THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 10-17-2017 / DANE HICKS

Cars in the Vintage Class division of Saturday's Lake Garnett Grand Prix Revival line up to prepare for their track run. Sultry, windy weather on Saturday gave way to Saturday night storms that cut the downtown car show and other planned events short, but cooler temperatures and clear skies were the rule of the day Sunday for the conclusion of the event.

Arrest set Monday in man's July 4 death

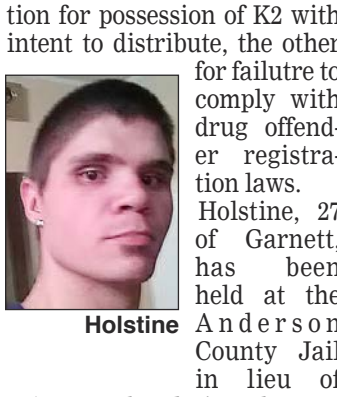

Motions also made to revoke probation for 2016 convictions

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — An arraignment has been set at 9:30 a.m. Monday morning for the man accused in the July 4 accident that led to the death of 75-year-old Lloyd Sutton of Garnett.

Andrew Holstine will be arraigned on three counts of possession of methamphetamine with intent to sell, no drug tax stamp, and counts of involuntary manslaughter while under the influence of drugs, failure to stop at an accident involving death and lesser charges.

County attorney Brandon Jones will also pursue motions to revoke Holstine's probation in two 2016 cases, one a conviction for possession of K2 with intent to distribute, the other for failure to comply with drug offender registration laws.

Holstine

Holstine, 27, of Garnett, has been held at the Anderson County Jail in lieu of a $100,000 bond since he was apprehended after fleeing the scene the night of the incident. Lloyd Sutton died hours later from injuries he sustained when the car Holstine drove plowed into a sidewalk bench in front of the parking area at Sandra's Quick Stop at the U.S. 169/U.S. 59 roundabout south of Garnett.

Rates could double to pay for new water plant

First-blush estimate: extra $1 million a year needed to serve debt

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Construction of a new water treatment plant at Crystal Lake could drive a 100% increase in city water rates, according to preliminary estimates discussed with city commissioners last week.

City manager Chris Weiner told commissioners estimated water rates, which now generate about $1 million per year in revenues across all categories of customers, would have to double in order to provide the additional funds for repayment of bonds needed to pay for the plant's construction. Weiner said he would know more after the conclusion of a rate study underway for the city from the Kansas Rural Water Association. Commissioners tabled a decision on the engineering contract pending the outcome of the rate study.

Garnett water rates are divided into a number of categories for residences, businesses and industries both inside and outside the city limits, as well as wholesale rates charged to Rural Water Districts which buy water from Garnett for resale. Though the amounts vary, those charges all involve a base charge from

Downtown living plan sent back

More tweaks needed to zoning amendment for 1st floor residents

BY ART BLACK THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — City commissioners last week tabled an amendment to the city's zoning laws which would allow the partial development of residences in the back half of the city's downtown buildings.

The Garnett Planning and Zoning Commission had forwarded the recommendation to city commissioners, which would amend a restriction in downtown building use laws that presently don't allow people to live on the first floor of downtown structures. Residences are permitted in the upper stories of those buildings, but the first-floor areas have traditionally been reserved according to city zoning law for commercial enterprises in order to protect the area for commercial business development and operation.

The zoning change came after an August 2017 proposal from Dane Hicks, president of Garnett Publishing, Inc., and publisher of The Anderson County Review, who proposed the city change the law in order to add some economic potential to the city's struggling downtown in the wake of building collapses and condemnations.

Members of the planning board however sought to keep the integrity of the front section retail restriction intact and approved the rear 50% only of the structure for residential use after approval of a special use permit.

City manager Chris Weiner told city commissioners the amendment still needed some additional consideration concerning how to account for hallways and staircases with-

Sheriff's proposal would put parents on the hook for housing costs of juveniles in detention

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A bill for $13,000 to the county for the care and housing of an Anderson County juvenile offender has prompted county sheriff Vern Valentine to seek the legal means to assess parents the cost of detaining their juvenile offender children.

Valentine approached county commissioners recently regarding the passage of a county resolution that would authorize the sheriff as the head of the county's jail system to pursue collections against parents whose children incur those costs.

