Pondering a hemp crop

Profits are major lure, but locals say there's much to be learned about growing hemp

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — For the first time since 1937, Anderson County farmers can legally grow a crop of industrial hemp for the 2019 growing season. But even though the profits for this emerging crop are touted as lucrative, some local farmers are approaching the concept carefully.

About 30 area farm producers joined the Garnett Lions Club last week for the club's annual Farmers Night, and a presentation by members of Basehor's "America's Hemp Academy" about the benefits and challenges of growing the crop.

Hemp was lumped into the category with the narcotic marijuana in 1937 and made illegal under federal law, even though industrial hemp has only a fraction of the psychoactive chemical contained in marijuana. Prior to that and even during World War II, hemp fiber was widely used for numerous products including canvas and rope and various food and drug and cosmetic products. Hemp growing was authorized for research under the 2014 U.S. Farm Bill when several states enacted growing programs, and the plant was removed altogether from the drug list in the 2018 Farm Bill which was signed by President Trump in December.

"It's not pot, but it's a pot of gold for Kansas farmers," said Katherine Frakes, dean of the academy.

Frakes said the AHA opened last December to try to catch what founder Joe Bisogno, founder of the Mr. Goodcents sandwich chain, bet would be a wave of interest in the crop once it was fully legalized by the 2018 farm bill. The ACH teaches "cadets" about the crop from planting to harvest, including seed types, methods of harvest, processing and uses and markets for hemp's various products.

Lions president Dave Branton said the club was excited to bring a cutting-edge ag program to local farmers for the annual event.

"This is brand new," Branton said. "We want to see our farmers do well and we want to see them have the information about this that's beneficial for them."

Frakes talked about the restrictions which still remain on the crop for the 2019 crop year. A farmer who applies to the Kansas Department of Agriculture for a permit is technically taking part in the state's research project on hemp, and has to go through a background check, etc., in order to receive a permit, and be subject to inspections and monitoring. Frakes said with last December's Farm Bill signing, AHA staff believe a bill will be forthcoming in the Kansas Legislature to make growing hemp fully commercially legal and no longer part of the state's research. March 1 is the deadline for the coming growing year to be in the research program.

Bart Hall, professor of agronomy at the academy, said hemp varieties are typically aimed at four product areas: fiber, grain, dual purpose fiber or grain, and oils. Profit potential on the crops is highest on those plants destined for oil extraction from their seeds, and they're usually grown on smaller acreages due to more manual attention. Oil crops can fetch between $3,000 and $75,000 per acre. Seed costs can run from 75¢ to $2 per seed. Other varieties and uses are more modest but still agreeable; in 2018 hemp grown for grain ran 1,000 pounds per acre at 65¢ per pound with a net after expenses of $300 per acre. Fiber grown crops last year produced some three tons per acre at $260 per ton with a net of $480 per acre, Frakes said.

Local farmers at the meeting had varying impressions of the presentation and the prospects of the crop but noted a general lack of knowledge about the venture. John Pracht said the idea was worth considering, but he didn't see himself jumping in right away.

"Yes it is very interesting," Pracht said. "I sure wouldn't jump in it without furthering my education on growing, harvesting and selling the commodity. It's just a product that most people around here don't have ample knowledge about what to expect from it."

Jake Strobel said the biggest opportunities appeared to be in the oils, but

Petition will seek just over 100 signatures

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — Those helping city commissioner Jody Cole protest the addition of two more city commissioners on Garnett's governing board will have to find about 102 qualified signatures who agree with them to put the measure back on the ballot at an upcoming special election.

City attorney Terry Solander said this week the Kansas Constitution outlines procedures for the adoption of charter ordinances and directs timelines for ballots to be cast when opposing those enacted measures.

State law calls for a charter ordinance to take effect 60 days after its second publication in the city's official newspaper of record (that second publication occurs in today's Review) unless a petition asking for

Strong local employment numbers follow wider trend

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA — Anderson County followed the state along the road of a strong employment picture for the month of December and a year of employment gains that echoed the rest of the country.

Anderson County's unemployment rate dropped slightly from a year ago from 3.6 to 3.5 percent in December 2018. One hundred forty-six of the county's 4,194 member workforce were unemployed. The November 2018 unemployment rate was 3.0 percent in the county.

Kansas Labor Economist Emilie Doerksen said Kansas added 17,200 private sector jobs over the last 12 months.

"Employers in the state have demonstrated a growing demand for labor as evidenced by upward trends in average weekly hours worked and real hourly earnings in the last 12 months."

The preliminary seasonally adjusted jobless rate for the state in December was 3.3 percent, up slightly from 3.2 percent in November and down from 3.5 percent in December 2017.

