Hemp: Supply or demand?

Statewide meetings on growing, marketing hemp have farmers wondering

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

MANHATTAN - Farmers in Anderson County and elsewhere in Kansas looking into industrial hemp as a crop alternative are investigating the option with an eye toward whether supply or demand will come first.

And right now, after the conclusion of four regional meetings in the state sponsored by the Kansas Department of Agriculture and Kansas Farmers Union on the ins and outs of growing industrial hemp, no one's quite sure.

"What I really fear is we're going to see a flood of planting of it and no market," said KFU President Donn Teske. "We need the two to grow together."

If it seems like Kansas is stumbling into the hemp business, that's a pretty good analysis. After three years, Kansas legislators last year passed a hemp research bill and remanded it to the Kansas Department of Agriculture to administrate, though the bill's been interpreted by KDOA more widely than its critics originally intended during legislative hearings. Whereas the original interpretation of the bill defined a more rigid research plan, KDOA has opened up the definition of who can undertake hemp growing "projects."

"They worded it as a research project," Teske said, "so they don't have the ability to really open it up to everyone. But you can apply for a research project, and it sounds like they're going to be pretty flexible on approving those applications."

Teske said over 300 participants attended four meetings scheduled in late October in Manhattan, Salina, Colby and Garden City, featuring Canadian hemp grower Rod Flaman. Flaman gave insights on the ups and downs of hemp farming in Canada after it was legalized in 1998. Flaman reviewed how the hemp market has evolved and how he grows and markets his crop.

"We've forgotten everything about hemp, the fibre, the pharmaceuticals, the food," Flaman says in a video of the Manhattan presentation now available at the Kansas Farmers Union website. "So you've got to build this entire industry from square one and it's a slow process re-inventing an industry that has been non-existent for 80 years."

Besides the fact that no one in Kansas has much if any hemp growing experience, Teske said there's also the issue that there's no ready processing available for hemp or a Kansas market for hemp fiber or seeds. No one has yet connected a potential Kansas hemp crop to options for processing it, or entering it into the estimated $600 million U.S. retail market for its products that is currently served by imported foreign sources.

Presently the department of agriculture limits hemp research applications to 80 acres located within the same section of land, Teske said. Keeping those initial acreages small may be a way to prevent over production before those processing and marketing channels are worked out.

Christmas parade set this Saturday

Lighting ceremony, events brighten up downtown when 48th annual festivities roll

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Literally hundreds of local participants involved in parade entries are getting ready for Saturday's GACC Christmas parade in Garnett.

The 48th annual event rolls this Saturday evening in downtown Garnett with the annual Christmas lighting ceremony. This is the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce's 48th year spearheading the annual parade.

This year's theme, "Even Better in an Ugly Christmas Sweater" was a contest submission by Vivian Riblett. Vivian is a second grader at Garnett Elementary and she will be riding with Santa during the parade. She also received $25 in Chamber Bucks for winning the Name the Parade Contest, according to Chamber manager Kris Hix.

Hix said the parade welcomes any type of entry - family reunions, school or church classes, non-profit organizations or businesses. Floats should be lighted for the evening parade.

Artist Dennis Engle completed the new sign at Bush City neighbors and other passersby as the project was underway in recent months.

Sign reveals Bush City spirit still alive

Artist says neighbors solid connection to town shown in openness of their comments

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

BUSH CITY - The Baldwin City artist hired to replace the sign for Bush City at the corner of Texas and East 1300 Road developed a connection to the project - by the number of people who stopped to comment on it.

"It was really unexpected," said Dennis Engle, a rural mail carrier in Baldwin City whose side business "Art Ascension" apparently got him the Bush City sign job. Art Ascension tries to forge a connection between people and art by evoking memories and emotion, Engle said, and the Bush City sign project seemed to take on a life of its own.

"I don't know how many people stopped and told me stories or had comments or something," Engle said.

The sign that for decades noted the entry to town was destroyed several years ago in a traffic mishap. Engle said the funds to replace the sign were apparently tied up in the insurance settlement for some period of time. He planned to have it completed in about a month after the initial design and drawings were approved, but he said it ended up taking about twice that long.

But what impressed him the most was the connection to the area that the neighbors had - a sense of loyalty that came through in their comments and stories. There was a sense of pride there, Engle said, even though Bush City itself hasn't been much of a town for decades. Part of it may have been the travails of the last sign.

