Storm scuttles fireworks, brings hail

Storm threat cancels show while hailstones smack Welda Township

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A spotty but intense storm system generated by dense humidity on Saturday ended up cancelling a fireworks show and veterans celebration planned at Lake Garnett Park, and dropped huge hail on some parts of the county.

Hail ranging from pea to baseball size was reported south of Garnett in the Colony and Welda areas, but the storm ended up dropping very little rain on the Garnett area.

Reports Monday from Welda noted little widespread damage from the hail storm, but photos sent to the Review by readers showed the size and weight of some of the ice balls.

Garnett officials announced the postponement a little before 2 p.m. Saturday on the city's social media.

"We have been advised of severe weather moving through this area this afternoon and into the evening that would push the setup of the community fireworks display into the evening," the notice read. "The weather may cause issues with the Celebration of Service and planned community Band concert. We feel it best to postpone; possible to Labor Day Weekend. Stay turned."

The post said the program for the Celebration of Service will be posted online on the city's website soon and printed copies will be available at city hall.

Organizers had planned a Sunday, July 12, rain date, but later judged schedule conflicts with fireworks shooting teams and other participants would make the rain date untenable.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 7-14-2020 / VICKY RODRIGUEZ

Baseball-size hail was reported between Welda and Colony during a spotty but intense storm that resulted in the cancellation of the fireworks show at Lake Garnett and the Celebration of Service ceremony honoring veterans in the city's patriotic banner program. City officials say they may try to schedule the events around Labor Day.

Probably not Covid

Rumor mill churns that 2019 school absences may have been Covid, but there's no hard proof

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A particularly impacting outbreak of "flu" experienced by a local elementary school in 2019 has made some local residents question if it might be evidence that Covid-19 already made its rounds through Anderson County. So far, however, there's no definite evidence of that.

A staff member at St. Rose Elementary School in Garnett said last week that period saw an unusually large number of student and staff absences – at one point 38 students out of just over 100 enrolled were out of school – during the height of the local flu outbreak in February 2019.

That staffer also said one of the school staff who had the flu during that period had taken a Covid-19 antibodies test, and that test had come back negative. An antibodies test reveals whether someone's immune system has been exposed to a virus and already built up resistance to it.

Though much evidence surrounding the transmission and protection measures of Covid-19 appears in dispute, one generally accepted premise seems to be that older people and those with compromised immune systems are most at risk, while younger children appear to be infected far less often.

Influenza's spread through schools and other close-quarters confined areas like office buildings is well documented. Experts have said Covid-19 transmits much the same way as influenza.

Anderson County High School Principal Matt Self said his school experienced no out-of-the-ordinary student or staff absences during that time period.

A report from the Southeast Kansas Regional Health Department Monday showed 15 recorded cases of Covid-19 in Anderson County with four having recovered and zero fatalities.

A staffer with the lab services department at Ottawa Family Physicians told the Review yesterday a Covid-19 antibodies test at their facility had to be ordered by a requesting patient's physician, and the cost is around $95.

County employee, sheriff spar over his uncontested election

GARNETT – A political dust-up between an Anderson County employee and the county sheriff was made public last week on each other's Facebook accounts just weeks before Vern Valentine runs unopposed for a third term as sheriff.

Valentine

County appraiser's office staffer Janon Gordon took issue with Valentine running unopposed in the upcoming election, suggesting undersheriff Wes McClain should run as a write-in candidate.

Valentine took issue with the post, saying Gordon should have asked department undersheriff McClain before suggesting the candidacy. He did so both on his personal and his office Facebook account.

"Janon Gordon has posted write in undersheriff for sheriff," Valentine's post read. "I am sure the undersheriff would have liked her to ask him if that is what he wanted as he does not at this time. All you have to do is ask him. He is interested in this position in the next election in four and a half years."

McClain told the Review he was not seeking the position this term but that he intended to do so in the next election cycle.

"I must say that I am not campaigning for a write-in. I do not know where Ms. Gordon got the idea, but I find it flattering. I have been approached on multiple occasions about running, but I have no intentions of running at this time. However, I do have plans on running in the 2024 election year."