Commissioners planned to study the option with county legal counsel.

Valentine told the Review the county pays $130 per day to hold a juvenile at a designated juvenile detention facility in Franklin County — that's $10-$20 a day cheaper than other nearby facilities in Girard or Douglas County and is a closer drive for transportation to and from court hearings. Anderson County Jail can't hold juveniles at its location in downtown Garnett, because state law mandates juveniles have to be out of sight and hearing proximity from the adult jail population — that's not practical at the local facility, Valentine said.

The proposed resolution is modeled after one adopted by Franklin County some years back. Franklin County also compiled a fee structure for reimbursement based on parent's income.

"For example," Valentine said, "if the parent or parents make $10,000 or less a year, the cost would be five dollars a day and it goes up from there based on the parents' annual income."

Valentine said the proposal didn't include instances such as child in need of care cases or kids involved in cases of abuse.

Previous county commissioners had turned down the proposal, Valentine said,

WATER... rates could double

$10 to $18.50 per month with an additional volume charge for the actual amount of water measured monthly at the customer's meter.

City clerk Kristie Kinney said residential customers make up the bulk - figures for the last 6 months consumption showed about 53 percent - of total city water sales. Kinney said the average residential customer uses between 3,000 and 4,000 per month, at a rate of $10 per month base and $5.90 per thousand gallons. Residences outside the city limits pay $18.50 base plus $7.65 per thousand gallons.

But the city's biggest water customer is the East Kansas Agri Energy ethanol plant, which in the past six months used some 450,000 a month of potable water. EKAE CEO Bill Pracht said last week the plant averaged around $40,000 monthly in payments for water. That doesn't include water used in plant production, which is pumped in after it's treated and discharged from a city sewer plant. The city would ordinarily release that water into a nearby creek, so in the past it has not charged EKAE for that water. Kinney said charging for that effluent water was one of the new options being considered in the plan to pay for the new plant, along with the doubling of base customer charges.

Commissioner Greg Gwin said he was hesitant to sign an engineering plan to kick off the project until the rate study was complete.

"If the rates are going to be five times the money, we may want to back out of it," Gwin said.

Weiner told commissioners the plant, whose core structure dates to 1915, was in "critical condition" with a collapsing wall which could compromise one of the plant's clear-water treatment basins at any time. If that happened, the city would have no choice but to start purchasing water from other sources and trucking it into the city for distribution.

"If that wall on the inside of the plant collapses and we have a crack well collapse, we could wind up with having to truck in potable water," Weiner said. "Then our expenses for that treatment plant are going to pale in comparison to trucking in water."

Weiner said he was in process of trying to drum up new possible future customers for water, which might mean an expansion of the current project plan to accommodate higher levels of water production. He said the city could possibly upgrade the proposed 1.5 million gallon per day design to 2 million gallon per day at an increased cost of some 10-15 percent. He said depending on the outcome of possible new water sales, that upgrade could make financial sense.

Weiner said he might have the KRWA study results in time for the October 24 commission meeting.

Mass of Christian burial was held Thursday, October 12, 2017, at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Ottawa, Kansas.

Burial followed in the St. Boniface Catholic Cemetery in Scipio, Kansas.

Cost of funerals driving cremation trend

CHICAGO – Bucking tradition, Americans more frequently cremated their loved ones than buried them last year, according to Time Magazine. Though many factors appear to account for the change, cost seems to be one of the primary reasons.

Citing industry figures, Time reported that 49 percent of Americans were cremated, compared with 45 percent who received traditional burials. It's unclear what happened to the other 6 percent.

Cost is one of the biggest reasons for Americans' embrace of cremation. Funerals are expensive. The National Funeral Director Association's most recent survey of costs puts the median price of an adult funeral at $7,045. That includes embalming and a casket, but not the cemetery's charges. Cremation costs about a third of that.

Cremations have tripled since 1985. By 2013, 45 percent of deaths in the United States ended in cremation, according to the most recent data collected by the Cremation Society of North America and provided to Money Talks News. The practice is expected to predominate by 2018.

In 1980, the cremation rate was under 10 percent, but it has been steadily climbing since then. Time cites several reasons for the shift, including cost: Cremation can be much cheaper and doesn't require that grave sites be maintained. In addition, more religions are accepting of cremation than in the past, and society has become more mobile — apparently the living prefer to have mobility for their deceased loved ones.

