Water rate hike lands at about 49 percent for residential users,

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – After months of discussion, Garnett City Commissioners last week approved a water rate increase in Garnett that will hike average residential customer rates 49 percent over two years – an increase less than they initially anticipated but one they say will still produce the revenues needed to pay for construction of a new water plant.

City officials initially expected to have to double rates across the board to fund bond payments on the $13 million plant, needed to replace the city's aging 1948-vintage processing plant that turns lake water from the 360-acre Cedar Valley Reservoir into drinking water for city residents as well as area Rural Water Districts.

The new rates will reflect about a 49 percent increase, phased in over the next two years, for average residential customers who use around 4,000 gallons of water per month. Rates for all other business, commercial and industrial customer classes both inside and outside the city limits will increase as well.

Under the present rates, residents' water charges include a $10 base fee plus $5.90 per thousand gallons, or $33.60 per month on average. Under the eventual rates, the charge goes to $22.50 base and $6.90 per thousand, or $50.10 per month, an average increase of $16.50 monthly or $198 per year.

Charges for customers outside the city limits of Garnett go to $18 base and $7.65 per thousand gallons. Similar increases will be applied against commercial/industrial customers.

The new billings take effect in three phases beginning May 1, 2018, with additional increases effective with billings in January 2019 and the full increase realized effective January 2020.

City commissioners Greg Gwin said a water rate comparison of area cities was used to measure the local increases.

"I didn't want it said that we had the highest water in the land," Gwin said at last Tuesday's commission meeting. With

Struggling for staff

Local police, sheriff's offices face bad national PR, salary competition

BY MELISSA HOBBS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Anderson County Sheriff Vernon Valentine dreads the time when one of his officers leaves the local department.

It's a tough situation in a local law enforcement community that has to run 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The responsibilities never stop, but Valentine says finding a replacement to fill a local law officer vacancy may be nearly impossible.

Right now, he says, they're fully staffed.

Garnett City Police Chief Kurt King has run into the same problem. He has been short one officer for at least a year and a half, and says part of the issue is because it's really hard to find qualified candidates that are interested in doing the job and staying with the department long-term.

Valentine says his department has 32 full-time employees including deputies, dispatchers, and jailers and miscellaneous staff. He says finding deputies is really hard to do.

"Nobody wants to be a cop anymore because of all the bad publicity law enforcement gets all over the country," said Valentine.

King agrees with Valentine.

"No one wants to be a cop partly because of the bad stigma the media has given us," said King.

With the media reporting police shootings seemingly at least weekly, it's no wonder that people aren't jumping at the chance to join law enforcement. Valentine said that even when someone wants to step up to the plate and join the force, their family likely isn't very supportive.

"Someone has to do it," he says. "But no one's family ever wants them to."

To become a police officer in Kansas, applicants must first be hired by an agency like the Garnett Police Department or Anderson County Sheriff's Department. Qualifications include a high school diploma, at least 21 years of age, pass a drug test and a background check. Applicants can't have any felony charges or domestic charges.

After meeting those initial requirements and being hired by the department, officers are then sent to the Kansas Law Enforcement Training Academy for 14 weeks of paid training. Once the training at the academy is completed, there is another six to 14 weeks of field training that must be done depending on where the trainee will be working.

Light will triumph over darkness

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

One of my daily devotions in prayer is to ask the Lord to open my eyes, ears and mind for opportunities to glorify him. There are times when God will fulfill this request and will put something on my mind which ultimately will be the topic for an article. Such is the case with the hymn "At the Cross". The song writer Isaac Watts says in one of the verses. At the cross, at the cross when I first saw the light and the burden of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received my sight, and now I am happy all the day. What was the light Watts saw? Jesus tells us he is the "Light of the World" in John 8:12. Certainly until we see Jesus for who he really is, the light we have is at best the light of a believer. The problem with this is we are told in scripture, (John 2:19) "even the

When the light comes on the darkness is removed, overwhelmed by light. We are able to see the entire room. Until this happens in our life we walk around in relative darkness as far as the things of God are concerned. The problem with this is if we are not connected to God we are of little value to the kingdom. And if we are of little value to the kingdom we are of little value to other people who need to hear the gospel. If we can go back to the dark room what happens to the darkness when the light is turned on. It is overwhelmed by light. John the apostle tells us in 1st John 1:5, "In him, (Jesus) there is no darkness at all." If Jesus were in the room darkness could not return when we turn off the light. As it is now if we turn off the light the room is instantly dark.

