The big Black Out

Local schools stress safety as astronomical event set to take place while students are in class

BY MELISSA HOBBS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

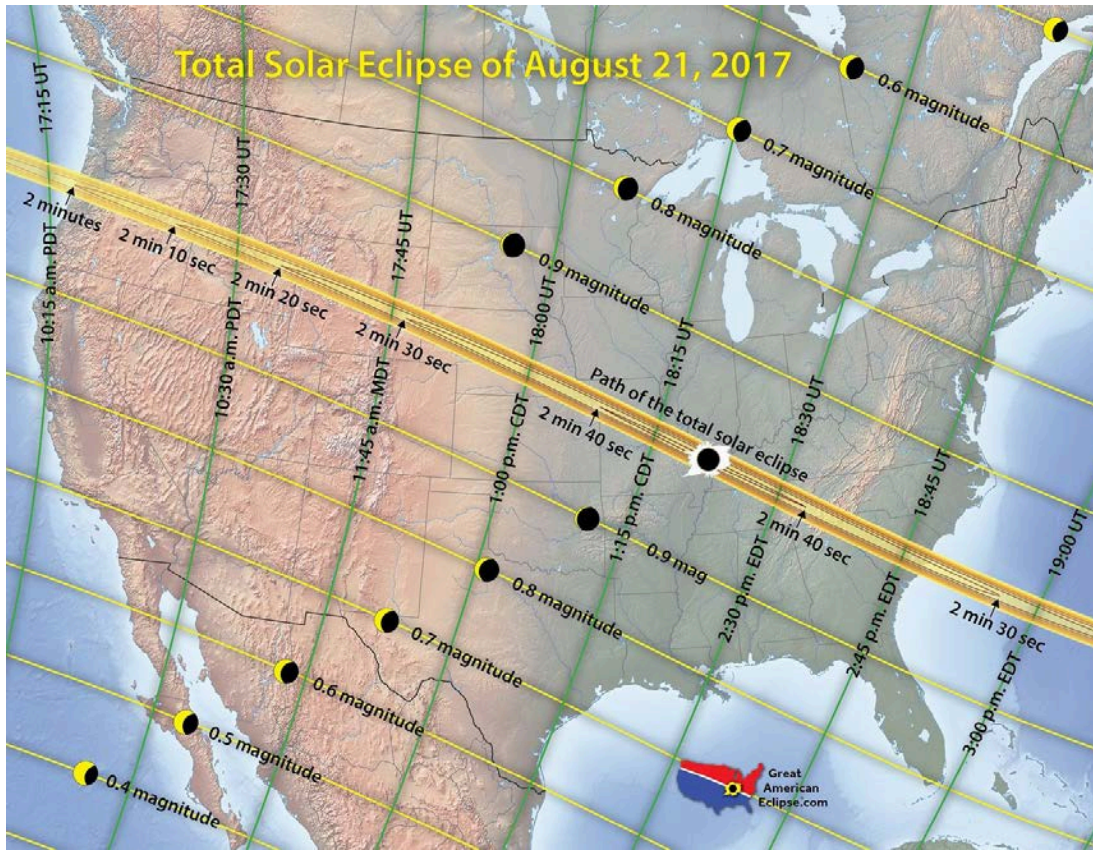

GARNETT – Monday, August 21, will be the third day of school for USD 365 students, however, something much bigger and more rare will be happening that day as well. One of nature's most amazing sights, a total solar eclipse, will happen during the early afternoon hours.

Lucky for Anderson County residents, this area falls into a path that is close to what is known as the "path of totality." This path is where, according to NASA, the moon will completely cover the sun and the sun's tenuous atmosphere, the corona, can be seen. The path will stretch from Salem, Oregon to Charleston, South Carolina and places in between, with the closest major city being St. Joseph, Missouri.

According to the Space.com website, in a total eclipse the disk of the moon blocks out the last sliver of light from the sun, and the sun's outer atmosphere, the corona, becomes visible. The corona is far from an indistinct haze; skywatchers report seeing great jets and ribbons of light, twisting and curling out into the sky.

During totality, the area inside the moon's shadow is cloaked in twilight — a very strange feeling to experience in the middle of the day. Just before and just after totality, observers can see this cloak of darkness moving toward them across the landscape, and then moving away.

These effects are not visible during a partial solar eclipse, so skywatchers are encouraged to see if they are inside the path of totality during the total eclipse.

The path of totality for this eclipse is about 70 miles wide and stretches from Oregon to South Carolina. It passes through Idaho, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina. Observers in Anderson County, outside of the path, will see a partial solar eclipse where the moon will cover part of the sun's disk, but not quite all of it. Eclipses occur during a special

School board approves
pay increases in final meeting before school year begins

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – USD 365 School Board members approved raises for district personnel totaling some $109,000 last week, bringing total payroll for USD 365 to more than $6.5 million.

The increases were unanimous votes in each classification with the exception of one; Gary Teel cast the sole opposing vote on a measure to approve a 3 percent salary increase for licensed administrative personnel (elementary principals and curriculum director) with an additional 1 percent for curriculum coordinator Stacey Hedges and Westphalia principal Debbie Alford and an additional 2 percent for Garnett Elementary principal Krista Hedrick. The measure passed 6-1.

Raises adopted unanimously included:

- a 3 percent salary increase for classified and transportation employees (hourly and classified);
- a 3 percent increase for administrative staff;
- a $3,000 increase in salary for superintendent Don Blome, bringing his salary total to $110,681

Originally the Pennsylvania Hotel in the early 1900s, the structure which most recently housed Denise's Country Cafe is set for upcoming demolition.

Legacy in ruins

What was once the Pennsylvania Hotel
to meet wrecking ball

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – It's a near forgotten piece of Garnett history, rooted in the heyday of the city when Anderson County's population was nearly twice that of today and simple two-lane roads combined with wagon teams or rickety cars to keep most folks pretty close to home most of the time. The Pennsylvania Hotel, most recently Denise's Country Cafe, was at one time a centerpiece of what, long ago, was a county square burgeoning with trade and travelers.