California had the most cremations in 2015 with 157,012. Of course, it's also the most populous state. In terms of percentage, Nevada led the way with a whopping 77.4 percent choosing cremation for their loved ones.

The tradition of cremation, applying high heat to human or animal remains to reduce them to basic chemical compounds, is hardly new. The oldest evidence of the practice, found at Lake Mungo in Australia, is 50,000 years old.

Cremation in Europe is believed to have begun in the Stone Age, according to CANA. It was used in ancient Greece and Rome until displaced by Christian burial customs. Indigenous people in the Pacific Northwest and Canada used cremation, and it has long roots in Asia, for example in Hinduism and Tibetan Buddhism.

The growth of cremation in the United States began in the late 1800s with the invention of modern crematories, largely in answer to public health concerns. In 1913, there were 52 crematories in North America, compared with 2,803 in operation in the United States alone in 2013.

Though cost tops the list of driving forces behind the surge in cremation, but environmental concerns, changing religious beliefs and simple convenience also play a role.

Cremation allows families to keep — or discard — as many pieces of a traditional funeral as they wish, because it eliminates the need for a speedy burial for health and legal reasons.

It smashed into the park bench where Sutton and another man had been sitting. The other man escaped serious injury.

Holstine, who was driving with a suspended license, fled the scene and was later apprehended.

The gun debate we can't have

The deaths of 59 people at a Las Vegas music concert at the hands of sheer evil is another jarring tragedy of violence and hatred in our country. But the gun debate it brings forth, yet again, is a decoy that draws our attention away from the greatest threat of guns to the majority of our populace. It's a conversation that our country just can't have, despite the horror of Las Vegas, or Orlando, or Sandy Hook, or so many others.

It's estimated some 8.2 million "assault-style" or what I like to call "military-looking" guns are in circulation in the United States. That's a tiny percentage of the estimated 325 million total guns owned by Americans – a larger number, it's estimated, than there are actual Americans themselves. At the same time the Vegas shooters' guns were being used for evil against a crowd of revelers at a Vegas street concert, literally hundreds of millions of other guns... were pursuing completely legal uses.

That's where the forbidden conversation starts. By parcel of the total of both military-esque firearms and of gun owners themselves, these high-profile and horrible mass shootings barely register as a percentage. That doesn't minimize the pain or the loss of the families and friends who have forfeited loved ones in any of these horrific examples of inhumanity. But in the context of the argument that sweeping changes to gun laws should be made based on this cause, the mathematical weight of that cause is miniscule.

Need more mathematical context? America killed over 37,000 people last year in highway traffic accidents. This in a nearly century-old car industry, one of the most heavily government-influenced and regulated. Car manufacturers have steadily made their vehicles safer with each new model year since the 1950s. Roads and highways have been built and rebuilt and re-regulated to ensure better safety over the same term. With those massive regulations – both public and private – wider highways and safety glass and side-airbags, etc. – we still killed 37,000 people on our highways in 2016.

A bit of research reveals the real masquerade of gun violence. It took only the preceding 28 days before the Vegas concert to log 58 deaths in Chicago, according to research by the New York Times. Baltimore killed 58 of its own citizens in the preceding 68 days; in Houston it took the preceding 118 days. These included children, caught primarily as bystanders in the gun battles that are commonplace in their neighborhoods. Those killed across all those urban centers, in keeping with historical statistics, were predominantly blacks and other minorities.

Race is the next unspeakable fact in the debate on gun violence. Consider the research from the Brookings Institute that shows 19 percent of gun deaths of whites are homicides, while 77 percent are suicides. But 82 percent of gun deaths of blacks are homicides, with 14 percent as suicides. Overall, the gun death rate for black males is about double that for white males. For black men between 20-29 the rate is 89 per 100,000, or nearly equal to that of Honduras, which is the murder capital of the world.

And consider this twist: gun deaths are statistically lowest in the population that owns the most guns. Some 41 percent of white households claim to own at least one firearm compared to only 19 percent of black households. Among whites there are more guns but less crime; among blacks there are fewer guns but more crime.