Bush City resident Arlene Patton said vandals absconded with the former limestone pillar sign several years ago, and it ended up on the steps of the high school at Paola. It was replaced, then stolen again, then turned up broken in two pieces at Longs Wrecker Service west of Garnett. Patton said Gail Long returned the sign and it was repaired with an iron bar to hold it together.

"Then, a guy came through the intersection hauling a trailer house to Ungeheuer's junk yard (Wes' Recycling) and it came off the hitch and broke that sign all to pieces. There was no fixing it then," Patton said. "I happened to be sitting right there at the intersection when it happened."

The township board took on the task of its replacement, Engle said - this time in a less mobile form. The sign is molded together with portions of old cobblestone from a downtown building, he said.

The sense of overt loyalty of its residents may go back to an identity complex the town experienced in its early days. According "to Anderson County Histories," a town site and post office named Haskell preceded Bush City about two miles east of town in 1880, along what was then the mail route between Garnett and Mound City. In 1886, Col. L.L. Bush of Lancaster, Pa., who was instrumental in the laying of the Kansas, Nebraska & Dakota Railroad, platted and laid out a town near the center of Lincoln Township and named it after himself. For some time there after, as improvements developed at Bush City, all the mail had to be addressed to and from Haskell. No one ever invested to develop Haskell and the post office was moved to Bush City a few years later, but the government kept the name of the office and the mail coming in and out of it "Haskell" until 1921. The office closed in 1956.

Engle's design stays away from the century-old postal perplexity however, recounting instead its railroad and covered wagon heritage. If there's any anxiety left, Engle said, it didn't show.

"The were all really friendly," he said. "Everybody had a story of some kind."

of Lyon-Coffey voters and 94 percent of those taking part in the Radiant election. A two-thirds vote of both companies was required for the merger.

Company officials said the merger would allow customers in both service territories to take advantage of cost savings which would stabilize their electric rates. The press release said cost savings over the next 10 years were estimated at $9 million, coming from combining purchases, various duplicated services, administrative functions, equipment, software and others.

The companies pledged the total combined workforce of 48

Included in the merger will be Lyon-Coffey's territories in Anderson County, which amount to roughly two-thirds of the rural areas and concentrate primarily in the northwest, west and southeast areas of the county.

A relationship with Jesus Christ is vital in understanding God

Fall and winter are the solitary seasons. The thunder and lightening and the big wind storms are behind us. While the fall foliage has been magnificent this year I witnessed the large pecan tree behind our house shed its leaves in a matter of hours this past Friday. It really didn't turn as quickly as some of the trees but the cold morning of this past week caused it to shed its leaves quickly. There was not much wind so the leaves came straight down. It was an amazing sight as the sun shown through them. They took on a gleam of sorts.

The falling of the leaves or the snow don't make any noise but what they leave behind, the barren trees and the frozen and white landscape, mark the end of an eternal life cycle. Solomon referred to as the Teacher, son of David, king in Jerusalem had this to say concerning eternity. "He (God) has made everything beautiful in its time. He has also set eternity in the hearts of men; yet they cannot fathom what God has done from beginning to end." (Ecclesiastes 3:11) The phrase "in its time" should make us realize that all living things have a life cycle. There is a pattern of events.

The Apostle Paul tells us in 2nd Corinthians 4:18, "So we fix our eyes not on what is seen, but on what is unseen. For what is seen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal." The unseen world is what is most real and most important, the visible world is passing away. This is frustrating to man as God has chosen to withhold certain knowledge from us and requires that we accept things on faith. God asks us to accept as fact that he knows the beginning and the end, that he has only our best interests at heart.

So how do we get past this frustration that we feel because we cannot fully understand God? It cannot be done intellectually. With our finite minds we cannot understand an infinite God. God has told us that his ways and thoughts are not our ways and thoughts. But God in his infinite love for us has provided a way for us to build a relationship with him. The way is through his Son Jesus Christ. Once we know Jesus we will begin to know and understand who God is and who we are. We are sons of the living God and as such God is truly our heavenly Father.

Small Business Sat., Nov 24, 2018 – Think Global, Buy Local!

Founded by American Express in 2010 and officially cosponsored by SBA since 2015, Small Business Saturday has become an important part of how many small businesses launch their busiest shopping season. Celebrated each year on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, Small Business Saturday allows consumers to make a tremendous impact in their communities by supporting a local small business.