But soon – maybe within weeks – the structure owned by a series of business people and investors over a century and reputed to be at the center of the town's infamous south side "red light" district will be nothing but a vacant lot, torn down after years of decay and negligence.

It's the latest chapter in the story of Garnett's greatest ongoing failure – the inability to find productive uses for century-old downtown buildings that might justify saving them.

Sentimentality aside, unsafe structures have to be brought down in the name of public safety. The demolition order stuck to the window of the building lists a number of structural discrepancies within, and the city fire department has marked its windows with a red "X," which means the floors are rotted to the point firefighters and emergency workers should not enter the building in case of an emergency.

City manager Chris Weiner said last week the city was pursuing options to vacate certain liens against the building incurred by the former owner, and that the city would most likely start

Fifty-nine year-old Tony Wolken of Garnett was hospitalized last week from this accident at the U.S. 169/59 exit five miles south of Garnett. A southbound pickup driven by 25 year-old Kolby Goranson of Richmond turned left in front of Wolken's northbound vehicle. Goranson escaped with minor injuries. A Kansas Highway Patrol report said both drivers were wearing seat belts.

ACJSHS opens year with new security design

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

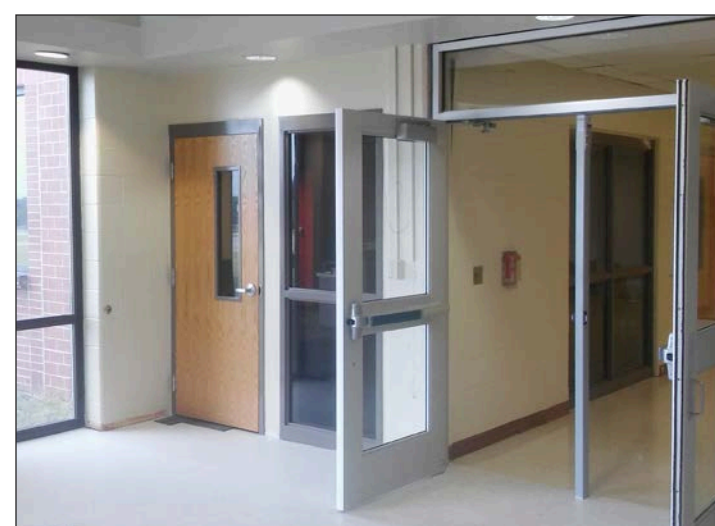

GARNETT – A major renovation project at Anderson County Junior Senior High School will greet returning students in a few weeks – one that will completely reroute most school traffic through a new entrance that will provide more oversight and security.

School board members in USD 365 recently toured the renovation project at the school, which swaps the main entrance from the north side of the building to the south entrance. The project reconfigured administrative offices from the building's southernmost classrooms and established a locked security door inside the south entrance foyer. Traffic coming through that entrance now is on temporary hold in the foyer until district staff, on the other side of a secure window, buzzes them into the main building.

Total cost of the project was just over $288,000.

ACJSHS opened in 1993, prior to the Columbine, Colo., high school shooting, the first high-profile school shooting which set a macabre precedent for future mass casualty attacks. Those incidents altered the paradigm of educators and politicians trending more toward more securely designed structures, armed security occurrence of the moon and sun being the same angular size. Although the sun is 400 times wider than the moon, it is 400 times farther away, making them appear the same size in our sky.

To view the solar eclipse, you will need to wear special protective eyewear, of which a local civil organization has purchased for all students at Garnett Elementary School according to Principal Krista Hedrick. Protective eyewear must meet the certification for the ISO 12312-2 international standard.

The eclipse will be visible in the path of totality in St. Joseph, Missouri, at 1:08 p.m. and in Kansas City, Missouri at 1:09 p.m. "Teachers are gearing their lesson plans to experience the eclipse with the students," said Hedrick.

Westphalia, Greeley, and Mont Ida students won't be missing out on the event either. "I contacted an eye doctor and asked what glasses were acceptable and he said they must have CE and ISO certification," said Debbie Alford,

Principal at Westphalia, Mont Ida, and Greeley Elementary Schools. "I purchased glasses for all of my students and the teachers will for sure be planning lessons for that day and after that day. What an exciting event!"

Only 15 total solar eclipse events have been visible in the United States since the first recording of one in 1503. If you miss out on the August 21 event, the next total solar eclipse will be visible in the United States on April 8, 2024.

A total solar eclipse occurs when the disk of the moon appears to completely cover the disk of the sun in the sky. The fact that total solar eclipses occur at all is a quirk of cosmic geometry. The moon orbits an average of 239,000 miles (385,000 kilometers) from Earth — just the right distance to seem the same size in the sky as the much-larger sun. However, these heavenly bodies line up only about once every 18 months.

Outside the path of totality, skywatchers in the continental U.S. and other nearby areas will see a partial solar eclipse, in which the moon appears to take a bite out of the sun's disk. Two to five solar eclipses occur each year on average, but total solar eclipses happen just once every 18 months or so.

The change included the construction of new offices for the principal and assistant principal, and a new conference room. Those offices were added just west of the entrance, extending as far as the brick pillar at the current entrance.

District staff said in a previous news story on the upgrade a receptionist likely would be stationed at the north entrance to take care of anyone who entered from that direction.

advertising for bids to demolish it in coming weeks. The structure has not been used as a hotel since perhaps the 1940s - details of its operation are unsure, because notations regarding the Pennsylvania in the "Anderson County Histories" and other local history books cite only its changes of ownership. Names like Joe Rooks, Charley Farrow, A.C. Crozier, Frank Highberger, L.W. Steinbacher and an Iola man named W.H. Mills all owned the operation between 1915 and 1917, leading to suspicion that the profitability of the establishment might have been in question even in times when the county square was booming.

