Kellstadt: Kids will be kids

Retiring ACHS principal reflects on his 40+ year career with USD 365

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - No matter how times change, kids will always be kids. And it's important for educators to find a way to connect with children, especially during the formative years of middle and high school.

That's a primary philosophy that has sustained Kenny Kellstadt through more than 40 years as a high school teacher and administrator with USD 365. Kellstadt is retiring this year, after a career that started with the development of a work study program in the district in 1973 and ended as Anderson County High School principal. He also taught government classes and became assistant high school principal in 1994, and high school principal in 2007.

Through the years, Kellstadt has seen the way technology, especially, has changed the way kids learn and interact. He's seen a shift in the focus on post-secondary education.

Kellstadt

He's seen safety concerns increase after a wave of school shootings. And he's watched kids mature and grow, and become parents and grandparents who brought the next generations of students into the local school system.

But despite all those changes, Kellstadt said, kids are still fundamentally the same. They make mistakes and, hopefully, learn from their errors in judgment. At some point - maybe in high school, maybe after - they grow up to discover a sense of their individual identity.

"Are the kids better when they left (school) than when they came in? That's always our goal, and most of the time it's true," Kellstadt said.

Sheriff: Watch out for IRS scam

Local victim lost $1K after threat of 'arrest' from recurring scam

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Scammers appear to be increasing their efforts to fool people into believing they owe money to IRS.

Anderson County Sheriff Vernon Valentine said last week his office has received six calls within the previous five days about this particular scam. At least one local resident lost $1,000 because of the scam.

The scam works like this: Someone calls and identifies him/herself as a representative of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) or the Department of Revenue or another government organization, and says if you do not send them money today, you will be arrested. "They may even tell you they are headed to your house now, but if you send us the money we can stop them," Valentine said in a press release.

"Folks, do not fall for this." If you really do owe money to the government, you will be notified in writing through the mail, Valentine said. An arrest warrant is not issued in such cases, but a tax warrant may be, he said. It's also possible that if your particular situation requires official, in-person notification, the local sheriff could be sought to assist in recovery of assets.

"In 20 years I have not seen them arrest anyone (for money recovery cases)," Valentine said. "They garnish your tax return and possibly even your wages you receive from an employer."

If someone calls and threatens to have you arrested for not paying taxes, simply hang up the phone, Valentine said.

Emergency workers routed traffic around an accident north of Colony of Friday which claimed the lives of a Baldwin City couple. The driver of the semi involved was injured and taken to Anderson County Hospital.

Two die in U.S. 169 fatality crash

Baldwin City couple perish in semi collision, semi driver injured

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COLONY - A city councilman from Baldwin City and his wife were killed Friday afternoon near colony when their vehicle collided with a semi tractor-trailer unit about a mile north of Colony on U.S. Highway 169.

A report from the Kansas Highway Patrol said Stephen Bauer, 75, and Alison Bauer, 57, of Baldwin City, died when the southbound 2008 Lexus Stephen Bauer was driving crossed the center line and struck a semi unit driven by 27 year-old Zachariah Breen of Wellsville. Breen was taken to Anderson County Hospital with unspecified injuries.

Stephen Bauer ran a home and building inspection service in Baldwin City and served on the local city council since 2015. Alison Bauer was a former Baldwin school board member and a Democrat Party political activist who recently helped lobby against legislation that will allow concealed carry of firearms on college campuses in the state.

Kansas recorded 432 traffic fatalities in 2016, a 22 percent increase from 2015. Officials blame the increase on a combination of increasingly distracted drivers and lower gasoline costs which increased road traffic.

3 file for school, city elections

Two incumbents file to keep seats for USD 365 board, Kincaid

BY VICKIE MOSS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - GARNETT - With just a couple weeks left to file for city and school board elections, only three people so far have made their intentions official.

USD 365 Board of Education members Michael Richards and Sonya Martin have filed to retain their seats. They represent District 1-4 and District 2-5, respectively. Fellow board member Deanna Wolken's seat is up for election, but she has not yet filed.

In Kincaid, Carolyn Whitcomb has filed for a seat.

All cities and school boards in the county will have positions up for election this year. So far, only those three people have filed to run but people often wait until closer to the deadline before they file.

June 1 at noon is the deadline for races that will be up for election Nov. 7, 2017. The cost to file for each office is $20.

Except for a City of Garnett race in November 2016, this will be the first time in decades that cities and school boards will be elected in the fall. Previously, such elections took place in the spring. But turnout for spring elections was low, even dismal at times. The Kansas Legislature in 2015 voted to move spring elections to the fall in hopes of boosting turnout and reducing the costs associated with running the spring elections.