Small businesses are the engine of our national economy. Today, there are 30 million small businesses in the United States. About half of all American workers are either employed by a small business or own a small business. And two out of three new jobs are created by small business. This year, Small Business Saturday will be held on November 24th and the movement is set to build on last year's success and rally even more communities to come together in support of all small businesses. Each year, we encourage independent businesses to leverage Small Business Saturday to help drive more traffic to their businesses – whether it's through their doors or to their e-commerce site during the holiday shopping season. Last year, thousands of communities in all 50 states—as well as U.S. territories and Washington DC—rallied their friends and neighbors to celebrate the day, and more than 100 million Americans shopped and dined small at independent businesses on Small Business Saturday.

Whether you are planning on starting a business or growing an existing one, your local U.S. Small Business Administration can help. As an independent federal agency supporting the voice of the small business communities, we can help you with quality small business training and counseling, funding, government contracting, small business certification, surety bonds, international trade, and low interest federal disaster loans. On the auspicious occasion of the Small Business Saturday this year, I encourage local small business owners to consider business growth by exporting to foreign markets and request local consumers to help independently owned local small businesses by buying local! Where will you shop during this year's Small Business Saturday?

Flaman noted Canada over produced its hemp crop early in that country's foray to develop to planting option. "Like farmers always do," Flaman said. "We're our own worst enemy."

Teske said the general mood after the series of Kansas meetings was upbeat.

"The general feelings were a lot of hope and optimism," he said. "My feeling is I don't think its going to be a windfall, but its going to be another crop in your toolbox."

Kelly: Drop wind power mandates to make room for tax increases

Kansas laws that mandate the state's power companies purchase wind energy are artificially inflating electrical costs to Kansas consumers statewide and hampering the state's economy. If incoming governor Laura Kelly wants a win-win initiative for her first days in office, she should undertake the dismantling of those mandates.

Kansas City Power & Light rates for some rural customers have already doubled from 1994 through 2014. The 2009 "Renewable Portfolio Standard," signed into law by Gov. Mark Parkinson established those mandates, and in so-doing has guaranteed continuing increases in electrical rates from companies forced to buy more and more worthless wind power and raising our rates to pay for it.

A notable fact in the well-intentioned effort to become energy independent by finding non-fossil fuel options to produce electricity: Nothing is actually gained for the electric power supply, the environment or the population by forcing power companies to purchase wind power.

For starters, since we'd like to be able to turn on our lights, operate hospital equipment or watch a movie whether or not the wind is blowing, Kansas power companies have to continue to run their coal or nuclear fired generators to produce power whether the wind is blowing at wind farm locations or not. You can't just fire up a nuke or coal plant at the instant the wind subsides - the mechanics simply don't work that way. Having to continually burn coal to back up wind farm produced power means no savings to the environment, because those coal-fueled power plants still have to run.

But the immediate impact on Kansas electric customers is that their rates go up because the state forces power companies to purchase wind power. A study conducted in 2012 by the Kansas Policy Institute and Suffolk University's Beacon Hill Institute estimated the RPS mandates would jack up Kansas' electric customers annual household electricity costs by $660. That's an average - some households and businesses will no doubt be even more.

Westar Energy's rate increase request earlier this year indeed reflected the company's plan to recover its $400 million in costs from the wind farm it constructed at Spearville to help meet those state mandates. The proof of wind farms' impact on consumer costs can't be any more plain than that. In previous rate increase requests KCPL has admitted the same - mandates to buy wind power raise costs to their customers.

