Osler preliminary hearing set for January

Hearing is designed to assess evidence prior to trial,
if plea bargain isn't struck

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A Garnett family will wait until early January to find out if the man police say shot a family member will be bound over for trial on charges stemming from that incident.

A preliminary hearing has been set January 7 for 56 year-old David Osler of Garnett, accused in the September 22 shooting of a neighbor that led to an hours-long standoff with police in south Garnett.

Osler is charged with entering the front door of a neighboring home owned by 67 year-old Robin Durand while Durand was sitting in his living room, and firing a single round that struck Durand. According to a probable cause affidavit in the case officers said Osler then left Durand's home and returned to his own residence, where he surrendered after a standoff of several hours. The affidavit says officers found numerous stashed weapons and fighting positions arranged inside Osler's residence, leading them to believe he planned an extensive shootout with police.

Neighbors reported various bizarre contact with Osler in the affidavit. One couple said they were approached by an intoxicated Osler the Saturday previous to the shooting, the first time he'd ever talked to them, they said. During the conversation, Osler spontaneously uttered if he was going to kill anyone, he'd kill "them", and pointed toward the Durand residence. The same couple said they chatted with Osler only a few minutes before the Sunday shooting to ask about borrowing a pole saw, and saw a silver handgun in Osler's living room. They said Osler was drinking alcohol and watching football.

A preliminary hearing is an initial summation of evidence and testimony from both the defense and prosecution which takes place in front of a judge, after which the judge decides if enough evidence exists to charge a suspect with a crime. Osler has been in custody in Anderson County Jail since his arrest with a bond set at $10 million, and was initially charged with

Local area sees jump in sales tax collections

TOPEKA — Anderson County and Garnett saw solid sales tax increases for September sales when those funds came back to the local area in November payments.

The information was released recently in a sales tax distribution report for November by the Kansas Department of Revenue.

Taxes are collected on applicable sales in any given month and paid to the state by the 25th of the following month, then distributed back to cities or counties or other taxing entities the month after submission. Local businesses collect not only local sales tax but also the 6.5 percent added to every purchase and retained by the State of Kansas.

Added together, those taxes total the total tax paid on local purchases; for instance Garnett's .5 percent sales tax combines with Anderson County's 1.5 percent and the state's 6.5 percent to total an additional 8.5 percent paid on most all retail purchases in Garnett. Caney, Coffeyville, Neodesha and Independence have the highest local sales taxes in the state at 3 percent.

For November, Anderson County received 21.1 percent more

Daulton plea expected this month

GARNETT — After several delays in a hearing date, Theo Daulton III is expected to enter into plea agreement in December to charges connected to an April incident that led to a standoff with law officers in Garnett.

Daulton

Daulton, 24, was arraigned in August on charges of mistreatment of a dependent adult, criminal threat, criminal damage to property and interference with law officers. He has been in Anderson County Jail since his arrest. The incident stemmed from a domestic

Where do you find comfort?

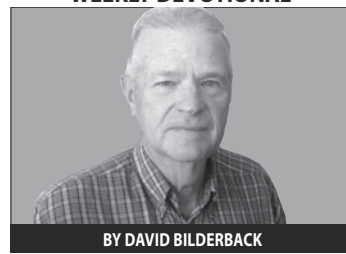

In the first chapter of Acts we read how Jesus was, "Taken up before their (apostles) very eyes, and a cloud hid him from their sight." Two questions quickly come to mind. Where did he go and what is he doing?

In Ephesians 1:20 we read, "that power is like the working of his (God's) mighty strength, which he exerted in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his (God's) right hand in the heavenly realms." So Jesus ascended to the Father. He is today seated with God. Jesus ascended to heaven to go to his cosmic kingship.

If we go back and examine the original temple we find that it had an innermost room called the Holy of Holies which was the dwelling place of God. Once per year the Priest would enter this area to offer a sacrifice for the sins of the people during the Old Testament era. This area was separated from the rest of the temple by a curtain. In Mark 15:38 we read at the death of Jesus, "The curtain was torn in two from top to bottom." What this meant was there would be no more need for the priest to offer the yearly sacrifice for the ultimate sacrifice had been made. Our great High Priest Jesus sits in the presence of God almighty.