Gordon's campaign endorsement came in a ringing endorsement for another local 2020 candidate, incumbent county clerk Julie Wettstein, who faces treasurer's office staffer Sarah Mader in a determinant Republican primary on August 4. Gordon lauded Wettstein's service over her term and made assumptions

County sets hearing to discuss $55,000 expenditure for fire fighting equipment with help of USDA grant

Equipment would better training of volunteers; grant would cover 35% of cost

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – County commissioners will host a public hearing July 27 to discuss the county's $55,000 portion of a piece of equipment designed to give county firefighters live fire fighting experience without actually setting fire to a building.

Anderson County Emergency Management Director J.D. Mersman said the training "prop" was about the size of a cargo container, and allowed artificial fire to be ignited as firefighters moved through simulated hallways and over and around obstacles to simulate real-life scenarios.

The public hearing will be held Monday, July 27, at 11 a.m. at the Anderson County Commission room in the county annex building. A public notice on the meeting is published elsewhere in today's Review.

Mersman said the grant from USDA Rural Development will cover 35 percent of the cost, or some $29,750, but the county would have to pick up the remaining $55,250. Mersman said the equipment was justified because trying to set up training schedules for the county's 100-plus volunteer firefighters was problematic.

"To do live fire training right now we have to schedule a trailer to be brought in by one of the state fire training associations," Mersman said. "To get a trailer brought in we have to have a minimum number

German company bails on Linn County wind farm plan

MOUND CITY – A German-owned company which was planning a major wind farm project in Linn County has given verbal notice to county commissioners it will not pursue the project.

Commissioners discussed the topic during their Monday county meeting, after the county planning and zoning director received verbal notice from EON that the company was pulling out of the plan.

County officials were about to release a plan for a county-wide special referendum on the future of wind farms in Linn County. Commissioners said they would stop work on that mail ballot election only if they received written notice from EON of the company's recent decision.

EON began talks with commissioners and private landholders over two years ago with plans to erect a wind farm near Mound City.

Words are like a spent arrow

There is an old saying that goes like this. "Sticks and stones may break my bones but words will never hurt me." All of us have been told this by someone trying to comfort us. Well I didn't believe it then and I don't believe it now. Words do hurt they can leave a lasting impression on us. With social media, now more than ever, words are a way for people to engage in lets say, verbal warfare. There are enough weighty topics and passionate people in the world that things can get out of hand. I wonder what God's perspective is on all of this verbal warfare?

I am afraid we have neglected the content of the Bible for so long we no longer know who God is or even consider his feelings. In Genesis 1:1 the first verse of the Bible, we are told. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." God tells us in Revelation 21:6 that he is the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. God is self-existent, he does need to depend on anyone or anything to exist. God is all powerful, all knowing, ever present and unchangeable. All of these attributes are what make God infinite or limitless. And this should give us pause for thought as we live our life out before the face of God, he sees our whole life as it unfolds.

In Genesis 1:26 we read of a conversation held among the Godhead, the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Then God said, "Let us make man in our image in our likeness." Have you ever wondered what that meant? Genesis 1:1-25, sets forth God as personal, rational (having intelligence and a will) creative ruling over the world he has made and morally admirable (in that all he creates is good). The Fall diminished God's image not only in Adam and Eve but in all their descendants, the whole human race.

In creation man was created with the ability to sin and the ability not to sin. After the Fall man continued to be able to sin, but lost the ability or power not to sin. Man in a sense took a step backwards as a result of the Fall. Out of the perfect environment of the Garden into a state of moral inability.

By the sheer power of the word of God a universe began and man was created. The spoken word can be powerful. It is like an arrow that has been shot, you cannot call it back it will fulfill its intended purpose. Since we are made in God's image and likeness maybe we should follow God's advise set forth in Col. 3:16. "Let the word of God dwell in you richly as you teach and admonish one another."

It's not enough to not be racist

Today, the nostrum goes, it is not enough for Americans to be not racist. They must be "anti-racist."

This woke terminology has infused our lexicon. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, D-Mass., recently declared from the well of the Senate: "Being race-conscious is not enough. It never was. We must be anti-racists." What, pray tell, is the difference between being against racism and being anti-racist? Ibram X. Kendi, author of "How to Be An Antiracist," provides an answer: Racism is no longer to be defined as the belief that someone is inferior based on race. Instead, racism is to be defined as the belief that any group differences can be attributed to anything other than racism. Thus, any system that ends with different outcomes must be racist. Indeed, Kendi contends, "Racism itself is institutional, structural, and systemic."

