Taxes capped

Local governments work through first tax-limited budget cycle

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Local governments putting together their 2018 budgets this year did so under a new state law that prevents an increase in local property taxes beyond the rate of inflation, unless those additional costs are approved by voters.

The change was a move by the Kansas Legislature to attempt to put the brakes on local property tax increases by cities, counties and school districts — complaints over which were a near constant refrain from taxpayer organizations and members of the public in recent years.

Garnett City Manager Chris Weiner said the new constraints — which affect all local government funds except law enforcement, fire protection and emergency medical services — weren't as hard on his jurisdiction as on some others.

"It's been somewhat of a challenge," Weiner said, "but overall we're fairly stable" he said of the county's tax valuation. "In places where they're either growing or really declining, it's a lot bigger problem."

Weiner told city commissioners last week he had made some changes in the 2018 budget in response to the new tax lid, including redefining the city's "Law Enforcement Fund" into one combining expenses of both local police and fire units into a "Public Safety Fund." Weiner said the change was in keeping with his efforts to make the Garnett budget more transparent, and would allow a clear separation of that fund in the event the city needed additional revenues for those expenses beyond the tax lid. Weiner also said he planned to create an equipment reserve fund in order to fund depreciation of certain equipment and vehicles that have to be

Even with cool, wet summer, county is behind normal rainfall

Zero precip in February and dry spring set area back

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA — Most area residents who are still mowing their grass this far into August won't believe Anderson County actually has only received about half the normal rainfall it should expect thus far into 2017.

But that's the data from the K-State University Weather Data Library, which records rainfall totals for counties all over the state and keeps historical data on rainfall dating back to 1939.

Even with solid recent rains like one last Monday that dropped 4.04 inches of rain at the official measuring center at the Garnett Municipal Airport, Anderson County thus far has recorded only 16.39 inches of rain through late August — when normal rainfall through eight months would stack up to around 25 inches. The county averages about 41 inches of rainfall per year. State Climatologist Mary Knapp said a variety of factors affect how much rain any certain area receives, even within what can seem like a consistent pattern of precipitation.

"Timing can be everything in rainfall," Knapp said, noting that spottiness of rainfall can vary collection amounts at different collection points in the same county. "Another factor is that while June was hot, July was close to average in temperatures, and August is trending on the cooler than normal side." Preliminary precipitation total for August through last week is 4.06 inches, of which 4.04 inches was reported on the 22nd (falling between 7:00 a.m. on the 21st to 7:00 a.m. on the 22nd). Normal for August is 4.02 inches. Another oddity is that Anderson County is a dry island in a sea of higher totals in the surrounding counties. Franklin County totaled 17.54 inches through July; Coffey County 20.32, Linn County 29.78, Miami 24.88 and Allen 21.8. Those counties in the region, like Anderson average between 39 and 43 inches a year. But the collection data shows Anderson County's precipitation deficit dating back to February of this year, when the county received zero precip at all. March wasn't much better — the county got .95 of one inch and should have gotten 2.67 for the month. Only in April did the county surpass its average, picking up 4.79 inches in a month that ordinarily would have seen 3.98. But May and June were comparatively dry as well — together the typically wettest two months of the year should have measured nearly 11 inches, but netted only a smidge over 5 inches.

The K-State drought report last week said average precipitation was greater than normal for late August, but was skewed to the northern and eastern divisions of the state. Statewide average precipitation was 0.77 inches or 106 percent of normal. The Southeast Division average precipitation was 1.55 inches or 188 percent of normal. In contrast the Southwest Division averaged just 0.18 inches or 30 percent of normal.

Utility fund law dropped as city moves on '18 budget

First look at new budget without utility drawdowns may come this week

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Garnett City Commissioners last week repealed a 1960s-era charter ordinance that placed a limit on the amount of funds the city could use from its utility surpluses to fund the city's general budget, as the city's new manager works to re-craft a budget for 2018 that meets his own standards.

Charter Ordinance 3 was passed by the city commission in 1968 and prohibited the city from utilizing any more than 10 percent of the surpluses generated by the utility fund to supplement the city's general budget. The gist of that ordinance had apparently been forgotten over the following four decades, as subsequent city managers assessed different and often unrelated expenses from the general budget to the utility fund to avoid the limit on transfers out of that fund.