By far the greatest volume of death from gun violence in our country has far more to do with urban culture than with the availability of military-looking firearms. But it will continue to be these high-profile assault weapon crimes, committed primarily by white men, which provide the diversion from the real problem.

So far, the politics of race and victimhood and the Left's hatred of the gun lobby's conservative-leaning power prevent us from having that discussion.

To the person or persons who keep complaining about city and the property across from the school, maybe you should complain to the county, as the property is not in the city limits. Thank you.

I'm calling in regards to the Phone Forum comment about the professionals and tatoos and body piercings and nose piercings. I disagree. I think it's so common now that people have nose rings, as long as it's not a big old honkin' cow hoop it shouldn't matter. As long as they're doing their job, that shouldn't matter either. That's my opinion. Thank you.

Well, it looks like you guys are into bullying.

The Anderson County Review evidently supports it by what I've been reading on the Phone Forum. You know, if you don't publish somebody's name it's not legitimate news and you're very much opening yourself up to a lawsuit. It's just sad this community has come to this. You need to change your way or thinking.

I wanted to thank the people that put the new bench on the rail trail between the depot and 13th Street. We have used it already and it's greatly appreciated. Thank you very much.

Yes, about the tatoos and piercings thing. People do that because they want to look wild and tough. And that's fine. To each his own. But most people who are hiring someone to work with the public or be their baby sitter or Cub Scout leader or some kind of example to kids and so on are looking for other priorities than being wild and tough. If you want to look like a jungle savage or a motorcycle gang member that's your business, but there are other standards the rest of the world lives by so don't expect to be accepted just because you want to do your own thing. Thank you.

Time for SECSTATE Tillerson to exit stage left

If Secretary of State Rex Tillerson resigned, how would anyone know?

He has become the nation's least influential top diplomat in recent memory. His relationship with the president of the United States is strained at best, he has no philosophy or signature initiative, he has barely staffed his own department, and he's alienated the foreign service. The former CEO of ExxonMobil has taken one of the power positions in the U.S. government and made it an afterthought.

Who knows the truth of the NBC story that he was close to quitting last summer over clashes with President Donald Trump? But Tillerson's strange press availability swearing his loyalty to the president is not the sort of thing loyalists usually have to do.

The secretary of state dodged questions about whether he had, indeed, as NBC reported, called Trump a "moron" -- almost certainly the first time in U.S. history a Cabinet official has been asked about personally insulting the president he works for and apparently been unable, in good conscience, to deny it.

Tillerson doesn't have an easy job. He works for a mercurial and bombastic boss who has a well-developed skill for humiliating his underlings. Even a practiced and slick diplomat -- even Henry Kissinger; heck, even Cardinal Richelieu -- would find the circumstances trying. But Tillerson is at sea.

He's an accomplished man who ascended

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

to the leadership of a quasi-state as CEO of ExxonMobil. As such, he had done plenty of work abroad. It was in business, though, not government. Unlike, say, James Mattis advising Trump on defense matters, this is not a professional guiding an amateur; it's another amateur trying to school an amateur. Is it any wonder that it hasn't gone well?

In a nationalist administration, he is a man without a country. He doesn't have a constituency in the foreign-policy establishment, in the media, in Congress or in the bureaucracy. Neither of the opposing dispensations in American foreign policy should feel vested in Tillerson. If you're a liberal internationalist who wants Trump checked, you'd prefer someone better suited to the task. If you're a Trumpist who wants Trump empowered to transform American foreign policy, you want someone who is in sympathy with that goal.

Tillerson has been on the other side of Trump on big issues like the Paris climate accord and the Iran nuclear deal. There's no doubt that Trump's instincts need to be restrained and channeled. That's different from trying to frustrate them, which is bound to run afoul of Dean Acheson's maxim: "The most important aspect of the relationship between the president and the secretary of state is that they both understand who is president."

Tillerson's diplomatic skills haven't yet been tested on anything important. At this point, he probably fails a threshold test: Can he reliably be thought to speak for the United States government?

The former ExxonMobil chief might imagine himself indispensable as a "minder" of the president. Yet Trump is now surrounded by generals who no one doubts are responsible and influential. If Tillerson left, the government would operate as before -- except with a chance there'd be a secretary of state better suited to the role.