Such are our lives. Darkness invades all of our lives we can't help our nature. What Watts experienced was a moment in his life when the light switch was turned on so the darkness was overwhelmed. He used this opportunity to pen this hymn so that others could move out of the dark into the light. The "Light" of Jesus Christ. Darkness will always be with us that is our human nature but by virtue of Christ's atoning death for our sins the light we have through Jesus will triumph over the darkness.

Garnett Public Library April book discussion will be on the 26th

The Garnett Public Library will hold their book discussion on Wednesday, April 26th at 7 p.m. in the Archer Room at the library. They are held on the fourth Wednesday of each month. This month's discussion will be "Before We Were Yours" by Lisa Wingate. She is a former journalist, an inspirational speaker, and the bestselling author of more than twenty novels. Memphis, 1939. Twelve-year-old Rill Foss and her four younger siblings live a magical life aboard their family's Mississippi River shantyboat. But when their father must rush their mother to the hospital one stormy night, Rill is left in charge—until strangers arrive in force. Wrenched from all that is familiar and thrown into a Tennessee Children's Home Society orphanage, the Foss children are assured that they will soon be returned to their parents—but they quickly realize the dark truth. At the mercy of the facility's cruel director, Rill fights to keep her sisters and brother together in a world of danger and uncertainty. Based on one of America's most notorious real-life scandals—in which Georgia Scanddirector of a Memphis-based adoption organization, kidnapped and sold poor children to wealthy families all over the country—Lisa Wingate's riveting, wrenching, and ultimately uplifting tale reminds us how, even though the paths we take can lead to many places, the heart never forgets where we belong. Leading our discussion will be Paulabeth Henderson. The books are available for check-out at the library. Notification is posted in case of cancellation.

SAFER Act could put more guns in Kansas schools – in the right hands

Kudos to the Kansas Legislature for bringing forward a bill that would prevent insurance companies from penalizing schools that want to allow teachers to arm themselves as a defense measure against school shooters.

House Bill 2789, called The SAFER Act, is a common sense measure meant to thwart the insurance bureaucracy, which has traditionally threatened either policy cancellation or premium hikes for school districts that broach the topic of arming teachers for defense of their facilities.

Cue the explosion from the wild-eyed anti-gun contingent...

What? Able teachers volunteering to protect their students? A law that might give a psychotic shooter pause knowing multiple but unknown defenders could limit his body count? A move that looks beyond the broken record paradigm of the "March For Our Lives" public disarmament effort? Who are they kidding?!

It's no wonder Associated Press reporter Mitchell Willets ran, hair on fire and hands wringing, to spin a March 28 story alleging the bill might result in school districts being sued if they didn't either forcibly arm their teachers or allow them to carry concealed.

Stop the presses Mitchell. Any school district that goes to the trouble to put helmets on its football players ought to have gumption enough to allow its teachers and staff the option to carry concealed. But no one so far has penned ink to a bill that "may order schools to arm staff," as one area daily headlined the measure on Page 1.

Regardless how common sense it is to allow teachers to voluntarily carry arms, that effort won't make a difference as long as insurance companies, like EMC Insurance Services, which insures nearly every school district in Kansas, has those districts in a choke hold. Incidentally, EMC cut a healthy dividend for investors earlier in March, partially from all those Kansas property tax dollars the company has received.

Among the forgotten points that should have been included in Willets' shrieking AP rant is that lawsuits already abound in cases of school shootings, either by bereaved families or by survivors dealing with life after the trauma.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

Suits are already being discussed if not filed from the recent Florida shooting, according to media reports.

And it would seem, if school insurance companies in those states where school shootings have occurred had punitive policies regarding any security such measures taken by those districts, those insurance companies themselves would indeed be subject to litigation.

It is those companies, after all, which have provided the education bureaucracy the foundation it needed to shoot down teacher carry for years. Kansas passed laws in 2013 that allowed district staff to carry guns, but EMC choked off interest in that option by several Kansas school districts at the time.

Interestingly, three Kansas community colleges fired EMC as their insurance carrier and sought out other coverage. Surprisingly, they ended up saving some $2 million per year as a group over their old EMC premiums.