Protection measure voted down by House committee

Bill would have made 1.5 mile buffer between wind turbine, residence

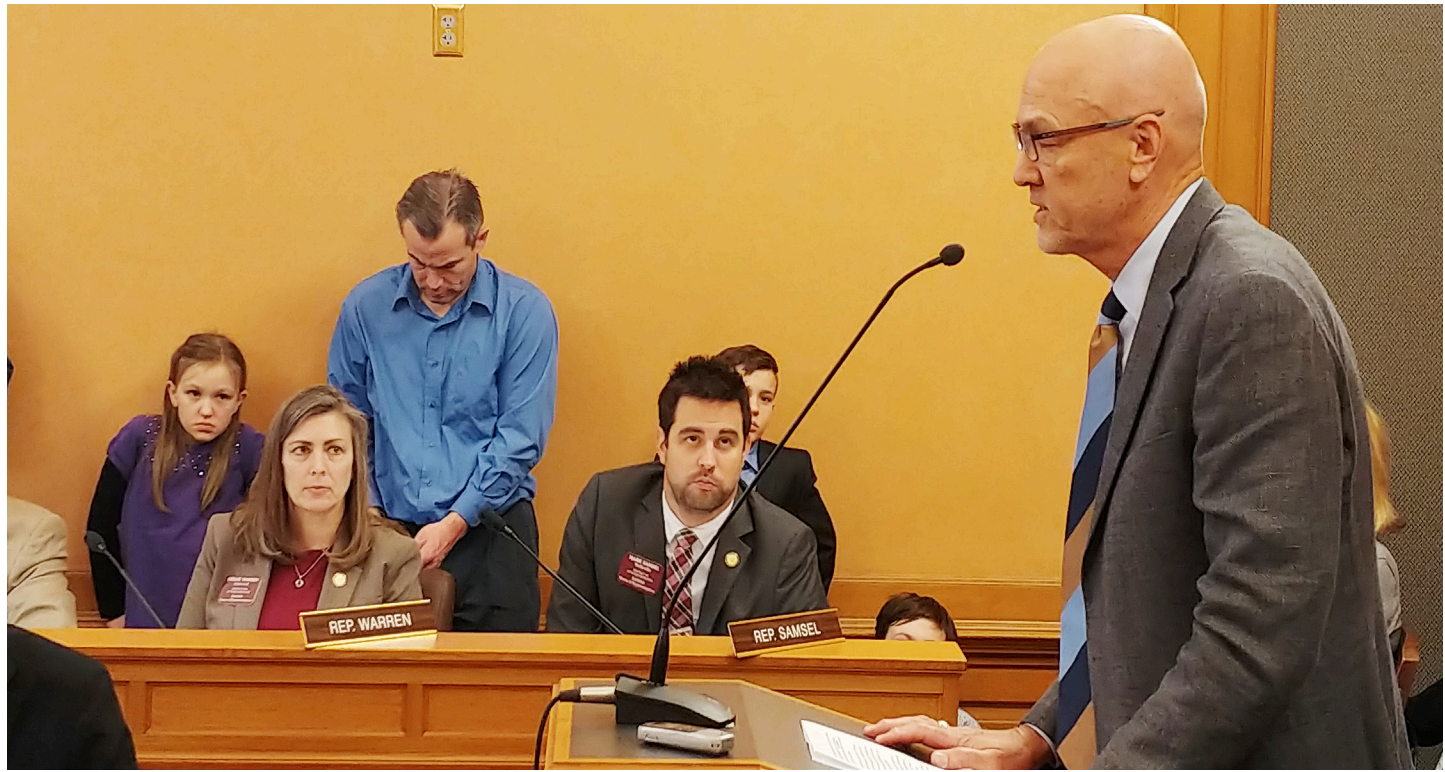

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

TOPEKA — Members of the Kansas House Energy, Utilities and Telecommunications committee voted down a bill during committee action last week which would have established statewide setbacks and other minimums to protect homeowners and others caught up in areas targeted for development as wind turbine fields.

The bill was being watched closely by wind farm opponents in Linn County, where a wind development company is targeting the Blue Mound area for a 30,000 acre turbine field.

HB2273 was supported by the contingent of landowners and others across the state opposing the development of wind farms. It was opposed by wind development companies, the Sierra Club, Kansas Chamber of Commerce, Hutchinson Chamber of Commerce and various law firms and lobbyists employed in the wind industry.

HB 2273 included a number of provisions, primarily a 1.5 mile minimum setback from the base of a wind turbine to the nearest residence or occupied building, three miles from an airport or park and 1500 feet from an adjoining property line. County commissioners could enact more restrictive provisions, and landowners who wanted to do so could waive the provisions affecting them. If a wind development met those restrictions, county commissioners would have been required to approve construction permits for those projects.

More than 50 turbine field opponents from Reno, Linn, Anderson, Neosho, Nemaha and Brown counties filled the statehouse meeting room Tuesday to support the bill and speak against wind farm development and threats to property values, rural vistas, wildlife and possible health impacts of living near the 400-600 foot tall towers.

David Fisher, a Linn County property owner active in the opposition effort to the German-based EON company's Linn County wind project, said the bill was a good effort but may have stretched too far to restrict wind development in the state.

"There seemed to be too many holes in the bill to allow it out of committee," Fisher said. "Through the process this

American Red Cross has a shortage of Type O blood

The American Red Cross has a severe shortage of type O blood and urges type O donors - as well as eligible blood donors of all blood types - to give now to ensure lifesaving patient care isn't impacted this winter.

Type O blood is the most in-demand blood type, helping patients facing life-threatening conditions and emergencies every day. Type O negative blood can be transfused to patients with any blood type and is what emergency room personnel reach for when there's no time to determine a patient's blood type.