To be anti-racist means to tear down these systems. Any obstacle in the pursuit of equality of outcome must be torn down, assumed to be a product of discrimination. Basic decency, then, means that we must oppose even institutions that have been considered hallmarks of freedom. Those institutions, after all, have exacerbated inequalities, or at least failed to rectify those inequalities.

This means that America's culture of rights — a culture that suggests an obligation on the part of individuals to respect the rights of others, even if they disagree — must come under fire. That culture reinforces hierarchies and inequalities, after all. The classical liberal says that rights fall equally on the just and the unjust alike; the anti-racist suggests that rights are merely tools of power. Anti-racism, in its essence, is merely reworked neo-Marxism from the 1960s: Herbert Marcuse would have been ecstatic to see his concept of "repressive tolerance" — "intolerance against movements from the Right and toleration of movements from the Left" — revived under the banner of race rather than class.

The self-proclaimed "anti-racist" left — a left that sees all of human relations reduced to a rudimentary correlation of skin color and inequality, an analysis we used to call racist — has decided that the culture must be cleansed of all of those who will not be drafted into its woke army. Its march through the institutions began with college campuses, where cowardly administrators quickly caved to the bizarre notion that campuses were unsafe, cruel bastions of bigotry requiring speech codes and training in microaggressions. Next, the woke army moved on to the halls of institutional media, where editors were forced to announce their own white privileges along with their resignations, turning over the instruments of informational dissemination to radical racialists.

Now the woke army has targeted corporations. Corporations are, by nature, risk-averse; they seek merely profit and lack of controversy. The hard left has targeted them as the weakest link in the chain of free speech: If corporations can be bullied into pulling their money from social media networks, those social media networks can be bullied into restricting their free-speech cultures. Remove advertising bucks from Instagram and watch as Instagram censors those the woke want censored.

Indeed, such a campaign is now front and center in the culture wars: Major corporations from Coca-Cola to Target have stopped advertising on social media networks, citing the need for more "hate speech" regulation on those platforms. Obviously, those who target corporations will not be satisfied until all non-woke speech is limited or banned; corporations will be unpleasantly surprised when those they have been seeking to appease turn on them as remnants of the evil system. But corporations have neither the principle nor the will to deny the demands of the loudest and the most militant.

The product of the woke crusade will not be a less racist America but a more polarized one. That's because the woke crusade is not truly about reducing racism; it is about attacking fundamental institutions, American history and our very culture of rights. All the things we share must be eviscerated. So we will share nothing. And then the true ugliness begins.###

Dane, if you had used the cartoon against Trump, everything would have been fine. And now when the BLM finds out our civic leaders are a bunch of snowflakes, they might come and visit.

I'd like to thank the county leaders for not taking a knee for Governor Kelly's request that all people wear a mask in the state of Kansas. And I'd also like to thank Mr. Hicks for his input and telling the truth about the masks. I realize it upset some, but no one complained when Hilliary accused Trump if he was elected, sending all the Mexicans back to Mexico in box cars. Thank you very much.

It is interesting that some of the same people who are against voting by mail now thought it was a great thing when voting whether or not to change the city commission to five members. It makes me wonder if something else went on in that election that we aren't supposed to know about.

I am also standing up for Kansas and the USA. I am standing up for our freedoms also. Most people that know now our freedoms are being slowly taken away from us do not speak out, because they don't want what happened to Mr. Hicks. If anyone speaks up and says anything the leftist progressive mob doesn't agree with they do everything they can to make you pay for it. If that same cartoon that Mr. Hicks had would have had President Trump with a mask on, all of the mob would have cheered for Mr. Hicks. That's the double standard. The only reason the mob didn't like it is because it was on Kelly. Very doubtful all those Facebook people really cared what happened to the Jewish people during the Holocaust. Those of us who love our country need to stand up to this leftist political mob. Like all bullies, they will back down.

Trump at Rushmore: "This is who we are"

Following is an excerpted version of President Trump's speech Friday, July 4, 2020, at the base of Mt. Rushmore.

There could be no better place to celebrate America's independence than beneath this magnificent, incredible, majestic mountain and monument to the greatest Americans who have ever lived.

Today, we pay tribute to the exceptional lives and extraordinary legacies of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, and Teddy Roosevelt. I am here as your President to proclaim before the country and before the world: This monument will never be desecrated — these heroes will never be defaced, their legacy will never, ever be destroyed, their achievements will never be forgotten, and Mount Rushmore will stand forever as an eternal tribute to our forefathers and to our freedom.