As the logic dawns on Americans that schools themselves are their own first and best defense against mass shooter threats, insurers may get the drift on their own.

With any luck, Democrats and Republicans in the Kansas Legislature will lock arms on the SAFER Act and get approval before the scheduled legislative session recess in April.

The horror that presents itself in the era of the mass shooter demands deterrence, and streamlining voluntary teacher carry is the best single idea we've heard yet.

Yeah to the sheriff who hangs out around Harris, it would be handy if you used your radar now and then instead of just guessing how fast somebody's going and pull them over five miles down the road. Thank you.

Thanks to the church for putting on the Easter Egg Hunt. It was much appreciated.

Yeah on the new sirens, I think this is a crock that they're feeding us. We've been doing this forever - I'm 64 years old and I don't ever recall complaining about parts going out on the sirens. So I just think it's this young punk of a city manager. He's all ready to change the tradition and everything else. I think they should go back to it and it's a good practice. It's something we've done forever. I don't buy this new city manager's story. I call BS on you.

Oh, how wonderful, how wonderful. Final score, Villanova 95, KU Chickenhawks 79. How wonderful.

Years ago there was a gentleman who used to fly kites at the north park in Garnett during these spring days when the winds are firm and a little brisk. I remember he inspired others to join him, and at one time I recall seeing a dozen or so kites at the lake and thinking how pretty it was. That time has long since passed and I confess I never knew the man, but I miss the way he adorned our sky. So I say to everyone in Garnett, make the world a little better. Go fly a kite.

Quotables:

"I fear not the man who has practiced 10,000 kicks once, but I fear the man who has practiced one kick 10,000 times."

Maturity needed in student gun protest

All you needed to know about student activist David Hogg's speech at the "March for Our Lives" in Washington, D.C., was that he affixed a price tag on the microphone to symbolize how much National Rifle Association money Sen. Marco Rubio took for the lives of students in Florida.

The stunt wasn't out of place. Indeed, it perfectly encapsulated the braying spirit of the student gun-control advocacy in the wake of the Parkland, Florida, school shooting. These young activists are making our public debate even more poisonous and less civil, and are doing it as teenagers. They are precocious that way.

The Stoneman Douglas students experienced a horrific trauma. No one can deny their grief or blame them for being impassioned. And allowance has to be made for the fact that they are teenagers, who universally believe that they know better than their hapless elders.

Yet none of that excuses their scurrilous smears of the other side in the gun debate. The student activists presume that there is a ready solution to mass shootings that everyone knows, and the only reason why someone might not act on this universally accepted policy is malice or corruption. This makes the other side the equivalent of murderers.

In a video interview with The Outline, David Hogg said that the NRA and its supporters "want to keep killing our children." Not that they inadvertently enable people who carry out school shootings via misconceived policy, but they themselves kill children and want to keep doing it.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Lest he be misunderstood, Hogg added, "they could have blood from children spat-tered all over their faces and they wouldn't take action because they will still see those dollar signs."

In accusing their opponents of being bought off, the students deny the sincerity and legitimacy of supporters of gun rights. They treat the Second Amendment as an inkblot on the Constitution, and dismiss all counter-arguments as transparent rationalizations. This juvenile view of the gun debate ignores Supreme Court jurisprudence, the genuine support of the NRA by millions of people and the serious, practical objections to gun-control proposals, and it removes all possibility of a middle ground.

Tellingly, it is Marco Rubio who is the foremost object of the ire of the students, when he has been notably open and accommodating. He showed up at the CNN town hall to get abused, and has shown remarkable forbearance in handling political attacks that are shameless blood libels. He sponsored incremental school safety legislation that is becoming law, and for his trouble he is deemed a moral monster who doesn't care how many people have to die as long as he gets a few more campaign contributions.

Maybe all of this can be written off as the work of overenthusiastic, underinformed 17-year-olds. But the student activists aren't acting alone. They are promoted and praised by adults who should know better. Since the kids serve a useful purpose in promoting gun control, though, it is practically forbidden in much of the media to dissent from anything they say.

It was hard to believe that our public debate could get even more sophomoric. The student activists are here to say, Yes, it can.

State might make a grab for your fed tax cut

Remember all that talk about the $135 million or so that new federal income tax cuts were going to dump into Kansas? The deal was with lower federal income taxes, more of Kansas' money would be subject to Kansas income taxes.