The dubious reputation of the hotel and the South Side is only hinted at in county histories. In his 1990 "Pictorial History and Folklore of Anderson County, Ks.," historian and cartoonist Ed Fink recounted the story of a teenage carryout boy from the nearby feed and grocery store being accused by bootleggers of stealing a bottle of whiskey from their car which they parked in front of the Pennsylvania. Discovering the theft, the two thugs set about harassing the boy, who got help from armed store keepers up the street. Fink said it was discovered shortly that one of the hotel residents stole the booze and a brawl was averted. A few years before his 2001 death, Fink admitted he knew the young carryout boy quite well - it was him.

Longtime Garnett resident and historian Bud Fraker said the lower retail stores of the Pennsylvania at times housed a liquor store and a tavern in the 1940s and 1950s. The traditions of taverns and liquor stores in that section of town survived long after the Pennsylvania was no longer used for boarding rooms - taverns nearby like "The Little Brown Jug" and "The Spot" continued to operate into the 1970s and early 1980s. The Pennsylvania and its two retail storefronts eventually went vacant for several years until it was purchased by local motel owners Mike and Marjorie Riggs in the late 1990s. The Riggs' reopened the storefronts and opened a pass-through first-floor wall between them and operated the Prairie Spirit Banquet Center in the structure as a rental event center. They never followed through with plans to renovate and operate the upstairs hotel rooms. Denise Law opened the restaurant in the location in 2005 and closed in August of 2011. The property was listed with area realtors for several years but no sale ever resulted.

Death of the Pennsylvania should signal local leaders

Residents in the City of Moran are afraid of losing their grocery store. As we prepare to watch the demolition of the historic Pennsylvania hotel in downtown Garnett, the solution and the initiative they're pursuing may be the only option for us to save our downtown buildings.

Moran's population is 517. The owner of the town's only grocery store is 68 years old, wants to retire and wants to sell but can't find a buyer. Townspeople there have formed a cooperative, selling memberships at $100 a pop, and have obtained a grant from an Allen County economic development agency with the aim of buying the store, hiring a manager and continuing its operation. They'll need some $200,000 for the deal.

It's a long shot. But for the town, it's still a shot. Maybe the only one.

Soon Garnett's historic Pennsylvania Hotel building on the south side of the square will meet the wrecking ball – yet another casualty in what has been a losing fight for decades to save the city's historic downtown from the ravages of time and economics. The 1880s-era structure, last known as Denise's Country Café restaurant, is subject to tax liens and years of general structural neglect that has made it unsafe and unsalvageable. Shortly, the history and folklore that surrounded the Pennsylvania and marked Garnett's post-Civil War persona will join the lot to its west as another blank spot on the city square.

Downtown buildings only survive as long as local economics support profitable tenants who rent those storefronts for an amount that justifies the landlord's investment in keeping them in viable condition. Retail struggles in Garnett's downtown and has for years, although services like banking, real estate, investment, restaurants, insurance, law firms and others manage to survive and now form the mainstay of the downtown business community.

Downtown isn't dead, but its focus has changed from retail to service businesses. Regardless, decrepit, crumbling buildings can't be a home for them either. Once they're gone, they most likely won't be replaced.

So it's incumbent on city planners to do two things 1) adapt to new, maybe unconventional options for those downtown buildings, and 2) develop a funding mechanism with investors committed to preserving the city's downtown.

For starters, Garnett City Commissioners need to repeal a city zoning regulation that prevents first floor commercial buildings being used as residences. While businesses are hard to recruit to downtown, surviving but vacant buildings' first floors can be refitted to provide marketable rental housing. Local real estate agents say they have a steady stream of inquiries for rental properties but can't always find the right match for the right tenant. That's a cash flow opportunity for a downtown building owner if city regulations allowed.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

The overall effort to reclaim those buildings from the ravages of time and neglect needs bootstrap leadership, which is what Moran and other tiny towns in Southeast Kansas like St. Paul are engaging by the formation of cooperatives to push for their own specific local causes.

They all have a similar goal: To prevent the decay of their towns. They're willing to organize and beat the bushes for investors and members and possible sources of funds to pool the cash to get the job done.

Garnett needs a locus of leadership through a similar private cooperative to accomplish this task as well to re-outfit its downtown. Leadership to organize that effort already exists with the Anderson County Development Agency, the joint city/county economic development organization, and the razing of the Pennsylvania should be a siren call for ACDA to take up this effort post haste.

At this point the primary thing that keeps salvageable buildings in Garnett's downtown from being repurposed in a fashion that will see them survive as an economic asset for decades is a lack of initiative on our part.

People in Moran love their hometown business district enough to work to keep it alive.

Do we?

Hello, that was an interesting article on the 2017 crops last week. Mr. Hicks, I do enjoy your paper but it kind of gets me when people who do not make their living from the crops comment on how good those crops will be. And even the local extension agent apparently may not be aware of the condition of the crops by his comments. While I understand some areas of the county may have had enough rain, there are many areas that are not so fortunate. Maybe next week we can have a story on the extremely good wages and benefits of non-farmers; but of course I can't write about that because I don't know the facts. Thank you, have a great day.

Talk about an eyesore. The double-wide trailer at the corner of the railroad tracks and Sixth Street in Garnett hasn't had the yard mowed all summer. It's knee-high in weeds and it just looks terrible, right on one of the main routes from one highway to another. I thought the city had a weed ordinance for lawns like that and if you didn't mow your own yard they'd come and do it and charge it to your taxes or utilities?

I want to say that my family and I moved here 26 years ago and one of the first people we met was Joyce Martin. She has never been anything but kind, considerate and fair to our family and she was highly intelligent in her job. I'm going to miss her a lot and I think she did a wonderful job. Thank you.

Google's 'anti-diversity' screed that wasn't

The first thing to know about the instantly infamous "anti-diversity screed" written by a Google software engineer is that it isn't anti-diversity or a screed.

The loaded description, widely used in the press and on social media, is symptomatic of the pearl-clutching over the memo, which questions the premises and effectiveness of Google's diversity policies.

The document was meant -- before getting splashed on the internet -- as an internal conversation-starter. The author posits that innate differences between the sexes may account for the disparity between men and women in the male-dominated world of high-tech.