We gather tonight to herald the most important day in the history of nations: July 4th, 1776. At those words, every American heart should swell with pride. Every American family should cheer with delight. And every American patriot should be filled with joy, because each of you lives in the most magnificent country in the history of the world, and it will soon be greater than ever before.

Our Founders launched not only a revolution in government, but a revolution in the pursuit of justice, equality, liberty, and prosperity. No nation has done more to advance the human condition than the United States of America. And no people have done more to promote human progress than the citizens of our great nation.

It was all made possible by the courage of 56 patriots who gathered in Philadelphia 244 years ago and signed the Declaration of Independence. They enshrined a divine truth that changed the world forever when they said: "...all men are created equal."

These immortal words set in motion the unstoppable march of freedom. Our Founders boldly declared that we are all endowed with the same divine rights — given [to] us by our Creator in Heaven. And that which God has given us, we will allow no one, ever, to take away — ever.

Seventeen seventy-six represented the culmination of thousands of years of western civilization and the triumph not only of spirit, but of wisdom, philosophy, and reason.

And yet, as we meet here tonight, there is a growing danger that threatens every blessing our ancestors fought so hard for, struggled, they bled to secure.

Our nation is witnessing a merciless campaign to wipe out our history, defame our heroes, erase our values, and indoctrinate our children.

Angry mobs are trying to tear down statues of our Founders, deface our most sacred memorials, and unleash a wave of violent crime in our cities. Many of these people have no idea why they are doing this, but some know exactly what they are doing. They think the American people are weak and soft and submissive. But no, the American people are strong and proud, and they will not allow our country, and all of its values, history, and culture, to be taken from them.

One of their political weapons is "Cancel Culture" — driving people from their jobs, shaming dissenters, and demanding total submission from anyone who disagrees. This is the very definition of totalitarianism, and it is completely alien to our culture and our values, and it has absolutely no place in the United States of America. This attack on our liberty, our magnificent liberty, must be stopped, and it will be stopped very quickly. We will expose this dangerous movement, protect our nation's children, end this radical assault, and preserve our beloved American way of life.

In our schools, our newsrooms, even our corporate boardrooms, there is a new far-

Hurtful protests

Even as states cautiously reopen, demonstrators continue to resist the government and their elected role to protect the community. These protestors often compare government action to the actions of the reprehensible Nazi regime. During these rallies, the regime's symbols often appear on signs inappropriately equating government caution designed to safeguard, with government policy that condoned murder.

The use of the swastika or other Nazi imagery in any context conjures up images of the slaughter of six million Jews and millions of other groups targeted by the evil Nazi regime, their perpetrators, and collaborators.

I was there during the Holocaust and I saw my family murdered before my very eyes.

I walked through the gates of hell that was Auschwitz under that notorious hunk of twisted metal that read 'Arbeit Macht Frei' - 'Work Sets You Free.'

To see that sign again 75 years later used by protesters of our government sent shivers down my spine.

It's ok to protest. That's the beauty of our democracy. Reasonable people can disagree on public policy, but comparing Kansas Governor Laura Kelly, Illinois Governor Pritzker, Chicago Mayor Lightfoot or other leaders concern for our health and well-being to the murderous Nazi regime is ignorant and offensive.

At Illinois Holocaust Museum, we turn displays of bigotry and ignorance into important

Trump finds triumph at Mount Rushmore

If nothing else, President Donald Trump's July Fourth speech at Mount Rushmore clarified the battle lines of our culture war.

The New York Times called the speech "dark and divisive," while an Associated Press headline declared, "Trump pushes racial division." A Washington Post story said the speech "crystallized" the president's "unyielding push to preserve Confederate symbols and the legacy of white domination."

Democratic Sen. Tammy Duckworth insisted that Trump "spent all his time talking about dead traitors."

To be clear — and despite all of this — the media and the left didn't freak out about a speech extolling the valor of Robert E. Lee or the statesmanship of Jefferson Davis. They didn't scorn a speech pining for Antebellum America or expressing ambiguity about the Civil War. They didn't pan a speech that slighted the quest for justice and civil rights throughout American history.

As a matter of fact, Trump didn't mention any Confederates at all. He hailed Abraham Lincoln at length and called the Civil War "the struggle that saved our union and extinguished the evil of slavery." He said we must defend "the ideas that were the foundation of the righteous movement for civil rights."