Weiner, who took the position of city manager in July, uncovered the charter ordinance disparity and brought it to the attention of city commissioners along with his desire to redraft the city's 2018 budget with more clarity as to actual costs involved in operation of various departments. Weiner told commissioners he hoped to have a workable draft of a budget ready for a workshop with commissioners this week.

A charter ordinance is part of the mechanics of a city's "home rule" authority granted to municipalities in Kansas which allows cities to

County, state jobs picture strong

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA — Unemployment in Anderson County hovered below the 5 percent mark in July as the local area continued to post one of the better jobless rates among surrounding counties.

Anderson County posted a 4.6 percent jobless rate in July, equal with its ranking from June and down from 5.1 percent in June 2016.

Statewide, preliminary estimates reported by the Kansas Department of Labor (KDOL) and Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) show a seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of 3.7 percent in July. This was unchanged from June and down from 4.2 percent in July 2016.

"The Kansas unemployment rate made significant improvements early this calendar year falling to the low level of 3.7 percent," said Kansas

Secretary of Labor, Lana Gordon. "This month, the rate remains at 3.7 percent, the lowest rate since the fall of 2000."

Anderson County's estimate labor force of 4,314 saw employment of 4,115. Three hundred eighty-one of Allen County's 6,134 labor pool were jobless for a rate of 6.2 percent in July, down from 6.4 in June and 7.3 a year ago. Coffey County rated at 6.3 percent in July, up from 5.8 in June and 7.5 a year ago. Franklin County was a 4.3 percent, up from 4.0 last month and 4.9 the same month in 2016. Six point six percent of Linn County's 4,461 labor pool was unemployed in July, up slightly from 6.4 percent in June and 7.1 percent the year prior. Miami County's labor pool of 17,353 was jobless to the tune of only 4.2 percent, up from 3.9 in precipitation reported for last week was 8.85 inches reported at Hillsdale Lake in Miami County.

The continued rains in the eastern divisions allowed for the trimming of the abnormally dry conditions along the Kansas River. Abnormally dry conditions were replaced by moderate drought in the eastern parts of Southwest Kansas, and again expanded in the North Central, Northeast and Central divisions this week. The cut-off for precipitation to be included in the US Drought Monitor assessment is the Tuesday morning before the Thursday release, so precipitation that fell after midnight on Monday won't be included until next week. The heaviest rains fell in areas that were already drought free. Chances for precipitation are scattered for the weekend, and the 8-14 day precipitation outlook is for below normal precipitation across much of the state. The temperature outlook is for cooler than normal conditions state-wide. The quantitative precipitation for the week ending on September 1st has the heaviest rainfall tracking to the east of Kansas.

replaced every few years, rather than raiding other city funds on an emergency basis.

The inflation rate limit is set on a 5-year rolling average which for the present budget year came out to 1.4 percent.

Anderson County's budget was finalized last week and published in advance of the Sept. 5 budget hearing. County clerk Julie Heck said the county had been preparing for the first tax lid and didn't have much problem dealing with it.

"Our auditor and Phyllis (Gettler, former county clerk) had done a good job of preparing the commissioners for this coming into this budget year," Heck said. "We weren't even near the CPI in this year's budget."

Anderson County transferred forward $1.8 million in budget transfers into 2016 and $2.6 million into the 2017 budget in preparation for the first year of the lid. The county estimated transfers of only $930,000 for 2018. Anderson County raised $7.5 million of its overall $14.2 million budget in 2016, taxed $8.4 million of 2017's $13.4 million spending plan, and estimated $8.7 million in taxes to fund the $13.7 million budget for 2018.

Anderson County's assessed valuation went from $84.5 million in 2016 to $90 million in 2017 and bumped to $94.3 million in 2018.

an increase in hourly earnings contributed to a notable gain in average weekly earnings for July," said Senior Labor Economist, Tyler Tenbrink.

"The estimated changes in the number of jobs and the size of the labor force were not significant this month."

Since July 2016, Kansas lost 10,800 seasonally adjusted total nonfarm jobs and 12,100 private sector jobs.

So God is among us!

