romantic vigor how he led a 1959 people's coup against Fulgencio Batista, the previous thug dictator of Cuba, network news shows and other international fans are shying away from displaying any recent video of the country in order to avoid a display of just how poor and impoverished this great revolution left the island nation. Nearly 50 years of communism and friendship with the great socialist despots of the world never lifted the Cuban people out of abject poverty as they struggled against both their own country's ineffective economic management and U.S.-backed sanctions.

Nor do these hero-makers spend much time focusing on human rights topics under Castro's regime. He executed thousands or even tens of thousands of political enemies after the revolution (no one really knows because most of the witnesses are dead), and choked off dissent with extensive and brutal internal spy networks and police forces. There were even spy networks to keep an eye on the spy networks.

The summation of Castro, then, makes it all the more interesting that hippie communes masquerading as accredited colleges like Hampshire College embrace leftist ideals, yet expect to enjoy civil disobedience like burning the U.S. flag and banning it from campus.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

Hampshire College and a handful of other "alternative" education institutions are the very womb of western liberalism and Amero-socialism – one of those safe-space college campuses which most despise and condemn American life while they indulge in the greatest bounty America has to offer.

Enrollment is only about 1,500 undergrads. Forget the engineering degree or business major; Hampshire produces deep thinkers for deep thinking jobs funded by governments and charities – usually other classrooms or "think tanks" that draft anti-American policy. Fifty-six percent of its graduates have at least one graduate degree. Most of them – wait for it – doctorates in history. Keep in mind, these are the people and ideologies that most regale the now crispy Castro.

So it was Hampshire which lowered its flags to half-mast in protest of Donald Trump's election, culminating in a Veterans' Day flag burning on campus. Administration then took down all U.S. flags, saying they were a "disruptive symbol," prompting a resulting counter-protest on Sunday of more than 1,000 people, including veterans, demanding the flags be re-hoisted at Hampshire.

One must wonder, in a leftist Nirvana like the one Castro built and which so closely aligns in theory with the ideology pervasive among American leftists like those of Hampshire, how the burning of a Cuban flag would have been received at a college in that nation – and whether anyone would have lived to tell the tale?

I greatly enjoyed the Garnett Christmas Parade and I want to say thanks to all the people, businesses and organizations that were in the parade. I have a couple of suggestions. With all the work people put into their floats and their participation I think it should be a longer event. Maybe park the floats downtown for a while after the parade instead of taking them away and let people get a closer look. Maybe have some activities or vendors or games downtown before and after the parade. Congratulations again on making it a special evening, I just wish it would last longer.

was treated and released. Clemmons apparently was driving Blackwell's car and they were on the way to visit family for Thanksgiving, according to reports from family and friends on Facebook. Go Fund Me accounts were set up for the Clemmons family and for Blackwell, who posted a link to the Clemmons family's page that said, "This family is in more need than (sic) me."

The driver of the bus, Heather Dee Jones, age 35 of Humboldt, also was injured and treated at Anderson County Hospital.

None of the children on the bus were seriously injured. The bus was carrying three other adults and 36 children, all fourth graders at Lincoln Elementary School in Iola. Two other buses ahead of the wreck came back and picked up the students. The students were returning from a field trip to a courthouse in Kansas City to watch a naturalization ceremony.

Officials at the Iola school district and NCCC offered counseling services for students when they returned to classes Monday, Nov. 21.

"Our entire NCCC family is mourning the loss of Christopher in this tragic accident," Mike Saddler of the NCCC Athletic Department said in a statement to the Chanute Tribune. "Our thoughts and prayers are with his family and friends in this difficult time."

The Muslim registry that wasn't

The first thing to know about Donald Trump's alleged proposal for a Muslim registry is that it isn't a Muslim registry. This has been lost in a freak-out that has some brave souls already promising acts of civil disobedience to disrupt and overwhelm the prospective registry.

The source of the fracas is a comment from Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach, a Trump immigration adviser and (excellent) candidate for Homeland Secretary director, to Reuters. Kobach noted that the administration might reinstate a Bush-era program tracking visitors to the U.S. from countries with active terrorist threats. This suggestion was spun into a first step toward herding our Muslim neighbors into internment camps.

Kobach was referring to the National Security Entry-Exit Registration System, or NSEERS, which placed special requirements on adult male visitors from countries like Saudi Arabia. Implemented after Sept. 11 -- when, you might recall, adult male visitors from Saudi Arabia toppled the World Trade Center -- it collected fingerprints and photographs when visitors from the select countries arrived and required them to check in periodically to confirm that they were abiding by the terms of their visas.