He states repeatedly that he believes in diversity, and there's no reason to doubt his self-description as a classical liberal. His exclamation-point-free memo is hardly a rant. He expresses the hope that "open and honest discussion with those who disagree can highlight our blind spots and help us grow."

How naive. The witless and inflamed reaction to his document instead underlines his point about "a politically correct monoculture that maintains its hold by shaming dissenters into silence."

It is one thing to disagree with the memo; it is another thing to believe the views therein should be forbidden. Former Google engineer Yonatan Zunger says that if it were up to him, the author would be summarily fired and escorted from the building immediately by security (you can't take a chance with such a danger). Entrepreneur Elissa Shevinsky believes that the memo could run afoul of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act -- i.e., it might be illegal.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

Google's diversity officer, Danielle Brown, didn't quite go that far. She offered a pro forma assurance that different views are welcome at Google. Nevertheless, she stipulated the opinions of the author are "incorrect" and added, ominously, that any discussion needs to be in accord with "our Code of Conduct, policies, and anti-discrimination laws." Her case would have been much stronger if she had rebutted any of the author's statements about sex differences -- assuming that she could.

Sex differences are value-neutral. As the publication Stanford Medicine notes: "Women excel in several measures of verbal ability -- pretty much all of them, except for verbal analogies." On the other hand, men "have superior visuospatial skills." Which is better? It depends on who's asking, and why.

Women tend to be better with people, men with things. Is either of those superior? Women tend to put more emphasis on family, men on their status. Does that speak better of women or men?

As the Google author cautions, "Many of these differences are small and there's significant overlap between men and women, so you can't say anything about an individual given these population level distributions."

In light of these differences, though, it is foolhardy to expect 50/50 gender parity in professional life, and otherworldly to believe such differences don't have a role in the predominance of men in, say, software engineering. Obviously, the field should be open to women, and Neanderthal behavior in the workplace should be stamped out. But a company that believes implicit bias accounts for gender imbalances must be allergic to certain inconvenient facts. The Google author raised them, and paid the price.

Kansas locked down on prison guard pay

If you buy the pretty strong premise that the reason El Dorado Correctional Facility prisoners are acting up is that there aren't enough corrections officers at the facility to maintain order, well, there are solutions.

Probably the best solution is relatively simple—pay the corrections officers enough that jobs at El Dorado become desirable. Might take a 20% pay raise which is about $20 million a year, or maybe just 10% at half the cost, but money can probably fix this.

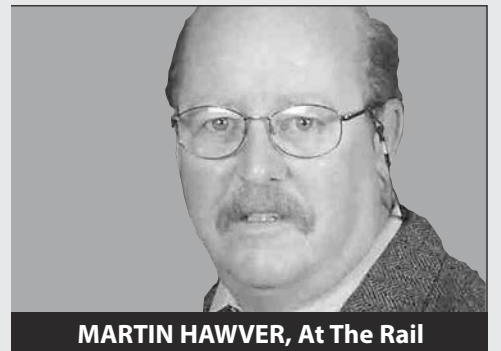

Not hard. A governor can just order up the pay raises, and include that extra money in the touch-up budget for this fiscal year, which the Legislature will consider in a first-day of session budget amendment that could be approved by early February.

But...the real question—again, if you buy into the premise that Kansas' low pay is the reason that the Department of Corrections can't hire enough guards—is who does it and when.

Be assured that there's going to be some confusion, there's going to be a lot of information needed, but it does present someone, either Gov. Sam Brownback or Lt. Gov. Jeff Colyer, a chance to win political points for solving a problem before it grows up to be the theme of next year's "Orange is the New Black" season.

The apparent problem is that correctional officers now start at an annual salary of less than $29,000, and at that price, they're hard to hire. Turnover rates for those guards is about

STATE COMMENTARY

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

33% a year statewide and 46% at El Dorado and 37% at Lansing.

That's more turnover than at other correctional departments in the area—Colorado pays $40,488 and has turnover of 16.2%, Iowa pays $40,186 and has a 12% turnover. Oklahoma, which pays $26,573 a year, has a turnover rate of 38% statewide.

Now, if raises are the solution, and if things stay relatively quiet at El Dorado, the prison will likely attract enough new employees to reduce turnover and to sharply reduce the overtime being paid for those correctional officers who are working 12-hour days and seeing more time-and-a-half pay than any other prison in the state.

So, who gets to solve the problem? The governor can just order the pay raises, shuffle around money and after the six-week training period for correctional officers, maybe we're back to where inmates aren't going to be as eager to cause problems. Maybe.

Brownback—who remember last year wouldn't make budget adjustments himself to solve a $200 million-plus budget shortfall—could make a short-term adjustment to pay for the raises, and leave it up to the election-year Legislature to work out the details.

He could hope that there aren't any big uprisings that result in injuries or deaths, until he is likely to be confirmed by the U.S. Senate as President Donald Trump's Ambassador at Large for International Religious Freedom probably in September or October, allowing move-up Lt. Gov. Jeff Colyer to solve the raise issue and win some leadership points should he decide he'd like to run for governor next year.

Or, the calls from legislators for a special session so everyone—especially House members with districts which include prison employees—can take part in the rescue might be OK'd by Brownback, which essentially cuts whoever is governor out of the rescue plan.

We'll see who takes the leadership role here...and hope it comes before there is a major uprising with injuries...

Anderson County Fire Department receives fire department grant

The Anderson County Fire Department (ACFD) has received State approval for a Volunteer Fire Assistance (VFA) Grant this year according to Kansas Forest Service Fire Management Coordinator, Ross Hauck.

Anderson County will receive $4,500 which will be used to purchase additional radios for fire apparatus. Funding for VFA comes from the USDA Forest Service. USDA Forest Service then awards a grant to the Kansas Forest Service, which administers the program and approves the grants to local departments. "The money is used to equip and train fire departments to prevent and suppress fires in rural areas. This is a great way for the Kansas Forest Service to assist and encourage rural community fire departments to improve their services. While the federal share usually does not constitute a large part of a department's budget, it may make a big impact on a small, volunteer department" Hauck said.