In Exodus 17:8-16 we read the story of Israel's battle with the Amalekites at Rephidim and the staff of God. So Joshua fought the Amalekites as Moses had ordered, and Moses, Aaron and Hur, went to the top of the hill. As long as Moses held up his hands with the staff of God the Israelites were winning but whenever he lowered his hands, the Amalekites were winning. When Moses had grown tired they took a stone and put it under him and he sat on it. Aaron and Hur held his hands up --one on one side, one on the other-- so that his hands remained steady till sunset. So Joshua overcame the Amalekite army with the sword.

At first glance this appears to be a relatively insignificant battle but it illustrates the sovereignty, supreme power or authority of God over events and circumstances. Nothing is mentioned concerning the individual strength of either army. That is not the point here. In Exodus 17:9 Moses tells Joshua, "Choose some of our men and go out to fight the Amalekites. Tomorrow I will stand on top of the hill with the staff of God in my hands." When Moses held the staff of God up, God was with the Israelites, when he failed to hold the staff up God withdrew his help from Israel.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

The uplifted staff was the sign of the Lord's victory.

Just prior to this battle the people had grumbled against God because they had no water and God proceeded to provide water for the Israelite's out of the rock. Moses struck the rock with the staff of God and water flowed out for the people to drink and to water their livestock. Prior to receiving this the people ask, "Is the Lord among us or not?"

This seems to be a question many have today. I guess I have to ask a question as well. If he isn't among us where is he? God gives us a good explanation of where he is in Jeremiah 24:7, "I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord. They will be my people, and I will be their God, for they will return to me with all their heart." So God is among us. He is in the heart of every believer, but he is not the God of everyone.

Lawsuit may solve Anderson County secret

If justice prevails in a civil lawsuit filed in Leavenworth County on behalf of a couple whose teen son has been missing nearly 30 years, Anderson County residents may yet find out who was at the bottom of a secret campaign to defeat the Anderson County Hospital bond vote in 2012.

Randy Leach was 17 years old when he took his parents' car to a pre-graduation party in a rural area of Leavenworth County in April 1988. He hasn't been heard from since.

Harold and Alberta Leach asked repeatedly and for decades for information on the case, but were repeatedly denied any records from the Leavenworth County Sheriff's Department's criminal investigation file. Thirty years and nothing – no word and no discussion of the nuts and bolts of the investigation – because Kansas law allows those investigation records to remain secret in perpetuity.

It's another example of the archaic disdain with which Kansas law treats its citizens when it comes to allowing public access to information. Only in recent years have the affidavits that justify search and arrest warrants become public record – this after a botched pot raid on a Johnson County family's home left them with $25,000 in legal fees trying to find out why cops singled them out. Legislators overturned that prohibition after finally considering the case against it, and realizing Kansas was the only state in the union that still hid that information.

Secrets like that give cover to bad law enforcement and bad prosecutors. In the Johnson County case, cops thought tea leaves in the family's trash were pot. They acted on that info before realizing their error, and the law made it easy for them to keep their mistake quiet. For the Leach family, 30 years without a notable development in their son's disappearance has them wondering if sheriff's investigators really gave it their all. It's a natural concern, and access to those records could either prove the family's suspicions or vindicate the officers involved.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

In 2012, Anderson County Attorney Brandon Jones gave cover to some local residents who mounted an illegal campaign against the bond issue to build the new Anderson County Hospital. After investigating and identifying those who employed tactics opposing the referendum that violated state election law, Jones refused to pursue charges against them and refused to require them to file public campaign advocacy forms, as per state law, which would have listed their names publicly.

Why Jones allowed these cowards to thumb their noses at laws designed to provide accountability in elections has become almost as big a question as those folks' identities.

The law that allows Jones to keep them masked is the same one that allows Leavenworth County authorities to deny agonizing parents access to 30 year-old data on the search for their missing son – an investigation no doubt gone cold for decades. The legal withholding of this type information from the public disparages the spirit of open government that Kansas legislators swear they uphold, and which the people of our state deserve.

Hopefully, the heartbroken parents of Randy Leach will win their case and get some answers, a precedent will be set, and state lawmakers will change the statute to reflect the conscience for public information to which they swear during their own campaigns.

Maybe then Anderson County residents can get the information the law says they should have.

Reading Mr. Hicks article on the probability of Mt. Rushmore being destroyed, I'm sure it's on the agenda of that sensitive mob and their disgusting followers. I only hope the people of South Dakota and the people of many other states will send this message: You will destroy Mt. Rushmore only over our dead bodies.