Having a readily available blood supply is critical for patients like Luna Giles, who at the age of 1 1/2 has already underwent two heart surgeries and required over a dozen transfusions.

"Each time, the nurse would bring in a bag of blood for her transfusion, I noticed a small label on each one that said 'Donation Type: Volunteer,'" said Luna's mom, Jessie Giles. "It made me think about each individual who donated blood for my daughter. I would never know who those individuals were, and they would never see the effect their donation had. But each of those individuals, strangers to us, absolutely saved my daughter's life. They may never know it, but to me, they are heroes."

Right now, the Red Cross has less than a three-day supply of most blood types, and blood products are being distributed to hospitals faster than donations are coming in. Recent snowstorms and severe weather have forced hundreds of blood drive cancellations, causing more than 20,000 blood and platelet donations to go uncollected.

Individuals of all blood types - especially type O - are asked to make an appointment to donate blood by downloading the free American Red Cross Blood Donor App, visiting RedCrossBlood.org or calling 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

HBO and Red Cross invite Game of Thrones fans to Bleed #ForTheThrone. To celebrate the final season of Game of Thrones, HBO and the Red Cross have partnered to ask fans and blood donors to Bleed #ForTheThrone this March. This is the largest blood donation promotional effort by an entertainment company in Red Cross history - with six days of coordinated giving March 7-12 from fans and blood donors at blood drives in 43 states across the U.S., including an immersive blood drive experience at South by Southwest in Austin, Texas.

As part of the partnership, fans who come to donate blood or platelets with the Red Cross now through March 17 will automatically be entered for a chance to win one of five trips to the season 8 world premiere of Game of Thrones. The trip includes travel for two, up to two nights hotel accommodations and a $250 gift card for expenses. Terms and conditions apply and are available at RedCrossBlood.org/HBOGameofThrones.*

Additionally, those who come to donate March 7-12 will also receive exclusive Game of Thrones swag including a T-shirt, stickers to unlock a unique Snapchat filter and other items, while supplies last.

Upcoming blood donation opportunities are March 26th at Crest High School in Colony from 12 p.m. - 7 p.m. and March 27th at Anderson County High School in Garnett from 8:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m.

it to be placed on the election ballot is filed within that 60 days. Qualified petition signatures have to equal 10 percent of those who cast ballots in the last election for that jurisdiction. In the 2018 election 1,045 city voters cast ballots.

Once the petition is filed, an election has to be called within 30 days and held within 90 days of the petition filing.

Solander said the City of Garnett will have to bear full cost of the special election.

Freshman commissioner Brigitte Brecheisen-Huss originally proposed the city study adding two additional city commissioners in order to increase representation of city residents and add to the body's sense of vision. Commissioners Cole and Greg Gwin were initially cool to the idea but opted to place the question on the fall 2018 ballot as a non-binding referendum. Voters approved the option 537-483. Huss and Gwin immediately voted over Cole's dissent to pursue a charter ordinance to transition from three to five commissioners.

The two adopted that measure at a commission meeting earlier this month, again over Cole's protest vote.

Other area counties continued to reflect a strong jobs picture. Allen County was 3.5 percent in December 2018, Coffey County at 4.6 percent, Franklin at 3.2, Miami County at 3.3 and Linn County at 5.5.

Doerksen said December 2018 estimates are not impacted by the partial federal government shutdown. The reference period for nonfarm job estimates is the pay period that includes the 12th of the month and the reference period for the unemployment rate is the calendar week containing the 12th (December 9-15, 2018). Both occurred prior to the partial shutdown which began on December 22, 2018. Those furloughs will be reflected in upcoming January figures.

REVEY

JANUARY 2, 1943 - FEBRUARY 22, 2019

Our angel has returned to Glory. Karen Sue Cowdin Revey, age 76, of Garnett, Kansas, passed away on Friday, February 22, 2019 at Via Christi Hospital, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Revey

Karen Sue Cowdin Revey was born January 2, 1943 to Alfred Cowdin and Rose Miller Cowdin in Ottawa, Kansas and was the last of 12 children.

Karen was well known around Anderson and Franklin Counties for her sprawling and successful antique store in Garnett, Kansas. She was without a doubt the most selfless person one could ever know, always thinking and caring for others, for her being a prolific hometown "Pie Lady". Yet...other's might remember her as the talented & impressive regional country singer for many decades. But some Cowdin Family members hold their fondest memories of her always delighting at gatherings, reunions, and special occasions by singing "a cappel-la" whatever song one would ask her to sing. Karen always did such an amazing job of singing because she sang from her heart.

Karen is survived by her

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

In Matthew 19:16-22 Jesus has a conversation with a young man who is a student of the law. The young man attempts to use the Mosaic law as justification to receive eternal life. This young man represents many people today who believe they can gain eternal life by keeping a certain lifestyle. The young man asks Jesus what he must do to receive eternal life? Jesus provides him a direct answer, "obey the commandments." The man then asks, "which ones." Jesus lists the commandments for the man and the man responds, "all these I have kept." Then the young man gets that uneasy feeling we all get when we think about the daunting task of keeping the commandments and the question every person asks when they come to this point. "What do I still lack?"

