Former local man indicted for child porn

McCullar faces four federal charges in connection with Homeland Security porn sting

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

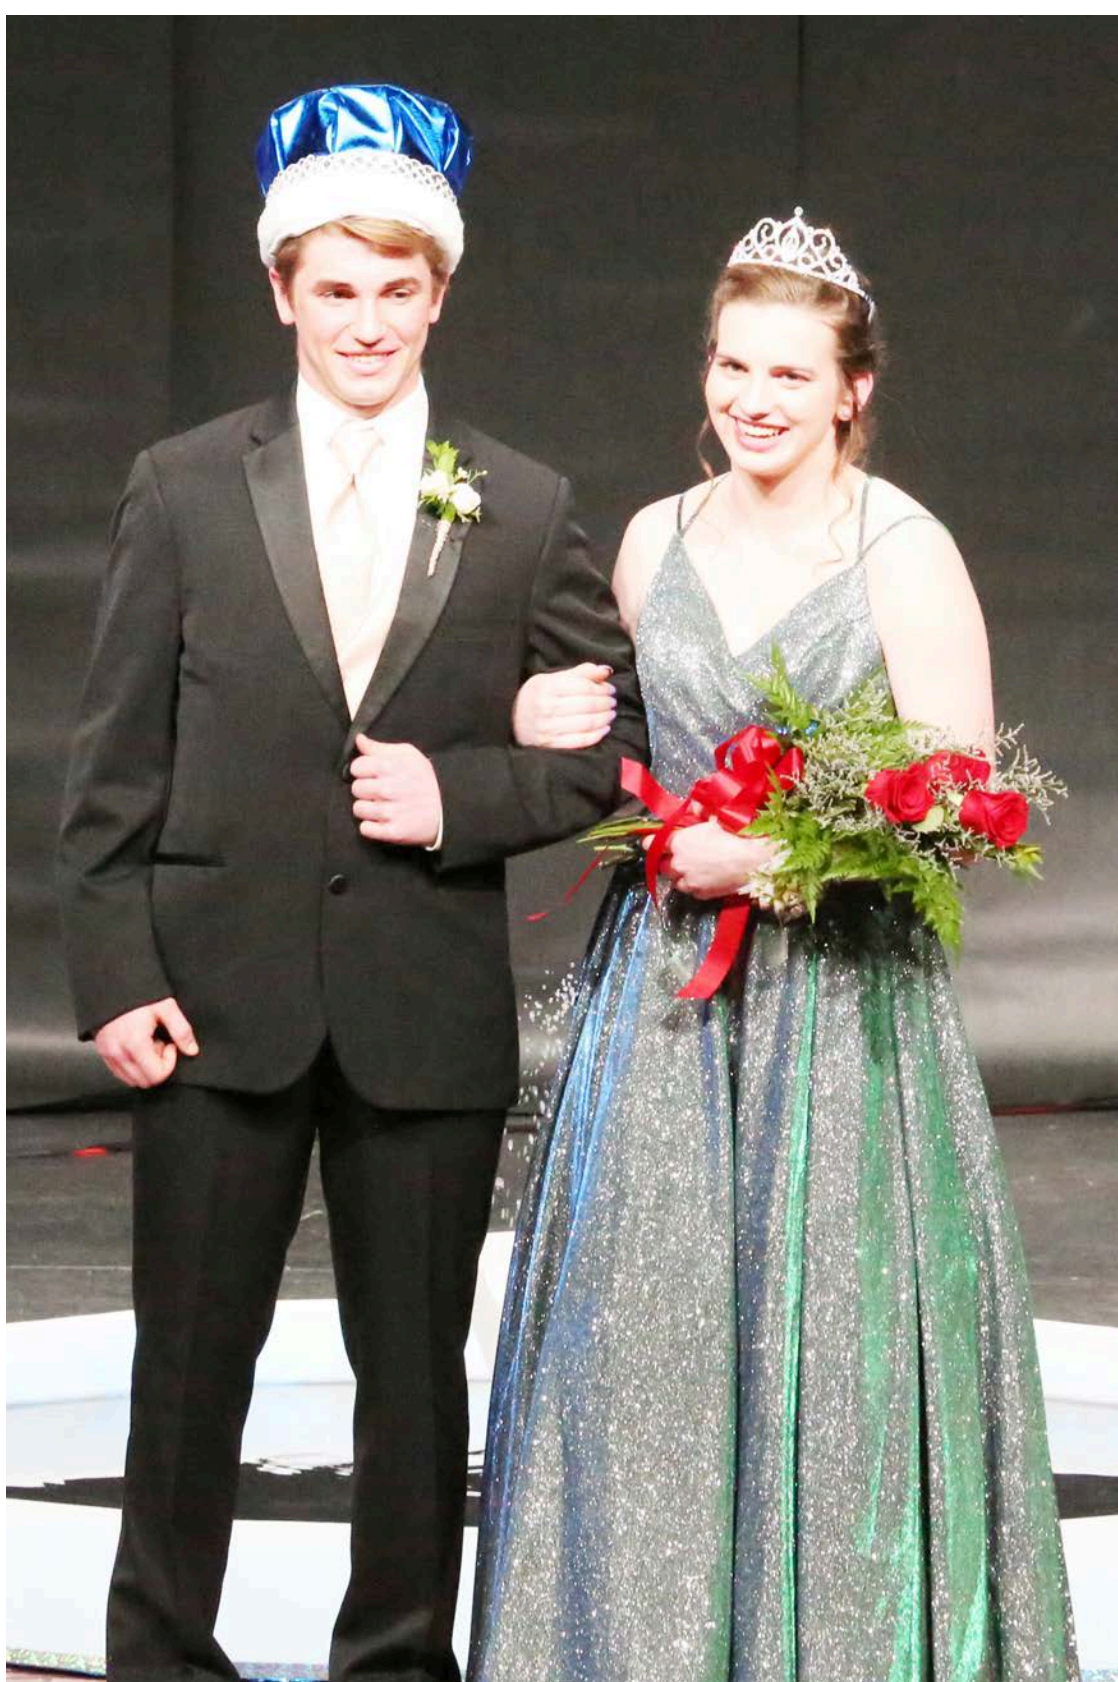

LINCOLN, Neb. — A former Garnett resident who at one time headed the Anderson County Republican Party Central Committee appeared before a federal judge in Nebraska yesterday to answer a four-count grand jury indictment accusing him of producing, distributing and possessing child pornography.

Michael Dean McCullar, 47 of Dwight, Neb., and formerly of Garnett, was indicted by the federal grand jury for the District of Nebraska February 22 after he was arrested February 13 in Tampa, Fla., by federal agents and returned to the jurisdiction of Nebraska, where the offenses allegedly occurred. Monday's hearing was his first appearance on the charges since he was turned over to the federal marshals in Nebraska, although he had initially appeared and been assigned a federal public defender in Florida.

U.S. Department of Homeland Security Special Agent Eric Cardiel recounted the investigation leading up to the issuance of the warrant for McCullar's arrest in a probable cause affidavit obtained by the Review. Cardiel's affidavit says the Homeland Security Investigations office in Boston, Mass., relayed information on Feb. 9 that an individual their officers had been tracking on a "deep web" internet web site was attempting to share photos depicting child exploitation. The individual, known by a screen name "dadoflolibaby" claimed on October 25, 2018, to have taken the photos of a female child he babysits and that he was very careful when he is able to access her. He also said he planned to stop producing the materials when the child turned four years old so she would not be able to talk and disclose the abuse. Cardiel said agents obtained ten images

Wind farm moratorium adopted in Linn County

Resolution halts all projects until 2020 to give commission time to study, update plan

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

MOUND CITY — County commissioners in Linn County have adopted a resolution placing a moratorium on the development of wind farms in the county through December 1, 2020, in order to give the county time to update its comprehensive plan and get the views of county residents and landowners on the wind energy issue.

The resolution was effective as of its publication in The Linn County News, the county's official newspaper of record, last week.

Key to the timing of the resolution is the four-year phase-out of tax credits that have incentivized both foreign and American companies for the development of wind farms across the country. That phase-out culminates in 2020. Linn County Counselor Gary Thompson told a crowd gathered at last week's commission meeting the moratorium was designed to give the county time to consider and plan for the prospect of wind development.

