Right; wrong; lawsuit?

Commissioners spar with city attorney over proper style of election on 5-member issue

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – The ongoing rift between Garnett City Commissioners over expanding the commission from three members to five is now pointed at conflicting legal opinions that could see a lawsuit brought against the city over the conduct of an upcoming vote on the change.

Commissioners took no formal action to establish the type of election they'll conduct to allow citizens a voice on the expansion last week, choosing instead to table the matter in search of a more uniform consensus.

But the issue is abundantly clear to city attorney Terry Solander, who told commissioners in a written memo previous to last week's meeting the language in the Kansas Constitution regarding protest elections over charter ordinances leaves no room for misinterpretation – that such elections have to be conducted the same way as elections for "officers" – in this case commissioners – which means a standard election.

Commissioner Brigitte Brecheisen-Huss has pressed for a mail-ballot election on the measure, saying a mail-in election stands the best chance of garnering the largest voter participation – albeit at an estimated cost of some $7,500 according to Anderson County Election Officer Julie Heck. Huss was bolstered in her debate by a voice mail she received from a staffer at the Kansas Secretary of State's office and played a recording of the call at Tuesday's meeting, in which the staffer said there was no law requiring any specific method in the charter ordinance vote.

But Solander was unwavering in his argument.

"Article 5, Section 12 of the Kansas Constitution provides in pertinent part '...and the election shall be conducted as elections for officers and by the officers handling such elections,' Solander's memo read. "I believe the plain meaning of this require the referendum election to be held under Kansas law for the election (of) a candidate; a person," Solander said. "No other meaning could be ascribed to the term 'officers.'" Mail ballots can be used for other types of votes but aren't proscribed for candidate elections.

Solander said he had conferred with Eric Smith, legal counsel for the Kansas

Candidates make election filing deadline

GARNETT – The fall 2019 elections shaped up yesterday with the passing of the filing deadline for those seeking elected office on local city councils and school boards.

In Garnett, incumbent Greg Gwin filed last-minute paperwork to seek his position for a fourth term. He'll face Garnett resident Eugene Grimes

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A federal court in Nebraska has approved a continuance in the June 3 child pornography trial of a former Garnett man to August 5, while prosecutors gather more evidence and at the same time negotiate with the defense for a plea agreement.

Documents filed earlier this month in the case in the U.S. District Court, District of Nebraska, approved the continuance for Michael Dean McCullar's trial on numerous felony charges relating to production, possession and trafficking of child pornography. McCullar was arrested in Florida February 13 and turned over to federal marshals for extradition to Nebraska, where Homeland Security investigators alleged the incidents prompting the charges happened in early February. He was indicted by a Nebraska grand jury February 22.

McCullar, 47, worked for Ortho Diagnostics, for a time a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, as a regional manager for lab equipment sales and maintenance, working with hospitals across the United States. McCullar worked from his home in Garnett and was involved in a number of civic affairs, including a term as chairman of the Anderson County Republican Party.

City assessing flood damage to Lake Garnett road, impact on upcoming summer park events

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Six inches of rain over two days that caused flash flooding two weeks ago damaged a bridge on Lake Garnett Road to the point city officials closed it off after the storm, and now the search is on to find out just how bad the damage is and how many summer events may have to be cancelled at the park until it's repaired.

Damage to the southwest road bridge near the Anderson County Fairgrounds Arena washed out a portion of the 1930s bridge structure, when torrents of rushing water ran from Maple Street across Park Road and along the drainage inlet to the lake. Though none of the asphalt roadway was damaged, road bed underneath the asphalt was washed away and a large section of the base was washed away.

City manager Chris Weiner told city commissioners last week he was in touch with two road engineers in hopes events set for the summer and the Lake Garnett Grand Prix Revival in mid October.

Weiner reported additional damage to the Cedar Valley Reservoir emergency spillway. Flooding at the reservoir

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – The ethanol plant in Garnett announced last week it will purchase grain sorghum from regional farmers this fall to give them some flexibility after rains hampered corn planting this spring.

Hermann

Darlene worked in food service most of her life. Many of her years were spent working at Dairy Queen at 75th and I-35 while living in Shawnee, Kansas. The couple moved to rural Paola, Kansas in October of 1984 where she worked at the Dairy Queen in Paola and from there spent time working in the cafeteria at Holy Trinity Catholic School then finally finishing out her food service career at Paola High School cafeteria. She recently retired in May 2017 and continued doing what she loved at home; cooking, baking, and gardening. There was never a time when visiting her home that she did not have a fresh home-made from scratch cake or pie hot out of the oven a new nature which enables them to understand and believe spiritual truth. When Jesus said, "I never knew you." He is saying I cannot know those I have no relationship with.