"These funds will be used to purchase upgraded communications equipment for our firefighters. This will have an immediate and direct impact on firefighter safety and our ability to provide services to the county. On behalf of Anderson County, I want to thank the Kansas Forest Service for their continued dedication to serving our department and those who we protect" - J.D. Mersman Director, Anderson County Emergency Management.

Eligible applicants serve rural areas and communities with a population of 10,000 or fewer inhabitants. Fire Departments approved for funding must match at least 50 percent of the total project cost with local funding.

Fire departments interested in applying for grants next year should contact Ross Hauck at 785-532-3314 or via email at rhauck@kse.edu.

East Central Kansas Area Agency on Aging to host Lunch N Learn in September

Ever wonder what the value of helping a family member or neighbor get to the doctor and other appointments, preparing meals, shopping, managing bills, or setting up medications is worth in dollars, cents and time? According to the Family Caregiver Alliance 267,000 individuals in Kansas provided informal help to another as a caregiver in 2014 and spent over 286 hours doing so. If those same services had been given a monetary value it would have come to over $2.8 million.

As an agency, the East Central Kansas Area Agency on Aging (ECKAAA), understands the value of these services. It is the informal caregiver that often helps an individual stay safely at home for as long as possible and work with agencies such as ours to get in-home supports set up and working. ECKAAA also understands how time consuming, overwhelming and frustrating it can be to essentially take over as "business and health manager" when unprepared. It is the informal caregiver who makes the phone calls to ask the questions, arranges work schedules so they can be at appointments, figures out what bills need paid and when, and, who often has difficulty doing it easily due to legal documents that are needed that may not be in place. To help provide information and ease the frustration for anyone helping someone else with their medical or financial business, and to help individuals get their health and financial business in order so someone else can help them, ECKAAA will be hosting a four-part Lunch N Learn series in September in Garnett.

The FREE series will be held each Wednesday of September (6, 13, 20, 27) from Noon to 1:00 p.m. with a catered lunch by Prairie Belle's Kitchen and Catering located at 130 E 5th Ave. Local businesses are sponsoring meals at each event for participants. Registration is required and individuals interested in attending can register for all four sessions or pick and choose based on topic.

The four topics for the series are as follows:

Sept. 6- LEGAL ISSUES- explanation of power of attorney (POA) types and purposes, what it means to you if you are someone's POA, things you need to know to get yourself/ someone else set up for when help is needed with medical and business needs, and living wills. The presenter for this session is Alexandra English Assistant Managing Attorney, Kansas Legal Services. Lunch is being sponsored by Modern Woodmen, Margie Highberger, FIC.

Sept. 13- BANKING DETAILS- this session will feature a panel from Goppert State Service Bank and Patriot's Bank providing information on setting accounts up and having the proper documentation in place so that someone has access to them to help you manage accounts if assistance is needed or have access to the account upon your illness or death. Lunch is being sponsored by Anderson County Abstract, Linda White and Gold Key Realty, Carla Walter.

Sept. 20- WHEN IS IT TIME?- this session will feature a panel from Guest Home Estates, Residential Living Center and Parkview Heights to answer questions about the differences between assisted living and nursing home care, services and costs. They will also help provide insight into when institutional care is necessary and how families can make that transition as easy as possible. Payment options for both will be discussed. Lunch is being sponsored by Guest Home Estates.

Sept. 27- FUNERAL PLANNING- this session will provide information on funeral planning for pre-arranged services, burial and service options, things to consider when planning a service and payment options and costs. The presenter and lunch sponsor for this session are yet to be determined.

Registration is required. To register contact Shannon or Leslea at the East Central Area Agency on Aging at 785-242-7200 or 1-800-633-5621, shannono@eckaaa.org or leslear@eckaaa.org.

Will you be standing on His right or His left?

In looking through my notes I found the following statement. There are three required courses and three elective courses in life. The required courses are life, death and the judgment of God.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL By David Bilderback

The elective courses are choose your way of life, choose your master and choose your own destination. Unlike our creator each of us has a beginning and an end. The required courses for the most part allow for no human choice on our part. We can't choose our parents, our economic status or even where we live. Webster has a rather cold definition of life. He defines life as, "The form of existence that distinguishes living organisms from dead organisms."

The second required course is death. If we focus on Webster's definition we read, "If you are not alive you are dead." In James 4:14-15, James summarizes life and death very well. James says, "Why you do not even know what will happen tomorrow. What is your life? You are a mist that appears for a little while and then vanishes."

The third required course is the judgment of God. In 2nd Corinthians 5:10 we read, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive what is due him for the things done while in the body, whether good or bad." As I mentioned previously we don't have any choice in the required courses. However the choices we make in the elective classes will determine whether we pass or fail the required courses.

The first elective class is choose your way of life. In Matthew 7:13-14 we read, "Enter through the narrow gate. For wide is the gate and broad is the road that leads to destruction, and many enter through it. But small is the gate and narrow the road that leads to life, and only a few find it." If your life looks like everyone else around you maybe you should check the width of the gate you came in. In his poem, "The Road Not Taken", Robert Frost ends his poem about two roads diverging in a yellow wood by saying, "Two roads diverged in a wood, and I--I took the one less traveled by, and that has made all the difference."

The second elective course is choose your master. In Matthew 6:24 Jesus says, "No one can serve two masters. Either we will love the one and love the other or he will be devoted to the one and despise the other." Whatever drives you is your master. You won't have to think long to find it.

The third elective course is choose your own destination. In Matthew 25 Jesus says, "All the nations will be gathered before him, and he will separate the people one from another as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. He will put the sheep on his right and the goats on his left." The King will say to those on his right, "Come you are blessed by my Father; take your inheritance, the kingdom prepared for you since the creation of the world." Then he will say to those on his left, "Depart from me, you who are cursed, into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels." The question then is will you be standing on his right or his left?

Historical Society Tours Kincaid High School

The Anderson County Historical Society met at the Kincaid High School Community Center on Thursday August 3rd, 2017 at 6:30 p.m. President Kristie Kinney led the Lord's Prayer, followed by a carry-in dinner enjoyed by 23 members and guests.