REVIEW COMMENTARY

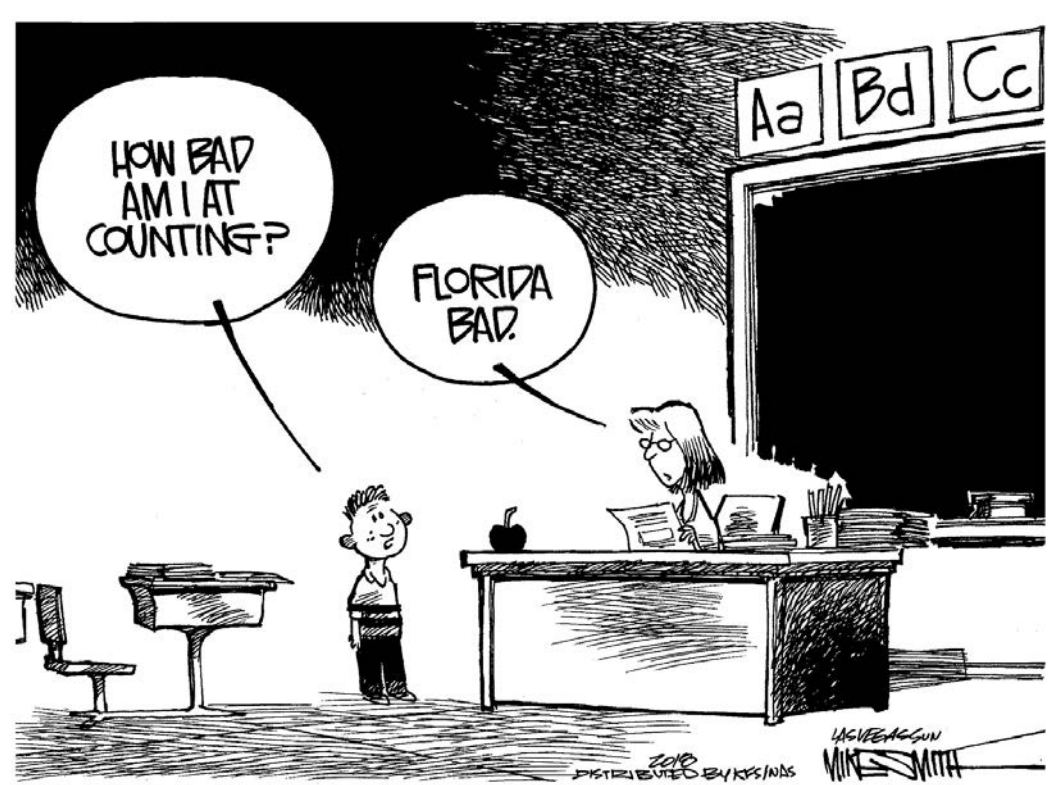

DANE HICKS, Publisher

The assessment of electric costs of course doesn't even address the losses to property values of neighboring properties in areas where sufficient numbers of landowners are convinced to lease their land for wind turbine sites. One British study showed reductions of 15 percent for the first two years until values leveled out, with additional declines in marketability during construction of the wind farms. These are additional financial losses suffered by Kansans because of the state's wind power purchase mandates.

To date, the limited initiatives Kelly has addressed and the ones she believes got her elected - expanding Medicaid in Kansas and pumping yet more funds into education - will no doubt require additional tax increases on Kansas citizens. It's incumbent on the governor-elect to allow the state's residents to save money elsewhere in order to pay these new taxes.

The most uniform way to do that is to abolish those wind power purchase mandates.

Redefine your sex? Why not your age?

Dear Editor,

This is the age of self definition. Girls should be able to be boys and boys to be girls. DNA boys/girls are those who, by scientific analysis of DNA, are boys/girls. Of course, kids are taught in school that science is never wrong, unless you want to self define. Today the government, starting with the Obama administration declaration on bathrooms, takes self definition seriously.

Letter to the editor

We now have cases where DNA boys, are allowed to participate in girls athletic events. Guess what. A Junior DNA girl in CT, a repeated track champion, was defeated soundly by a freshman DNA boy, who had "faint traces of a mustache." "She was not happy, but the winner was proud."

If the trend continues, will we end up with a DNA boys team and a wanna be girls team of DNA boys. Will we have to start a third team for DNA girls? Of course, defining a DNA girls group would be discriminatory, since only the individual and not science, can determine what you are. It sure was easier when I was young. All you needed to determine who was a DNA girl was a DNA boy.

Now, about being young. If you can redefine your sex, why not your age. To say that DNA does not determine your sex is no different than saying the time line does not determine your age. A motivational speaker, Emile Ratelband, in the Netherlands has petitioned the court to change his age from 69 to 49, because he feels younger. His contention is "You are only as old as you feel." Perhaps today's world has forgotten another important principle that my mother used to encourage, "Why don't you act your age."