New school finance ruling comes down to taxes

If one thing has become clear in the weeks since the Kansas Supreme Court tossed out the newly minted school finance plan for K-12 public schools, it's that Kansas politicians have become better at talking around the problem.

So far, it's generally Democrats saying that the Legislature short-changed schools with the new finance plan.

Generally, Republicans are saying that the finance plan is OK, and that the Kansas Supreme Court is meddling and it ought to give the program a chance to produce the better outcomes (that's smarter students) that the state wants.

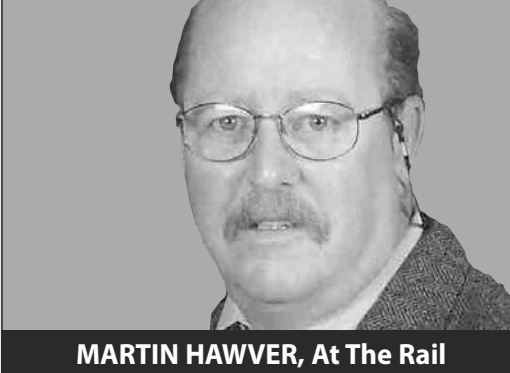

And because the high court didn't say just how much more money it wants spent on K-12 education, there is no real target for the Legislature to aim at as it figures out a new formula based on the court's objections to how the plan distributes money to school districts.

Democrats are basically saying spend more money but aren't saying where that money should come from. The answer, of course, is taxes, which the Legislature increased by nearly $600 million last session; most Kansans are just now getting an idea of how much it is going to cost them.

Republicans don't want to raise taxes again, no matter how laudable the use of that new money. They're just saying, "No new taxes."

So where does this Supreme Court order go? The court objected to a handful of relatively narrow provisions in the new school finance bill. Things like adjusting state contributions toward local school boards' Local Option Budget (locally approved property tax increases for schools) that the court said aren't absolutely equal across the state. There is the provision that gives money to school districts for students who receive free- or reduced-price lunches under federal programs even if they don't have at least 10 percent of pupils in that situation—a legislative hand-out to a couple Johnson County districts.

STATE COMMENTARY

Oh, and there is that "please show your work" provision in the judgment, that the court couldn't tell exactly what the Legislature based some of its decisions on in assembling the new school finance plan, and some relatively polite, but pointed objection to some of the research lawmakers used to produce facets of the bill that the court couldn't double-check.

But the clearest view of the new decision is that with no dollar amount of new spending demanded by the court, well, nothing is clear.

What's it going to come down to?

First, there will be largely Republican efforts to somehow toss aside the court decision. It's the legislative and executive branches that are in charge of keeping the government working, they'll maintain. Keep the courts out of it, and as long as we're sending U.S. currency to school districts, well, that's OK.

There will be Democratic efforts to churn through the decision, come up with the fixes the court wants, and then compute what those formula changes work out to in terms of tax dollars. It's essentially determining the changes the court wants, putting them into state law, then either coming up with new money or redistributing available money through that reshaped formula to see what districts will get.

Then there's the problem with a new formula—some districts getting less money under the new formula with no new money and figuring out how much new money is needed so that no district gets less next year than it did this year.

This isn't going to be easy, won't be pretty... and at the end of the exercise, House members who stand for re-election in 2018 will be telling their districts they did the right thing. Wonder how that's going to be phrased...

Seven months after moving into the historically beleaguered Garnett Church Furnishings building, Woodland Shutters closed its doors last week and laid off its employees. Staff of the company who contacted the Anderson County Review said they received news around 3:30 p.m. Monday afternoon. Company president Jay Mackay didn't return e-mail requests last week for a statement, and telephone messages weren't returned. It was not immediately clear whether the shutdown affected only the Garnett plant or other locations.

Enrollment in USD 365 climbed by 28 students between September 1996 and last month. But the complicated formula that awards state funding for school districts based on enrollment won't end up giving credit for that full portion of enrollment growth. The formula shows the student population to have risen by 17.2 from last year to 1,136. That number varies slightly from the actual 1,183 kids enrolled in the district.

There are 10,000 dogs in the service of the humanitarians in the war of which the majority are German shepherd dogs. In war, duties of the German shepherd dog work mainly at night after the heat and fury of the fray, for obvious reasons. The wounded in daytime battle, left deserted for the time among the dead by their companions, if able to do so, seek what protection they may find from the shells and bullets. They seek the shelter of trees, rocks, hollows, or what not, and after having with difficulty gained such protection, they often become unconscious. It is the duty of the trained dogs to locate them and to see that help is extended to them from the nearest ambulance corps.