"It's an opportunity to wait, get a plan together and see if the benefits from the federal government continue, and give the other side an opportunity to voice an opinion," Thompson was quoted as saying in The Linn County News. "It gives us two years."

Linn County has been joined in a debate over wind farms for the past year, after developers with German-based E.ON Climate and Renewables met with commissioners in April 2018 and began leasing property from landowners near Mound City in a plan for a multi-turbine generating field. That project would have required approval by the county planning and zoning commission and the county commission in order to start construction.

Dog attack "...probably the most horrible thing I think I've ever seen"

Owner of two pit bulls in incident says city will put them down

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — It took only a few seconds for two pit bulls to attack and kill a Garnett woman's puppy and injure her while she was walking her dog on the Prairie Spirit Trail March 21.

Now the owner of the two dogs will be in Garnett Municipal Court this month making his argument that they should be spared euthanasia.

Tim Guernsey of Garnett said his son failed to latch the family's back yard gate properly that Thursday evening when he went out to ride his bike. The family let the dogs out of the house shortly thereafter into the fenced yard and were unaware they'd slipped the property through the open gate and were on the run. Guernsey said he realized the escape and headed out after them immediately toward the section of rail trail

The dogs had spied Heather Ahlenstorf and Chrisy Fritz, who were walking their dogs on the trail between Third and Fourth section camera in Hillsboro as they fled the scene of that burglary. Hillsboro officials said the suspects were caught on different video cameras at the pharmacy and from other areas of the city.

A review of the pharmacy's video showed one subject entering the building, but leaving after 40 seconds. The video also showed the subject being dropped off by an accomplice, giving officers a description of the vehicle.

Officers with KHP picked up the two and the matching vehicle and tag on I-70 near Ellsworth.

AuBurn Pharmacy in Garnett was burglarized in December 2018, one of numerous drug-related break-ins in the region including Burlington, Eureka and others. AuBurn President Mike Burns told the Review in December new restrictions on prescription oxycodone pain relievers based on addiction concerns had tightened the criminal supply, prompting a rash of pharmacy break-ins to obtain the drugs in recent years.