The humanistic crowd that seeks to determine all things as defined by the cosmos, i.e., man, again runs into a brick wall, reality. [Jhn 1:3 ESV] "All things were made through Him, and without Him was not any thing made that was made." As we continue our efforts to redefine ourselves and reality, an inherent contradiction, we run into our sin and God's glory. We continue to rightly search for physical absolutes, but ignore them to redefine ourselves, thus living in spiritual poverty. Have a great Thanksgiving by giving thanks not to your own definitions of yourself, but to what you could be by submitting to the definitions you were given by your Creator.

Topeka turkey break quiet only on the surface

Almost eerily quiet; this Thanksgiving week the Statehouse is going to be nearly empty, no interim committees meeting to thrash out possible legislation for the upcoming session, not even freshly elected legislators likely to be wandering the halls wondering where their offices are going to be.

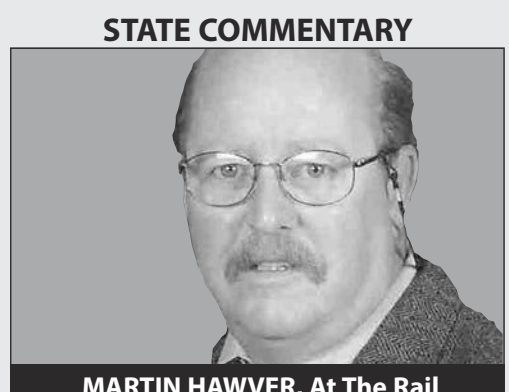

Of course, nobody has won anything until the State Canvass Board meets later this month to certify that those election results are official, that the county officials counted right, that the candidates who were named winners in their local courthouses get the final OK in the Kansas Secretary of State's office.

But pending that Topeka stamp of approval, there are still going to be 125 members of the Kansas House, and at least 27 of them are new, or at least relatively new (some served earlier terms, quit or were defeated, and came back). Five of those new or relatively new faces are Democrats, 22 are Republicans. A recount out in Hays will determine if Rep. Eber Phelps, D-Hays, or Republican Barbara Wasinger, Hays, wins the vote, which could change the number of new faces.

If Wasinger wins, the ratio stays at the current 85 Republicans, 40 Democrats. If Phelps wins, that makes it 84 Republicans, 41 Democrats. Not a "blue wave" in the House of Representatives.

That eerie quiet in the Statehouse is going to be offset by what will be hot phone lines, e-mails and voice messages between House members who will be campaigning within their party for leadership offices.

Now, everyone knows that the big job, the most powerful job in the Kansas House, is the Speaker. He/she with the help of the House Majority Leader decide what is going to be debated, and when.

STATE COMMENTARY

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

That top job appears to be locked up by current Speaker Ron Ryckman, R-Olathe, who doesn't have any serious opposition for the post within his party.

House Minority Leader Jim Ward, D-Wichita, may see a scrap for his post, largely because it doesn't appear that he's been able to increase Democrat numbers in the chamber, which is considered a major responsibility.

Everything else? Well, look for a GOP scrap over the No. 2 job in the chamber, Majority Leader. It's the Majority Leader, moderate Republican Rep. Don Hineman, R-Dighton, who is facing at least two conservative Republicans who hope to build on the shift to the right of the House GOP caucus.

It's that under-the-sheets campaigning that will to a large degree determine whether Democrat Gov.-elect (now Senator) Laura Kelly, Topeka, gets much of her budget and legislative agenda approved.

And that, again, is where the leadership of the House becomes a key. That House leadership appoints members to committees which will not only come up with their own bills but hold hearings on Kelly-proposed bills.

Don't like the Kelly bill? Just have the Majority Leader send it to a committee that will knock it down or amend it. That's why the power to name Republican members of committees is almost thermonuclear. The House party breakdown means 23-member committees are 16 Republican/7 Democrat; 17-member committees are 12 Republican/5 Democrats, and so-on.

So how does a fresh-faced new legislator who doesn't even know where all the Statehouse bathrooms are get a flashy committee assignment, say, Appropriations or Tax or Commerce or Federal and State Affairs? How about pledging to vote for a member of leadership, a little tradeoff and the first real use of a freshman's power.

Democrats? They'll make their own committee assignments, but not with the leverage that the Republican committee assignments carry.

Wonder what the upcoming session is going to look like? Wait for the leadership races to trickle down to committee assignments.

We'll see...