Now what does Jesus do? In First Timothy we read, "For there is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself as a ransom for all men - the testimony given in its proper time." What Paul is saying is Jesus prays for those who will believe in him. Jesus was raised from the dead, ascended to heaven and sits at the right hand of God where he prays his great priestly prayer for all believers. To me that provides a great deal of comfort at night when I lie down. Where do you seek your comfort? Jesus said, "who so ever will may come." The old hymn says, "Nothing in my hand I bring simply to the cross I cling." The words have been spoken. All that remains is for you to come to Jesus.

It's "Merry Christmas," after all

REVIEW COMMENTARY

DANE HICKS, Publisher

On November 29, as soon as Thanksgiving Day 2019 was officially in the record books, this year's battle over "Merry Christmas" versus "Happy Holidays" officially began. I have, in my role as soulful humanitarian and selfless public servant, taken it upon myself to solve this point of consternation once and forever, as long as the grass shall grow and the wind shall blow.

Yes, it's a heavy burden I bear, but that's just how I roll. The conflag starts every year as the Christmas season begins and you're probably very familiar with it by now. Right about now we hear about some major corporation sending "holiday" cards to its clients instead of "Christmas" cards, or running a TV ad wishing customers "Happy Holidays" or a city council somewhere doing away with the "Christmas parade" in their town and replacing it with a "Season Promenade" or some such. We discover instead of wishing us goodwill they're really just trying to cover for the fact that they're actually agents of Satan trying to minimize the birth of Christ in the term "Christmas," all under the guise of inclusivity and tolerance.

December 26, well, that one's Christmas. If you're shopping for gifts during that time period, you're "Christmas" shopping; you're not "Holiday" shopping.

And most of the time, it's really all about that shopping, after all. Modern retailers and other businesses are terrified of sparking a left-wing social media attack against them if they appear to acknowledge Christianity even during a Christian holiday season. The idea of being more "inclusive" and downgrading Christians' beliefs just to make more money is a revolting testament to American opprobrium.

That being said, it's important to remember that not everyone who wishes you "Happy Holidays" is a heretical spawn of Hell. Sometimes, if you're grouping Thanksgiving (which is actually a Christian observance as well - who do you think the Pilgrims were thanking?) along with Christmas and New Year's into a non-specific context, then "Happy Holidays" is quite appropriate.

Still, do some people use "Happy Holidays" to dodge the Christian-ness of Christmas? Of course they do. During this season of gift giving, everyone wants in on the booty even if they're atheist. And it's insulting to Christians, who are, after all, allowed to be insulted when they're slighted too - if we're really embracing fairness and tolerance.

So Christians should understand this - the threat isn't as bad as we probably perceive it, but that doesn't mean it's not there at all. Fight for your Merry Christmas as you see fit. Call, complain, write letters to retailers or city hall or the statehouse or the feds when you think someone's dodging the fact of your faith. But most of all say it when you're out and about, and most of all don't let the fight steal away your "Merry Christmas." ###

Here's the deal: the terms are both appropriate, but they're not interchangeable. It goes like this: Christmas is a holiday celebrating one thing and one thing only: drum roll... the birth of Christ. Christians believe Jesus is the son of God and was born along the narrative described in the book of Luke to save mankind from sin and give us the opportunity to go to Heaven. Until the Roman Emperor Constantine converted to Christianity in 312 AD, the birth of Christ was celebrated in January. The church liked the idea of celebrating it during the winter solstice and December 25 happened to be the same date as two pagan holidays.

But the sentiment is contextual - "Merry Christmas" is a notation celebrating the birth of Christ, end of story.

Now, you don't necessarily have to be a Christian to wish someone a Merry Christmas, the same way I don't have to be a Muslim to wish a Muslim friend or host "Ramadan Mubarak," which means congratulations on the arrival of Ramadan. Acknowledging someone's faith doesn't commit you to it, it just shows you respect that person enough to respect his beliefs.