It'd be difficult to get a more textbook expression of the American civic religion than the speech at Rushmore. It'd be difficult to get a more wide-ranging appreciation of the warriors, inventors, adventurers, reformers, entertainers and athletes that have made the country what it is. It'd be difficult to get a more affirming account of the greatness of America and its meaning to the world.

And, yet, the speech was tested and found wanting.

Trump's attacks on what he called "a new far-left fascism" and a cultural revolution "designed to overthrow the American Revolution" were indeed hard-edged, but who can doubt the basic truth of the claims?

There's a fear afoot in the land, as a merciless authoritarian spirit informs a spate of firings and cancellations. The day before Trump's speech, a Boeing executive resigned over something he had written ... in 1987.

The setting for Trump's speech is itself now deemed problematic. A CNN report previewing the event said Trump "will be at Mount Rushmore, where he'll be standing in front of a monument of two slave owners and on land wrestled away from Native Americans."

There's no doubt that Trump is a deeply flawed messenger. But it wasn't just Trump the messenger who was attacked in the aftermath of the Mount Rushmore speech; it was the message.

Patriotic sentiments of the sort that have adorned American oratory for centuries were deemed hateful and divisive. A celebration of the Founders that once would have been the stuff of schoolbooks and primers was considered controversial. A defense of the nation's ideals was waved away. No, nothing to see here — only hate and division.

Surely, if some other Republican president had given the Mount Rushmore speech the pushback wouldn't have been as intense. But this isn't just about Trump. It goes much deeper.

Critics of the speech objected to what they said was its wildly exaggerated account of the stakes in the culture war — and at the same time, vindicated that account by equating patriotism with white supremacy.

President Trump at Mt. Rushmore: 'America's Future Is In Our Hands'

left fascism that demands absolute allegiance. If you do not speak its language, perform its rituals, recite its mantras, and follow its commandments, then you will be censored, banished, blacklisted, persecuted, and punished. It's not going to happen to us.

Make no mistake: this left-wing cultural revolution is designed to overthrow the American Revolution. In so doing, they would destroy the very civilization that rescued billions from poverty, disease, violence, and hunger, and that lifted humanity to new heights of achievement, discovery, and progress.

To make this possible, they are determined to tear down every statue, symbol, and memory of our national heritage.

That is why I am deploying federal law enforcement to protect our monuments, arrest the rioters, and prosecute offenders to the fullest extent of the law.

I am pleased to report that yesterday, federal agents arrested the suspected ringleader of the attack on the statue of Andrew Jackson in Washington, D.C. — and, in addition, hundreds more have been arrested.

Under the executive order I signed last week — pertaining to the Veterans' Memorial Preservation and Recognition Act and other laws — people who damage or deface federal statues or monuments will get a minimum of 10 years in prison. And obviously, that includes our beautiful Mount Rushmore.

Our people have a great memory. They will never forget the destruction of statues and monuments to George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant, abolitionists, and many others.

The violent mayhem we have seen in the streets of cities that are run by liberal Democrats, in every case, is the predictable result of years of extreme indoctrination and bias in education, journalism, and other cultural institutions.

Against every law of society and nature, our children are taught in school to hate their own country, and to believe that the men and women who built it were not heroes, but that they were villains. The radical view of American history is a web of lies — all perspective is removed, every virtue is obscured, every motive is twisted, every fact is distorted, and every flaw is magnified until the history is purged and the record is disfigured beyond all recognition.

This movement is openly attacking the legacies of every person on Mount Rushmore. They defile the memory of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Roosevelt. Today, we will set history and history's record straight.

Before these figures were immortalized in stone, they were American giants in full flesh and blood, gallant men whose intrepid deeds unleashed the greatest leap of human advancement the world has ever known. Tonight, I will tell you and, most importantly, the youth of our nation, the true stories of these great, great men.

From head to toe, George Washington represented the strength, grace, and dignity of the American people. From a small volunteer force of citizen farmers, he created the Continental Army out of nothing and rallied them to stand against the most powerful military on Earth.

Through eight long years, through the brutal winter at Valley Forge, through setback after setback on the field of battle, he led those patriots to ultimate triumph. When the Army had dwindled to a few thousand men at Christmas of 1776, when defeat seemed absolutely certain, he took what remained of his forces on a daring nighttime crossing of the Delaware River.