Other positions up for election this year include:

- Garnett city commission, currently held by Mayor Gordon Blackie.

- Mayor and two city council seats in Colony. Melissa Hobbs currently is mayor; the two city council seats up for election are currently filled by Roger Culler and Richard Buckle.

- Other cities including Kincaid, Greeley, Westphalia

SCAM...

Do not send money and do not give out personal information, including your bank account information, date of birth or social security numbers.

The IRS and Department of Revenue already have your personal information and will not ask for it over the phone, Valentine said.

Some scammers use advanced techniques such as providing you with a telephone number they say is the IRS. They will tell you to call the number to verify their attempts to collect money from you are "real." If you call that number, the person who answers will lie and say it's the IRS even though it's really just another scammer, Valentine said. In reality, it's rather simple for a scammer to manipulate caller ID to make it look like a legitimate number, he said.

You can use an Internet search engine such as Google or Bing to look up the legitimate IRS or Department of Revenue telephone numbers. You also can search for the telephone number the scammers gave you; just type the number into the search bar. Most of the time, the number will show up in search results as linked to a scam.

This particular scam has been around for at least a couple of years, Valentine said. It appears to be hitting the country particularly hard right now, as people filed taxes in April and are receiving refunds from the IRS.

The local victim was convinced he or she was about to be arrested, and the family was directed to buy iTunes cards and read the number off the back of the card to the scammer, which they did, Valentine said.

"Folks, again the government does not do business this way," Valentine said. "Think about how you will get proof of payment from a money card. You don't."

"Bottom line is: Law enforcement cannot get your money back for you if this happens to you and the bad guys are not even in this country."

Ceremony will kick off second annual patriotic banner display

The public is invited to a special event on Thursday, May 25, 2017 at 7:00 p.m. on the Anderson County Courthouse lawn, as the City of Garnett will host the Second Annual Garnett Remembers Celebration of Service Ceremony. Please bring lawn chairs.

This is a very special event that honors the individuals represented through the Project: Garnett Remembers, a patriotic pole banner project started in 2016. The third, and perhaps final phase of the project concluded at the end of April with 146 banner honorees. This project has brought together residents and extended family members from across the United States to recognize the selfless sacrifices of these individuals whose faces adorn each banner.

Military men and women who have served the United States Air Force, Army, Army National Guard, Marines and Navy with ties to Garnett and Anderson County are represented on these banners that will proudly fly from prior to Memorial Day weekend through Independence Day (July 4) and through most of July.

Scheduled to perform at the Celebration of Service are the following: Garnett Area Community Band, KC Bettys, patriotic music provided by Everett Cox, appearance from the American Legion Riders and Presentation of Colors by the Jeffery S. Mersman VFW Post 6397 and American Legion Post 48. All 146 men and women will be recognized during this service by name.

The May 25th Celebration of Service is hosted by the City of Garnett. Banner honorees, their family, friends and the community is invited to attend and show support for those who serve and protect our freedom. City, County and State dignitaries have been invited.

The Garnett Remembers patriotic banner project is made possible through the Garnett Community Foundation and city staff, with great emphasis on the work performed by the Garnett Electric Department.

Media hatred defines new politics

I hate peas. Actually, I don't. I actually love peas. But for the sake of the argument I've come to embrace about the bulk of the American media and its hatred of conservatism in general and of President Trump, let's imagine for a minute that I hate peas.

Now, this is America, and I can hate peas if I want. I can hate peas, carrots, blacks, Hispanics, Muslims, the Chicago White Sox and people who drive Dodge Neons. That's my right.

Now, we give people – blacks, Muslims, Dodge Neon drivers – certain inalienable rights. It's against the law to kill one just because I hate him, it's against the law not to rent a house or apartment to one or not to allow him to vote just because I hate him for his religion or sex or race. That's all pretty basic and you're all familiar with it.

Peas, however, aren't people, so I can treat them differently. I can throw them, I can smash them, I can hide them under the sofa cushion like my cousin used to at my grandma's house. They have no consciousness, no feelings, no soul; therefore, if I choose, I can abuse them with impunity. Because, after all, they're not people – and I hate them.

That's pretty much how people on the political left and the American media – certainly the "big time" TV networks and most newspapers and journalists in various other media – cover conservatives. They hate conservatives from the get-go because of what conservatives believe. Mostly it has to do with conservatives' aversion to abortion and the fact that a lot of conservatives are Christians; more recently it involves a general consensus among conservatives that the country should enforce its immigration laws, protect us from predominantly Muslim terrorists, and not try to pay for everyone's healthcare. Because lots of people in the media believe the opposite of these things, they dehumanize conservatives to the point that in their minds, conservatives are just peas.