The Kansas Bureau of Investigation told Hillsboro police that the two suspects are connected to at least nine other pharmacy burglaries across the state and in Texas.

A confrontation with the living God!

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

None of us I hope enjoy confrontation, however sometimes it is inevitable. I have always found it best to try and find a solution without making an enemy out of anyone involved. One thing I am sure of there could be nothing more terrifying than a confrontation with the Living God.

Moses and Aaron were involved in such a confrontation in the desert of Zin. We read in Numbers 20:2, "Now there was no water for the community, and the people gathered in opposition to Moses and Aaron." God meets with Moses and Aaron and gives them specific instructions on what to do to procure water as follows. "Take the staff, and you and your brother Aaron gather the assembly together. Speak to the rock before their eyes and it will pour out water. You will bring water out of the rock for the community so they and their livestock can drink." Instead of speaking to the rock as God said Moses struck the rock with his staff. Because Moses struck the rock rather than speaking to it God confronted both Moses and Aaron and told them they would not enter into the promised land. God is very explicit why he is forbidding them to enter he says. "Because you did not trust me enough to honor me as holy in the sight of the Israelite's you will not bring this community into the land I have given them." (Numbers 20:12) By virtue of striking the rock instead of speaking to it as God had told him Moses himself appeared to be the reason water poured forth. God accomplishes all of his work on earth through people and God empowered Moses and Aaron to perform all the tasks necessary to bring the people into the promised land.

God empowers people today but there is a fine line not to cross when in God's employment. As a rule I always remember question number one from the Westminster Confession of Faith, "What is the chief end of Man?" Answer: "Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy him forever."

God always makes good on his word and in Deuteronomy 34 we read of the death of Moses who saw only a glimpse of the promise land from afar.

For the Christian, those who have received Jesus Christ as their Savior, there will be no confrontation with God. In Matthew 11:28-30 Jesus makes this clear. "Come to me all you who are weary and burdened and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." In his Sermon on the Mount Jesus explains what a confrontation with the Living God would be like when he says concerning impenitent people. "Then I will tell them plainly, I never knew you. Away from me you evil-doers."

Martian invasion eminent, says American Media

What comes next for the American Media after the two-year debacle of false reporting on Trump/Russian collusion? To fully grasp the enormity of the change that's coming, let's imagine for a second the mainstream media has been telling us we're going to be invaded by Mars.

No one's seen any actual evidence, of course, other than an unconfirmed dossier somebody gave Sen. John McCain which he started farming around before he died. Otherwise its just anonymous scientists supposedly at NASA leaking information to selective reporters at NBC, CBS, MSNBC, or Huffington Post. All kinds of people who don't like NASA are saying there's been life on Mars forever and NASA has covered it up. TV news shows loads their talk segments with people from organizations like the American Association of People Who Think Mars Will Invade, and they ask them questions like, "so, do you think Mars will invade?"

But, there are no pictures from the Hubble Space Telescope, there are no statements from NASA, there are no amateur astronomers with pictures showing the invasion that's being readied on the Martian surface. Still, TV news, the Associated Press, the New York Times and the Washington Post continue to interview people who are sure Mars is invading. Then they start interviewing retired military generals and video game champions about how to fight off the invasion, then they interview the wife of a soldier deployed somewhere and they ask her if she's afraid of the Martian invasion and what might happen to her husband. Then Bette Midler and Robert DeNiro discover that if they say naughty things about NASA at the Golden Globe Awards, people on the news will say their names a lot more often.

When those reporters ask NASA to confirm that we're being invaded by Mars, NASA officials say, "No, we are not being invaded by Mars." Hence, tomorrow's headlines read: "NASA again denies Mars invasion."

Now imagine the FBI, which is pretty darn sure NASA's been hiding something about Mars, starts an investigation. For months and months and months they interview people connected to NASA, finding out some of them cheated on their taxes and stole paper clips from the NASA office supply closet, but they never find anything about a Mars invasion. The

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

FBI does a press conference that says, "we can't find anything about a Mars invasion."