They marched through nine miles of frigid darkness, many without boots on their feet, leaving a trail of blood in the snow. In the morning, they seized victory at Trenton. After forcing the surrender of the most powerful empire on the planet at Yorktown, General Washington did not claim power, but simply returned to Mount Vernon as a private citizen.

When called upon again, he presided over the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, and was unanimously elected our first President. When he stepped down after two terms, his former adversary King George called him "the greatest man of the age." He remains first in our hearts to this day. For as long as Americans love this land, we will honor and cherish the father of our country, George Washington. He will never be removed, abolished, and most of all, he will never be forgotten.

Thomas Jefferson — the great Thomas Jefferson — was 33 years old when he traveled north to Pennsylvania and brilliantly authored one of the greatest treasures of human history, the Declaration of Independence. He also drafted Virginia's constitution, and conceived and wrote the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, a model for our cherished First Amendment.

After serving as the first Secretary of State, and then Vice President, he was elected to the Presidency. He ordered American warriors to crush the Barbary pirates, he doubled the size of our nation with the Louisiana Purchase, and he sent the famous explorers Lewis and Clark into the west on a daring expedition to the Pacific Ocean.

He was an architect, an inventor, a diplomat, a scholar, the founder of one of the world's great universities, and an ardent defender of liberty. Americans will forever admire the author of American freedom, Thomas Jefferson. And he, too, will never, ever be abandoned by us.

Abraham Lincoln, the savior of our union, was a self-taught country lawyer who grew up in a log cabin on the American frontier.

The first Republican President, he rose to high office from obscurity, based on a force and clarity of his anti-slavery convictions. Very, very strong convictions.

He signed the law that built the Transcontinental Railroad; he signed the Homestead Act, given to some incredible scholars — as simply defined, ordinary citizens free land to settle anywhere in the American West; and he led the country through the darkest hours of American history, giving every ounce of strength that he had to ensure that government of the people, by the people, and for the people did not perish from this Earth.

He served as Commander-in-Chief of the U.S. Armed Forces during our bloodiest war, the struggle that saved our union and extinguished the evil of slavery. Over 600,000 died in that war; more than 20,000 were killed or wounded in a single day at Antietam. At Gettysburg, 157 years ago, the Union bravely withstood an assault of nearly 15,000 men and threw back Pickett's charge.

Lincoln won the Civil War; he issued the Emancipation Proclamation; he led the passage of the 13th Amendment, abolishing slavery for all time — and ultimately, his determination to preserve our nation and our union cost him his life. For as long as we live, Americans will uphold and revere the immortal memory of President Abraham Lincoln.

Theodore Roosevelt exemplified the unbridled confidence of our national culture and identity. He saw the towering grandeur of America's mission in the world and he pursued it with overwhelming energy and zeal.

As a Lieutenant Colonel during the Spanish-American War, he led the famous Rough Riders to defeat the enemy at San Juan Hill. He cleaned up corruption as Police Commissioner of New York City, then served as the Governor of New York, Vice President, and at 42 years old, became the youngest-ever President of the United States.

He sent our great new naval fleet around the globe to announce America's arrival as a world power. He gave us many of our national parks, including the Grand Canyon; he oversaw the construction of the awe-inspiring Panama Canal; and he is the only person ever awarded both the Nobel Peace Prize and the Congressional Medal of Honor. He was — American freedom personified in full. The American people will never relinquish the bold, beautiful, and untamed spirit of Theodore Roosevelt.

No movement that seeks to dismantle these treasured American legacies can possibly have a love of America at its heart. Can't have it. No person who remains quiet at the destruction of this resplendent heritage can possibly lead us to a better future.

The radical ideology attacking our country advances under the banner of social justice. But in truth, it would demolish both justice and society. It would transform justice into an instrument of division and vengeance, and it would turn our free and inclusive society into a place of repression, domination, and exclusion.

They want to silence us, but we will not be silenced.

We will state the truth in full, without apology: We declare that the United States of America is the most just and exceptional nation ever to exist on Earth.

We are proud of the fact — that our country was founded on Judeo-Christian principles, and we understand — that these values have dramatically advanced the cause of peace and justice throughout the world.

We know that the American family is the bedrock of American life.

We recognize the solemn right and moral duty of every nation to secure its borders. And we are building the wall.

We remember that governments exist to protect the safety and happiness of their own people. A nation must care for its own citizens first. We must take care of America first. It's time.

We believe in equal opportunity, equal justice, and equal treatment for citizens of every race, background, religion, and creed. Every child, of every color — born and unborn — is made in the holy image of God.