It also required that certain individuals from these countries who were already here go through a process of "special registration," including an interview with immigration officials.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

This is a far cry from Franklin D. Roosevelt's notorious Executive Order 9066 setting in motion the Japanese internment of World War II.

It is said that the Bush program didn't lead to the prosecution of any terrorists. According to the Migration Policy Institute, "The New York Times reported in 2003 that, out of roughly 85,000 individuals registered through the NSEERS program in 2002 and 2003, just 11 were found to have ties to terrorism."

Although tracking down anyone here who has ties to terrorism isn't necessarily something to sniff at, the Bush program proved best-suited to identifying visa overstayers. Of the 85,000 initial registrants, nearly 14,000 were put into removal proceedings. For the critics, this is an indictment.

But why shouldn't it be easier to deport visa-overstayers, who constitute about half of the population of illegal immigrants? If we are serious about our immigration rules, our approach to visa-overstayers from all countries should be much more restrictive and hardheaded.

The requirements of the Bush program were watered down over time until it was suspended by the Obama administration in 2011. But the program wasn't illegal or unconstitutional (the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in its favor). Nor was it immoral -- foreign visitors should be subject to any reasonable strictures we impose in exchange for the privilege of coming here.

That the so-called Muslim registry is now a thing, a subject of high dudgeon and hot debate, is testament to how the same media that complains about "fake news" is committed to manufacturing and driving its own narratives only loosely connected to reality. Whether the Trump administration revives a version of the Bush program or not, a similar campaign of obloquy will be directed at all of its immigration enforcement measures. It will have to pursue its agenda against a backdrop of media hostility and constant misinformation.

Budget shortfall will create political scrap

OK, it's starting to get interesting now, this $345 million budget shortfall for the nearly half-over Kansas Fiscal Year 2017.

So far, it's the governor reminding the Legislature and anyone else who will listen that assembling and maintaining the budget is the job of the Kansas Legislature. But Senate President Susan Wagle, R-Wichita, is telling the governor that he really ought to use his executive power to make budget cuts now, not leave the job to the incoming new Legislature.

Hmmm...

Wagle is expected to be re-elected Senate President by the GOP caucus of the upper chamber on Dec. 5. Current House Speaker Ray Merrick, R-Stilwell, didn't seek re-election to the House. So, when the session starts Jan. 9 we have a governor with two years left on his term saying he'll come up with something after Jan. 9 and the presumptive leader of the Senate for the next four years saying fix it now.

Sound like a happy little discourse? And while there isn't a designated House Speaker yet, in the minutes after the House GOP Caucus selects its leader on Dec. 5, don't look for the new Speaker to side with Brownback.

Now, all of this makes for an interesting little political scrap, except that whenever and whatever cuts are made by the governor, or the Legislature if he hangs back and just makes a "suggestion," we still live here.

That means that the cuts for the remainder of this fiscal year are going to have to be

STATE COMMENTARY

sharp, and some of us Kansans are going to feel them and some of us aren't.

Practically, if you receive little or nothing from the state in the way of services—say, Medicaid (KanCare) or welfare or special assistance for a child or grandchild in public schools, or maybe even just making sure that the guy fishing in the next boat over is using a hook and not a net, you've got little to lose. Just sit back and watch what happens to those other folks.

But if you are depending on the state for welfare, for school and health care for your children or grandchildren, or your neighbors, or even penciling out just how you're going to pay tuition at a state university...well, this isn't just something to watch like Dancing with the Stars.

The budget is already tight; there is a

Kansas Supreme Court decision on its way that might require the state to spend more money on public education. The roads? Well, that's been a major source of money for the rest of state government and that well is about dry.

So, while you're reading about the budget shortfall—and wondering whether there are income or property or sales tax increases in your future—remember that it's going to be a just-elected or re-elected Legislature that is likely going to have to do the heavy lifting. A majority or at least a plurality of you voted for those folks who are going to be inconveniencing you.

The scuffle is over whether the governor is going to take direct action to solve things or whether he's going to make suggestions and watch the Legislature just like the rest of us.

So get ready, and remember that much of what we know about state government and its services and protections for us are going to change dramatically in the next couple months.

And...wonder just what those candidates were thinking last spring, when they decided that making law and managing the state is really what they wanted to do...