Jesus is talking about people who cannot follow him for one reason or the other. A good example is found in Matthew 19:16-22. A rich young man came to Jesus and asked, "What good thing must I do to get eternal life?" Jesus told him to obey the commandments. Jesus then told him, "Go sell your possessions and follow me." We read when the young man heard this he went away sad because he had great wealth. There was nothing wrong with him being wealthy. The problem was he valued his wealth over God and by doing so he violated the First and greatest commandment.

We can do a lot of things for God and his kingdom however none more important than getting to know him so he will know us.

"They can guess at it and so can I," Solander said. "Until court rules on it, it's just a guess."

The issue has brewed since an advisory election last fall in which city voters opted by a 54 vote margin to expand the governing body from three to five members. Huss and Gwin immediately embraced the non-binding city vote while commissioner Jody Cole cast the lone vote against it. Early in 2018 when Huss and Gwin voted to formalize the change and adopt mechanics for adding the two new slots, Cole and other opponents organized a protest petition which garnered sufficient signatures to put the issue to a binding vote and halted any immediate expansion.

Even without a protest the city would have been hard-pressed to get the charter ordinance guiding the change on the upcoming November ballot by election deadlines, which would have saved the cost of a special election. Earlier this month Solander wrote a plan which would have moved the expansion mechanics to take place at next year's election and place the two new commissioners in January 2021, but the election still would have been a standard vote and not a mail ballot.

Solander said he would write the charter ordinance and the notice of election as per the direction of the city commission and conduct it as they directed, with a caveat.

"If that's what you wish to do, I would do it, and caution you that it's against legal advice," Solander said.

City manager Chris Wiener said he concurred with Solander's legal opinion, and was concerned with the possibility of a lawsuit challenging the validity of the election. Not only would that suit mean litigation costs for the city, Weiner said, but he also worried whether votes made by the two new commissioners in the interim would have to be rescinded if the court eventually found the election to be invalid.

Huss said she doubted local electors would challenge the vote with a lawsuit against the city, since the intent with the mail ballot was to give more people a voice in the election.

Huss broached the idea of the five-member expansion last year, saying the change would allow for better representation of city residents. Gwin was cool to the idea until its passage by voters in the Fall 2018 advisory election. Additional payroll and expenses to add the two positions is estimated at over $11,000 per year.

Commissioners tabled any action on the ordinances pending more investigation.

Investigators were able to lure that individual out of deep web to an open web internet address, at which time they tracked an Internet IP address to McCullar's Nebraska address. He was arrested days later while on a business trip to Florida.

McCullar was judged to be a flight risk at an April 1 hearing, and did not contest the court's order for detention pending his trial.

The federal indictment specifies one count of production of child pornography, two counts of distribution and one count of possession. Penalties include maximum fines of up to $250,000 and maximum sentences of 20-30 years imprisonment on each count. The August 5 trial begins at 9 a.m.

Tantrums aside, Medicaid doesn't cut it

News flash: Liberal protestors wanting more free stuff from the rest of the tax paying public screamed and ranted last week and caused a disturbance that resulted in their arrest and a bunch of press coverage.

*Yawn.*

Is this really even news anymore?

The fact that it happened in the Senate chambers in Topeka provides just a smidgen of novelty, because Kansans are generally pretty deliberative, respectful and well behaved even in approaching and debating their differing views. The handful of protestors who succeeded in shutting down the Kansas Senate for half an hour while police and legislators tried to regain a semblance of working decorum may have won their quest to get on the news that night, but they didn't endear themselves or their issue to House and Senate members who now may or may not debate Medicaid expansion next session.

Herein lies the self-defeating lump in the punchbowl for the modern day, perennially pouting left – the sole “strategy” of perceived entitlement that triggers the increasingly fantastical and entertaining rages we've seen ever since the 2016 presidential election. Republicans may make political deals for many other reasons, but extortion by tantrum isn't going to be one of them.