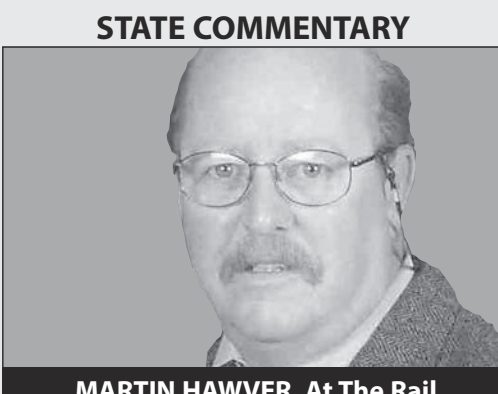

Pay less there (to the federal government) and you pay more to Kansas because you have more money left over. Pretty simple, you pay it there or here and the Statehouse crowd would rather you pay it here because of the opportunities it offers them.

One opportunity is for lawmakers to take that extra money that state income taxes will now yield and think of cool things to do with the cash that they didn't have to do anything unattractive to get...like raise your taxes.

Now, that's one way to go. Maybe use that additional money for schools, roads, health care, law enforcement, welfare and everything else we expect the state to provide? Well, so far, the answer is either yes...or no.

Spending that money on things Kansans want is generally a politically popular thing to do. Sometimes.

But there's another politically popular thing to do with money the state didn't expect to get—give it back to voters in an election year by cutting their state income taxes. That probably has a nice ring to it in this year when the Kansas House stands for election, and even statewide candidates can portray themselves as liking the move.

STATE COMMENTARY

The Senate, where just one (replacement) member stands for election to the remaining two years of his term, appears to like the idea of what can pass for smaller government—"give it back" is the slogan. Who doesn't like lower taxes? Not many who vote.

So, the Senate GOP plan is shaping up as taking that extra money the state will receive because of the new federal tax law and using it to pay for Kansas income tax cuts. Imagine that, how it can be turned into tax cuts, economy in government, all those political slogans we've been hearing.

And while most folks want K-12 public education funded adequately and the poor and the ill cared for, well, there are few things as nice as a tax cut.

But how to do that tax cut in the most politically valuable manner is a question. There are tax cuts and there are politically profitable tax cuts, which is what the Senate Tax Committee proposed.

First, decouple from the federal tax form, so you can itemize deductions for Kansas income taxes even if you take the new, big federal standard deduction. And then take the Kansas deductions which were slashed last year—property taxes, mortgage interest, charitable contributions, medical expenditures—and restore them to full strength again. That's what the committee did, oh, along with boosting Kansas' own standard deductions for taxpayers by 50 percent.

Sounds good, doesn't it? It clearly tilts the majority of that $135 million toward homeowners with sizable mortgage interest payments to write off, but who's going to notice if more prosperous Kansans get the bulk of that savings?

Well, probably not many are going to notice, but the ones who do may be mostly Republicans. At least those Republicans—if the tax plan passes—will be reminded several times who voted for their tax break and who didn't.

Oh, that court-ordered increase in school funding that the $135 million would help pay? Or raises for state employees who haven't gotten raises in several years and are actually seeing their pay drop as inflation and health insurance premiums rise? Those probably also would be good uses for that money.

But what beats an election-year tax cut?

Unable to identify recent find - possible WWII brass button

Colony sanitary sewer improvements ordinance

Recently at the archaeology site I've been working on, I found this beautiful brass button.

DIGGING UP THE PAST

Henry Roeckers
Call (785) 504-4722 for local archeology information.

I've been doing research on it now for a few days and I really haven't found out a whole lot of information.

I've been told by a friend that it is a WWII U.S. Army Brass Great Seal Eagle Button, with a wire looped fixed attachment shank.

For being buried under ground for all these years, it is almost in perfect condition.

I'm hoping someone can answer a few questions for me concerning this button.

button will be greatly appreciated?

Respectfully submitted by:
Henry Roeckers 26March2018

1. Is it truly a WWI or WWII button?
2. Was it worn by an officer or an enlisted man?
3. Was it worn on a person's dress uniform or perhaps due to its size worn on a rain overcoat?