Who was Melvin Purvis?

In my last week's paper column, I wrote about finding a Melvin Purvis Badge at the KAA Fall Fling in Council Grove, KS. Exactly who was Melvin Purvis? Melvin Horace Purvis II was an American law enforcement official and Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) agent. He was given the nickname "Little Mel" because of his short stature. He is noted for leading the man-hunts that tracked such outlaws as Baby Faced Nelson, Pretty Boy Floyd and John Dillinger.

Purvis was born in Timmonsville, South Carolina, to Melvin Horace Purvis Sr. (1869-1938), a tobacco farmer and businessman, and Janie Elizabeth (née Mims 1874-1927) as the fifth of eight siblings. Purvis was a well educated man, and known to be a crack shot. He received his law degree from the University of South Carolina School of Law and had a brief career as a lawyer. Purvis was a member of the Kappa Alpha Order while attending South Carolina. He joined the FBI in 1927 and headed the Division of Investigation offices in Birmingham, Oklahoma City and Cincinnati. In 1932, he was placed in charge of the Chicago Office by Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover. Purvis captured more public enemies than any other Agent in FBI history, a record that still stands. Purvis resigned from the FBI in 1935 and afterward practiced law. In 1937, he became engaged to actress Janice Jarrett, but they never married. He later married Marie Roseanne Wilcox and they had three sons.

In 1936, Purvis published a memoir of his years as an investigator with the Bureau, entitled American Agent.

Purvis served in the U.S. Army as an intelligence officer during World War II, reaching the rank of Colonel. He assisted with compiling evidence against Nazi leaders in the Nuremberg trials.

On February 29, 1960, while at home in Florence, South Carolina, Purvis died from a gunshot wound to the head fired from the pistol given to him by fellow agents when he resigned from the FBI. The FBI investigated his death and declared it a suicide, although the official coroner's report did not label the cause of death as such. A later investigation suggested that "Little Mel" may have shot himself accidentally while trying to extract a tracer bullet jammed in the pistol. Melvin Purvis II was 56 years old.

Garnett City Manager Joyce Martin presents a plaque of recognition to Pastor Ron Jones and his wife, Susie, for their work to help city residents with programs like the monthly Harvester's Food Distribution and summer youth food program. Jones, the pastor at the First Baptist Church in Garnett, and his wife are leaving the community in December. Martin estimated that Jones' efforts helped about 3,000 people during the past three years.

Busyness or godliness?

"As Jesus and his disciples were on their way, he came to a village where a woman named Martha opened her home to him. She had a sister called Mary, who sat at the Lord's feet listening to what he said. But Martha was distracted by all the distractions that had to be made. She came to Jesus and asked, 'Lord don't you care that my sister has left me to do the work by myself? Tell her to help me!'" (Luke 10:38-40)

"Martha, Martha," the Lord answered, "you are worried and upset about many things, but only one thing is needed. Mary has chosen what is better, and it will not be taken away from her." (Luke 10:41-42) Martha was the sister of Mary and Lazarus and Jesus visited their home often. In John 11:3 the sisters send word to Jesus that Lazarus was sick. From this we can believe that Jesus was familiar with the family. Jesus is just as familiar with our families. He knows each of our personalities and habits and sends into each of our lives trials and tasks to grow us in the faith. What we do with each of these events determines whether we are a Martha or a Mary. Over the course of a day many things can upset us, our job, our finances, our family, and even other people. Certainly there are situations that arise where we all feel like Martha did. We feel overwhelmed and this is normal. Martha wanted everything to be perfect but Jesus reveals to her that such cannot be the case. We can choose to try and achieve that but when we ultimately fail we will become frustrated as Martha did. When this happens we often look for someone else to blame for our failure. In this case it was Mary. Jesus lovingly points out to Martha that she is striving for what she cannot achieve while Mary is achieving what she cannot lose. It is easy for us to fill our lives with busyness. For some it is even a way not to dwell on their problems. When this happens we lose track of what is important. We worry and burden ourselves with things that are only valuable to us never considering God in our plans. When we wear down from this busyness God has given us a scripture to fall back on. "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." (Matthew 11:28-30) Is this not better?

By David Bilderback

Grab passersby with window displays

If you're in retail you already know the benefits of traffic - the idea of walking eyeballs past your store. If you're not creating cool window displays to draw in those eyeballs you're selling yourself, your business and your revenues short.