Jesus then tells the man the very thing he doesn't want to hear. "If you want to be perfect go sell your possessions and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven. Then come follow me." We read when the young man heard this he went away very sad, because he had great wealth. You see the law demands perfection. That is why God set up the temple and the sacrificial system and the Day of Atonement. Because the law demanded something that could not be done, a way had to be provided to atone for the sins of the people. This looks forward ultimately to the coming of the Messiah who would save the people from their sins. When Jesus said, "Then come follow me", he was referring directly to what would be referred to as the New Covenant. The end of the era of law and the beginning of the age of grace.

Today we find ourselves in this age of grace with the same dilemma the young man faced. Our hearts like that young man's heart realize we need something we cannot supply ourselves. The degree to which we are attached to this world and its attractions conflicts with our heart. It was St. Augustine who once prayed, "Thou hast made us for thyself and our heart is restless until it finds rest in thee."

You see it is that very restlessness that God uses to bring us to himself. Jesus answers the why follow him question in John 14:6 when he tells the disciples, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." If your heart is restless maybe that is God drawing you to himself. Consider that before you try to fill the restlessness with something else.

Ministry on the Holiness of God.

Let Congress do the fiddling with time zones

A bill to exempt Kansas from Daylight Saving Time is about as crazy as it sounds, for several reasons.

One is that confusion would be rampant if Kansas alone dropped Daylight Time. Having an hour time difference between halves of a major metropolitan area would cause all sorts of confusion. People would be late – or early – for cross-border meetings, no one would be able to keep track of closing, opening and start times, people would be cross.

Having an hour time difference between halves of a major metropolitan area would cause all sorts of confusion.

Compared to today, when people get confused over the spring and fall time changes, you're talking about 2 million people confused all the time.

Kansas City, Mo., Mayor Sly James says time zones cause enough confusion. The speaker of the Kansas House is quoted as saying it might be OK if Missouri changed to standard time along with Kansas, but that just shifts the problem east to the St. Louis area.

Out here in the West, it's hard enough today to deal with the five counties that remain on Mountain Time, out of a one-time total of something like 27. There's an hour difference between us and them or Colorado. If Kansas went back to standard time, however, in the summer, there'd be an hour's difference between us and our wayward counties, and another hour between Goodland and Colorado.

Or two hours at the border west of St. Francis. Go figure. Most of us have enough trouble tracking one hour in our heads, let alone one or two.

Creating a patchwork of time zones defies both the logic of Standard Time established more than a century ago and the Uniform Time Act of 1966, more than 50 years ago, that established uniform observance of Daylight Time.

Since then, only two states – Hawaii, which is isolated, and Arizona, which bakes at 118 degrees under the summer sun – have exempted themselves from this law. In Phoenix, the last thing anyone wants is an “extra” hour of daylight in the evening. People there don't come out until sunset.

Proponents of the change cite recent studies that track an annual increase in heart attacks the Monday after the spring time change. (Fall “back” just gives everyone an extra hour of sleep, apparently, but not stress.) Most likely, those same people would have had heart attacks some other day. Time stress was just a handy trigger.

No, if we want to fool around with time, the issue ought to be settled in Congress, which gave us this mess in the first place. It just doesn't make sense for one state, or a few, to do this alone.

But don't hold your breath until Congress does something.

Mr. Hicks I want to thank you for the front page news and having the carry over onto page 2A. I appreciate it very much. I just wanted to say thank you. This was for February 19, 2019, newspaper. Thank you very much.

I thought the purpose of the planning and zoning commission meeting was to hear comments and discuss the pros and cons of a proposed zoning change before the vote was taken. Apparently two of the members had already made up their minds and weren't even going to be at the meeting to hear any comments. Is that the way Garnett runs things? Apparently so.

If you get all upset when you leave your wash in the machines and somebody takes them out to use the washer, try having a little consideration for other people trying to use the machines after you've left them for 30 or 45 minutes. Thank you.

I certainly wish city commissioner Cole good luck in her protest petition against this silly idea of adding two new people to the Garnett city council. As I drive around Garnett this winter and dodge the chuck holes in the Garnett road system and sometimes have to dodge the other oncoming cars that are trying to dodge chuck holes in their own lane too, I can certainly think of better places to spend that $10,000 a year than in salaries for two additional city commissioners. Thank you.

Who do you have to wake up at the county barn to get rock on the county roads? There's no gravel, there's tons of pot holes and there's just plain mud. When do we elect new county commissioners? Rural voters need to remember road conditions when they go to the polls and the road and bridge lead at the county's no prize either. Unfortunately we can't vote him out. Roads are ridiculous, they're bad and they need work fast. Thank you.

How will Governor Kelly spin the KPERS vote?

It's going to take a few days, but the first and biggest fight of new Gov. Laura Kelly and, well, apparently the entire Legislature, will break out this week.

The bell that started the first round: Friday's 117-0 passage by the House of the Senate's unanimously passed on Valentine's Day of a short little bill that sends $115 million to the Kansas Public Employee Retirement System to pay back the $97 million (plus interest) that it didn't pay in 2016.

Repaying debt...not a bad idea, except that everything is different when the Legislature is dealing with the pension fund that, while “not actuarially balanced,” is still making those monthly pension check payments to retirees.