Any help in identifying this County commissioners said Monday budget constraints this year won't allow for the upgrading of rural tornado sirens which presently have no backup batteries, and can be rendered non-functional in a storm preceded by a power outage. Emergency Management Director Marvin Grimes presented the commissioners with cost estimates to upgrade the sirens and install battery backups for six rural Anderson County towns. Grimes' figures showed a cost of $87,997 for new sirens and another $18,000 for the backup equipment for a total cost of approximately $106,000.

King says from start to finish, background check to completed training, it takes about one year to put a new officer on the street. He also says it costs his department roughly $80,000 including wages, benefits, training, uniforms, etc. to add a new deputy to the force. Some new recruits, King says, don't even stay on the force a year.

Valentine says it used to be that when a department hired someone new they could have them work a few months to see if the employee was going to work out first, but that's not the case anymore. Applicants have to go to training immediately. He also says people used to have to come to work for at least one year after a department paid for their training, but that's not the case now.

"They can get out of the academy and go to work somewhere else instead," said Valentine. Another dilemma both departments face is being so close to other bigger departments that pay more. King says that if someone doesn't have connections to the city they aren't likely to stay. The turnover time in his department is typically less than two years, because people move on to bigger departments with better pay.

The pay for both the Garnett Police Department and Anderson County Sheriff's Department starts around $31,200 per year and increases with time and experience, but that's hardly comparable to nearby places, many of which allow their deputies to live as far as 45 minutes away.

"The problem we have is we're close to the bigger agencies who pay more," said King. Pay rates are set by the governing agencies who control the budgets for the departments - the city and county commissions.

Ottawa Police Department offers a starting salary of $39,395 and Overland Park offers a yearly starting salary of $41,928. For counties, Anderson County is on the low end as well. Coffey County pays new deputies $36,379 per year and Douglas County pays new hires $42,078.

"Positions are open everywhere in the state," said Valentine. "Our pay is acceptable for our size, but it's lower than places that are nearby."

The shortage of officer applicants isn't a problem that King and Valentine are alone in dealing with. The Kansas Peace Officer's Association lists 48 openings in the state and the Kansas Sheriff's Association listed 88 job openings in various locations last week according to its website.

"You used to be able to look on the Kansas Peace Officers Association website and there might be ten job openings," said King. "Now there are over 48 agencies looking."

Special thanks to Monsanto Agri Company who presented GES Blue Pod (Grades 3 & 4 students) with a grant of $2500. This grant money is being used to purchase supplies for their raised gardening project. Some of the items made possible by this grant include lumber and hardware, gardening tools, soil, rain barrels, irrigation supplies, seeds, and a garden shed. GES students have teamed up with Mr. Furnish's high school woodworking students to build raised wooden plant boxes on site at GES. The students will soon be preparing the boxes with soil and seeds and designing the best way to irrigate the gardens. Picture on right - Gail Kueser and Jeff Stroup presented the grant money to GES.

Klenda becomes a member of Phi Sigma Theta

Phi Sigma Theta is proud to announce that Ashley Klenda, the daughter of Marty and Nancy Klenda of Overland Park, Kansas has recently become a member of Phi Sigma Theta National Honor Society at the University of Missouri.

Phi Sigma Theta is a national honor society dedicated to recognizing and rewarding academic achievement in undergraduate students at institutions of higher learning.

Ashley will graduate in May from the College of Health Sciences. She will pursue a career in nursing.

The proud grandparents are Richard and Dorothy Miller of Garnett and Dr. Martin and Fran Klenda of Beloit.

Make a difference – Adopt a highway

Make a difference in your community and help the environment at the same time – join the Adopt-A-Highway program in Kansas.

The goal of the program is to clean along the roadways throughout the state to increase safety for motorists and pedestrians as well as improve the beauty of Kansas. This helps to raise awareness on the negative effects of pollution and the positive aspects of a clean community.

"We've been a long time with Adopt-A-Highway," said Humboldt Lions Club member Larry Barnett, who estimated that club members have been cleaning up a two-mile stretch of U.S. 169 right-of-way east of Humboldt for over 20 years. "We try to do the best we can to keep the highways clean," he said.

Any non-profit group that does not discriminate upon the basis of race, religion or gender can join and there is no cost to the group. Members must be at least 11 years old and have adequate adult supervision. Groups have clean-ups two to three times a year and are recognized for their efforts with signs marking their sections of highway. Since spring 1990, thousands of groups have participated and a number of the original groups are still active today.