That said, the apparent venting of frustration by Senate leadership that ended up temporarily ejecting the press from the Senate chambers during the disturbance was an example of how not to handle the moment. While it's no secret the mostly liberal Kansas press corps outright despises conservatives and Republicans in many cases, it's incumbent on all legislators to remember that even with its innate bias, the press corps is the eyes and ears of Kansans who can't be there. Sure, they're an audience for grandstanders of any stripe, and the press more often gets suckered by the left these days than anyone else. But when young Harris Hems, chief of staff to Senate President Susan Wagle, lectures the press that reporting from the Senate chambers is a “privilege” and not a right, it's pretty clear he needs a refresher in Kansas Open Meetings law. The public expects the protocols of open government to be upheld in our state regardless of public officials' passing demeanor – it is, after all, an apple pie and motherhood issue that gets every politician teary-eyed – at least during the campaign season.

But being made a spectacle of in front of the press when you're trying to do what voters elected you to do isn't the only justified consternation the Senate encountered last week. In reality, Medicaid expansion lacks the merit to be a Kansas priority, no matter how hard the Give Me More Free Stuff crowd wails for it. Most taxpayers aren't sold on the idea of boosting the threshold for benefits to 138 percent of the current poverty level just to let in a throng of new, able-bodied recipients who could be seeking better employment in a record economy and paying for their own health insurance. Keep in mind, all these new folks make too much money to qualify now, that's why we have to lower the bar to include them.

What's more, proponents haven't yet explained the logic in letting in some 150,000 new beneficiaries when there are thousands of Kansans on the waiting list as it is now. What happens to them? Other states have found that new entitlees have indeed numbered 50 to 100 percent more than their initial estimates – which could swell the number to 260,000 to 300,000 more Medicaid consumers in Kansas, and that their average charges are higher. Even with more of our federal tax dollars promised to cover 90 percent of those new Medicaid costs, the real numbers could cost Kansans an additional $100 million – every year.

Kansas legislators should be bold in rejecting extortion by tantrum, bold in demanding and enforcing decorum from all sides in the halls of our government, and bold in rejecting the expansion of a Medicaid program that has to go looking for more people to give benefits to.

I was driving through town on Maple Street in Garnett over the weekend and wanted to say how much I appreciate the veterans organizations placing the flags along Maple Street. However, those flags and those displays draw your attention to how ugly that whole area is on Maple with all those telephone poles and high wires hanging down. Lots of those poles aren't straight and some of those high wires are sagging down so far and look really sloppy. I have read in other towns where they bury all those power and phone lines underground and get them out of the view to get rid of all that eye clutter. That's something I'd like Garnett to consider. Something to think about, anyway. Thank you.

Memorial Day speaker relates personal stories of the fallen

The following address was delivered at the Garnett Memorial Day observation May 27, 2019, by Major Matthew G. Sherburne, Officers Course Student at the U.S. Army's Command and General Staff College in Leavenworth, Ks.

Welcome ladies and gentlemen to what is our Nation's most sacred day, Memorial Day, a day in which we gather to pause, reflect, and honor those who made the ultimate sacrifice. Since 1868, Americans have gathered at cemeteries to pay their respects. This is not just a day for fellow members of the armed forces, the Navy, Marines, Army, Air Force, Coast Guard, and Merchant Marines, to remember their own fallen brothers and sisters in arms, but for all Americans to fully appreciate the human sacrifices made to secure freedom and peace, these heroes that raised their right hand and swore to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic. I want to tell you a story of three such heroes I knew.

It was a sunny Tuesday morning when I arrived to my high school, James W. Robinson, Jr. (named in honor after a Vietnam War Medal of Honor recipient from Virginia who was fatally wounded under heroic circumstances), when during second hour at the start of band class at 935, my conductor, who usually tells a joke at the start of class, took the podium with a stone-cold face and said, “there is no punch line to this, there have been airplanes that hit the world trade center... would you like me to turn on the TV?” The class said yes and the glow of the large CRT TV began to grow until we saw what did not look like the New York City skyline. Confused, we stared intently at an in descript skyline with a lot of smoke and haze in the air. Eventually the camera panned down at a heavily damaged side of the Pentagon. The room filled with shock and panic, for our school is located in the center of Fairfax County, Virginia, a county that claims home to many Pentagon military and civilians. For one of my friends, Cassie Johnson, her father would not return home that night. LTC Dennis M. Johnson, described as a person of quiet demeanor, who earned the honor, respect and dignity of all those he encountered, left behind a wife of 21 years of marriage and two daughters. Our world changed that day.