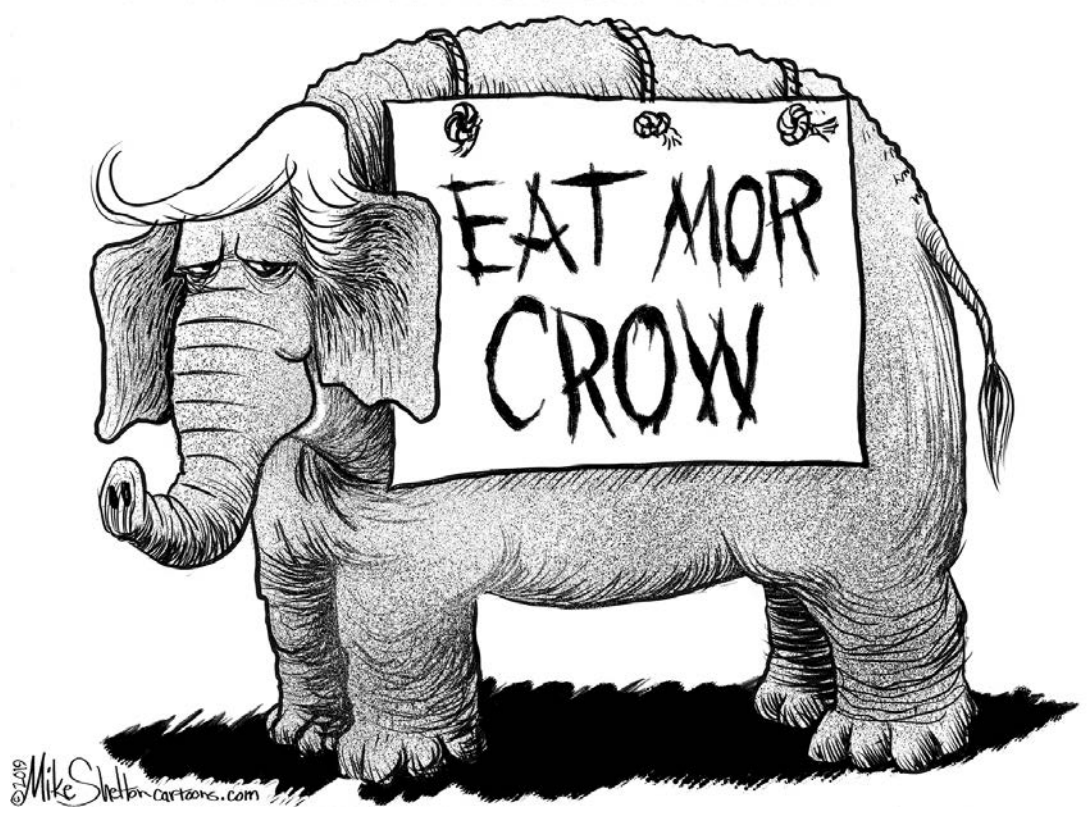

And NASA says, "that's because, like we said from the start, there was no Mars invasion."

Suddenly, NBC, CBS, CNN and the Washington Post feel stupid because they've been reporting on a Mars invasion for two years that turned out to be no Mars invasion at all. The next day, after Nancy Pelosi holds a press conference and says from now on she's going to talk about health care instead of a Mars invasion that isn't happening, all the media starts talking about health care, like the Mars invasion story never happened.

So, the next time those guys in the news try to report a story on NASA, what are you going to think? Is it any wonder, then, that a Pew research study says Russians actually trust their media more than Americans trust their own?

The American media has been fighting for its credibility in political reporting for 30 years. When they tell us a wildfire in California's burned 40,000 acres, we pretty much believe it. But if a story deals with policy arguments being championed by mostly white, mostly pro-life, mostly Christian conservatives, anybody with any gumption is going to have their doubts about the story which gets told.

It doesn't help that this time, the media played an active roll in an effort that was nothing less than a coup attempt of the presidency by the FBI and Washington, D.C. In that sense, issues about trusting the media may be among the least of our worries.

March 12, 2019, in the Digging Up The Past, there was an article that Mr. Roeckers had talked about the snow spider. Can he expand more on that, where they're located, etc? Thank you.

I've been hearing so much about Muhammed the Prophet and their loving religion ways. So I studied and what I found out so far is that Muhammed got marked when he was 52 years old and married a 6 year-old girl. Also if you don't believe in their god allah they're supposed to kill the infidel. They don't believe in Jesus Christ. Look it up.

If you don't like people you should not be in customer service. It's a small town and I know you don't have a lot of choices, but the customer service people are not very nice.

Is the City of Garnett going to enforce the grass and weed control law? That's funny because they're the biggest abusers of it all. Go look at the properties the city owns. Grass knee high all summer long. City kind of needs to get their crap in order before they start telling other people what to do.

To the persons comments about the person calling in about the loose dog in Kincaid. Maybe you should not make comments about someone hiding behind the phone forum when that's exactly what you're doing also. Everyone has a right to call into the phone forum. As to filing a complaint with the city of Kincaid, you've got to be kidding. Some of the names and faces may change, but anyone can see the city would rather pass raising the alcohol for malt beverage content for the local bar and grill than deal with citizens problems such as a loose dog and huge potholes in the streets. The governing body of Kincaid must like their alcohol.

So the idea of an after-prom is to try to keep kids from going out drinking after the prom and getting hurt, right? So Garnett's $20,000 prom night loads the kids up on a bus and takes them to the city to play and spend money. According to the statistics aren't you more likely to be hurt in a highway car wreck than about anything else? Doesn't make a lot of sense to me. Come on parents let's rethink this. Thank you.

I'm sorry but this new city flag has got to be the ugliest thing I've ever seen. Yellow with orange? that's just plain ugly. Has nothing to do with the town. It shows a bunch of fields and supposedly a sun. This is not a Garnett flag. Seventy-five dollars? I wouldn't give 75 cents for it. I wouldn't even take it for free. City commissioners must be color blind or something. That's the stupidest looking thing I've ever seen.

Kids: Want scholarships? You have to come home

Are rural Kansans our own worst enemies? Every year, in every town in outstate Kansas, every civic group and club collects money for college scholarships. Every year, we give these scholarships to the best and brightest among our offspring.