Miller's photography on display at library

A wonderful collection of photographs by Samuel Miller will be on display at the Community Gallery in the Garnett Public Library through November. Sam is the youngest son of Denton and Linda Miller. He was born in Stockton, California sometime in the last century, he says, and moved to Kansas with his family in 1994. Sam is a carpenter who enjoys going to his shop to create various woodworking projects. Some of his projects are the frames for his photographs. Sam has a pilot's license and enjoys flying, fishing, hiking and camping.

He credits his mother's love of photography as a positive influence on his interest in photography. She is always encouraging him and helps with some of his crazy ideas. Sam is an avid reader and will read almost anything he can get his hands on. He especially loves books on photography or flying. He gets some of his inspirations from magazines, but most of the time he just gets out his camera and shoots to see what happens. Samuel's photographs are for sale if you are interested. Call (620) 203-1401 for pricing informatoin.

History of the hearse

Last week as I was traveling down Park Road about a dozen cars, including myself, pulled over to the side of the road and stopped as a hearse and funeral procession passed slowly by. While sitting there a couple of questions popped into my mind. When was a hearse first used at funerals and why does it travel so slowly? Here is what my research revealed to me. In 16th Century England, a hearse was originally not a vehicle to transport the dead to a final resting place but an ancient agricultural implement—a rake. After a Roman farmer plowed his fields, he raked the land with a "hirpex" (Latin for rake). The name changed again in the 11th Century by the Normans to harrow (pronounced herse). In time the church candelabra, resting on the altar rode on the lid of a coffin during a funeral cortège. In the next century, in England, the entire wheeled cart drawing the coffin became known as a "Hearse". It is interesting to note that the snails pace of a funeral cortège is not only a mark of respect for the dead, but the practical need to keep all the candles burning. This pedestrians pace still suggests a limit to the motorized hearse's speed. Respectfully submitted by: Henry Roeckers 10 Oct. 2017

AC's Lexee Feuerborn digs out a return during the Bulldogs' tournament opener matchup with Labette County Saturday morning during the Anderson County Volleyball Invitational. Wellsville took home the tournament championship.

Late touchdown denies Bulldogs a win

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The Anderson County Bulldogs (1-6) dropped their 5th straight game with a heartbreaking 12-8 loss on Friday night to Girard (3-4). It didn't take long for Anderson County to jump out on top as they scored on just their third play of the game on a 65 yard touchdown run by Tanner Spencer to take a 6-0 lead after the failed conversion. Despite the explosive start, that would be the only scoring in the first half in a defensive battle. Midway through the third quarter, the Bulldogs scored again but this time it was the defense doing the job. Girard snapped the ball over the quarterback's head and while Girard recovered the fumble, it was in the end zone, resulting in a safety to put Anderson County up 8-0. Girard would remain scoreless until midway through the fourth quarter they would score on a one yard quarterback run. The Bulldogs held strong on the conversion to keep them clinging to an 8-6 lead. On their ensuing possession, Anderson County drove down the field but came up short on 4th down inside their own 10 yard line to end the drive. With just over 2 1/2 minutes left and the length of the field to go, Anderson County had to like their chances.

The odds were stacked against Girard but they pulled out the surprise win with a 12 yard touchdown pass and catch in the waning seconds of the game for a 12-8 victory. Spencer finished the night with 7 carries for 80 yards and also caught 3 passes for 38 yards. Logan Allen ran the ball 22 times for 66 yards on the night. Gavin Wolken connected on just 4 of 12 passes for 53 yards and an interception.