That coming summer I entered the United States Military Academy Preparatory School in Fort Monmouth, NJ. It was a year of dedication and hard work with the memory of LTC Johnson as a foundation. I would then enter West Point with the Class of 2007 on Reception Day: June 30th 2003. On this day I picked up my duffle bag and

There is a cost. The worse thing we can do is to forget this fact and forget their stories and memories that live in us.

scurried around the hallowed areas inside West Point to the sounds of yelling upperclassman. As I turned a corner, I came upon the scene of a short, fiery female African American cadet sergeant quickly spouting off the four responses to a line of new cadets, “Your four responses are ‘Yes, Sir/Ma’am,’ ‘No, Sir/Ma’am,’ ‘No excuse, Sir/Ma’am,’ ‘Sir/Ma’am, I do not understand.’” I felt bad for whoever would have her as their squad leader. Well fate would have it that Cadet Sergeant Emily T. Perez, Class of 2005, would be my phase one squad leader. She would go on to grow and mentor her squad into an amazing and cohesive team. Eventually Cadet Perez became the Corps of Cadets Brigade Command Sergeant Major, the first female minority to hold the position and she did so with grace and honor. She commissioned into the Medical Service Corps as a 2LT and served in Iraq where she was mortally wounded in an IED attack on her convoy in Al Kifl on 12 September, 2006; making her the first female African-American officer in US history to die in combat. I found out about her death two days later after just receiving laser eye surgery. I am not sure which hurt worst, the pain in my eyes from the surgery or mourning Emily's death that made my eyes continue to hurt. Between her death and the many others that year we recognized within the Corps of Cadets during breakfast in the mess hall standing at attention listening to the announcer quietly say, “It is with great regret that I announce the death of....,” followed by panicked shrieks from fellow cadets as those announced were former upperclassmen that went to class with us, that played sports with us, that mentored us.

In May 2011 I deployed with the rest of 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division to Iraq. It was an Iraq I knew Emily Perez would be proud to see. One that saw the most stability and security since our 2003 invasion. It was a much different place than the Afghanistan I experienced from 2009 to 2010. Our mission within the 2nd Battalion 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment was to advise and assist the 7th and 9th Iraqi Armies in what are termed as security cooperation operations. With only three weeks left in the deployment, our battalion experienced our only loss, SPC David Hickman, who would become the last casualty of the Iraq War on 14 November, 2011 due to an IED that struck his convoy. It was hard for us to take and even harder for those combat medics that could not save his life. He, like 2LT Perez, LTC Johnson, and 7500 other Soldiers, Marines, Sailors, Airmen, and Coast Guardsmen in the post 9/11 era died in the selfless service to their country. A service in which they volunteered fully aware of the dangers.

Here in the Garnett Cemetery we are in the presence of more than 300 heroes represented by more than 300 American flags. I encourage all gathered here to view each of their graves and reflect on their great sacrifice. They died here in America during the Civil War, and they died in far-away lands. Understand that freedom is not free. There is a cost. The worse thing we can do is to forget this fact and forget their stories and memories that live in us. May God continue to Bless this country and those that selflessly sacrificed their lives for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness and also for freedom and equality for all.

Biden need not apologize for crime bill

Donald Trump and Bill de Blasio agree: Joe Biden should be ashamed of his support for the 1994 crime bill.

The bipartisan legislation that was long a point of pride for Bill Clinton, who signed it into law, is now in such malodor that CNN the other day identified it in a chyron as the “infamous” crime bill.

Trump says that African Americans won't vote for someone who supported the crime bill, which he calls a “dark period in American History” that Biden should apologize for. De Blasio, the no-hope presidential candidate, agrees, deeming the crime bill “a painful era in our nation's history.”

Biden will have a lot of explaining to do about the bill, in the primaries and – now, it's clear – even in a potential general election.

The legislation was a mixed bag, representing the blunderbuss approach typical of sweeping bipartisan federal legislation. But the bill was, overall, a politically necessary response to a devastating decades-long crime wave.

It is our good fortune to have forgotten the visceral fear and loathing engendered by the crime wave beginning in the 1960s. Violent crime increased 350% from 1960 to 1990. Criminologist Barry Latzer points out that from 1970 to 1995, almost 675,000 people were murdered in the United States, Civil War-level carnage.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Charles Lane of The Washington Post notes that 49 percent of people in 1994 said crime was the top problem in the country. This wasn't white voters alone. The crime bill had the support of nearly 60 percent of nonwhites. Thirty-nine black pastors signed a letter supporting the legislation, and 10 black mayors urged the Congressional Black Caucus to back it, which most members did.