The hatred got worse when Donald Trump – the chief pea – pulled off an upset victory to win the presidency. Conservatives and even some people who aren't conservative but who would have voted for a cumquat over Hillary Clinton, were overjoyed. The media, after giving Trump huge exposure early on like the two-headed calf at the county fair, thought they did their best to ruin him in the campaign (remember the 11 year-old secret naughty recording they released weeks before the election?). When he won, it made the media feel less relevant, so now it's not just hatred of Trump and conservatives but also self-preservation the media is fighting for. Hatred, therefore, is even more warranted.

A discerning ear can hear it in the lead-up and the preface of stories about Trump from conventional media. Words like "denies," "fallout," "embattled" are often used to preface a story which is basically not about the president, but about what his many critics are saying about him in response to baseless but relentless questions from the same reporters. "Trump campaign collusion with Russians alleged" for example – so far we haven't heard any real charges or any specifics – did the Russians buy and distribute Trump yard signs? Did they place secret Russian deep-cover operatives at the election polls in Ness City, Ks., to somehow help sway the vote?

REVIEW COMMENTARY

Conversely, when Barack Obama was elected president in 2008, there was video of members of the Black Panther party intimidating voters at election polls in urban areas. Did that incident spur more investigation? Did it become part of the background narrative in Obama's future news coverage? No, because the media didn't hate Obama.

Last week ABC Radio News referred to the "bungled" firing of FBI director James Comey by the president. Bungled? How does a firing get "bungled?" Trump is a business man. If you fire someone, and they clean out their desk and leave, that's typically considered a pretty successful firing.

Trump isn't a guy who concerns himself about the superfluous politics surrounding firing an employee. It's just "you're fired" and you hit the bricks. That kind of directness is what alienates so many in the media and his critics, and it's what got him elected by the rest. Meanwhile business rebounds, unemployment goes down, companies are hiring, illegal border crossings decline, the stock market improves – but none of that becomes part of the Trump story narrative.

In the demonstration of conservative hatred, journalists haven't shown themselves to revere truth and respect their readers and viewers – they've fallen deeper into what many folks suspected from decades past – that most of them are biased toward the left and most certainly biased against conservatives. This era isn't just affecting politics as we know it; it's deepening the divide between the media and at least half the country.

And the peas just don't expect much better anymore.

Isn't it about time we started taking safety and logic and good sense seriously? Shouldn't we require 18-wheelers to honk seven times whenever they pass through a green light? When an 18-wheeler goes through a green light all the cross traffic has is one, small, red, non-flashing light. Does logic and good sense tell you this is a safety hazard? At a railroad crossing there are crossing arms blocking traffic from entering the track area. There are about seven flashing red lights. There are dinging bells. However, the locomotive is required to blast a 100 dB horn around seven times when approaching the intersection. Isn't there quite a discrepancy in good sense and safety here? Should it be illegal for a train to honk when the crossing arms are down and the red lights are flashing and the bells are dinging? Unnecessary noise is pollution. I have a feeling that the Federal Railroad Administration's answer to this safety discrepancy would be to replace standard traffic lights with crossing arms and flashing red lights and dinging bells and require 18-wheelers to honk seven times when they pass through a green light. Am I way off base in thinking that the crossing arms and flashing red lights and dinging bells are sufficient without the 100 DB horn blasts?

What a load of----- that the Tourism Board and City of Garnett can't see the value in supporting the fair carnival. The difference between having a carnival and not is so evident in attendance and atmosphere. The fact that the fair brings people to the county seat for days on end should be enough reason on its own for the city to kick in money. Especially for the measly amount they are asked for. How embarrassing.

I just do not understand. The carnival has one down year after always being successful before and you claim it always loses money? I think you need to reconsider how much the public wants the carnival. And now I hear you are giving $2,500 for a one hour fireworks show that has never made any money, and you still will not support the only five consecutive day event in town. Thank you.

Sure would be nice for local contractors to be hired to build new buildings.

Graduation, Square Fair and Mother's Day drew a lot of visitors to Garnett last weekend. Our chance to impress our visitors. How many visitors went to see our parks? How many went to the cemetery to pay their respects to family, former educators, friends, classmates? I visited our parks and cemetery last weekend. They were not mowed or cleaned up. The worst place was the cemetery. It was disgraceful. The streets in Garnett are full of potholes. I'm sure we impressed our visitors, but not in a good way. I don't understand why these problems exist. We have plenty of city employees who are paid very well, but they don't seem to have any pride in their work or in the City of Garnett. The new city manager had better be prepared. He has years of shoddy workmanship and disrepair to fix before Garnett can return to its former glory.