We want free and open debate, not speech codes and cancel culture.

We embrace tolerance, not prejudice.

We support the courageous men and women of law enforcement. We will never abolish our police or our great Second Amendment, which gives us the right to keep and bear arms.

We believe that our children should be taught to love their country, honor our history, and respect our great American flag.

We stand tall, we stand proud, and we only kneel to Almighty God.

This is who we are. This is what we believe. And these are the values that will guide us as we strive to build an even better and greater future.

Those who seek to erase our heritage want Americans to forget our pride and our great dignity, so that we can no longer understand ourselves or America's destiny. In toppling the heroes of 1776, they seek to dissolve the bonds of love and loyalty that we feel for our country, and that we feel for each other. Their goal is not a better America, their goal is the end of America.

In its place, they want power for themselves. But just as patriots did in centuries past, the American people will stand in their way — and we will win, and win quickly and with great dignity.

We will never let them rip America's heroes from our monuments, or from our hearts. By tearing down Washington and Jefferson, these radicals would tear down the very heritage for which men gave their lives to win the Civil War; they would erase the memory that inspired those soldiers to go to their deaths, singing these words of the Battle Hymn of the Republic: "As He died to make men Holy, let us die to make men free, while God is marching on."

They would tear down the principles that propelled the abolition of slavery in America and, ultimately, around the world, ending an evil institution that had plagued humanity for thousands and thousands of years. Our opponents would tear apart the very documents that Martin Luther King used to express his dream, and the ideas that were the foundation of the righteous movement for Civil Rights. They would tear down the beliefs, culture, and identity that have made America the most vibrant and tolerant society in the history of the Earth.

My fellow Americans, it is time to speak up loudly and strongly and powerfully and defend the integrity of our country.

It is time for our politicians to summon the bravery and determination of our American ancestors. It is time. It is time to plant our flag and protect the greatest of this nation, for citizens of every race, in every city, and every part of this glorious land. For the sake of our honor, for the sake of our children, for the sake of our union, we must protect and preserve our history, our heritage, and our great heroes.

Here tonight, before the eyes of our forefathers, Americans declare again, as we did 244 years ago: that we will not be tyrannized, we will not be demeaned, and we will not be intimidated by bad, evil people. It will not happen.

We will proclaim the ideals of the Declaration of Independence, and we will never surrender the spirit and the courage and the cause of July 4th, 1776.

Upon this ground, we will stand firm and unwavering. In the face of lies meant to divide us, demoralize us, and diminish us, we will show that the story of America unites us, inspires us, includes us all, and makes everyone free.

We must demand that our children are taught once again to see America as did Reverend Martin Luther King, when he said that the Founders had signed "a promissory note" to every future generation. Dr. King saw that the mission of justice required us to fully embrace our founding ideals. Those ideals are so important to us — the founding ideals. He called on his fellow citizens not to rip down their heritage, but to live up to their heritage.

Above all, our children, from every community, must be taught that to be American is to inherit the spirit of the most adventurous and confident people ever to walk the face of the Earth.

Americans are the people who pursued our Manifest Destiny across the ocean, into the uncharted wilderness, over the tallest mountains, and then into the skies and even into the stars.

We are the country of Andrew Jackson, Ulysses S. Grant, and Frederick Douglass. We are the land of Wild Bill Hickock and Buffalo Bill Cody. We are the nation that gave rise to the Wright Brothers, the Tuskegee Airmen — Harriet Tubman, Clara Barton, Jesse Owens, George Patton — General George Patton — the great Louie Armstrong, Alan Shepard, Elvis Presley, and Mohammad Ali. And only America could have produced them all. No other place.

We are the culture that put up the Hoover Dam, and sculpted the highways, and sculpted the skyline of Manhattan. We are the people who dreamed a spectacular dream — it was called: Las Vegas, in the Nevada desert; who built up Miami from the Florida marsh; and who carved our heroes into the face of Mount Rushmore.

Americans harnessed electricity, split the atom, and gave the world the telephone and the Internet. We settled the Wild West, won two World Wars, landed American astronauts on the Moon — and one day very soon, we will plant our flag on Mars.

We gave the world the poetry of Walt Whitman, the stories of Mark Twain, the songs of Irving Berlin, the voice of Ella Fitzgerald, the style of Frank Sinatra — the comedy of Bob Hope, the power of the Saturn V rocket, the toughness of the Ford F-150 — and the awesome might of the American aircraft carriers.