"Happy Holidays"... well, I guess you could start wishing someone that about any time - Memorial Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, etc; they're all holidays. If you're wishing someone "Happy Holidays" between Thanksgiving and I wanted to say to all the people involved in the Garnett Christmas Parade tonight what a fine event this was. From the organizers who planned it and did so much of the work to those who made the floats and were in the parade. The school groups and the marching bands and what about those three high school kids that sang the carols at the bandstand. The businesses that decorated their stores and took part by being open and having hot chocolate and what not. It's nice to see our town come together to make something special. It reminds me why I live in Garnett and why I love this time of year.

One more time Garnett. It's yield to the vehicle on the right at unmarked intersections. I had the right of way and I almost drilled one of you on Seventh Street this morning.

Public gets faulty info on vaping

The Campus Ledger Johnson County Community College ...the general public is not getting the right information, which is leading the government to attempt to ban something that has actually saved many lives.

According to the CDC, there have been 34 confirmed death and 1,604 lung injuries linked to vaping. What they are not telling you is that the main ingredient in these illnesses is vitamin E acetate, which is an oil; if an oil like this is put into a vape on its own, it's too thick to work...

The answer lies with cheap, black-market THC cartridges, or cartridges meant to be vaped in order to give a marijuana-esque high. It's cheaper for manufacturers to mix a bit of vitamin E acetate than it is to use pure pure THC oil. It's like cutting cocaine with baking powder...

The main argument for a vape ban is the popularity of vape with teens. This is a valid concern, but kids consume illegal substances every day, from alcohol to drugs to plain old cigarettes. A government policy banning all vaping devices seems drastic, especially when vapes are serving their purpose perfectly as alternatives to chemical-filled cigarettes and saving nicotine-addicted adults from the health concerns posed by regular cigarettes...

Vaping isn't the problem. Black-market e-liquid is...

Income inequality hides reality of a hard truth

"Income Inequality" is the new attack slogan of the far left. It is being used to disparage capitalism, and portray the United States as a selfish, insensitive place.

It is certainly true that there is a wide gap between the prosperous and the poor in America. But that gap can be diminished if the truth about "inequality" was acknowledged. But in our hyper politically correct society, it will not be.

In 1965, democrat Daniel Patrick Moynihan warned that the African-American family unit was under increasing pressure in poor neighborhoods. Back then, 24 percent of black children were born out of wedlock. Today, the number is a shocking 72 percent. For caucasian babies, the number is under 30 percent.

There's your income inequality equation. Cutting through the phony political rhetoric, there are two primary reasons that just 35 percent of African-American children are currently living with two parents. First, the welfare system; families headed by single mothers receive more government payments. And second is substance abuse.

Drug and alcohol addiction is a scourge in America and the number one reason for child abuse and neglect. And it is absolutely neglect to fail to train your child to compete in a nation of 330 million people. Senators Sanders and Warren tell us that the federal government can mitigate economic failure but that is not true. Only individuals can do that.

The cold truth is that millions of American children of all colors are unable to develop their intellects and social skills because their parents don't care about them. So we see a legion of teenagers unable to speak proper English, read a book, or write a coherent sentence. Many kids cover their bodies with tattoos, routinely spout vile obscenities, intoxicate themselves at will, and reject all discipline.

How will these kids ever prosper economically in adulthood? They won't.

Who will help them? Not our government or public education system, that's for sure.

In fact, some of those who scream loudest about inequality are pouring more gasoline on the fire. Many leftists are pushing for legalizing marijuana, an intoxicant extremely attractive to vulnerable teens.

By allowing pot to be openly sold, the government provides yet another easy opportunity for unsupervised children to harm themselves. Yes, illegal marijuana is widely available. But American society should continue to warn about drug involvement, not glorify and sanction it.

As a high school teacher, I saw up close what pot can do to unsupervised children. You think income inequality is bad now, wait until you see what's coming.