Every year, our students take this money and go off to school. Few of them ever come back, except for Thanksgiving, county fair or maybe wheat harvest. It's hard to get them back on the farm, someone said, once they've seen the bright city lights. But we don't ask much of them. We rarely, if ever, suggest they might want to come home to teach or practice law or nursing. We assume if they become professors or agronomists or insurance agents or whatever, they'll do it somewhere else.

We don't ask our kids to come back home. There was a time when at least some of our kids would go off to school, then come home

How to look guilty when you're really innocent

The release of Robert Mueller's finding that Donald Trump didn't collude with Russia should settle a question his critics -- and, quietly, some of his allies -- have asked repeatedly over the past two years: Why was he acting so guilty?

It turns out that he was acting innocent, only in a typically combative, over-the-top Trump fashion.

The left and the media were never willing to credit the idea that Trump sincerely believed that he was being treated unfairly -- because he was.

When Trump said in his infamous Lester Holt interview that the Trump-Russia thing "is a made-up story," he wasn't confessing to obstruction of justice; he was stating a fact that the Mueller probe would establish 2,800 subpoenas and nearly 500 search warrants later.

The prudent thing for Trump to do once the Mueller probe got going would have been to cooperate without complaint and bide his time awaiting his eventual vindication. Instead, Trump fought like a caged animal (while actually cooperating with the probe).

Trump is a creature of the media and cares a lot about what is said of him. So imagine him sitting in the White House and watching the media constantly suggest that a smoking-gun

We did not. We kept raising scholarship money the same as always.

We raise all that money to pay them to leave. Then, we pat ourselves on the back for being such good people, go down to the coffee shop and complain about the lack of young people working and raising families here.

What is wrong with us? We could change all this. We could raise money for scholarships for students who promise to return to rural Kansas, to their home towns and counties.

Russia-collusion revelation is just over the horizon, that the walls are closing in, that he might be guilty of one of the worst political crimes committed in the history of the republic -- and all the while knowing that it wasn't true.

It's very easy to be relaxed about someone else's reputation.

We saw this during the Kavanaugh controversy when progressives were outraged that Brett Kavanaugh got emotional about being falsely accused of gang rape. Trump, apparently, was supposed to be cool and nonplussed about being accused of treason.

Of course, he wasn't, and got caught in an

to our gifts. Every scholarship we give should have some.

We can and should give preference to students with good grades and exemplary citizenship, of course. But above all else, to students who express an interest in living and working in a rural part of our state, in their home town or county, in the county and town where the money they take comes from.

Why not? There are plenty of scholarships out there for bright kids who want to get an education and go live in the city. Let the ones who don't want to come back take those.

Why should we, who love our towns and our way of life, raise money to send kids somewhere else? The scholarships we give are gifts, not entitlements. We can write the rules.

From now on, instead of exporting our best and brightest offspring, and simply paying them to go, why don't we ask them to plan on coming back?

It might make a difference. It might just be the difference.

No more scholarships for leaving town. None. We don't have to do that any more.

endless feedback loop with the press. He'd be presumed guilty in the coverage, he'd lash out, and then commentators would take his reaction as further evidence he was guilty. For two long years.

As recently as a couple of weekends ago, an epic Trump tweet-storm was taken as a sign that he was completely panicked over the impending Mueller report.

It didn't occur to anyone that he might be acting out of a sense of aggrieved (although often self-defeating) innocence. This is what got the Mueller probe rolling in the first place. Trump fired James Comey because the FBI director refused to state publicly what he told Trump privately -- that the president himself wasn't under investigation.

The fallback position of Democrats now is that they can get Trump for obstruction for all his impure thoughts about a probe that reached its conclusion unimpeded, and that found no underlying Russian collusion to cover up.

This was Watergate without the break-in and the Lewinsky affair without, well, the Lewinsky affair.

A news industry that should have a healthy skepticism could never apply any skepticism to its own narrative and assumptions. And so, on the question of Russia collusion that put a cloud over the White House and dominated the past two years of our public life, Donald Trump was a more reliable narrator than the media that so self-righteously scorns him.

Recent rains and additional precipitation in the watershed area of the Cedar Valley Reservoir have prompted city workers to release water from the lake, as a Princeton company attempts repairs on the dam's damaged spillway. City Manager Joyce Martin said the city had been releasing water from the lake to keep its level down at the request of engineers working on the project, even though local precipitation hadn't been that apparent. "We have water coming in faster than we're letting out," Martin said. "Somebody to the east of us got more rain than we did."

Saturday evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock, several persons in Garnett saw, southeast of town, what appeared to be a cyclone. They watched it dip, and then arise, dip and then arise, several times. Glen Day and Will Morris, who were watching it from the Santa Fe depot, say they also saw a smaller one gather northeast of town, but it appeared higher up. Glen was called to the telegraph instrument and Mr. Morris followed him into the station, and when they stepped out on the platform, both twisters had disappeared.

Natural gas is flammable and can be ignited by heat, sparks or flames. If you suspect a natural gas leak, leave the area immediately, then dial 911 and call Kansas Gas Service at 1-888-482-4950. Do not use any electrical devices, such as a light switch or wireless phone, in the area.