The manhole cover they dug up at the intersection of 5th and Oak in Garnett. It's about a 4-inch drop and I forget and hit it everytime I go through there. Can we not paint that orange or put a little flag on it or something to remind people not to drop off in it. It shakes your liver out. Thank you.

The worst word in American politics

For the past couple of years, the most important word in American politics has been the worst – "rigged."

Emanating from slang back in the 17th century, developing into a description of financial fraud, and then branching out to apply to cheating in sports and elections, "rigged" had a breakthrough year in 2016, and it shows no sign of loosening its grip.

It is a word of grievance and conspiracy. It is a word of institutional distrust. It is a word of larger forces beyond our control taking advantage of us. It is a word that says, "We wuz robbed – and we will make the bastards pay."

In short, it is the perfect term for a fevered era in our national life.

Donald Trump has charged that everything is rigged. "It's not just the political system that's rigged, it's the whole economy," he said during the campaign. The rigging specifically encompassed, among other things, "unfair trade, immigration and economic policies," as well as the Republican primary (at least when he was losing ground).

Since Hillary Clinton picked up on the verbiage from Bernie Sanders, both major-party candidates last year argued that the system had been manipulated by nefarious forces working for their self-interested ends, i.e., "rigged." The election was basically a contest over which party had a better claim on the word. Yes, "the game is rigged," Elizabeth Warren thundered. "It's rigged for guys like Donald Trump."

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

In the stretch run of the campaign, Trump warned his supporters that "we are competing in a rigged election" and demurred from saying in advance that he would accept the results. Democrats lamented Trump's rhetoric, but when he pulled off a stunning upset, they immediately resorted to rigged charges of their own. Trump hadn't really won; the election had been stolen in a smoke-filled room somewhere in the Kremlin.

The charges and countercharges contrast with the bygone era when national politicians avoided public allegations of foul play even when they might legitimately suspect it. Richard Nixon didn't contest his razor-thin defeat in the 1960 presidential election, despite doubts about the vote count in Illinois and Texas. He thought it wouldn't be good for the country, whereas now charges of rigging are the default. With trust in most American institutions badly eroded over the past 40 years, such accusations find a ready audience – and do their part to undermine trust a little bit more.

The idea that whatever we don't like about our country is the handiwork of shadowy forces is a form of paranoia, certainly when it involves systems as large, diverse and uncontrolled as our politics or our economy. But there is a certain comfort in this mindset. It provides a ready, simple explanation for unwelcome trends or outcomes, and fixes responsibility for our troubles on an enemy. It implicitly promises not so much the creation of a set of truly neutral rules or more legitimate institutions than simple vengeance against those who are allegedly responsible for the rigging.

In other words, it heralds a particularly nasty politics, and, increasingly, it's the one thing that unites the right and left.

Will court be fooled by financing tricks?

Now, remember back a decade or a little more, when the Legislature passed a school finance plan under orders of the Kansas Supreme Court to adequately finance high-quality education for the children in the state's public schools?

It wasn't easy, it required a lot of time and work and a special session but the Legislature finally back then passed a bill that the court said, if adequately financed, would produce equalized opportunities for public schoolchildren from border to border.

Remember that within two years of passing that bill the Legislature didn't appropriate enough money to finance the bill? And...of course, the state got sued again, and again, for not meeting constitutional requirements for providing equal access to quality education to all kids in Kansas.

The concept here: It is, of course, possible to trick the Kansas Supreme Court, to make it a promise and then break that promise. The court wasn't happy.

But at least a couple senators last week did a relatively clever little procedure to remind the court that the Legislature tends to fall away from promises.

You gotta wonder whether a Supreme Court that gets tricked twice...well, should those folks actually be justices, or maybe just magistrates or notaries or something else...

Senate Minority Leader Anthony Hensley, D-Topeka, took a relatively clever step last week on an income tax increase bill to make sure the high court feels a little like maybe... it's going to be tricked again.

Lawmakers in both chambers have been advised by their new legislative counsel, dedicated to making sure that it builds a new school finance bill that meets the court's demands, who warned lawmakers that the court isn't interested in being handed a school finance plan that it can't or won't continue.

STATE COMMENTARY

So Hensley took a professionally prepared State General Fund profile that shows pretty clearly that the tax bill the Senate debated last week didn't fix the school finance-into-the-future problem.