For the 3-4 steps it takes someone to pass by your store on the sidewalk, you have a captive audience. Nearly half will look at your window anyway, older shoppers (with more money) are less likely to have their noses stuck in their smartphones, and half again more will look if they see someone else looking. Use these tips to get them off the sidewalk and into the store:

- 1) Think distance. Is the traffic by your store walkers or drivers? If most is drive-by, your displays have to be bigger and simpler for the shorter time frame. Walk-by traffic has more time to see smaller items with more information.
- 2) Make a plan and change

HOW TO SELL STUFF

your window displays at least every month or two. Look at your sales, the seasons, holidays, etc., and map out on a calendar when you'll change your windows and jot some ideas you might use. That way you have notes to go back to if you get an "ah ha" later and want to revise.

- 3) Think eye-level. Go outside to your window and stick a piece of tape to it at the eye-level of the average customer, then go inside and make the visual focus of your display at that plane.
- 4) Bright, bold colors for display stands holding products, more subtle colors for backgrounds - but most importantly... contrast the displays and products against the background.

5) The display should tell a story - start out with a theme based on something timely or witty, then add pieces (products, info displays) from your store to finish out the story. Maybe a fake cat's tail sticking out of the nozzle of the vacuum cleaner you're displaying?

6) Big visuals are key. You can shoot photos of your products, your staff, customers enjoying your products, etc., with a digital camera or even your smart phone, then have them blown up to poster sizes at a digital photo center. Mount them on foam core, and you have a cool giant product display to focus smaller photos or items around. Don't forget lighting to highlight focus areas.

7) Where possible use motion. The easiest way is to set up a fan blowing streamers, a pinwheel or a mannequin's hair, etc. You can find electric motors that can be rigged to lighter signage or other parts of the display. With just a little bit of techy know-how you can set up a digital video projector to run your slides or video from a laptop and project onto part of your display. Vikuiti makes a rear projection film you can stick on your windows and project your commercials, product info, slides, etc., directly onto your window, so the whole window becomes a lit-from-behind movie screen to the outside.

8) Keep it clean. Nothing kills a great window display like dust bunnies or dead flies.

Use your advantages and your creativity in your window displays and don't let sales walk right past you.

CITY...

Chief Pat Tate and Building Official Andy Frye told Kanawyer what repairs needed to be made as he was remodeling his home in the 700 block of South Cedar Street, Tate said. Wiring problems, including spliced wires and spliced extension cords, created a fire hazard, Tate said. Certified letters sent to Kanawyer were returned unopened, and multiple house visits to the home were ignored, Tate said.

As a result, Tate ordered the power shut off to the home. It was not restored until the repairs were made. Kanawyer later asked the city to pay for food that spoiled as a result of the disconnected power.

"While it was Pat's decision to shut the power off, had I been in his position I would have shut the power off," Frye said. "There was no sign (Kanawyer) wanted to make any repairs."

Mayor Greg Gwin, who won re-election against Kanawyer and two other candidates, agreed city staff took appropriate action, and denied Kanawyer's request the city pay him for the food losses. He said city staff had an obligation to protect Kanawyer and his neighbors from potential fire hazards.

"We can't allow a fire hazard to continue," Gwin said. "I appreciate the time you guys (Tate and Frye) spend on matters like this and the documentation. It had to be a very lengthy process."

Fellow commissioners agreed. Jody Cole said the documents kept by Tate and Frye made it clear Kanawyer ignored their attempts to work with him on the matter, and Kanawyer failed to itemize his losses as typically required in such a request.

TROUT...

of the fish provided by KDWP. Still, Martin said, city officials plan to ask KDWP to provide bigger fish in the future, if possible.

Previously, the city purchased fish from a vendor. Some fish were tagged, and fishermen could return the tags for prizes.

That program ended a few years ago when the city made an agreement with KDWP.

The state provides fish in an amount equal to the value of KDWP permits sold by the city. The agreement allows the city to provide a guaranteed, consistent amount of trout for its annual trout fishing program at Crystal Lake.

"Since the state has taken over this program for us, they no longer provide tags," Martin told city commissioners during their regular meeting Tuesday, Nov. 22.

Martin assured commissioners that staff observe every KDWP shipment of fish. Two shipments of trout have been received so far this year, with two more planned.

Trout fishing season began Nov. 1 and ends April 15. You must purchase a special trout fishing permit from the city, and have a state fishing license. The daily creel limit is 5 per day.