And redistributing wealth from affluent Americans through onerous taxation is not going to stop that.

Only by acknowledging reality, can America begin to deal with the intense inequality problem. Responsible parenting is the key to defeating the economic failure that leads to poverty.

The truth should be told.

Democrats pursue check-the-box impeachment

Nancy Pelosi said she undertook impeachment "prayerfully," and apparently what she was praying was that she could get it over with as soon as possible.

The House is preparing to send a flagrantly incomplete factual record to the Senate as the basis of an effort to remove a sitting president for the first time in our history.

Pelosi has affected a posture of heavy-heartedness since the outset of the process, saying that "there's no joy in this" and urging a somber spirit as Democrats pursue the facts wherever they may take them - so long as that's not too far into an election year.

In substantive terms, the Democrats had a good set of public hearings before Adam Schiff's intelligence committee in recent weeks - with one gaping hole. They didn't have anyone with first-hand knowledge of Trump's directives on Ukraine or his state of mind. The closest was EU ambassador Gordon Sondland, who, still, could only "presume" a quid pro quo over the defense aid.

There are people who probably don't have to presume, and Sondland named some of them: Trump's personal counsel Rudy Giuliani, acting White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney, Vice President Mike Pence and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo. They all were closer to this than Sondland, yet Democrats are happy to make the guy from the outer bounds of the inner circle their "star witness" and forgo the inner circle. To get the more central witnesses requires litigation since they all have at least colorable claims of privilege. The Democrats don't want to wait for the courts.

The minimum requirement of a historic impeachment case, only the fourth in our history, would seem to be a complete account of the facts. Schiff used to say as much: "We have to flesh out all of the facts for the American people. The seriousness of the matter and the danger to our country demands nothing less." Now, the seriousness and the danger are demanding that Democrats rush things along so the president can be impeached by the end of the year.

No matter how often Democrats say, "Let's honor the Constitution," their actions say, "Let's check the box."

Democrats have had the difficulty from the beginning of trying to build an edifice of impeachment and removal atop the narrow foundation of the Ukraine episode, and now they aren't even going to finish the edifice, content with what they could complete in a two-month investigation largely reliant on the testimony of people who weren't around for the main events (former U.S. ambassador to Ukraine Marie Yovanovitch) or were out of the loop (former Trump Russia adviser Fiona Hill).

With every day that passes it becomes a little more absurd to say Trump should be impeached and removed when the public can make its own verdict in the election. Besides, Democrats know that impeachment is going nowhere in the Senate, so why bother locking down the case to make it worthy of the gravity of the process?

They might as well go with what they have, a partisan impeachment pursued on a political timetable. During Bill Clinton's impeachment, it was his defenders who were saying, "Let's move on." Now, it's Trump's pursuers, who prayerfully and sorrowfully want to get impeachment over with.

2019 Frontier Extension District Appreciation Award Winners

Recently the Frontier Extension District handed out Appreciation Awards for the counties of Anderson, Franklin and Osage.

Locally Brummel Farm Service has been a leader in the Ag. community in Anderson County for decades. Bertilla Brummel worked for the Seymour Hatchery as an egg candler and in the business office in the 1930's and 40's. When the Seymour family wanted to sell, Bertilla, a young single woman, decided to buy the business in 1955. Soon the chicken and egg industry changed, and the business grew to include more farm animal feeds and custom grinding, as well as farm chemicals and fertilizers. Bertilla's son, Norman "Dutch" Brummel, joined the business after serving in the Army in the Korean War.

In the 70's, Dutch's first born, Roger, worked in the family business during his high school years, and after returning from college. After their children were all in school, Dutch's wife, Dixie, came to join her mother-in-law, Bertilla, in the business office. In 1977, the business formed a corporation known as Brummel Farm Service, Inc. Bertilla remained active in the business into her late 70's. When her son, Dutch, died in 1995, Roger stepped in to fill his father's shoes as manager.