Loss of U.S. House doesn't diminish Trump

Midterm losses typically humble a sitting president of the United States, but Donald Trump is beyond humbling.

He is the most unbowed president ever to lose a house of Congress. Anyone who thought Trump would be taken down a notch, even by a more stinging electoral rebuke, doesn't know the man. He will remain the ringmaster of American politics until the day, presumably in January 2021 or 2025, when he gets on Marine One for the last time.

He made the midterms about him, because, really, what else would he make them about? Trump will never lose his interest in airtime, or the ratings. He boasted at a rally that, thanks to him, interest in the midterms was running higher than ever. And he was right.

Even if Democrats had a larger victory, on the scale of the Republican sweep in 1994, it would be impossible to imagine Trump getting upstaged.

His 90-minute post-election Q&A in the East Room of the White House was expansive, combative, boastful, gripping, outlandish, conciliatory, amusing -- and unlike any postelection news conference we've ever seen (even without Trump mentioning, by the by, that he was firing his attorney general).

The Press loved every minute of it, practically begging him to keep going. The perverse symbiotic relationship between Trump and the media, so key to the success of both, is alive and well.

According to Trump, the election wasn't a "thumpin'" or "shellacking" -- George W. Bush's and Barack Obama's words for their own setbacks -- it was a personal victory that had been blighted by some Republicans not sufficiently embracing him. He proceeded to mock by name fellow Republicans who had lost, in another presidential first.

Trump has legitimate bragging rights: The Republican showing in the Senate was strong.

His political base is still there for him, and in many key statewide races, there for the candidate he endorsed and stumped for. His rallies are still a hot ticket. He now has a cadre of allies, like newly elected Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, whom he basically created.

Alienating traditional Republican voters in the suburbs, of course, comes with a real cost. For one thing, it hands Democrats a constituency spread throughout the country, as demonstrated by the GOP carnage in widely dispersed House races.

But, for Trump's purposes, the GOP's strength in Florida, Ohio and Iowa suggests that, all things being equal, key pieces of his 2016 electoral map are still ripe for the picking in 2020.

Losing the House is a blow, not so much because it stalls Trump's congressional agenda (there wasn't going to be much of one), but because he now has an adversary with subpoena power.

Investigative conflict looms. The subject matter will be most unwelcome to Trump, including his tax returns and his businesses. The fight won't be. It will be high-stakes combat of the sort that he thrives on, the more intense, perilous and dramatic, the better. Because he will be at the center of it.

Trump's genius at keeping our interest is undimmed, whether we are appalled, energized or entertained. He's so far avoided a fate worse than electoral setbacks -- getting tuned out.

The perverse symbiotic relationship between Trump and the media, so key to the success of both, is alive and well.

Dream find: 1860's Civil War button found

WOW! Have you ever had the experience of one of your dreams actually coming true?

Let me share with you my very latest afternoon before my surgery at my very exciting historical site (7Nov2018).

From the very first visit to this old site and knowing a few things about its history, I started thinking, hoping and dreaming of some day getting a chance to metal detect and excavate this site.

My real dream was actually to find just one artifact that truly related to its early history.

At exactly 2:30pm, 7Nov2018, my dream came true when I uncovered this 1861-1865 Civil War Button.

A little about this button.

- 1861-1865
- Made of Brass
- Two piece pressed plate
- Wire soldered shank still intact on reverse side
- Slightly damaged at the head of eagle, has been hit
- Gold gilt finish is discolored due to age lost and buried
- It is 5/8 inch in diameter
- Known as an Enlisted

I cannot make out the mfg. mark due to excessive wear.

It was very likely owned and worn by one of the original landowners Jackson Black or H.T.Hill, both related and both Civil War Veterans.

All my patience, perseverance and work efforts at this old site for the past year have paid off.

My surgery is over and I'm on the mend, however it may be as late as next year before I get to pay another visit to this site.

My dream has now become a reality.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 11-20-2018 / KEVIN GAINES

Last Saturday the Anderson County High School cheerleading squad traveled to Topeka and competed in the Spirit Game Day Showcase state competition at the Expo Center. While the Lady Bulldogs didn't qualify for finals, they did finish in the top 10 and did very well in all 3 routines. Piper High School won the finals, Osawatomie finished second and Fort Scott finished third in 4A competition.

Above - The entire Bulldog squad performing the first of their three routines on the afternoon.

When should you fish for customers?