But here's the big fight over the very first bill passed by this year's heavily Republican Legislature to the brand-new Democrat governor Kelly: pay KPERS now, or pay KPERS later...

Why is this so mesmerizing? Because the governor clearly lost her argument to the Legislature for her own KPERS plan. Now, she can sign the bill, reluctantly, and say she just didn't want to waste time with a veto.

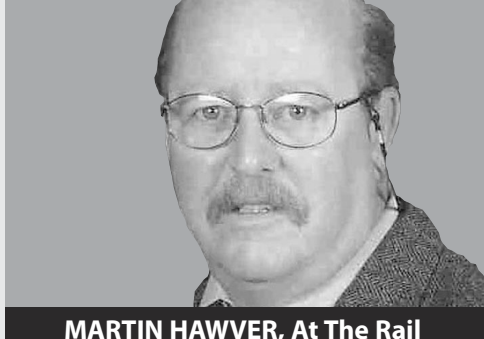

Or, she could veto the bill and get overridden. Hard to say who would want to be in that picture with her.

Or she could just put it in her desk drawer, and after 10 days it becomes law anyway with none of her DNA on it.

The governor hasn't said what she intends to do with the bill.

There really isn't a good choice for her, and it's going to be interesting to see how she describes what she's going to do with the bill.

STATE COMMENTARY

MARTIN HAWVER, At The Rail

A well-thought-out explanation is necessary, one that will make the ultimate beneficiaries of the pension program believe she's working for their best interests.

The “pay KPERS now” side of the issue makes sense to pay back money that lawmakers borrowed from the pension fund back when the state was scrambling to keep its annual balance out of red ink. That $97 million non-payment to KPERS was needed as the state started a series of tax increases to dig out of the former Gov. Sam Brownback “lower taxes and the economy will boom, and we'll take in more money” experiment which just didn't work.

The “pay KPERS later” side of the issue? Well, Kelly had a different idea. Refinancing the pension fund's actuarial shortfall (basically the amount it would need to pay off all its members in one day) over another 30 years brings smaller annual payments that the state is more likely to actually pay. Everyone gets paid, it just takes longer...and the state pays interest on that refinancing for 30 years, a long time.

The politics are interesting, because that borrowed money is from the schools/state workers' section of the pension fund. Democrats voted for the bill because those two categories of pensioners are often solid Democrat voters.

Republicans decry that interest the state would pay on refinancing the pension system under the Kelly plan. They've made a big deal out of the $24,000 per day interest the state is running up by not paying that $115 million now. They apparently pay cash for their cars and houses.

What happens next? Nobody but the governor knows. But whatever Kelly does, it is going to influence future governor-Legislature fights, and whatever happens, she'll go into Round 2 of the prize fight a little weakened.

Dramatic, and it might tell the future. Or at least change the relationship between the governor and the Legislature.

Get your bets down...

The Democrat who could unseat Trump in 2020

The day has arrived in the Democratic Party when Sherrod Brown is a kind of moderate.

The impeccably progressive Ohio senator who has long occupied a spot on the left flank of the Democratic caucus is declining to sign up for the fashionable radical causes of the hour.

Brown has not endorsed the Bernie Sanders “Medicare-for-all” plan that contemplates the end of private insurance in America, nor for the outlandishly expensive and eminently mockable Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez “Green New Deal.”

This marks Brown out from other Democratic senators running for president, who aren't letting practicality or future worries about a general election keep them from putting their names to legislation that will never pass and opens them up to obvious attacks.

A variety of forces tether Brown to reality more than his colleagues. He's been in elected politics his entire adult life, and although he's been willing to go his own way -- he voted against the Defense of Marriage Act in the 1990s when that wasn't popular -- he's pragmatic enough not to get carried away with wild enthusiasms.

He's managed to thrive in an increasingly red state. In 2016, Donald Trump handily won Ohio. The state is not Alabama, but it's not New York or California either, where a

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Democrat can discount any need to appeal to culturally conservative voters.

Finally, Brown's base is unions that have no patience for pie-in-the-sky environmental schemes that threaten their jobs, or radical schemes to overturn current health care arrangements when many of them have gold-plated plans they want to protect.

All of this means that Brown has the sense to steer clear of proposals that will almost certainly diminish a Democrat's chances of beating Trump.

On paper, Brown looks like a strong general election candidate, and not just because he's avoiding ridiculous excesses.

The natural play for Democrats in 2020 would be to nominate someone, like Brown, who has a good chance of winning back the Blue Wall states and therefore putting away the election (barring some unforeseen event that opens up Hillary states to Trump).

There's little doubt that Brown would have won against Trump in 2016. He has a much stronger connection to working-class voters than Hillary Clinton, and never would have dismissed them or the Upper Midwest. He came up in politics hanging out in union halls, and warns against coastal condescension toward the Midwest.

Brown can claim some measure of vindication with the rise of Trump. It has moved the center of gravity of American politics in his direction. Brown's economic populism is no longer an outlier.

The question is whether the Democratic Party is leaving behind Brown's style of politics. The left's disdain for working-class whites has, if anything, grown over the first two years of the Trump presidency. And like Bernie Sanders, Brown will have the disadvantage of being a white male more interested in class rather than racial politics.