That profile, produced at the request of Sen. Tom Holland, D-Baldwin City, showed that the tax bill being debated would produce a budget deficit in just two years, putting that yet-to-be-approved school funding plan in jeopardy.

Old-timer Hensley used an obscure rule to make sure that the Holland-generated budget profile wound up being printed in small type in the official Senate Journal, where, depending on reading habits of the justices, they'll be likely to see it.

Yes, it's bringing a lot of different decisions that haven't been made yet into the school finance/taxes/budget troika that is confronting lawmakers as they work past the traditional 90-day (that was Mothers' Day) session.

In terms of providing the Supreme Court with a way to determine whether any school finance plan can be financed by any tax increase bill, well, it's pretty definitive.

The Hensley move was a little off-target, of course, because there are going to be several tax plans created to finance that school formula. But it might well let the court know that whatever formula emerges, it really doesn't amount to a solution unless it is financed consistently to accomplish what the court wants done in the way of K-12 finance.

But Hensley did, with his tactic in explaining why he voted against the tax bill, put the court—oh, and his constituents—on notice that he won't support tax bills that fail to fix the state budget and school finance problems in a sustainable way.

Now, besides spooking the court, has there been much moving on taxes or school finance formulas? Nope, but that Senate Calendar tactic used by Hensley essentially fuses the two issues, doesn't it?

Might be interesting to see how this all works out...

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 5-23-2017 / Dane Hicks

Crest's Billy Lyda strains to overtake Cedar Vale's Demetrius Adkins in the finals of Fridays 100 meter dash competition in the 1A Regional Track Meet at Burlington. Lyda qualified for this weekend's state meet with a 2nd place regional finish.

Bulldogs fall short in regional opener

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

OSAWATOMIE - The fourth seeded Anderson County Bulldogs (4-14) came up short in the opening round of regionals dropping a 10-7 decision to the top seeded Osawatome Trojans (14-4).

The Trojans opened the scoring with one run in the top of the second and tacked on three more in the third to take an early 4-0 lead. The Bulldogs didn't go down easily as they rallied for four runs in the bottom of the fourth to knot the score up at 4 apiece.

As good teams tend to do, the Trojans had a quick response and opened up another large lead. The Trojans plated 5 runs in the top half of the fifth for a 9-4 lead. Once again, the Bulldogs had an answer to keep them well within striking distance, scoring 3 runs in the bottom half of the fifth making the deficit 9-7.

Oz would score one more in the sixth to end the scoring on the afternoon.

The Trojans scored their 10 runs on 12 hits, while the Bulldogs were limited to just 5 hits en route to their 7 runs. Both teams committed two errors for the game.

In what would be the final game for the AC seniors, they all contributed despite the defeat.

Senior Kyle Lamb was 1-4 with one run scored and drove in a run. Seniors Brady Rockers went 2-4, 2 runs scored and one run driven in and Mason Louk was 0-2 with a run batted in.

It was a pair of juniors that split the duties on the mound in the loss.

Austin Ewert was the starting pitcher and went 2 innings and allowed 4 runs, walked 4 batters and struck out one.

Austin Peine relieved Ewert but didn't have any more success shutting down the Trojans. Peine allowed 9 hits and 6 runs in 3 1/2 innings.

Iola won the regional with a 9-6 win over Osawatome in the championship game.

Vikings' Shields falls just shy of perfect game

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND - In an unbelievable performance to open regionals, Central Heights Ethan Shields fell just one batter shy of pitching a rare perfect game.

The fifth seeded Vikings (9-11) faced fourth seeded Osage City (9-11) in the opening round and won the game 4-0 behind Shields' performance.

Shields walked a batter with 2 outs in the seventh to end his bid at a sweep, but still came away with a no hitter. Shields also struck out 14 Osage City batters on the afternoon.

It wasn't all Shields though as the defense played flawlessly behind him to give him the chance at the perfect game.

Seth Burroughs provided the majority of the offense, going 2-4 with 2 runs batted in and also scored a run.

The second round game was a battle against top seeded and eventual regional champ Mission Valley (15-2).

Mission Valley rolled to a 12-2 win in their first game in regional play after a bye in the opening round.

"We ran into a really good team in Mission Valley," Coach Jason Brown stated.

Despite the loss to end the season, Brown was proud of the group he had the opportunity to coach.

"We finished the year at 10-12, but we had a lot of close games that ended up not going our way that could have given us a better record," Brown explained.

"We were pretty young and did mature and grow as the season progressed. We have a great group of student athletes who represented our school in a positive manner," Brown added.