You can't catch fish in a dry pond and you can't attract customers when they won't buy. If your business itself is seasonal or your products are bigger sellers during certain times of the year, the idea of seasonality is a concept you've got to embrace to sell the most stuff.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks
Publisher - THE TRADING POST

It might seem like basic logic to most of us, but I've had business owners try to convince me in the past that they didn't need to promote when sales were already good, because, hey - I'm already busy enough. The time to try to sell more, they argued, was in months when sales had trickled off, because those are the times when you need to pump up sales.

The truth, of course, is exactly the opposite, and the proof is in the actions of your customers.

Do this exercise: Take a piece of graph paper and chart your sales in all 12 months of last year. Obviously some months are better than others, and the seasonality of your business or your products will be revealed by clusters of months that are higher, say, spring/summer if you're a lawn care business, January-April if you prepare taxes, etc.

These are your pulse periods, and if you've been in business any amount of time you probably already have a feel for these pulses - times when for some reason you're busier or customers are more active.

So when the fish are hungry, that's when you need to be fishing. As you connect the dots on your sales graph, you should also plot points on your promotional budget that roughly follow your sales graph. However you promote - "boosted"

Facebook posts, radio advertising, sales people who go door-to-door, industry newsletters, etc. - you want to apply more budget during the times customers are most likely to buy. You need to retain your customer base plus take customers away from your competition.

That's because - like fishing when the fish are biting - the more hooks you have in the water when they're hungry the more fish you'll catch. Apportioning your budget more generously during the times customers are more likely to buy means you have a better chance of landing them. If you're not there when the fish are biting, some other fisherman's going to go home with your fish.

Conversely, using your budget to push product when customers are naturally not interested makes your promotional dollars inefficient - your return on investment will be naturally lower than if you bumped up your spending during times the market is more responsive.

So the key for seasonal businesses or products is proper planning - which may take months of preparation to staff, plan promotions, book advertising and order product in order to be ready when the "fish" start "running."

Making PRF Insurance work for you

Learning how to use Pasture, Rangeland and Forage (PRF) Insurance will be a featured workshop at the upcoming Winter Forage Conference, Tuesday, December 11, 2018, in the Anderson Building on the Lyon County Fairgrounds, Emporia, Kansas. Registration begins at 9:00 a.m. and the conference kicks off at 9:30 a.m.

"Making Pasture, Rangeland and Forage Insurance Work for You!" will be a one-hour, sponsored workshop, featuring Dr. Monte Vandever, Kansas State University, Extension Ag Economist and Jason Timmerman with the Silveus Insurance Group. "There's been some recent policy changes that folks should be aware of, but Pasture, Rangeland and Forage Insurance can be a great risk management tool for grass and forage managers and we're delighted to have these two knowledgeable speakers at the conference," said Mark Nelson, KSFGC Executive Secretary-Treasurer.

Each year, the Kansas Forage and Grassland Council (KSFGC) and Kansas State University team up to hold its Winter Forage Conference and KSFGC Annual Meeting. A highlight of the conference will be a farmer panel discussing Flint Hills Alfalfa Management, along with presentations by Dr. Dale Blasi on feed and forage quality testing and utilizing test results, Alan Tachman, on fall burning for sericea control, and Dr. Leah Tsoodle on the Flint Hills Pasture Report.

Conference Registration is $45 per farm (plus $15 for each additional farm member), which includes the noon meal, subscriptions to both Progressive Forage Grower and Hay & Forage Magazines, along with membership to KSFGC, the American Forage and Grassland Council, and the National Alfalfa and Forage Alliance. If you've already renewed your KSFGC membership, admission is free. Farmers and ranchers can learn more and register online at <https://ksfgc.org/wkfc/>. You can also RSVP and pay at the door by contacting either: Franklin County Extension at (785) 229-3520 or dhibdon@ksu.edu, or Lyon County Extension at (620) 341-3220 or brees@ksu.edu. To assist with planning and meal counts, please pre-register or RSVP by December 7, 2018, although walk-ins on December 11 will be welcome. You can also contact Mark Nelson at info@ksfgc.org with questions or if interested in being a sponsor or vendor at the conference.