The bill's inclusion of more police officers probably helped, and the emphasis on greater incarceration certainly did as well.

It's not true, as de Blasio says, that the “crime bill was one of the foundations of mass incarceration.” Incarceration began to increase in the 1970s as the crime wave built, and the crime bill most directly affected the federal system, accounting for less than 10 percent of all prisoners.

According to a study by the National Academy of Sciences, the drivers of mass incarceration were increases in prison commitments per arrest and in time served. Time served for murder went from five years in 1981 to 16.9 years in 2000, and for sexual assault from 3.4 years in 1981 to 6.6 years in 2009.

It is true that the arrest rate for possession and use of drugs increased 162% from 1980 to 2006. We shouldn't exaggerate, though. At their height in 1990, drug offenders were about 20% of state prisoners and are currently less than 15%. Overall, the U.S. incarceration rate is now at its lowest in 20 years.

Almost any public policy has its trade-offs, and in the fullness of time, with crime having fallen so dramatically, it is natural that the priorities – and overkill – of the 1990s will look different. But no one should apologize for having worked to get dangerous people off the streets at a time when they were causing untold grief and rending the civic fabric of America.

Heavy rains in recent weeks have been expensive and time consuming for county road workers and left county officials wondering if a local disaster declaration will lead to any help paying for those costs. More than 10 inches of rain in the past six weeks has left employees doing their best to keep up with the county roads ravaged by fast moving flood waters. Anderson County Engineer Donna Schmit is estimating the damage at some $150,000.

The allies have submitted the terms of peace to the Germans at Paris for their discussion and their signatures. The list is a long one, and it will probably take several days for them to sign the document, which to them, no doubt, seems drastic. They will probably haggle over the terms some time, and try to make excuses and ask for amendments, but in the end, they will sign because there is nothing else for them to do. The matter of indemnities will be the greatest objection advanced, but since Germany is responsible for the war and the resultant waste and wreckage, there is no reason why she should not pay.

Previous question regarding reason for anchor answered

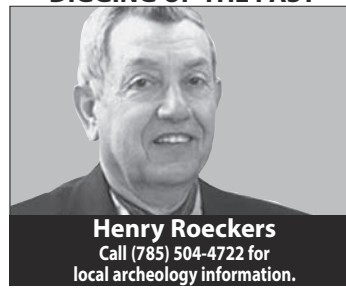

Two weeks ago in my column I asked for help in learning why the symbol of an anchor was placed on tombstones, such as the large one on Jackson Black's in the Hyatt cemetery.

I've only received one response and that came from our daughter Lori Roeckers, who lives near Round Rock, Texas.

Let me share her response with you. An anchor on a gravestone: To members of Freemasonry, the anchor represented well-grounded hope, a life well spent and eternal tranquility.

But more often, the anchor on a gravestone was a symbol of Hope. The Bible references an anchor in connection with hope in Hebrews 6:18-19 "Lay

Don't forget your umbrella question

At my weekly newspaper in Kansas, I've always coached my staff - whether reporters, advertising sales people or front office workers - to try to open customers and readers up with an "umbrella question" as you're talking face to face or even on the phone.

They call it an umbrella question because it's an opportunity for your customer to "open up" and tell you something you might not otherwise get to find out - sort of a "no holds barred" on the conversation that can lead you to more information.

Obviously that's an important tool for story-seeking news reporters in dealing with sources on their regular beats or anywhere else for that matter, which is why I always harp about it. You never know what grocery store checker, secretary, janitor, cop or school kid may have a story tip or a sales opportunity you can use and not even know it. So you have to invite him/her to talk with your umbrella question - then keep your mouth shut and listen.

As you're selling products or services in your small business, a potential customer can oftentimes be more effective at convincing herself to buy from you than you can be in convincing her. If she doesn't, she may give you tons of additional sales leads or referrals or other important information if you just use an umbrella question. Here are some examples:

1) Priority: "What's the most important thing you want from this (car, parachute, photo copier, bulldozer, etc.) you're interested in buying?" After all, price is always important, but once you open up the question of priority of benefits, you may discover reliability is most important, or perhaps speed, or costs of consumables. Different customers have different needs and helping them assess their priorities makes a sale that's better for them and for you.