Today, Brummel Farm Service, Inc., remains a steadfast and philanthropic member of the community. They have been significant sponsors of the Anderson County Fair and 4-H premium sale, having purchased more than 150 head of animals. They also sponsor other 4-H and Extension activities, including meals for events. Roger can frequently be seen behind the grill, cooking and serving up the food.

The Brummel family business is more than just a place to get feed and supplies for the farm. They take an interest in their customers, especially 4-Hers, in helping them select the best feed and supplements for their projects. They are dedicated to the agriculture industry and look forward to keeping involved with the ever changing ag. landscape in the future.

Receiving the award were Dixie Brummel, Roger Brummel and wife Donna, and Robin Brummel Lutz. The award was presented at the annual Frontier Extension District appreciation dinner.

The Franklin County winners were Dave and Lisa Rossman. Dave and Lisa have been influential supporters of 4-H since their involvement as 4-H members. Lisa grew up in 4-H and was a member of the Lucky 13 4-H Club in Anderson County. Some of her projects were sewing, foods and nutrition, gardening, and swine. Dave was a member of the Berea Busters 4-H Club in Franklin County. His projects included swine and forestry. For his forestry project, Dave planted and maintained a wind break at his parent's farm, which is still there. The Rossman's have two children, Erin and Seth, who were active members of the Rowdy Wranglers 4-H Club in Franklin County. Both were part of the CWF program and were Key Award recipients.

Lisa spent the past 20 years serving as a 4-H community club leader, club advisory board member, and is currently a 4-H PDC member for the Frontier Extension District. She has served as a fair superintendent for clothing, and is a great help to many 4-H members with their projects. She is excited to be helping a young 4-H member this coming year with her sewing project.

Dave was on the Franklin County Fair Board for many years. He also served as a member of the Franklin County Extension Council and was Chairman from 2006-2007. Dave was the Rowdy Wranglers 4-H Club electricity leader and has judged electricity projects at the Richmond Fair. He has donated many hours of labor to remodel and rewire the concession stand at the Franklin County Fair, and has wired the new show area at the Richmond Fairgrounds.

The Osage County winners were Peggy and Gary DeForest. In 1986, Peggy began working as the office professional in the Osage County Extension Office. She became a district office professional when the Frontier Extension District was created in 2010, and she specialized as the district's bookkeeper.

As the first impression of the local extension, Peggy was always quick to welcome everyone who called or entered the Frontier Extension District office in Lyndon with a friendly greeting. Customers soon found that she was very knowledgeable and would go the extra mile to help respond to their needs. Peggy was a jack of all trades and master of them all. Her strengths included her initiative and creativity, ability to problem solve, her attention to customers requests, and willingness to try something new. She always supported 4-Hers and over her career worked with nearly 100 fairs in Osage County.

Peggy retired in June of 2018, having served 32 years as an office professional with Osage County and the Frontier Extension District.

Gary was always there to support Extension in many ways. As an industrial arts teacher and gifted carpenter, he used his skills to build several shelving units and publication racks for the local offices, and frequently judged woodworking and electricity at local fairs. He always donated his judging fee back to the 4-Hers. Gary is currently a registered 4-H volunteer and a 4-H woodworking project leader for the Lyndon Leaders 4-H Club. Through his leadership, the woodworking project continues to grow, and the woodworking projects that the 4-Hers complete are remarkable.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 12-3-2019 / ACHS TWITTER

Last Tuesday, the Anderson County Bulldogs held a red/white scrimmage before Thanksgiving break. This week area high schools kick off their seasons. The Bulldogs wrestling and basketball teams both compete on Friday, December 6th. The varsity wrestling team will head to Fort Scott. The women and JV wrestling squads will be in Burlington and the basketball teams will be in Iola. Central Heights also kicks off their basketball season Friday at home against Council Grove. Crest's first games of the season will be Thursday night on the road against Southern Coffey County.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 12-3-2019 / SUBMITTED

The Greeley Elementary sixth graders in Mrs. Secrest's class took second place at the annual Quiz Bowl on Tuesday, November 26th. The competition was held at Garnett Elementary and was an academic contest between five teams in the USD 365 elementary buildings. Pictured for Greeley are: (l to r) Mitchell Richards, Anthony Hartle, Isaac Richards, Brooklyn Strobel, Mrs. Secrest, and Jake Hoffman.