Howard Reiter gave the Communion Meditation reminding us that God will drive out our enemies before us. His arms will catch us so we can face anything that comes our way. Pastor Chase Riebel gave the sermon on Week 10 of the Believe series: Eternity. Our expectations of death affect our behavior. We need to be eternally minded at all times so that we do not fear death, but that we remember to die is to gain, and that whatever we suffer here on earth is just temporary and will be so worth it. We were not built for this imperfect world, but we are citizens of Heaven! (Ref: Luke 16:19-31, John 14:1-2, Philippians 3:7-8,

The Crest Education Foundation met Nov. 2, at the City Hall Community Room. All officers were present. Others attending were LeAnn Church and Christy McGhee.

The purpose of this meeting was to discuss a large fundraiser event. Several ideas were mentioned, to include a Dinner Auction, Dueling Pianos, Casino Night and a Relay for Life type of walk. CEF members will discuss potential causes for proceeds to benefit with school administration, as well as an available date to host said event within the next year. Discussion tabled until the next meeting.

Although not discussed at the meeting, CEF members are still working hard to put together the Christmas Book Drive. A book tree will be placed at Crest School, GSSB-Colony Branch and Landmark National Bank-Kincaid Branch. The trees will be up between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Community members are asked to choose a book ornament from the tree. Leave the ornament with a worker at any of the locations with a $10 donation. First snow in Colony 2018 began Nov. 7 and by morning of the 8th had 3 inches of the wet snow hanging on the trees, bushes and ground coverage. Sun began shining mid-morning, bushes and trees lost all of it and by end of day the greater portion of it disappeared. Now, Monday 12th we are getting our 2nd snow. This may be a long winter.

Kansas drivers can be thankful for falling gas prices

Motorists in Kansas and across America can add cheaper gas prices to their list of things to be thankful for this Thanksgiving holiday. As nearly 49 million motorists nationwide take to the roads for the upcoming holiday, they can enjoy some of the lowest prices at the pumps in 2018.

Kansas pump prices

Today's average price for a gallon of regular gasoline in Kansas is $2.36, which is down 11 cents in the past week, down 33 cents from one month ago, and four cents lower than one year ago.

The rapidly falling gas prices of late in Kansas have earned some important distinctions for their affordability:

Kansas currently has the 8th cheapest gas prices in the country.

The 33-cent price decline in Kansas in the past month ranks as the 6th largest drop in America.

"Despite seeing higher gas prices throughout most of 2018 compared to last year, Kansans hitting the road for Thanksgiving will find pump prices that have fallen significantly in the past month and which are now cheaper than a year ago as well," said Shawn Steward, AAA Kansas spokesman. "When it comes time to fill up during the trip, motorists should keep in mind that gas stations along highly traveled routes may have prices more expensive than in-town. Before setting out for the long Thanksgiving weekend, AAA recommends motorists download the free AAA Mobile app to find the lowest gas prices in their area."

As usual, today's average gas prices across Kansas vary by location:

Dodge City - $2.37
Emporia - $2.37
Goodland - $2.48
Hays - $2.44
Kansas City, Kan. - $2.34
Lawrence - $2.24
Manhattan - $2.57
Pittsburg - $2.32
Salina - $2.29
Topeka - $2.44
Wichita - $2.26

Today's gas price extremes in Kansas are:

HIGH: Elkhart (Morton County) - $2.80
LOW: Benton (Butler County) - $2.18

Gas prices across America
Today's national gas price average is $2.62, which is eight cents less than a week ago and the largest one-week decline in pump price this year. A year ago, the average national price was $2.54.

Many times, the downward trend in gas prices is typical at this time of year, when refineries have switched over to the less expensive winter blend of gasoline and demand drops off. If the price of crude oil continues to fall, drivers will see even cheaper pump prices as we close out the year.

Ways to save even more on gas

Despite the recent relief in gas prices, there are things drivers can do to get better gas mileage and save even more money during road trips:

- Properly inflate tires - the correct tire pressure can be found on a sticker inside the driver's door jamb or in the vehicle's owner's manual
- Replace engine air filter

Get a tune-up to ensure your vehicle is running optimally

Stick to the speed limit - higher speeds lower gas mileage

- Accelerate gradually and avoid jackrabbit starts

Motorists can find the least expensive gas prices wherever they are with the FREE AAA Mobile app for iPhone, iPad and Android. The app can also be used to map a route, find discounts, book a hotel and access AAA roadside assistance. Learn more at AAA.com/mobile.