It was a small group of seniors, but the impact of James Jones, Wyatt Thompson and Shields not returning next year will be obvious.

Making History...

First-ever state tourney appearance for Viking softball

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

HUMBOLDT - A dramatic 9 inning win over top seeded Humboldt last week sent the Central Heights Vikings softball team to state for the first time in school history.

It took three wins in two days to pull off the feat.

The third seeded Vikings (12-8) won a hard fought 4-0 opening round game on Monday against sixth seeded West Franklin (4-14). Despite the 4 runs, both teams were only able to muster one hit each on the afternoon.

Viking senior Megan Davis was outstanding on the mound, pitching a complete game and allowing just the one hit, walking one and striking out 8.

The bats came alive in a 17-4 win the following day in their round two game against the second seeded Jayhawk Linn/Pleasanton High School (10-5).

The Vikings jumped out quick with 4 runs in the first and 5 in the second to take an early 9-3 lead.

The game would end after just 5 innings due to the 10-run mercy rule. Central Heights tacked on 3 more in the fourth and 5 in the fifth to end the game. The Vikes pounded out 17 hits in the 5 innings.

Abigail Brown, Shelbi Hettinger and Charlize Robertson each had 3 hits to lead the way.

It was another solid pitching performance for Davis, who allowed 4 runs in the 5 innings while striking out 9 batters.

The win would set up a showdown against top seeded host Humboldt (16-4).

Central Heights jumped on top early with a 4 run first before Humboldt answered with 5 runs over the next two innings to take a 5-4 lead into the third.

Another big inning for the Vikings gave them a 9-5 lead after scoring 5 runs in the third.

Humboldt would chip away at the lead with 1 run in the fifth and 3 more in the sixth to tie the game heading into the seventh inning that saw both teams score once.

After a scoreless eighth inning, the Vikings had yet another big inning in the ninth. Central Heights plated 5 runs to cap their improbable run to state after limiting Humboldt to two runs in the bottom half of the ninth.

Davis was 4-5 at the plate, scoring twice and driving in two runs.

The girls class 3A state softball championship will be May 25th and 26th in Manhattan. The Vikings (15-8) will play Thursday night at 5:00 against top seeded Riverton High School (23-0).

TRIO of Lancers qualify for state

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

BURLINGTON - Three Crest Lancer athletes will compete in 7 events in the Kansas 1A State Track Meet next weekend in Wichita.

Camryn Strickler is the only Lady Lancer to qualify and did so in the 100 meter hurdles and 300 meter hurdles. Strickler finished first in the 300 meter hurdles with a time of 51.51. She also had a solid effort in the 100 meter hurdles, 2nd place with a time of 18.38.

Sprinter Bill Lyda won silver medals in three sprinting events, each time just barely missing a gold.

Lyda posted a time of 11.93 in the 100 meter and finished just behind Demetrius Adkins (11.77). Lyda followed that up with a second in the 200 meter dash in 23.88 seconds, also losing to Adkins (23.76) and rounded out the day with another second in the 400 meter dash (53.94). Colten Ward from Caldwell edged Lyda in the 400 with a time of 53.47.

Caleb Stevens is the last of the athletes to head to state. Stevens cleared 5' in the high jump, which was good for second place and a leap of 37'9 in the triple jump, good for 3rd place.

The state track meet will be at Wichita State University's Cessna Stadium and take place May 26-27.

Remember to report planted
acres to FSA

PLAY DAY 2017

Area farmers and ranchers should remember that filing an accurate acreage report for all crops and land uses will prevent the loss of benefits for a variety of Farm Service Agency (FSA) programs. If you would like this reflected on your farm acreage report you must report it in a timely manner or late-file fees will apply. Failed acreage must be reported within 15 days of the disaster event and before disposition of the crop. Failed acreage only needs reported if a different crop will be planted for harvest this growing season.

Prevented planting must be reported no later than 15 days after the final planting date for the applicable crop. May 25, 2017, is the final planting date for 2017 corn in Anderson County. As a result, prevented planting acreage must be reported to FSA by June 9, 2017, if you want this reflected on your acreage report without any late-filed fee being assessed.

July 15th is final date to report your planted acres of corn, grain sorghum, soybeans, and sunflowers. Please contact the Anderson County FSA Office at (785) 448-3128 or stop by the office at 111 N. Maple, Garnett, KS, once your corn is planted and we will mark maps with your corn planting dates. This will save time in the office later in the year after you come to report your planted acres of soybeans and grain sorghum.

KELLSTADT...

The key to making a connection with a child is to pay attention to him or her, Kellstadt said. It takes patience and observation, but a child will usually give you a chance to form a bond.