The Outsiders

Jackie Mundt, Pratt County farmer and rancher

About a decade ago, I moved to the small town where I plan to spend the rest of my life. Excitement filled me, and I rushed to join the community and put down some roots.

My excitement quickly deflated. Places to live were scarce, especially because I did not know the right people who had the nice, unadvertised rentals. Attending community events alone earned me a critical stare that seemed to question my motives and character. My only human interaction came from the wonderfully sweet women who attended my church or worked at the extension office because they were hardwired to be excellent, welcoming hosts. For the first time in my life, I was an outsider. It was lonely and miserable.

I went a whole year without making any connections with people who were my age or life stage.

Then I met Jennifer. She was an outsider, too, but she had been at it longer. She had amassed connections and wheedled her way into many social and community circles by demonstrating her character, willingness to volunteer and her commitment to service. As my first friend in town, she empathized with my isolation and gladly opened doors for me.

Almost a decade later, I am happy in the town. It has been a long slow process but I have worked to build a reputation and found a place in the community. My drive to build the type of community in which I want to live and raise my family is respected and appreciated. I will never completely drop the outsider title but I have made peace with that.

I have met dozens of people who have encountered the same struggles when moving to rural communities across the country. Outsiders are rarely welcomed with open arms.

This cynicism and distrust, which requires a person to prove themselves before they can be part of the community, is detrimental to growing your community. Rural America should be opening its arms to welcome new families instead of excluding them.

When you see new people in the community, be like my friend Jennifer. Welcome and encourage new arrivals. Share what you like about your community and provide examples of how you are involved so they can learn about available activities. Make introductions to people who may be helpful or good for them to get to know. Invite them to join you for young professional groups, community organizations or church activities that may interest them.

Explain your community's traditions. New people but will likely want to join in the fun. Keep in mind that they will not be blindly tied to what a community has always done. As their understanding of traditions grow, they may have suggestions for improvements. Listen to their ideas. They are not trying to destroy traditions; they want to be a part of them. Also, new people don't mind if you don't take our suggestions, but we do get discouraged when you don't even consider them.

Not everyone will be a great addition to your community, but if you start from the mindset of distrust, you may discourage or drive away the good people who will help your community to thrive and grow in the future. People who make the choice to live in your town should be commended and welcomed. Because today's outsiders are tomorrow's neighbors.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 12-3-2019 / SUBMITTED

Westphalia's 3rd and 4th grade class launched their first science unit of the year by creating catapults. They spent the week learning about prototypes and the importance of testing multiple variables in an experiment to achieve the best result. The students then worked together to design and build the catapults with everyday items. Finally, they tested their prototypes in a marshmallow launching contest. Top left is Morgan Christian making her catapult. Top right is Dixon Brooks, Shania Heck, and Kale Schafer testing their catapults.

back in distributions than a year ago to total $105,432. Garnett saw a 37 percent increase, from $14,973 to $20,647 this year. The 2019 figures put Anderson County at $534,242 for the fiscal year beginning in July, about 5.1 percent ahead of a year ago. Garnett was 12.5 percent ahead of a year ago for the fiscal year at $111,368.

The report also detailed distributions to the county's smaller taxing units. Colony hasn't had its sales tax in place a year yet but collected $625 so far in 2019. Kincaid, with a new retail establishment in town, saw a 125 percent increase from a year ago in November, with $448 last year and $1,009 collected for November 2019. Richmond had a 41 percent increase for November to $1,112 last month, and a 12.5 percent year-to-date increase to $4,671.

Statewide, Kansas overall sales tax collection was up 6.8 percent in November to $85,349,602, and 2.3 percent ahead year-to-date at $430,416,750.