Before starting any digging project, call 811 at least two full working days prior to the planned excavation date so that underground utilities can be marked for free.

Make a difference – adopt a highway

Make a difference in your community and help the environment at the same time – join the Adopt-A-Highway program in Kansas.

The goal of the program is to clean along the roadways throughout the state to increase safety for motorists and pedestrians as well as improve the beauty of Kansas. This helps to raise awareness on the negative effects of pollution and the positive aspects of a clean community.

Any non-profit group that does not discriminate upon the basis of race, religion or gender can join and there is no cost to the group. Members must be at least 11 years old and have adequate adult supervision.

Groups have clean-ups three times a year and are recognized for their efforts with signs marking their sections of highway.

Adopt-A-Highway groups are gearing up for the annual Clean Up Kansas Campaign which takes place during the month of April. This event, as well as the program, is sponsored by the Kansas Department of Transportation. All Adopt-A-Highway groups are encouraged but not required to participate in the statewide event.

Groups clean their sections of roadway three times a year at their convenience. Most choose to schedule a clean-up time in the spring, summer and dadoflibaby of a female about two years of age, some of which contained explicit photos of her naked genitals. He also claimed to have been abusing the victim since she was about eight months old.

The affidavit states Boston officers shared a link with dadoflibaby on February 7 which he accessed on two occasions that day. When dadoflibaby left the encrypted "dark web" to access the conventional internet link, investigators were able to record his IP address leading back to Windstream Communications. Boston officers issued a summons to Windstream for the associated IP address at the times dadoflibaby accessed the links, and on February 8 the company provided McCullar's billing service information.

The affidavit says Homeland Security agents served a search warrant at McCullar's Dwight, Neb., residence, where they were told by his spouse Christine he was on a business trip in Tampa, Fla. Agents recovered two items depicted in the photographs, a purple bedspread and a pink bedspread. The narrative went on to say Christine McCullar was shown sanitized versions of the photos obtained from dadoflibaby and recognized the child as her niece, whom she said her husband had sporadic access to. Officers recovered various electronic media from the home, with the exception of Michael McCullar's laptop computer, which his wife said he had with him on the trip. He was arrested later that afternoon in Florida.

McCullar worked for Ortho Clinical-Diagnostics, a division of Johnson & Johnson, and travelled frequently when he lived in Garnett. J&J sold Ortho in 2014. He was elected to chair the Anderson County Republican Central Committee in 2004 and served as a precinct committeeman from Jackson Township.

The federal indictment specifies one count of production of child pornography, two counts of distribution and one count of possession. Penalties include maximum fines of up to $250,000 and maximum sentences of 20-30 years imprisonment on each count.

ends of Ahlenstorf's puppy, "Clover," as if they were trying to pull her apart.

"It was probably the most horrible thing I think I've ever seen," Ahlenstorf told the Review. "It was all happening so fast, but it seemed like it was in slow motion."

Guernsey arrived at the scene and verbally commanded the dogs to release. The female pit bull did release Clover, Ahlenstorf and Guernsey both told the Review, and scampered into Guernsey's vehicle. The male pit would not obey, however, and Guernsey grabbed the puppy to wrestle it from the pit bull's mouth. After eventually getting the dog to release Clover, Guernsey said he ordered the dog into the car and he obeyed.

It was too late, however, for Clover.

Ahlenstorf had bites on her right hand and claw marks on her left arm from the scuffle, which were treated at the local hospital. She said the police confirmed the pit bulls were current on their shots. She said police also informed her Guernsey's dogs had been involved in another attack on a dog some years back – a fact Guernsey confirmed to the Review.

"They have never been vicious toward people, nor have they ever attacked a person," Guernsey said. "But (they) have had a prior incident with another dog two and a half years ago in which that dog fully recovered." Guernsey said city officials told him both dogs would have to be put down. City court documents show Guernsey will be charged with keeping a dangerous dog(s) and having his dogs at large.

Ahlenstorf said her family had only had the three-and-a-half month-old retriever and terror mix puppy for five days – a rescue from a shelter in LaHarpe. She said Fritz, who witnessed the attack, had been very supportive through the ordeal. She said she was most upset about the idea that someone would harbor a dog known to be violent.

"I don't want to stereotype pit bulls," she said, "but when people know they can't let them out without something happening – we can't have that."

"I want to be an advocate for Garnett," she said. "But you shouldn't have to worry about walking on the rail trail because some dog might come out of nowhere after you."

An opposition movement grew and crowded subsequent P&Z and county commission meetings to reiterate its arguments against the project E.ON was granted a special use permit by planning and zoning in June 2018 to erect a test tower near Mound City. E.ON has not to date submitted a formal application for the project.

David Fisher, head of the Concerned Citizens For Linn County, told the LCN he supported the commissioners' adoption of the moratorium.

County commissioner Vicki Leonard was quoted in the LCN saying the move would foster needed deliberation on a complicated subject.

"We're not making an impulsive decision," Leonard was quoted as saying. "It's more controlled for the county. I wouldn't want what's happening in Mildred, Kansas, happening here," referring to the erection of a turbine field approved in Allen County last year.