Following the business meeting the group enjoyed a tour through the community center and museum. Kincaid residents, Henry and Ann Donaldson and Irene Louk, assisted with the self-guided tour. The building, that is the former Kincaid High School, was leased from the City of Kincaid by Kincaid High School Community Center, Inc. for 25 years. A $60,000 grant was received by the group from the USDA and improvements were made to the building.

The improvements were completed in 2009-2010, and the building now houses the Kincaid City Hall, a meeting room with a modern efficient kitchen, the nutrition site, a library, an exercise room, and a museum. Many historical items from the community and surrounding area are displayed in the museum. Some items of interest include a painted mural of animals and sea life completed by local art students, an adding machine from the Selma store, boards of displays of many beautiful old buttons, and a baby buggy from 1926. Items from Kincaid businesses include an old Kincaid city clerk's desk, a potato-bean bin from VanBusKirk and Boehrs, and a penny scale from Sissons Drug Store that closed around 1965. Numerous old quilts have also been donated for display. Notices and memorabilia from the Kincaid Fair were proudly displayed. The school items featured FFA jackets, pictures of members of the Ag classes, sports teams, cheerleader outfits, old school annuals, and school program flyers.

The Kincaid City Library housed in the building is located in the same room as the former school library. It is open for several hours, three days a week, and contains books for children and adults. Computers are also available for use.

The Kincaid High School building was a WPA project completed in 1936-1937. The last high school class graduated in 1967. Crest Junior High School used the building until 2002. The current facility is a positive addition to the town of Kincaid and surrounding community.

The historical society invites all who are interested in the preservation of Anderson County history to attend dinner programs the first Thursday of the month and tour the museum Tuesday through Friday, 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Monthly meeting announcements are made in the local newspapers.

Bypass approved around the city of Colony - 20 years ago

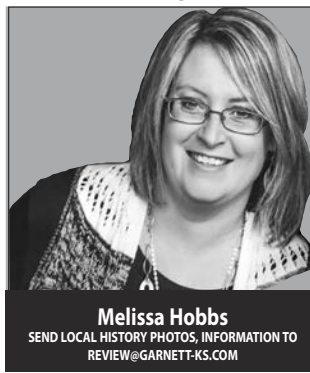

10 years ago....

According to the 2007 year end report released by the Garnett Police Department major crime such as burglary, theft, battery and domestic violence, has decreased a whopping 16 percent. That percentage may not seem like much, but when surrounding communities like Lawrence and the Kansas City metro area are fighting shootings and theft on a day to day basis that number suddenly seems pretty good. Assistant Chief of Police John Lineweiber and Chief of Police Pat Tate attribute the decrease in crime to a more proactive approach in their law enforcement department.

An upcoming portion of the new Kansas Highway Plan will place a 3-mile long bypass around the city of Colony sometime in 1999, and turn over a section of the existing east-west portion of U.S. Highway 169 to Anderson. The Kansas Department of Transportation released its new highway plan last week, showing the Colony bypass project as the only one scheduled in the county during

By a unanimous decision Garnett City Commissioners voted to join the towns of Iola and Chanute in the fight against Williams Natural Gas and the company's interpretation of the open access ruling. According to City Manager Rick Doran, he received a letter from the company stating that as of August 1, the company's pipeline bringing gas to the city would be closed. "We feel it's a violation of the anti-trust laws for Williams to be able to control the city's access to our gas supplier, when they are the only company in the area with a pipeline.

The Mid-America Coalition for Energy Alternatives has asked for suspension of a May 12 decision allowing construction of the Wolf Creek nuclear plant at Burlington. The appeal asked that work be halted on the $1.06 billion plant due to incorrectly stating its ability to finance the construction of the project. According to the appeal, utility customers could be charged for finance cost of the plant while it was still under construction.

If there is any saying that is meaner, that excuses more deceit and cloaks more hypocrisy than "What a man doesn't know, doesn't hurt him," what is it? And who said it first, and who what was the excuse for saying it? Ten to one, it will be found he was committing some meanness, and excused himself for hiding it from those who should know by saying, "What a man doesn't know, doesn't hurt him." Perhaps it doesn't hurt him, but men who use the saying are doing something that is bound to hurt them.

Livestock producers must connect on a value's basis

Today's livestock producers work in a noble profession. Unfortunately, not everyone believes this so people who care for animals must understand how consumers think and feel. Get inside their heads, if you will.

Consumers hold farmers responsible for the humane treatment of farm animals. In recent consumer surveys, people rated animal wellbeing higher than the care and wellbeing of workers in the food system but not as high as food safety.

It is not science, technical capacity or ability that drives trust. Instead, it is whether consumers believe agriculture shares their ethics and values.

Kansas livestock producers spend long hours caring for their cattle, hogs, goats and sheep. Many check on their herds every day. They constantly monitor for health issues. They make sure their livestock are well fed, watered and sheltered during inclement weather.

During calving season, for instance, most cattlemen put their momma cows and newborn calves' wellbeing front and center. You can bet, their care and safety is their number one concern.

INSIGHT

JOHN SCHLAGECK, Kansas Farm Bureau

Telling this story includes showing people what is taking place on our nation's farms and ranches.

The most important job ahead is to communicate in a way that helps people trust what farmers and ranchers say and do. Too often livestock producers take for granted that rural neighbors know and understand who they are and what they do.

Just like their urban cousins, they remain committed to their vocation. They live and breathe animal husbandry - the care and nurturing of their livestock. This charge is always on their minds.

Agriculture can no longer take for granted that those outside our industry know about what we do. Our industry continues to evolve and most of the people in the United States today are not involved in farming and ranching.

Many Americans know little about where their food comes from. They want to believe that what livestock producers are doing is consistent with their values and ethics.

Livestock production or animal agriculture in the most affluent country in the world faces special challenges and opportunities. Among those challenges is that Americans spend such a small percentage of their income on food that they can demand food where they want it, when they want it, in the proportion they want it and produced in a humane way.

Many food stores and food retailers have announced implementation of third-party verification measures to ensure food animals are treated humanely. In some instances, customers will demand third-party verification and if it doesn't exist, the store providing the food may not be credible.