2) Explanation: "Can you explain that to me so I can understand better?" Getting a better feel for a customer's process or methods lets you better use your perspective as someone who knows your product or service best.

3) Examples: "What are some examples you can give me?" It's similar to the explanation question above and is a natural follow up. You may learn completely new aspects of your product or service depending on how your customers are using it or have used it in the past, and that's vital information for you to know in future sales.

Opening up dialogue like this helps your customer analyze his/her own needs and situation and it can be a treasure trove of education for you in your quest to sell stuff.

a longer window of opportunity to get a crop in the ground this spring. Many local farmers missed the corn planting timetable in April and May due to continued heavy rains.

Garnett's ethanol plant can operate on either corn or grain sorghum, but has not run on sorghum for the past dozen years or so because of good regional availability of corn. EKAE buys some 17 million bushel of corn per year from up to 100 miles in any direction from Garnett.

"Due to the unprecedented wet spring which has delayed corn planting, producers are weighing their options for planting and replanting corn," Pracht said. "EKAE realizes these are tough decisions and has decided to take grain sorghum this fall to give our producers another option for producing a crop."

"We know that if farmers decide to plant grain sorghum they need a market to sell into," Pracht said. "EKAE will be glad to provide that market as a service to our loyal producers that we rely on."

Pracht said the company has a posted grain sorghum bid on its website at www.ekaellc.com. Anyone with questions can call at (785) 448-2888.

Colony Christian Church news

Larry Wittmer gave the Communion Meditation titled "Even if". In Daniel 3, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego had faith that God would save them from the fiery furnace, but "even if" he didn't, they would not bow down to worship anyone but God. Their trust in God was unwavering, even if he did not save them. We must cling to God... even if we lose our job, even if he doesn't heal us... even if we are persecuted. Pastor Chase Riebel gave the sermon on the last chapter of the Believe series, Humility. We must have an attitude like Jesus. Though he was God, he gave up his divine privilege, and came to Earth to serve others. We must do the same, to be unselfish, and to value others above ourselves. Our identity should be in the fact that we are children of God. We need to focus on lifting others up and encourage them. Jesus sees us equally and with compassion. When we look down on others, we are blocking the light that God is trying to shine on them. To hear the sermon in its entirety, check out our website at <http://www.colonychristianchurch.org>, or listen thru a podcast. Men's Bible Study every Tuesday morning at 7:00 am in the church basement. Wednesday evenings, meal and prayer time at 5:30, youth group and adult Bible study at 7:00. VBS launch party for the community at the park from 2:00-4:00, Saturday, June 8th. VBS will be June 17-21.

question back out to the voters in order to come to a consensus on the answer. I am also trying to address the issue the petitioner stated that there wasn't enough response. The only way I see to overcome that issue (on a non-presidential election) is to have a mail-in ballot. We have met much resistance to this and are still trying to work out the details both in terms of legality and conflicting opinions.

Personally, I just want to let the voters know that my job is to represent all the citizens of Garnett and I will fight to make this happen as quickly as possible. Truly, all citizens should be allowed to have a voice through the opportunity of voting.

On the other hand, I want you to know that it has been my goal and honor to serve the citizens of Garnett. I have been representing you for 12+ years and realize the voters may wish to have a different person representing them. Therefore, last time I ran for office, I encouraged three other people to run against me. This time I have chosen to wait until the last minute to file in order to try not to discourage others from filing. The hope is that this would allow you to have as many choices as possible for people to continue to represent you.

In conclusion, I want you to know that I have filed for another term and would be honored and privileged to serve the citizens of this great town for another three years.

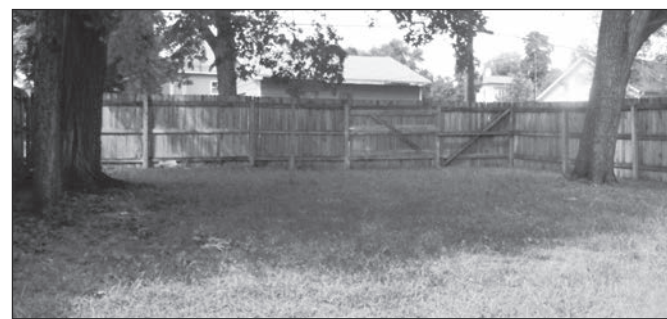

Respectfully,
Mayor Greg Gwin