Summer Dreaming: Motorists likely to travel more if gas prices remain low

Spring fever may be in the air, but American motorists already have summer road trips top of mind. AAA's latest Gas Price survey found that if gas prices remain low, 1 in 3 Americans (33 percent) would likely plan another summer road trip while 27 percent would increase the distance of one - with Generation X more likely to do both than Baby Boomers. AAA expects the national gas price average this spring to reach $2.75, a savings of nearly 20-cents compared to last spring's high of $2.92.

"Cheaper crude oil prices have helped to keep pump prices lower this winter," said Jeanette Casselano, AAA spokesperson. "While we are seeing the national gas price average increase and mirror prices from this time last year, spring pump prices for the majority of motorists are not expected to elevate to the nearly $3/gal level of last May."

However, motorists on the West Coast and in the Rockies region will likely see prices reach or exceeded $3/gal, which is similar to last year.

"Kansas gas prices have registered 15-25 cents less than the national average throughout the spring, and that will most likely continue," said Shawn Steward, AAA Kansas spokesman. "Motorists in the Sunflower State often enjoy average gas prices that are in the top 10 cheapest in the country, allowing road trips that don't break the bank."

In addition to increasing the number or mileage of summer road trips, the AAA survey shows that Americans said lower gas prices would encourage them to spend or save more, but this varies based on generation and region:

•The majority of Millennials (53%) and Gen X (49%) would put aside money for savings as compared to Baby Boomers (44%).

•Generation X is more likely to increase shopping/dining out, drive more on a weekly basis or use more expensive gas as compared to compared to Baby Boomers.

•Motorists in the South (11%) and West (10%) say they would use more expensive gas while five percent of those in the Midwest (5%) and seven percent in the Northeast (7%) would be willing to upgrade fuel type.

Springing Gas Prices
While the first few months of this year ushered in daily national gas price averages that were, at times, as much as 35-cents cheaper than a year ago, pump price since the middle of March have been mostly similar to pump prices this time last year. Today's national gas price average is four-cents more expensive than a year ago.

The difference between summer- and winter-blend gasoline involves the Reid Vapor Pressure (RVP) of the fuel. RVP is a measure of how easily the fuel evaporates at a given temperature. The more volatile a gasoline (higher RVP), the easier it evaporates. Summer-blend gasoline has a lower RVP to prevent excessive evaporation when outside temperatures rise. Reducing the volatility of summer gas decreases emissions that can contribute to unhealthy ozone and smog levels. A lower RVP also helps prevent drivability problems, especially in older vehicles. Summer-blend is more expensive to produce and that cost is passed on to the consumer each spring.

Oil Dynamics
Motorists benefitted this winter from lower crude prices, which comprises approximately 50 percent of the prices paid at the pump. Crude prices ranged between $48 and $56 this winter, while winter 2018 saw consistent prices between $60 and $65. This difference helped to keep pump prices mostly cheaper this winter, but crude prices are likely poised to increase this spring possibly back to $65, which will propel gas prices higher as gasoline demand increases across the country.

Moreover, moving into spring, crude prices will likely increase as the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) continues to implement its agreement with other global crude producers to cut production by 1.2 million b/d, which remains in effect through June. OPEC has announced that it will not meet in April to discuss the pact; instead, it will meet on June 25 and 26 and may announce a decision to end or extend its agreement at that time. OPEC and its partners will likely look toward global pricing trends around the time the cuts are set to expire as well as global crude demand forecasts, and how well members of the reduction pact have adhered to the production cuts to determine if it should extend its pact beyond June. If it does and crude prices rise dramatically, American motorists could see pump prices spike later in the summer.

Additionally, U.S.-imposed sanctions meant to curtail crude exports from Iran and Venezuela will likely tighten global supply and help crude prices inch up this spring. The exact price impact will be determined by how stringently the U.S. enforces the sanctions. Some market observers believe the U.S., which is now the world's leading crude producer, could help meet global demand because of its newfound export prowess. However, growth in domestic demand for crude, particularly during the high demand driving season this summer, may limit just how much the U.S. is able to contribute to the global crude market.

Summer Look Ahead
AAA expects summer 2019 gas prices to be on par with prices during summer 2018, with May seeing the highest prices of the year. Heading into summer, a variety of factors, including U.S. supply-demand levels, U.S. production and crude prices will help better shape the summer forecast.

Setting the Stage - Responsibilities result in struggles but also a sense of purpose in children

By Kim Baldwin, McPherson County farmer

As in life, sometimes things don't go as planned on the farm. A prime example is when my husband and 6-year-old son recently brought home an orphaned heifer from a family friend's herd. The calf was just a few hours old when she moved into our barn and started receiving care. It was during one of the bitter-cold weeks when farmers were working around the clock to ensure -- to the best of their abilities -- the health and safety of their animals. The mother didn't make it, and without stepping in, the calf would not have survived either.

When the calf was in the barn, the boys immediately fed her, and put a heat lamp on her. Over the next few days my husband and I taught that calf how to drink from a bottle.

It wasn't easy. It was cold. It required putting on extra layers and leaving the comforts of our home to trudge to the barn in the dark at times. It required waking up earlier or stepping away from a favorite cartoon or waiting to eat a meal. It required patience and strength while the calf was held and slowly, but surely, learned how to get its milk. During this time the calf was not the only one learning.