Agriculture can and will win the hearts and minds of consumers.

Tell your story. Inform people at every opportunity how hard you work every day to ensure animals are treated fairly and humanely.

A trip to the 2017 Kansas Anthropological Association Summer Spree to water screen

A few day's ago I returned from attending the 2017 KAA (Kansas Anthropological Association) Summer Spree held Aug.3-6 at the Kansas Historical Museum in Topeka, Ks, from 8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. daily.

A group of us volunteers spent hours conducting water screening, water flotation as well as lab sorting and cataloging. We were working on 1,540 soil sample bags, excavated during the 2017 KATP (Kansas Archaeological Training Program Field School) held this past June at the Valley Falls, Ks. site.

I only attended two days of the Summer Spree Aug.3-4, due to a very painful bout of gout, which attacked my right foot (primarily my big toe). Due to this, I was unable to help with water screening or flotation because of required prolonged standing. Therefore, I worked in the lab sorting and cataloging artifacts from the water screening procedure.

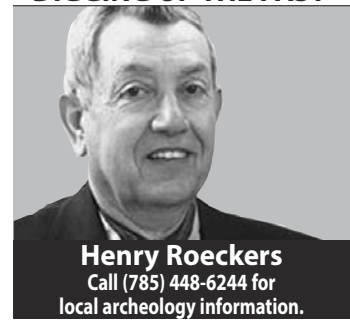

I was assigned a station along a long table and given a very comfortable chair to sit in. The only item at my station was a large lighted magnifying glass.

Next I was given a rather large white tray, two smaller styrofoam trays, a pair of tweezers, hand held magnifying glass, a stack of small plastic containers, a cup of 1"X1" white paper squares, pencil, and two round stack-able screening trays, plus a pre-printed instruction guide.

Now what were all these items used for and what sorting procedure did I actually do? I was given a small bag of collected water screened material which I poured into my top screen. Everything greater than 1/4" remained in it as everything else dropped to the second screen. From that point, everything greater than 1/8" remained, anything smaller than 1/8" filtered on down into my large white tray.

At this point I lifted off the two screening trays and individually poured their contents into the two styrofoam trays, leaving the 1/8" on the white tray.

Next came the sorting. I began with the first screen material and worked down thru the second screen, leaving the tiny material until last. What did I look for? Pottery shards, debitage (left over material from stone tool making), stones of material they used or would use, bone if identifiable, daub (pieces of building material (usually clay/grass mixture), fossils, shell, gastropods, burned stone, and naturally any manufactured stone tools. If I found any of these items, I removed them and on one the little pieces of paper I would write what it was and what size screen it was and place it and the item in one of the cups. Every item, every size was done the same way.

As for the material on the big white tray, I actually took one of the little white cards and with a slicing motion went thru all of the tiny material. When my sorting was completed, I took all my left over material and poured it into a large plastic bag (this was called matrix material). I then made sure my cleaning station was clean and ready for another bag. My sorted material went over to other side of the table, where another cataloged each and every item.

By the way, they say once a person gets the real hang of the sorting procedure, he or she should be able to sort a bag in 15 minutes.

After sorting for two full days, in my dreams Saturday night I saw, tiny flakes of stone, little pieces of daub, pottery, seeds and seed pods, gastropods, bugs, beetles and oh those tiny grains of sand.

Emergency workers confer at the scene of a two-vehicle accident at Welda on Friday. Both drivers escaped serious injury in the mishap.

How to handle an insurance claim timely and properly

TOPEKA, Kan. — With a little preparation, resolving a claim with your insurance company does not have to be a frustrating, time-consuming process, according to Ken Selzer, CPA, Kansas Commissioner of Insurance.

“Being prepared with and keeping track of the information your insurance company needs to process the claim is critical,” said Commissioner Selzer. “What you do before making the claim will help in reducing the time between the insurance incident and the resolution of your problem.”

Commissioner Selzer said Kansans should consider the following ideas to assist with the claims process.

Know your policy. Understand what your policy says. Because it is a contract between you and your insurance company, you need to know what's covered, what's not and what your deductibles are.

File claims as soon as possible. Don't let the bills or receipts pile up. Call your agent or your company's claims hotline as soon as possible. Your policy might require that you make the notification within a certain time frame.

Provide complete, correct information. Be certain to give your insurance company all the necessary information. If your information is incorrect or incomplete, your claim could be delayed.

Keep copies of all communications. Whenever you communicate with your insurance company, be sure to document the communications. With phone calls, include the date, name and title of the person you spoke with and what was said.

Ask questions. If there is a disagreement about the claim settlement, ask the company for the specific language in your policy that is in question. Find out if the disagreement is because you interpret the policy differently. If your claim is denied, make sure you have a letter from the company explaining the reason for the denial — including the specific policy language which caused the denial.

Don't rush into a settlement. If the first offer your insurance company makes does not meet your expectations, talk with your local insurance agent or seek other professional advice.

Document auto/homeowners temporary repairs. Auto and homeowners policies might require you to make temporary repairs to protect your property from further damage. Document any damaged personal property for an adjuster to inspect. If possible, take photographs or videotape the damage before making the repairs. Your policy should cover the cost of these temporary repairs, so keep all receipts.

Don't make permanent repairs. A company might deny a claim if you make permanent repairs before the damage is inspected. If possible, determine what it will cost to repair your property before you meet with an adjuster. Provide the adjuster any records of improvements you made to the property, and ask him/her for an itemized explanation of the claim settlement offer.

Seek accident and health claims details. Ask your medical provider to give your insurance company details about your treatment, condition and prognosis. If you suspect your provider is overcharging, ask the insurance company to audit the bill, and verify whether the provider used the proper billing procedure.

Contact the Kansas Insurance Department (KID). If you continue to have a dispute with your insurance company about the amount or terms of the claims settlement, contact the KID Consumer Assistance Hotline at 1-800-432-2484, or go to the website, www.ksinsurance.org, to use the Chat feature

“You can get a claim resolved quicker if you have the consumer know-how to fast track the process,” Commissioner Selzer said.