Adopt-A-Highway groups are gearing up for the annual Clean Up Kansas Campaign which takes place during the month of April. This event, as well as the program, is sponsored by the Kansas Department of Transportation. All Adopt-A-Highway groups are encouraged but not required to participate in the statewide event.

Groups clean their sections of roadway several times a year at their convenience. Most choose to schedule a clean-up time in the spring, summer and fall.

ment on the identity of last year's prospective buyer.

Still the company, which continues to operate heavy steel fabrication plants in Greeley, Paola and Tulsa, Okla., has kept real estate and personal property taxes current on the Garnett property. A review of records from the Anderson County Treasurer's office showed the company had paid its second half-year taxes due last December. Annual taxes for its six parcels totaled some $12,691, with personal property taxes totaling $14,215.

The 12-acre property is listed on an online brokerage at a purchase price of $385,000.

HUMCO employed 28 workers when the company announced it would close in January 2016. Plummeting prices for oil as low as $30 per barrel at the time sent shockwaves through other industries dependent on oil industries customers, for which much of TF's production was targeted. Other conditions at the facility, including inadequate lifting capability for the heavy fabrications it produced, was another reason given for the closure.

Scammers using Better Business Bureau name to collect dues

Better Business Bureau (BBB) serving Nebraska, South Dakota, The Kansas Plains and Southwest Iowa has received reports from BBB Accredited Businesses that have been contacted by scam artists posing as employees of the Better Business Bureau.

"Scammers are falsely using the Better Business Bureau name to try to collect 'unpaid' dues from BBB Accredited Businesses," said Jim Hegarty, BBB president and CEO. "We urge people to double-check with their local BBB if they are contacted by phone or email regarding the payment of their dues."

One BBB Accredited Business in Kansas reported receiving a call from a lady claiming to be with the BBB. The caller said several letters had been sent to him, quoted his PO Box and wanted to see if he was planning to renew his Accreditation for $399. He asked the caller if she was in Wichita's downtown office, and she replied that she was calling from California. He told her that he goes to the Wichita office to pay, and he wasn't going to pay over the phone with her. Unfortunately, the caller's phone number was blocked, so he had nothing to indicate who was calling or where the call came from.

A similar incident was described on BBB Scam Tracker. It came to the BBB Accredited Business as a fake email: "Hi, Please see below the list of overdue invoices, of which $2,393.95 is due since last month. They provided a link to a payment site that was not from the BBB and could be malicious.

A related scam is targeting Chambers of Commerce. A Wichita businessman has described receiving a call from a man using the name "Bocca Deli" who was posing as an employee of the Wichita Regional Chamber of Commerce. Deli requested the names of employees and owners at his company. BBB confirmed that this caller was not associated with the Chamber and was phishing for information about its members.

Other businesses from across the country have also reported that they were contacted by individuals posing as BBB and Chamber employees. Besides trying to extract money from members of these organizations, the scammers also try to get personally identifiable information by claiming that they need to update a company's contact data, address and payment information. Then they use the information to perpetrate fraud.

"Although your BBB often calls businesses for a variety of reasons, businesses need to be aware that any representatives from the BBB would clearly identify themselves and leave a working phone number," Hegarty said. "If you receive a call from anyone representing the BBB and are unsure as to their authenticity, we urge you not to disclose any information and to contact your local BBB at 800-649-6814 immediately."

New iKan digital platform simplifies vehicle registration renewals

Kansans can now renew their vehicle registration from the convenience of their mobile phone with the launch of the new State of Kansas iKan application, Governor Jeff Colyer, M.D., announced Thursday.

The iKan platform is designed to allow users to interact with multiple state services in a self-service, intuitive experience from their mobile phones, tablets, and computers. In addition to renewing vehicle registration, the application empowers Kansans to have access to their official documents anywhere they bring their phone, tablet, or have access to a computer.

"One of the foremost goals of my administration is to make government more accessible for Kansans," Governor Colyer said. "I'm so pleased that with the launch of iKan, we now have more options to make transactions quickly and conveniently."

Citizens who use the application will benefit from a modern and personalized experience, with the ease and convenience of having everything they need in one place. Users can receive status updates through email alerts and push notifications for services that previously would have required a drive to the closest office location and a wait in line. The ease of iKan will increase digital transactions while reducing office wait time for those who don't choose to use the app.

In addition to simplifying the vehicle registration renewal experience, the state plans to roll out access to other frequently requested services through iKan, including vital records and voter registration in the coming months.