At first, my son was quite apprehensive about holding the bottle while a squirmy, hungry calf made her best efforts to fill her belly. Besides, holding four pints of milk replacer in a large bottle can be tough for a kindergartener.

Soon the calf figured out how to nurse, and my son became comfortable with feeding.

We're at the point now that our son can take the bottle out to the barn before he leaves for school in the morning and when he gets home at night. He feeds his calf without our help. Yes, we still assist him on occasion, but our kindergartener is the one making sure the calf is fed and cared for every day. (My husband and I keep a watchful eye on him from a distance.)

When I mentioned my son's chores and newly assigned responsibilities to a coworker recently, the response I received was, "Wow! That's a lot for a little boy his age."

I thought about that comment for perhaps a little too long and began to question whether our expectations of our son are set too high. In the end, I came to the same conclusion I'm sure my parents and my husband's parents came to when we were children: it's an appropriate age, especially for our child.

Lady Bird Johnson once said "children are apt to live up to what you believe of them."

My son is capable of this responsibility because I know he can do it.

Even though the initial days with that little calf were trying, and tears were shed, and the "I can't do it" statements were made, and the feedings took an extremely long time to complete, my husband and I assured our son that he was capable of handling this situation.

My husband and I are setting the stage for our son to experience grit, determination, hard work and the ability to persevere. And while living on a farm requires all of the above plus more, life in general does as well. We're doing our part to prepare our son to face and respond to challenges in the future.

While a lot of things don't go as planned for us on the farm, one thing will remain a constant: our children will be accountable and held responsible for tasks on our farm -- even if they seem daunting for a child -- because we believe our children can and will meet the expectations set for them. I have found when things don't go as planned, we too learn new ways of doing things and find out what is possible to accomplish within the farm and within ourselves. Our son is finding this out with his calf.

Chores that once seemed daunting are now fun, he has a sense of purpose and an understanding that his calf depends on him for its wellbeing. The lessons learned in the barn on these cold mornings before school will be ones we as parents feel will help him succeed in school and life, whether he chooses to follow us on the farm or make his own path in the world.

Eastern Kansas Grazing School to be in Ottawa

The Eastern Kansas Grazing School will be hosted this year by Frontier District Extension in Ottawa, KS on April 24th and 25th, at Celebration Hall on the Franklin County Fairgrounds. The class will begin each day at 8:00 a.m. Pre-registration is required by April 10th, cost is $60 for the first person from a farm and $30 for each additional person from the same farm. You can register and pay online at: www.frontierdistrict.ksu.edu. Scroll down on the homepage and you will find the link to register for the Eastern Kansas Grazing School.

The program is a combination of classroom and hands-on activities (that take place on a local farm) that teach the basic information of Management Intensive Grazing. It doesn't matter whether you graze sheep, goats, horses or cattle, there will be good take home information that everyone can use whether you plan to use a management intensive grazing system or not.

The first day will highlight both on-farm and classroom activities. Topics covered in the classroom will be the "Art and Science of Grazing;" "Understanding Plant Growth and How to Keep the Plant Healthy." During these talks the speakers will discuss grazing to a set minimum height that is tall enough that the plant can regrow and have a fast recovery before the next grazing period. Other agenda items are "Brush and Weed Control," "How to Utilize Crop Residue in a Management Intensive Grazing System," "The Economics of Grazing," and "Watering Systems and How to Get Water to the Grazing Livestock," which is a major concern when developing a rotational grazing system.

At the farm, participants will work through some "Grazing Arithmetic" problems. The group will learn how to measure the amount of forage per acre, then figure the amount of forage the livestock will consume in 24 hours. Once that information is determined, grazing goals for the pasture can be set. Participants will use the information gathered and work through a "Forage Allocation Exercise." The producer group will split in half and each group will determine the amount of pasture needed to feed a group of animals for a 24 hour period. Pastures will be viewed the next day to determine success or failure of meeting the grazing goals. A "Resource Inventory" will be done on the farm to look at natural resources, animal resources, physical resources, like fences and ponds, and our operational resources, such as production goals and available labor.

The second day will again start at Celebration Hall on the topic of "Using Electric Fence." The presenter will highlight the changes in chargers over the last 30-40 years and will set some minimum guide lines for the charger and grounding system. Discussion will be held on using high tensile wire for permanent fence and where polywire is best used. "Utilizing Cover Crops to Fill Forage Production Gaps" will be another point of discussion. A panel of speakers will highlight the use of cover crops in their grazing systems. There will also be an introduction into "Layout and Design of Your Management Intensive Grazing System."

The on-farm activities on day two, will be to the results of the pasture allocation exercise and see if the group allocated too much, too little or about the right amount of forage to meet their grazing goals. While at the allocation site, participants will look at manure distribution throughout the pastured area and discuss how that differs from a continuously grazed pastures. The farm stop will wrap up with a presentation and demonstration of low stress cattle handling using a bud box system, designed by a Joe Harner, Kansas State University Ag Engineer.

Please pre-register by April 10th. The School is limited to the first 35 farms, on a first serve basis. If you need more information or would prefer to register by phone, call Rod Schaub, Frontier District, Ag Agent at: 785.828.4438.