Part of Brown's calculation has to be that he can leave the crowded left-most lane in the primary to others. And, so, yes, it has come to this: In the inflamed, #resistance-driven contemporary Democratic Party, Sherrod Brown is a voice of relative moderation.

U.S. Naval Service momentos - Part 2

As promised this week's column will be about a few more of my Navy career mementos I have kept over the years.

Starting from the top left corner. My very first Seaman Apprentice stripes (Nov-Dec 1956). My second stripes Airman Apprentice (1956-1957)-Note: the color change from White (Seaman) to Green (Aviation). My promotion stripes 1957 to Airman, with crossed hammers or strikers rating badge (Aviation Structural Mechanic). Little pair of scissors, issued to me in Boot Camp at Great Lakes, ILL. as part of my sewing kit. My "Shiny Sea Bean" or "Good Luck Bean" from the Philippines. It is a real bean, coming from a large pod. We carried them on us and kept them highly polished by rubbing them with our fingers, using our natural body oils from alongside our noses. This is my Navy I.D. bracelet, given to me by my sweetheart, now my wife of 61 years, Kay before we were married in 1957. I carried her picture in it for many years, until one day, one of the links broke. My snow (blizzard) white-out reflector badges worn on my hooded parka in Iceland. It was often very tricky business walking across an actual aircraft taxi strip between our barracks and our work hangar. A name badge worn during my duty as a Navy Career Counselor. This Velcro name badge was worn on my leather and winter nylon flight jackets. My Second Class Petty Officers ("Crow" as we called them) emblem pin. Two gold plated buttons from my dress whites uniform. USN- Oh yes! We had to let all the civilian world know we were in the United States Navy (this is my civilian belt buckle).

I hope you have enjoyed a few of my Navy Career Mementos!

Last Friday night two men entered the Santa Fe depot here and held up Howard Settle, the night trick man. One of the men held a gun on Howard and told him to back up. At the same time, another man went through the big window at the baggage counter, walked over to the money drawer, pried it open and took what money there was in it, amounting to about $60. Settle says he doesn't know who the men were.

week we confirmed that the Big Wind Industry has plenty of money and hired guns to support their agenda. It will be tough to get anything through on the state level."

But Fisher said last week's hearings went a long way toward putting a face on opposition to wind farms in the state.

"This process did bring us needed attention to the public and our elected officials," he said.

Members of the committee said they didn't believe the state should be interfering at the county level on the turbine field issue, and that instead an issue of such gravity should be dealt with locally. An amendment offered to the bill which would have exempted counties which have an approved and existing zoning plan failed on a voice vote.

Committee chairman Joe Seiwert (R) Pretty Prairie, told committee members local control had its benefits but that wind farms presented issues of too much gravity for the state to offer no protection.

"This is not a dog collar ordinance," Seiwert told the committee at the close of discussions Friday. "When one of these towers is in there, it's there for 50 years - that's the difference."

Committee member Ken Corbet of Topeka urged the wind industry to bring rural landowners and homeowners more into their discussions due to obvious resentment by residents of target sites.

"If it comes back again, eventually something's going to happen," Corbet said. "I'm sure this will be back sooner than you think."

Rick Feuerborn said he thought local farmers would need to get better education first hand before they took the option seriously.

"I personally don't think it will be accepted as a viable crop in our area till farmers around here go visit with farmers who are producing it now," Feuerborn said.

Bulldogs hold on for victory over SFT

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Tuesday night, Anderson County and Santa Fe Trail exchanged blows for all four quarters, but eventually the Bulldogs would hold on for a slim 58-55 win.

AC gained a little bit of breathing room in the first quarter, taking an 18-12 lead into the second.

Santa Fe Trail would outscore Anderson County in each of the final three periods, but by just a lone point each quarter.

SFT won the second, third and fourth quarters 13-12, 18-17 and 12-11 respectively.

Defense keys Vikings victory over Lyndon

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

RICHMOND - The Vikings put a stamp on their 14-5 regular season with a 37-28 win over Lyndon on Tuesday night at home.

It has been the most successful season since the 2011-2012 Central Heights Viking team went 20-4. In fact this season's 14 victories has surpassed the total for the past 5 seasons combined (13-81 over that stretch).

It wasn't a pretty display offensively. Central Heights limited Lyndon to 6 points in the first quarter, opening up a 13-6 lead.

Lyndon would actually be held without a point in the second quarter but the Vikings scored just 4 points of their own.

Leading 17-6 at halftime, the Vikings kept the clamps down defensively limiting Lyndon to just 6 more points in the third quarter on their way to opening up a 26-12 lead.

In the fourth Lyndon would more than double their output through the first three quarters but it would be much too little too late.

Despite scoring 16 points in the fourth quarter, Central Heights still won 37-28.

No Viking player would score in double figures. Cannady led the way with 8 points while the trio of Sommer, Cubit and Beers all tacked on 6 points on the night.

Anderson County boys ends regular season with win over Burlington

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The Bulldogs have been no stranger to close games and the season ending 56-53 win over Burlington on Thursday night was just the latest example.

Anderson County has won 9 games by less than 10 points, so they have become accustomed to playing in close ballgames.