BBB Alert: Door-to-Door Asphalt Paving Scammer is Soliciting Business in KS

August 10, 2017 – Exactly one year ago, the Better Business Bureau (BBB) serving Nebraska, South Dakota, The Kansas Plains and Southwest Iowa alerted the public about a church in Sioux Falls, South Dakota that lost $16,000 after hiring a traveling asphalt company called A & M Asphalt Roads & Parking Lots. After paving about one eighth of the lot, church personnel were informed that the crew was leaving to pick up more asphalt. They returned stating that they required payment to pick up the additional asphalt needed to complete the job and requested two checks for $8,000 each. Those checks weren't used to buy asphalt for the church. They were taken directly to the church's bank and cashed by Joseph Stanley who never returned to the church to complete the job. BBB has been informed by a consumer from rural Sedgewick County in Kansas that she was recently approached by George Joseph Stanley with an offer to pave her driveway. He was going door-to-door and driving a white truck with South Dakota license plates. Luckily, the consumer did not fall for his offer. The company's name being used in Kansas is Victory Chip and Seal. Based on the details provided to BBB, it is possible that this is the same Joseph Stanley from A & M Asphalt Roads & Parking Lots who stole money from the church in South Dakota. According to the BBB's investigation, Victory Chip and Seal is not currently licensed to solicit door-to-door in Sedgewick County, Wichita or Valley Center, and in 2014 George Joseph Stanley, aka Joseph Stanley, had been charged with probation violations from a 2009 paving scam in California. BBB is warning businesses and consumers that if they have been approached by this company or any other one offering the same type of deal to contact the BBB immediately at 800.856.2417 or 800.649.6814. Also, let the solicitor know that you will need to submit any offer they may have to the Better Business Bureau for its assessment. If they try to talk you out of this, advise them that you have no interest in doing business with them and end the conversation. If they become aggressive, call 911. Individuals and businesses in need of paving services should insist upon a formal proposal that includes a complete description of services to be performed including costs of materials and labor as well as start and completion dates. The proposal should include the location of the business, a copy of their insurance certificate, licensing and the firm's telephone number. Be sure to seek several estimates from local paving contractors before making any final decisions. Ask for and check local references and contact the firm's insurance company to confirm that all policies are active. Legitimate firms will have no issues with these requests. BBB encourages anyone who comes across a door-to-door paving scam to report it to our scam tracker site at www.bbb.org/scamtracker and to the local police.

Around Town
I am pleased to report my daughter is doing better since her fall while doing a pet care walk. She now has her arm and hand in a cast for 4 to 6 weeks. The bone in her right hand was the worst part of her injury.

Colony received a much needed two-inch rain August 5. Barber County reported straight-line winds and heavy rain night of the 5th. Red Cross volunteers were to help in the recovery process. Most of their power was restored in the area.

We are so sorry to learn of the accident of Gilbert Green. It was reported he was "Code Red" which is severely injured. The accident occurred in the town of Colony. He was on his four-wheeler when he lost control of the vehicle and overturned in the south ditch on 4th and Burton Streets around 4 p.m. Friday afternoon.

Final Story Hour of the year for Colony was extra special

A special guest was present for the last 2017 Story Hour on Tuesday, August 1. She was Jo Ho of Overland Park (pictured above). She visited forty (40) libraries this summer for the Southeast Kansas Library System. This was her last presentation.

All enjoyed her comical speech which also kept the kids involved. She told four stories on "How We All Could Build a Better World", this year's theme.

Twenty-six children and one student helper were in attendance as well as Colony's Debbie Wools who has been in charge of the Story Hour sessions this summer. Ten children won prizes for completing the Incentive Game. They were to complete eight out of twelve activities that were listed.

Children attending were: Trenton Luedke, Easton King, Jacob Young, Gracie Young, Kamryn Jones, Hanna Schmidt, Jaycee Schmidt, Blaine King, Peyton Schmidt and Brooklynn Jones. Shayda Womelsdorf and Brooklynn Jones won "Guess How Many Screws" in the Jar. Every child in attendance was given a book. Ice cream and sherbet were served at the close of this special meeting.

The next meeting will be held September 6, 2017.

Low Income Energy Assistance Program Helps Kansans Stay Cool

TOPEKA—Kansans with low income will have a little extra help paying their utility bills this summer, thanks to the Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP).

"The hot summer months can be especially difficult for Kansans who face the dilemma of whether to turn on the air conditioner and face a high electricity bill or pay for other necessary expenses," Kansas Department for Children and Families (DCF) Secretary Phyllis Gilmore said. "This extra assistance will help keep Kansans safe from dangerous heat."

LIEAP provides an annual benefit to help qualifying households pay winter heating bills. Persons with disabilities, older adults and families with children are the primary groups assisted. In the winter of 2017, almost 38,000 households received an average benefit of $525.

This year, funding is available to provide an additional benefit to those households for energy costs. This is not a new application period. Households that applied for and received a benefit during the regular application period will automatically be issued a supplemental benefit. Households receiving the supplemental benefit will receive written notice of the specific benefit amount they will be receiving. Supplemental benefits will be paid in the same manner and to the same vendor as they were for the regular benefit. The supplemental funds will be dispersed beginning Aug. 9.

Funding for the Low Income Energy Assistance Program is provided by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Community Service through the Federal Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program.

For more information on the Low Income Energy Assistance Program, visit <http://www.dcf.ks.gov/services/ees/Pages/Energy/EnergyAssistance.aspx>. You can also call 1-800-432-0043.

ATTENTION EAST KANSAS AGRI-ENERGY, LLC SHAREHOLDERS 4 More Days Until the Annual Meeting!

My name is Gary Dieterich. My family owns approximately 1% of the outstanding shares of East Kansas Ethanol.

I'm concerned about our investment in the renewable diesel project.

I arrived at the plant on July 19, to my dismay and surprise, the renewable diesel plant was not in production.

In my opinion, the renewable diesel project may have similar results as the Wood Project we invested in Georgia.