Scam phone calls are being made to Garnett senior citizens demanding money. They're wielding information, making believe that families are in jeopardy and scaring good people. Don't give these information thieves the opportunity to exploit you. Don't give information, don't answer 'yes' to their questions. If you have caller ID, report these scum to the proper authorities. Be careful and protect yourself.

Two things: Three cheers for President Trump? BS. He didn't do anything, he isn't stopping anything. Besides it's time to get rid of the racist flags and racist statues. Guess what, they lost the war. We don't honor losers. We don't honor Hitler do we? How stupid. And then the goofball with his editorial, oh the left is just terrible. You know what? You Republicans are really just inbred morons. Just racist morons. That's all you guys are.

I read with interest Mr. Hicks's editorial about the demonization of Mt. Rushmore, but the editorial didn't go far enough to expose the horrible legacy of slavery in South Dakota and in other places across the country. Not far from Rushmore is the mountain being carved into the likeness of Crazy Horse. Most American Indian tribes took, kept and sold slaves – it was a part of their culture and was never questioned except by the whites who eventually vanquished them and subjected them to U.S. law after the Civil War. What a state our country will be in when we have to rename every sports team named after indians, rename every town or county with an indian name, every state or national park and so on? But, right is right and fair is fair.

Trump needs all the good help he can get

Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin took the highly unusual step over the weekend of publicly explaining why he won't resign. He responded to Yale classmates who had written an impassioned open letter urging him to quit in protest over what they called (ridiculously overstating their case) President Donald Trump's "support of Nazism and white supremacy." There was no reason for Mnuchin – a busy man and one of the most important economic officials on the planet – to bother replying unless he feels a little defensive.

After Charlottesville, the question of the propriety of serving in the Trump administration gained new salience. Rumors swirled that economic adviser Gary Cohn was on the verge of quitting in disgust, and liberal journalists called for all good men and women to jump ship. This is wrongheaded. It's much better for the country that as many responsible, talented people serve the Trump administration as possible.

Even if it isn't easy. Working for Trump means being willing to put up with the possibility of humiliation of the sort that loyalist Attorney General Jeff Sessions suffered at the president's hands. It means dancing around his outrageous statements and pretending to work for a more normal president. And it means courting social disapproval.

This can't be what a high-flying financial and movie producer like Steve Mnuchin signed up for. But any Trump official who doesn't think he is being forced to violate his personal conscience should stick it out.

The presidency is an important institution, and whatever fantasies his enemies may have of a rapid ending to his tenure, Trump is president. He needs good advice and competent help. There are obviously limits to how much he can be controlled, but he is susceptible to advice. It's no accident that Trump hasn't withdrawn from NAFTA, pursued a trade war with China or kneecapped NATO.

Surely, many of those around Trump enjoy the thrill of notoriety and proximity to power, as is true in any White House, but a sense of duty weighs as well. "There are people inside the administration," Anthony Scaramucci said during his turn as White House communications director, "that think it is their job to save America from this president." This puts it starkly and derisively, but no doubt accurately – especially when it comes to the generals.

The portfolios of Secretary of Defense James Mattis and national security adviser H.R. McMaster include the most consequential matters of state, and John Kelly is now running the White House as chief of staff. The administration's credibility depends in large part on the service of these men. It's comparable to the moral power that David Petraeus assumed in 2007 when George W. Bush subcontracted making the public case for the Iraq War to him.

If any of the generals, particularly John Kelly, were to quit and lambaste Trump on the way out the door, it might have a debilitating effect on his presidency. That sounds alluring to Trump's critics. But crippled presidencies aren't good for the country, and Trump was duly elected. So the generals are right to stay and serve their country in this capacity. Someone has to do it.

Raise for prison staff averts special session

Remember when you moved out of your college apartment, and probably because your mother told you to, you vacuumed one last time and checked to make sure nothing was spoiling in the refrigerator?