Chamber Players plan trip to Chicago

The Chamber Players Community Theater has scheduled its latest adult theatre trip for Chicago June 29-July 2, 2017.

The company has taken three theatre & sightseeing trips since 2011 - all to New York City and all by airplane. The theatre board of directors opted to switch things up this year in more ways than one. "I don't think we've ever had completely smooth travel in both directions," said Tom Emerson, Jr., Chamber Players Treasurer, "and the stress caused by travel delays can really sour your trip. So once the board chose Chicago as the destination, we thought we could lessen the travel stress and the expense if we considered traveling by train."

The trip includes 4-fun-filled days of sightseeing, fine dining and quality theatre. The cost is $1125 based on quad occupancy, and includes roundtrip fare via Amtrak, 3 nights hotel accommodations, 3 breakfasts and dinners, admissions to daily activities, 2 Broadway-caliber shows and/or sporting events, and travel within Chicago via private motorcoach.

If you are interested in more information, please call Vicki Markham at 785-448-4644.

The Chamber Players will debut a brand new work by Garnett playwright Gary Ray Stapp in December. "The Gift: 7 Pounds, 3 Ounces" runs Dec. 1-4 and 8-11 as dinner theatre. Tickets are $24 for adults, $20 for K-12 students. Advanced reservations are required and can be made via phone (785-304-1683) or email: ChamberPlayersGarnett@gmail.com.

Garnett Library takes part in Kansas Reads to Preschoolers

The 2016 Kansas Reads to Preschoolers had volunteer readers reading "Bear Sees Colors" at the Garnett Public Library recently.

Kansas Reads to Preschoolers is a statewide reading initiative supporting early childhood literacy and a one-book/one-state intergenerational reading project to highlight the importance of reading to children. This year's chosen book was "Bear Sees Colors" by Karma Wilson & Jane Chapman.

The goal of this project was that every Kansas child from birth to age five, be read to during Kansas Reads to Preschoolers Week, November 14th-18th, 2016. Anderson County volunteers read to over 130 children at 11 daycares and preschools, and The Garnett Public Library, and were able to hand over 100 copies of the book. The library had a "special" story time reading the book and letting children create their own big bear claws made out of paper bags.

There was also a special drawing for a colorful basket of items that went along with the story, including books, crayons, a coloring book, a teddy bear, colorful toys, and a CD of songs by Alan Cunningham. The winner of the basket was Emeri Kueser.

The library could not have done this without the generosity of the sponsors, and the many volunteers that were willing to donate their time reading throughout Garnett during this project.

Sponsors this year's project were: BPW, Chapter Y P.E.O., D.A.R.- Four Winds Chapter, Friends of the Library, Garnett Lions Club, The Optimist Club of Garnett, Rockers Insurance Agency, and Garnett Rotary Club. Thank you for helping us reach new heights during this year's Kansas Reads to Preschoolers project.

Notice to inject saltwater

(Published in The Anderson County Review, Tuesday, November 29, 2016)

BEFORE THE STATE CORPORATION COMMISSION OF THE STATE OF KANSAS
NOTICE OF FILING APPLICATION

RE: Veenker Resources, Inc. - Application for a permit to authorize the injection of saltwater into the Lockwood 36-VRI, and Cooper Richard Frost (CRF) 27A-VRI located in Anderson County, Kansas.

TO: All Oil & Gas Producers, Unleased Mineral Interest Owners, Landowners, and all persons whomsoever concerned.

You, and each of you, are hereby notified that Veenker Resources, Inc. has filed an application to commence the injection of salt water into the Bartlesville formation at the Lockwood 36-VRI located in the W2 SW NW SE of Sec. 32-22S-21E, Anderson County, Kansas. Also into the Bartlesville formation at the Cooper Richard Frost (CRF)27A-VRI, located in the NE SE SE NW of Sec. 32-22S-21E, Anderson County, Kansas. Both with a maximum operating pressure of 750# and a maximum injection rate of 75 bbls per day.

Any persons who object to or protest this application shall be required to file their objections or protest with the Conservation Division of the State Corporation Commission of the State of Kansas within fifteen (15) days from the date of this publication. These protests shall be filed pursuant to Commission regulations and must state specific reasons why the grant of the application may cause waste, violate, correlative rights or pollute the natural resources of the State of Kansas.

All persons interested or concerned shall take notice of the foregoing and shall govern themselves accordingly.