Burlington led after the first quarter 16-15 before Anderson County rallied for a 25-21 lead heading into the halftime break.

Burlington trimmed the lead down to 37-35 heading into the decisive fourth quarter.

Allnutt would rise to the challenge and score 10 points in the quarter en route to 17 points on the night. Powelson was second on the team with 15 points.

AC boys overcome double digit deficit to win

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Osawatomie was hot early on as they built themselves an early 11 point lead before the Anderson County Bulldogs rallied at home to win by 12.

A sluggish start offensively by the Bulldogs along with a hot shooting Osawatomie squad saw them jump out to a 20-9 lead following the first quarter.

Anderson County would flip the script in the second quarter.

The Bulldogs would catch fire scoring 26 points in the period while limiting Osawatomie to 10 to take a 35-30 lead into halftime.

It appeared the game would come down to the final minutes as Osawatomie cut three points off their deficit in the third, heading into the fourth trailing just 51-50.

It would be all Bulldogs in the fourth though as they outscored Oz 19-8 to win the game 70-58.

Powelson led the way with 23 points, followed by Allnutt with 14, Rockers 11 and Kueser 10.

Lady Bulldogs down Osawatomie in large part due to 1st quarter explosion

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - The Bulldogs played by far their best quarter of the season a week ago Monday, February 18 as they lit up the scoreboard for 35 first quarter points on their way to a 69-36 victory.

Three players, Foltz, J. Schmit and Jasper, scored in double figures in the first quarter alone as the team would score a season high 69 points on the evening.

With the game well out of reach, the final three quarters would be nearly dead even.

Osawatomie won the second quarter 15-10 before the Bulldogs dominated the third quarter 20-10 to go up 65-28 heading into the final quarter.

With a bevy of reserves in, Osawatomie would limit Anderson County to just 4 points in the final quarter to close out the game.

Both teams struggled in the third quarter, scoring just 10 combined points. The Vikings cut a pair of points off GARNETT - Following the Anderson County Lady Bulldogs 50-33 victory over Santa Fe Trail on Tuesday, the Bulldogs have won 6 of their last 7 games to improve to 10-9 on the season.

Santa Fe Trail struggled offensively, scoring just 4 points in the first quarter and 7 more in the second to counter 8 in the first and 14 in the second by the Bulldogs.

Trailing 22-11 at intermission, SFT didn't fare any better in the second half getting outpaced by three points in each

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COLONY - Last Monday, February 18, postseason play kicked off for 1A schools in the state of Kansas as the #4 seed Crest (8-10) hosted the #5 seed Southern Coffey County (7-10), losing 57-43 in the opening round.

Lady Bulldogs lose regular season finale

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - It was a disappointing way to close out the regular season, but the Anderson County Lady Bulldogs won 6 of their final 8 games en route to a 10-10 regular season.

Burlington has had the Bulldogs number lately and Thursday night's game wasn't any different.

Burlington was clinging to an early 8-6 lead before blowing it open a little in the second quarter to take a 27-14 lead into halftime.

AC wasn't going to go down without a fight. In the third quarter, the Bulldogs stood strong defensively limiting Burlington to just 10 points in the quarter as they cut the deficit to 37-26.

Burlington would take control again in the fourth by outscoring the Lady Bulldogs 20-12 to close out the victory.

Opening our doors to an exchange student

During certain parts of the year I secretly cringe when someone walks into my house. It's not that I don't like visitors; it's more about what my houseguests might see when they enter our home. In the winter and spring, odds are my floors will have some mud deposits that someone tracked in. In the summer and fall, dirt clods and seeds sprinkled around my house are a given.

"It's just part of life," I tell myself. Even then, at times it still creates a bit of uneasiness for me when someone comes to visit.

My concerns about my house have had to take a backseat though, as we have an extended houseguest this year. My farmhouse — in all its seasonal, messy glory — has been on full display as we have opened our home to a high school foreign exchange student. She's a Sicilian from a large city who is accustomed to warm weather, ocean views and pasta. Lots of pasta.

In preparing for her exchange experience, she watched all the Hollywood teen movies to help her formulate an understanding of what life would be like for her in America. There were dance routines, musical interludes, mean girls, study groups and school dance scenarios that she studied.

She made a conscious choice to come to the United States to study and participate in the lifestyle and culture. Little did she know, the images, events and people portrayed in the movies she studied in preparation for this once-in-a-lifetime experience would be very different from her reality: life on a farm in rural, central Kansas.

Our family's goal is to carry on our business as usual while also working to give her the best possible experience this year. It's safe to say Hollywood didn't prepare her for the majority of it.

Common conveniences including accessibility to a mall, a movie theater, a great pizza place and a coffee shop are all still possible, although getting there requires a bit more planning and miles on our part.

She's experienced early drives into town to get to school, dirt road treks required to get to a classmate's house, small class sizes at our rural school where the math teacher is also the cross country and scholars bowl coach, making selections at our small town grocery store and the beauty of a community coming together for a weeknight high school basketball game.

She's had friendly conversations with folks during a community meal served family-style at a local church, checked out books from our local library, discovered butterscotch, experienced slow Wi-Fi, which affects her Netflix viewing. She's also learning the beauty of Amazon's two-day shipping.