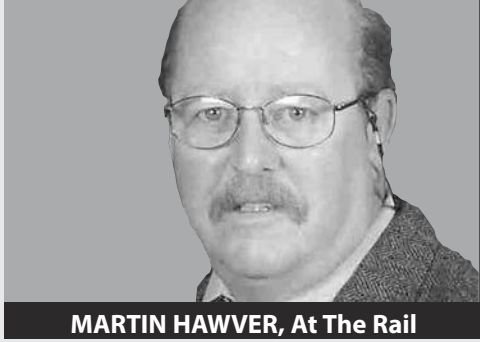

Gov. Sam Brownback did the equivalent of that final cleanup last week when he told Secretary of Corrections Joe Norwood to start the paperwork to give raises of 10 percent to correctional officers at El Dorado Correctional Facility, the state's biggest prison...and, oh yes, 5 percent to uniformed correctional officers at the state's other prisons.

Those raises, which are aimed at boosting employment at El Dorado where there were some relatively moderate convict uprisings last month and throwing a bone to the officers at other facilities, will cost a few million dollars, and he agreed with leaders of the House and Senate that the budget touch-ups that will be required to balance the Corrections budget will be taken care of next session.

That averted a special session of the Legislature, which leaders feared, to deal with the prison salary issue this fall, and also was probably the most solid indication that Brownback is quietly waiting for his confirmation to a State Department post dealing with international religious freedom and protection to which he has been appointed by President Donald Trump.

And, Brownback's raise proposition, while less than many had wanted for prison workers, also essentially indicates that there's apparently no not-yet-visible special provision that Brownback wants considered on his way out of office. Back in 2014, Brownback called a special session to deal with a flaw in the state's Hard 50 sentencing statute but was likely more interested in Senate confirmation of his former legal counsel Caleb Stegall to the Kansas Court of Appeals under a new constitutional amendment passed in 2014.

STATE COMMENTARY

That prison raise approved by the governor essentially means that Brownback is doing housekeeping on his way out, and trusts the Legislature to get into the scrap over those prison salaries next session when he will presumably read about the issue in the newspaper at his Washington, D.C., office.

Might note that the governor wasn't interested in taking a leadership role on a bigger dollar issue last year, when it was learned just after the election that the newly elected Legislature faced millions of dollars of shortfall in last fiscal year, and instead of using his authority to cut spending, handed the tough decisions off to the lawmakers to wrestle with in this year's session.

The prison raises authorized by Brownback aren't likely to solve the problem of crowded prisons, of staff turnover that neared 50 percent in the last fiscal year at El Dorado and averaged 33 percent in the entire eight-facility corrections system. The lower raises at the other seven institutions will be an issue when the Legislature reconvenes, and the raise issue will undoubtedly spread to other state employees, many of whom got their first 2.5 percent raise this year after nearly a decade of frozen salaries.

The prison raises will become a catalyst for state employee pay consideration, which is a bigger issue in cities with high numbers of state workers than across the prairie, and which will also be compared to pay for schoolteachers, who are likely to receive raises this year due to increased state spending on K-12. No telling whether the Kansas Supreme Court will determine that the increased spending on public schools meets the constitutional "adequacy" requirement, but some districts have decided to take what is in their budgets and spend it on raises for schoolteachers.

Practically, Brownback damped the prison pay issue, or at least reduced its heat, and set an example that Lt. Gov. Jeff Colyer, who ascends to the governorship when Brownback is confirmed for the Trump appointment, is going to have to deal with for the final year of the gubernatorial term and in preparation for his race for governor...

Bank robbery in Greeley ends in shootout - 100 years ago

10 years ago...
The clock is ticking for Anderson County's 1929 vintage jail, with no pardon in sight. The downtown fixture which represented the hard edge of justice in Anderson County, holding at one time or another all manner of prisoners from bootleggers to murderers to child molesters, is scheduled for demolition early next week after 78 years of service. No firm date for razing the structure has been determined, although it's expected to begin August 20.

Possible damages and legal liability for seldom used minimum maintenance roads was a topic of discussion at last week's Anderson County Commission meeting. The issue of the roads has come up in the past mainly stressed by farmers, stockmen, and others who use the roads infrequently, but the recent trouble has been that four-wheel drive and other off-road vehicles are frequently using these usually vacant roads to go mudding after rains. This use is cutting deep ruts into the dirt roads which later dry and make the road hard to drive on when farmers and stockmen need to Word has spread throughout the local area that Garnett Church Furnishings is building a special shipment of chairs and furniture for Pope John Paul's scheduled visit to the United States in September. According to business owner Don McAfee, several people have come to the plant wanting to see the project, but for insurance reasons they are not able to display the items. They plan to hold an open house on September 6 for the public to view the completed work.