"Providing modern, intuitive solutions is a priority for Kansas, as we continue to transform our digital strategy to better serve our citizens," said Donna Shelite, the Kansas Chief Information Technology Officer. "iKan gives Kansans the ability to get what they need from multiple services in a single experience."

To launch this new service, Kansas partnered with PayIt, a Midwest-based technology firm specializing in the simplification of government transactions across the country, including taxes, utilities, court records, and more as part of their unique, cloud-based platform. PayIt has provided the myKTag app for the Kansas Turnpike since 2014.

"We're excited to partner with the State of Kansas and see great results at home," said John Thomson, CEO of PayIt.

ACHS presents 'Wild Pink' - a two-act play by Margaret Witt

A hog farmer (Todd Crawford) has three smart sons (Owen Lutz, Eddie Gruver, Bryar Wight) but absolutely no money to send them to college. A rich, snooty, old maiden aunt (Becky Kropf) has a fortune but years ago she made it clear that she wanted nothing to do with the farmer's family. What to do? The three boys don wigs, dresses, heels and even Wild Pink fingernail polish for a challenging weekend visit with their estranged aunt. Their desperate mission: to convince her she has three beautiful nieces who are worthy of her millions. And worthy they are when the boys discover someone is embezzling their aunt's money. Switching between being their boyish and more "feminine" selves, they set up a trap to catch the thief, never realizing they've been set up as well! Join the ACHS drama department for a night of guaranteed laughs suitable for the entire family! Wild Pink will run Friday, April 6 at 7:00 PM and Saturday, April 7 at 7:00 PM. Tickets are $4.00 for adults and $3.00 for students. Tickets will be available at the door.

Anderson County Farm Bureau provided lunch and the Extension District provided booklets of babysitting information & supplies to make first aid kits.

last Tuesday's commission meeting. With the increases, Gwin said the new rates will be just shy of Paola's charge for in-town residential customers.

Commissioners initially debated the impact of the increase on city customers. Commissioner Bridgette Brecheisen-Huss proposed stretching the financing of bonds for the project over 40 years instead of 20 to alleviate the financial impact on rate payers.

A portion of the new rate plan gives an incentive to the city's largest customer, East Kansas Agri Energy, to purchase all of its water use in potable water from the city. EKAE presently is the city's largest water customer, but also uses effluent "raw" water treated by the city's sewer system for part of its production. The company buys the remainder of its treated water from the Mound City water district - sales city officials say could help offset the new plant costs even more if the city could wrest that business away from their competitor.

In other business at the Tuesday meeting:

- Commissioners approved a plan to purchase a truck for the police department at some $29,037 as well as a car to be used for city transport and under cover police work at around $20,000, and $10,377 for police tasers, even though a USDA grant planned to pay for 55 percent of the purchase had not yet been awarded. City commissioner Chris Weiner told commissioners that he anticipated the grant would be awarded at a later date in 2018, and that he believed there were sufficient surplus funds to pay for the vehicles in the event the award was curtailed indefinitely.

- Commissioners approved a settlement for damages springing from a city water main leak near a downtown building owned by city attorney Terry Solander in the amount of $2,382.

- Mayor Jody Cole signed a proclamation naming April as Fair Housing Month.

BOARD...

Community College. Denny said in a stump speech published in the Review last Fall she was committed to advocating on behalf of children in education.

"I would strive to partner with all stakeholders; parents, district administration, staff, faculty, students, and members of the community to ensure this endeavor remains steadfast and successful," she said in the election run-up.

Rogers is self-employed as a local painter and home improvement specialist with a degree in history and political science from Washburn University. He's served in a number of civic project capacities, including the Garnett Area Paint Project which helped paint and renovate the homes of needy residents, and also ad hoc political committees that worked for elections that funded construction of Garnett Elementary School and the Anderson County Hospital.

"Volunteering in many areas of the community gives me a unique breadth of knowledge about the people who live here and their concerns. Having a broad network of friends also provides greater understanding and perspective concerning our schools," Rogers said prior to last November's vote.

The selection will be made to fill the seat of Cleon Rickel, who resigned in January after moving to Arkansas for employment. Rickel's term runs through 2020. Board members are expected to set interviews with Denny and Rogers and arrange a timeline for the selection at Thursday's board meeting.