Viking boys finish 3rd in Flint Hills League

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COTTONWOOD FALLS - A strong showing for the Central Heights boy's cross country team earned them a third place finish last week at the Flint Hills league meet that took place at Chase County High School. Alex Cannady (18:30, 5th place) was the top finisher among the Viking runners. Cannady edged out fellow teammate Kyle Cardin (18:31, 6th place). Bryce Sommer (19:47) was the only other Viking to medal, finishing 14th. Caleb Meyer was just a few seconds back (19:55) finished 17th, just a couple positions outside of earning a medal. Other varsity runners included Zack Grabbe (20:59, 30th), Jarod Crawford (21:00, 32nd) and David Craft (21:47, 37th). "The competition in the Flint Hills League is very high quality," head coach Troy Prosser stated. "We are still trying to find the right combination as we head into the biggest meet of the season," Prosser added as he is referring to the 3A Regional meet that the Vikings are hosting this coming Saturday. "The top three teams from our league will be there as well as other solid programs," Prosser said. "So we must bring our best in order to keep the season going." The junior varsity boys finished with 4 of the top 8 runners. Mason McCurry (20:37) and Luke Cotter (20:53) finished 1st and 2nd respectively. Matthew Ashwill (21:43, 7th place) and Orvel Broce (21:43, 8th place) battled each other for a top 10 finish. MiKaiah Wilson (32:33) finished 5th in junior varsity.

Eight members were present for the Oct. 3 meeting. Following the meal prepared by the United Methodist Women the guest of the evening was DeDe and Ron McMullen's grandchild.

Kenton King reported all bills were paid. He also stated that he will mount the signs at the school soon. President Bill Ulrich mentioned he had personally thanked Steven Weatherman for helping with the trees at the school. Dian Prasko inquired about taking some 55 gallon drums to the Kincaid Fair next year for the collection of aluminum cans. We will check with the Kincaid Lions Club about this project.

This year is time for the members to assist with the eye exams at the school. Terry Weldin has asked us to contact the school for scheduling. Sue Colgin will do this. It was reported Mary Scovill is doing much better. Meeting was adjourned by President Bill Ulrich.

Jolly Dozen
Eleven members met at the home of Debbie Wools Sept. 18. Members discussed their "Juice Bar" float they entered in the Colony Day parade which won a blue ribbon. Jane Ward won the ladies gift. Their next meeting is Oct. 16 hosted by Cathy Allen. Members are to wear a Halloween costume if they so wish.

Around Town
Sunday afternoon guests of Allene and Mark Luedke were Josh and Emily Tidd, Lincoln, NE and Jonathon Tidd, Kansas City, MO.

We need to put the closed sign up

I heard a Biblical commentator relate a story of a man who owned a store in New York where he sold fresh fish. The man went to work one morning and opened his store as usual, enjoying the smell of the fresh fish. Almost immediately after he opened the store a man walked in who was dressed in a nice three piece suit. The man simply said to the store owner, "you need to come with me." The store owner immediately walked out of the store with the man leaving the closed sign on the door, never to return.

This story is a good example of what needs to happen in our lives. The Bible is replete with examples of people who God or Jesus called. In Matthew 9:9 we read; "As Jesus went on from there, he saw a man named Matthew sitting at the tax collector's booth. "Follow me," he (Jesus) told him and Matthew got up and followed him never to return to the tax collector's booth. Now Jonah on the other hand heard this call from God, "Go to the great city of Nineveh and preach against it, because it's wickedness has come up before me. But Jonah ran away from the LORD and headed for Tarshish." Instead of obeying God's command and heading to Nineveh, Jonah caught a ship traveling in the opposite direction. At sea a great storm arose, and Jonah was tossed overboard by the superstitious sailor's in an attempt to appease the prophet's God. Jonah escaped unharmed when he was swallowed by a great fish and was miraculously deposited on shore. This time he obeyed God's command and traveled to Nineveh to carry out his preaching assignment.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

Why is it so hard for us to follow God? In Genesis 3 God clearly states the reason when speaking to satan. "And I (God) will put enmity (hostility) between you and the woman, and between your offspring and hers; he (Jesus) will crush your head, and you will strike his heel." There exists only two alternatives for us. Right and wrong. Wrong offers incentives to us to take that route. Immediate results or gratification, popularity, wealth and power. The best example of this is the temptation of Jesus in Luke 4. The devil offered Jesus nothing he would not ultimately attain anyway. He offered only a shortcut or easy way to attain these things. Jesus didn't take the easy way he paid the full price with his very life. Wrong is the way of the world. Right is to follow Jesus. Just as the store owner followed the man without question when he requested Jesus expects the same from us. In doing so we leave a closed sign to a sinful way of life. What is at stake is our soul.