Almost half of all married women now work in jobs covered by social security.

Out of over 22 million married women, some 47 percent of them have jobs outside of their homes. Working women build social security disability, survivors, retirement, and Medicare protection for themselves and their families. More married women work now than in 1967 because families are smaller and there are more jobs for women and more day care facilities for children.

The Greeley bank was robbed yesterday morning by three men. It took them an hour to crack the safe, during which time there were five explosions. Alarms were given and the robbers were met as they left the bank. The robbers immediately fired four shots from sawed-off shotguns and the shots struck all those present but Mr. Hans Huss. None were seriously injured as the guns were loaded with bird shot. The fire was returned by citizen bystanders. One robber was hit because blood was found at the old campground on the northeast corner of town. The members of the Garnett State Guard assisted in the hunt for the robbers but they escaped. They took only currency and secured between $2,000 and $3,000.

Old chauffeur license found - seeking information

Another unique Garnet artifact was found with my new Ace 300 metal detector. Before I lightly brushed it to remove the dirt, I thought it said Garnett, Kansas on it. However, after light cleaning, here is actually what it says;
CHAUFFEUR LICENSE 35178 KANSAS EXP. JULY 1, 1941.

With the gracious help of researching by Kristie Kinney at City Hall, I learned that in the 1950's there were city ordinances written concerning the issuance of a chauffeur license. They were often issued to taxi cab drivers, etc.

Here are a few unanswered questions. When and by whom was this badge lost in Lots of unanswered questions right?

Like what will I dig up next?

Garnett? Did it once belong to one of Garnett's taxi cab drivers? (When I was a young boy growing up in Garnett, I remember Garnett had a Taxi Cab driver all the way into the 1950's). Also if my memory serves me correctly, one of the taxi drivers name was Ezra Tait.

A couple more questions. What year was this badge

Kansas Wheat announces winners of 2017 yield contest

Kansas Wheat is proud to announce the winners of the 8th Annual Kansas Wheat Yield Contest. This year's top wheat yields belong to Spencer West of LeRoy, Eastern Region winner; Richard Seck of Hutchinson, Central Region Winner and Alec Horton of Horton Seed Services in Leoti, Western Region Winner.

Spencer West is the overall winner of the 2017 Kansas Wheat Yield Contest, with a new contest record.

He is also a repeat winner in this year's Eastern Region. West's winning plot was five acres planted with WB-Cedar (WestBred) and resulted in a yield of 123.75 bushels per acre, a Kansas Wheat Yield Contest record. This is West's second consecutive regional win in the contest, and he made a splash this year with a record eastern region yield for the Kansas Wheat Yield Contest.

Richard Seck is this year's Central Region winner. His plot was 7 acres planted with LCS Mint (Limagrain). His prize-winning yield was 115.29 bushels an acre.

Alec Horton is this year's Western Region winner. He achieved a yield of 93 bushels per acre on his 5.98 acre plot of WB-Grainfield (WestBred). Horton is another repeat regional winner in the Kansas Wheat Yield Contest; last year's plot smashed the record books with a yield of 121.48 bushels an acre.

Best management practices are key for winners of the Kansas Wheat Yield Contest. All three winners used treated seed on no-till ground. In addition, winners used innovative fertilizing techniques and protected their investments with fungicide applications. For more information on this year's winners, visit kansaswheat.org/yeildwinners.

The 2017 Kansas Wheat Yield Contest is sponsored by Limagrain, WestBred, Kansas Wheat Alliance, AgriPro/Syngenta, ADM Milling and Kansas Wheat. Winners of the contest receive a $1,000 prize that will be awarded on September 14 by the governor at the Kansas State Fair. Each winner will also receive a $500 prize, awarded by the company whose variety they planted.

In addition, the contest also has the optional Quality Initiative. Participants collect a sample of their wheat which will then be graded and analyzed by ADM Milling for various quality components. The sample with the highest overall quality, mill and bake scores will receive $250. This winner will be announced by the governor at the State Fair.

make specific laws regarding their operation in cases where there is either no applicable state law or existing state law doesn't conflict with the charter ordinance. Charter ordinances that are passed are kept on file both at the city hall and at the Kansas Secretary of State's Office.