"You try to get to know what they like. If you observe them enough, you kind of catch on and sooner or later you'll get a smile or a 'hi,'" he said. "You've got to make connections with kids. It's about relationships. If you ask kids to do something and tell them why, they will generally do it."

The bonds Kellstadt has formed with his students have lasted for years, even decades. He knows every student by name, an advantage that administrators in larger schools may not be able to develop, he admits. Years later, he can recall a conversation he had with an individual student during a trip to Washington, D.C. Previous students who run into him at various community or school events often take time to stop and say hi.

Kellstadt recalled a time several years ago when he ran into a former student. The student was in one of his government classes, and Kellstadt made it a tradition to give silly awards to each student based on something he had observed throughout the year. Decades later, this particular student told him she had recently stumbled on the award. Kellstadt laughed and asked if she then threw it away. "She said, 'I didn't, because it was the only award I got in high school,'" Kellstadt recalled.

After School

Kellstadt joined USD 365 in 1973 as the director of the high school's new work study program. At the time, the program was needed to help solve an overcrowding problem. About 550 students attended grades 9-12 in the early 1970s, far more than today. The work study program was an opportunity to match students with local businesses, helping the businesses while teaching real-life work skills to students. It also helped alleviate the burden on teachers, as about a third of the senior class left during the day to participate in the local workforce.

The district still offers a work study program, Kellstadt said, but it has changed over the years. Fewer businesses and fewer kids participate - he estimates it's about 20 percent of seniors - and those who do work at places that are closely aligned with their future career goals.

Post-secondary education goals have changed over the years as well, Kellstadt said. When he started, it was common for a student to join the work force directly after graduating. That's why the work study program was so important. Many students were hired by their work study businesses after graduation.

That gradually changed, as more and more kids learned they needed to continue their education after high school. Initially, students were pushed toward college but educators now have shifted back toward something similar to work study. Most high schools now offer some type of technical training program, often allowing a student to earn a certificate or some other type of qualification that would allow him or her either to join the work force after graduation or continue an education. For example, Anderson County offers certificates in fields such as welding and HVAC repair, as well as a CNA program at Ottawa.

"I think the trend has gone back to that," Kellstadt said. "High school is not the end of your education, but maybe they need something more like technical school. Many of them walk out of high school with something better than a four-year college degree, and they can go to work right away making $50,000 a year."

Schools also start to steer students toward a particular career path earlier in high school. A student might dream about being a veterinarian, for example, but if educators see that student struggles with science classes, they might try to focus him or her on a more realistic goal such as becoming a veterinarian technician instead. Kellstadt said there are advantages and disadvantages to that approach, but ultimately educators want to make sure the student is successful and happy.

"You want to see them succeed, but also do something they enjoy. If not, they'll get burnt out pretty quick."

Government Trips

About 25 years ago, USD 365 wanted to encourage students to take upper-level government classes. As an incentive, they offered students in the AP Government class a chance to take a trip to Washington, D.C. It became a popular, enduring tradition that created some of Kellstadt's most special memories.

"It kind of became an expectation. Oftentimes, parents want to see all their kids going. I had parents who went over and over with their children through the years."

The trips have been virtually consistent, with just one year missed since 1992. The students went a few months after Sept. 11, and just after President George Bush began military action in Iraq in 2003. That trip brought more security concerns, and many other schools across the nation canceled their trips because of it. But students had a good experience, since lines were much shorter despite increased security.

At other times, students were able to meet well-known figures in Washington, D.C. and even attended a White House press conference in 1992.

A Different Approach

The Columbine High School massacre in 1999 changed the way schools approached safety, Kellstadt said. In addition to the physical changes - most schools now lock doors and limit access to buildings while school is in session or have more extensive security measures - it also changed the way educators interact with students.

"You've got to know your kids, and maybe that's where a big school is at a disadvantage," he said. "The FBI says you can't profile school shooters, but some people you wonder about."

The Internet and social media also have complicated the traditional school landscape. Kellstadt has seen changes in the ways students communicate. Not only are they losing social skills, but they more often bring into school problems that happen outside the school environment. It takes only seconds for a social media post to spread throughout the student body, including hurtful and negative comments.

"People can get behind a computer and feel safe and write something that probably shouldn't be written," Kellstadt said. "Social media is instant, and that's what kids want. Patience is not always a virtue these days."

Despite the potential for negative consequences, concerns about how students interact with each other helped encourage modern educators to search for alternative approaches. Kellstadt is one of those who pushed for an alternative school. Students who struggle in a traditional learning environment who attend the alternative school learn at their own pace, with staff trained to adapt learning to fit the student.