She's watched our farm dog give birth, and she's held a piglet in her arms. Our local FFA chapter members welcomed her and then put her to work, and she has experienced the joy (and chill) of traversing the farmyard on an inner tube pulled by a four-wheeler following a recent snowstorm.

While the clothes shopping options are limited, especially for a teenager who usually spends portions of her weekends visiting shops trying on clothes with her friends for fun. She's beginning to realize that we have to plan our shopping adventures a little more than she would in Sicily. And, thank God almighty, it only took two trips to Wichita to secure the prom dress!

After multiple video calls with her family and Snapchat posts seeking advice, she has even purchased her own pair of cowboy boots. The girl is committed and living a life she didn't even know existed. To say she's adjusted nicely is a huge understatement. She has become part of our small, rural community, and she has fully embraced the lifestyle and all the community has to offer.

While she has learned and experienced a lot during her time with us, I know my family has gained some valuable lessons as well. And for me, allowing her to view our farmhouse in all its seasonal, messy glory is something I've been able to relax about. After all, it is just a part of life for our farm family here in rural, central Kansas.

Your affair with the "I Love You" customer

Everyone in business has different "customer types" that make up the sum of their sales revenues. Some are good, some are not so good, and it's a good idea to identify a strategy to best serve them all.

"I Love You": These customers flat-out love you and just about any time they buy your product, they buy it from you. They're only about 20 percent of your customers, but are responsible for 50 percent or more of your sales. There may be different reasons they're loyal; you did them a really good turn once, they like your service or your store, or they really like one of your staff members. Regardless, "I Love You" customers want to know they are valuable to you, so you need to tell them that by providing special offers and even asking their advice. The more you do for them the more they will boost your word-of-mouth marketing with their endorsements. Your goal, after all, is to turn every type of customer into an "I Love You" customer.

"Have To": These customers know what they need and they need it right now. They may be impatient, and if they don't find what they're looking for quickly they'll be out the door. Think of the plumbing section of a hardware store. When the toilet kit breaks, everything else in the house stops until it gets fixed. If the need is less urgent, "Have To" shoppers are more prone to buying online because of the selection and convenience - which is only trumped by being able to get what they want close by and in their hands immediately. Because of this urgency, "Have To's" need special care and attention from a skilled staff member. If you can satisfy them on their terms, you have an excellent chance of making a "Salt of the Earth" customer of them.

HOW TO SELL STUFF

Dane Hicks
Publisher - THE TRADING POST

"Looky-Loo": The "Looky Loo" isn't in a hurry, in fact for the "Looky Loo" shopping is as much or more about interaction and experience than it is real need. For the "Looky-Loo" shopping is often a hobby. They can be a seller's majority traffic, depending on your location, and still be a very small percentage of sales. They can still be a positive or negative word-of-mouth force for you based on their experience however, so make them welcome but don't spend a lot of time with them.

"Cherry Picker": "Cherry Pickers" are always looking for the discount. They help you turn over inventory and as such are key contributors to cash flow, but not a good source of profit, and they're more likely to return purchases.

"Oh, Yeah!": He sees the screwdriver, and he remembers yesterday he couldn't find one in his tool box. The "Oh, Yeah!" or impulse purchaser is a longtime favorite. She is who your end caps and floor displays are targeted to, and particularly the last 3 feet before the cash register. The Oh, Yeah! Shopper buys on a whim, and it's your job to help satisfy him!

Your objective again should be to funnel all customers toward the "I Love You" realm, and you do that with outstanding customer service and attention that beats the convenience of the Internet, the mass of the big box store or the proximity of a competitor.

Tri-Ko to host a magician for fundraiser March 30

The nationally recognized comedic sensation and beloved magician Tom Burgoon is partnering with Tri-Ko, Inc. to bring an unforgettable night of laughs and magic to Paola! Tricks for Tri-Ko, a fundraising event hosted by Tri-Ko, Inc. and starring Mr. Burgoon, will bring the hilarious trickster and master magician back to his roots in Miami County for a sidesplitting magic show on March 30th at the Town Square Paola.

With a comic career spanning over four decades, Mr. Burgoon has worked alongside such iconic comedic legends as Robin Williams, Drew Carey, Sinbad, and Steve Martin who is on record proclaiming, "Tom is hilarious!" Tom's one-of-a-kind-show has taken him from coast to coast, on cruise lines, in comedy clubs in Las Vegas, Reno, and Los Angeles, to performing at the Inauguration Ball of President George W Bush. And now he's proud to come back to his roots for a one-night-only event of tricks and hilarity. "Paola and Osawatomie have given me several fond memories doing shows when I was a kid. I always enjoy going home and seeing everybody," Tom declared with delight, "it's always an honor to come back home and perform again where it all started!"

Dinner will also be served before the event, opportunities to win door prizes presented throughout the night, and local comedian, teacher, and judge John Wilson will serve as the Master of Ceremonies. All proceeds from the event will go to Tri-Ko, Inc., a non-profit agency providing services to adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Tickets can be purchased at the Tri-Ko, Inc. facility at 301 First St., Osawatomie, KS 66064 and all questions about the event should be directed to 913-755-3025.