Weiner said the move affords the city the ability to budget transfers of surplus utility funds without restriction, and would make a better illustration of the true costs of some of the city's non-utility budget items.

Garnett's budget is a combination of property taxes, sales tax, user fees and utility funds which amounted to $10.7 million in planned spending this year, with some $984,000 in property taxes drawn from a city assessed valuation of $22.9 million.

Essential oils can assist with livestock digestion, study finds

MANHATTAN — Kansas State University researchers have found that essential oils can play a role in livestock health.

Essential oils are removed from plants and distilled into concentrated forms that distributors say support immunity and other functions of the body.

In a study, professors Evan Titemeyer and T.G. Nagaraja found that limonene, which is in lemon oil, and thymol, which is in thyme oil, help combat a harmful bacterium in cattle stomachs. The bacterium, Fusobacterium necrophorum, makes dietary protein less available to the animal.

The results have been published in the Journal of Dairy

Science and the Journal of Animal Science.

The Food and Drug Administration has issued guidance to minimize the use of some antibiotics in livestock. The FDA's guidance aims to avoid exposing people's food to antibiotic-resistant bacteria, according to Nagaraja, a university distinguished professor of microbiology in the university's College of Veterinary Medicine.

As the researchers started studying alternative treatments to antibiotic use, one of their team members, Eman Elkaweel, who was then a graduate student in animal science, suggested a substance that was new to the professors.

"She wanted to test some products that might have the potential to be used in her home country of Egypt, so we contacted a company that sold products containing essential oil components," said Titemeyer, who is a professor and graduate program director in the animal sciences and industry department in the College of Agriculture.

With funding from DSM Nutritional Products Inc., which supplies nutritional solutions for animal health, Nagaraja and Titemeyer tested five essential oil components: eugenol, guaiacol, limonene, thymol and vanillin. They wanted to determine the compounds' ability to inhibit growth of Fusobacterium necrophorum. Limonene and thymol performed best. Follow-up testing between the two showed that limonene was slightly more effective than thymol and nearly as effective as tylosin, a commonly used antibiotic and feed additive used to hinder bacterial growth and the incidence of liver abscesses in cattle.

"While livestock producers often turn to antibiotics, our study shows that some essential oils also can inhibit microbial growth," Titemeyer said. "Certain essential oil compounds can target specific bacterial populations and optimize animal health."

Volunteers return from helping rebuild homes in South Dakota

A team of Midwest Volunteers led by Garnett Mayor Gordon Blackie has just returned from South Dakota where they assisted in replacing homes.

Straight line winds, tornadoes, hailstorms, and floods severely damaged or destroyed hundreds of homes during May and June, 2015, and again in September, 2016. This loss of housing compounded an already existing shortage of good housing for residents of the Pine Ridge reservation.

The team included Larry Weber and Greg Hefley of Westphalia and Jacob Skedel of Garnett.

Another trip is planned later this year to Pine Ridge from Oct 15 to Oct 21, 2017. Interested volunteers should email Gordon Blackie at mwmair@gmail.com or phone 913 208 4410.

Donations can be sent to MidWest Missionair, 625 S Oak St., Garnett, KS 66032.

Garnett Public Library Book Discussion September 27th

The Garnett Public Library will hold their book discussion on Wednesday, September 27th at 7 p.m. in the Archer Room at the library. They are held on the fourth Wednesday of each month. This month's book is "A Dog Named Christmas" by Greg Kincaid. Kincaid, when not writing, is a practicing lawyer. He lives on a farm in eastern Kansas with his wife, three horses, two dogs, and two cats. Greg is another one of the authors appearing at the library's "Celebrate the Book, Chapter 2" on October 21 at GES.

When Todd, a developmentally challenged young man still living on his parents' Kansas farm, hears that a local shelter is seeking temporary homes for their dogs during the holiday week, he knows exactly what he wants for Christmas. Animals are Todd's first love, and his persistence quickly overwhelms his father's objections to befriending a canine—a reluctance that proves to have a painful origin.

The family takes in a very special animal, and the shelter's Christmas adoption program soon grows larger than anyone had hoped. By the story's end, Todd, with the help of a dog named Christmas, has taught an entire community the transformative power of goodwill and shared love—a lesson for all seasons.

Leading our discussion will be Paulabeth Henderson. The books are available for checkout at the library. Notification is posted in case of cancellation.