Kellstadt recalled his concerns about a former student who was always quiet and a loner. It wasn't long after the Columbine school shooting, and Kellstadt was worried.

"I'll be real honest. In your mind, you're wondering about that student," he said.

But years later, he encountered and visited with the young man. He had done well for himself, and was successful, cheerful and outgoing.

"I think maybe he just didn't like school," Kellstadt said. "That's why I fought for the alternative school. Some kids just do not learn in the traditional way. Some people label them as not too bright, but they are. They just don't fit the mold of sitting in a classroom. We've had a lot of success with kids who graduated through the alternative school, and many of them have done very, very well."

Thanks to modern technology, kids today have access to more information than any time in history. That fact certainly has changed the way kids interact with each other and with educators, Kellstadt said, but it doesn't change a fundamental fact: Kids are still kids.

"Kids get a bad rap. They're going to do some crazy stuff. Sometimes, what seems to be a good idea at the time, isn't. But they're still kids," he said.

"That's what I'm going to miss. I'll miss the kids."

Make a fast, sloppy buck

In this column we've explored a lot of studies and research data on customer reactions to various stimulus you as a business can control - things like aroma, lighting, motion and compelling displays all can have a positive or negative affect on customers and determine if - and how much - they buy; even if they will return.

But one we've never talked about is slop.

Slop can have a magnetic effect, especially if your store or office is typically neat and tidy. In the same way a place looks neat when you clean it up after it's been messy a while (think your garage), others can also grab attention when you slop them up.

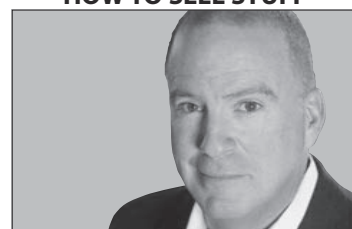

There's something about a heap of stuff that makes us think there's something cool there, and it's probably cheap because it's probably been there forever and is now heaped up for quick clearance. Think of auctions - few things are more enticing to collectors or antique dealers than table after table of "stuff." We've all seen someone find an item at an auction in a pile of mess and wait the rest of the day for the auctioneer to roll up to sell it.

And what about those vintage DVD movie or compact disc bins at major discount stores - everything piled up and for sale for $5. Works every time.

So stack it up; pile it up preferably where drive by traffic can see; use card tables or better yet use the tailgates of a couple of pickup trucks with 2x12s between them to make a long table. The more disheveled the better, and pile it high with everything you've got. Set large items on the ground or in the center of the table to accent them. Pile smaller items everywhere else. Don't stack things neatly - skew them willy-nilly and catty-wampus. Don't bother setting the main front of the packaging forward. Use your regular inventory; use leftovers from your stock room. If you bare your shelves inside to stack the mess outside, it will be worth the work of restocking less inventory later.

And price tags? Use colored dots like you see at garage sales, and knock off the "$" - for some odd reason just putting "-50" on an item looks more like a fire sale.

You may sprinkle discounts here and there, but leave most of the items at full mark up. It won't matter. Just don't advertise a "Huge Sale" that assumes discounts - don't advertise anything at all - just pile up the stuff!

Like anything you can overdo this, and if you're outside there may be restrictions in your city or locale that set time limits. But the savvy use of strategic slop will help you sell stuff.

Discerning the will of God for our life

One of the most difficult things we must do is to discern the will of God for our lives. It is not in God's plan for us to become a Christian and then move no closer to him than that. Jesus told the disciples who were his first converts in Matthew 28:19; "Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you." One of the best ways to begin to discern the will of God for our life is to pray. Where does our power to pray come from?

It comes from the death, burial, resurrection and ascension up to heaven of Christ Jesus. We are told Jesus is seated at the right hand of God. Although Jesus did not take us physically with him he did take us spiritually. The extent of our residence in heaven with Christ is directly related to how much time we spend in his presence and in his word.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL
By David Bilderback

Equally important is to be in church on Sunday and at other times when services are offered. Unless we are hearing, studying and sharing the word of God on a regular basis we will not be able to commune with God in any meaningful way and will not be able to discern his will for our life.

We must also understand our position in Christ having been justified by his atoning work on the cross. Charles Spurgeon, the 19th centuries most prolific preacher and writer said if we were to stand before the throne of God today, "We are now-even now-pardoned; even now our sins put away; even now we stand in the sight of God accepted as though we had never been guilty." If we pray, attend church faithfully and understand our position in Christ, "God will use these present privileges to awaken us to our present duty," or his will for our life.