Americans must never lose sight of this miraculous story. You should never lose sight of it, because nobody has ever done it like we have done it. So today, under the authority vested in me as President of the United States — I am announcing the creation of a new monument to the giants of our past. I am signing an executive order to establish the National Garden of American Heroes, a vast outdoor park that will feature the statues of the greatest Americans to ever live.

From this night and from this magnificent place, let us go forward united in our purpose and re-dedicated in our resolve. We will raise the next generation of American patriots. We will write the next thrilling chapter of the American adventure. And we will teach our children to know that they live in a land of legends, that nothing can stop them, and that no one can hold them down. They will know that in America, you can do anything, you can be anything, and together, we can achieve anything.

Uplifted by the titans of Mount Rushmore, we will find unity that no one expected; we will make strides that no one thought possible. This country will be everything that our citizens have hoped for, for so many years, and that our enemies fear — because we will never forget that American freedom exists for American greatness. And that's what we have: American greatness.

Centuries from now, our legacy will be the cities we built, the champions we forged, the good we did, and the monuments we created to inspire us all.

My fellow citizens: America's destiny is in our sights. America's heroes are embedded in our hearts. America's future is in our hands. And ladies and gentlemen: the best is yet to come.

This has been a great honor for the First Lady and myself to be with you. I love your state. I love this country. I'd like to wish everybody a very happy Fourth of July. To all, God bless you, God bless your families, God bless our great military, and God bless America. Thank you very much.

Another Mystery artifact has been identified. I recently received an e-mail and photo identifying it as a small 3 3/8" COTY perfume bottle - Eagle Crown, metal pull out lid.

This identification came from Andrew Larson, his daughter Marie and her son, who live in South Boardman, Michigan.

Andy and I were both in the U.S. Navy, both stationed in VT-27 at Corpus Christi, Texas in the 1960's and were both assigned to the Aircraft Division.

We worked in the Airframes-Hydraulic's shop, plus Andy and I spent hours metal detecting together on our off time.

Our friendship continues to this day and guess what? Our hobby of metal detecting contin-

Con't - The Skinning Tree – A novel by G. Dane Hicks

Due to "social distancing" directives in view of the present Covid19 emergency and the fact that many Review readers are sequestering to varying degrees in their homes and looking for reading materials among ways to pass the time, we are publishing segments of Review publisher Dane Hicks' 2003 novel "The Skinning Tree" (Began March 24) over the course of the next several weeks.

Chapter 7 Con't

*picking up from where left on from July 7th edition

"Now, how about that drink?" "Uh, okay," he responded out of reflex, backing away toward the backshop door. "I'll have to get some cups." He disappeared through the doorway, his eyes wide as the thoughts poured through his mind. He caught himself jogging to the coffee maker, why he really didn't know, and clinking two mugs together as he quick-stepped back to the office. She was still there, at the counter, the scotch already uncapped and the bottle hoisted into the air. McKane slid a mug underneath the mouth, noticing the glaze on her manicured nails as he did so. The liquid echoed as it poured into the coffee mug. She moved the other mug underneath and poured a similar amount. McKane stood watching her face, noticing the sharpness of her chin and her nose, and the way her eyes seemed to bolt open wide with every change in her facial expression as the scotch jumped slightly from the mug onto the old varnished wood. A tiny "oops" escaped her, and she grinned at him as she slid a mug his way.

"To new friends?" She raised the glass and looked deeper into his eyes, the smile lowering to a smaller, open-mouthed grin.

McKane watched her, his own face growing into another embarrassed smile, and became aware of the pulsing inside his chest from his quickening heartbeat. He smiled into her wide, warm green eyes and clinked his mug against hers.

"To new friends." He tipped back his scotch for a healthy sip, and his eyes showed more than a little shock when she threw back the whole contents of her mug, pulled it away slowly as she held it by two dainty fingers, for reasons Wettstein might get voted out.

"But why would someone get voted out if they do good work, you might ask," Gordon posted. "Last name; local ties; money; lack of knowledge by the voters; a popularity contest; I scratch your back if you scratch mine." Her suggestion in the sheriff's race came at the end of her endorsement, followed by "This is, of course, my personal opinion and in no way a reflection of my office."

Anderson County Appraiser Adam Wilson did not respond to emails with questions about office policy on staff endorsements of candidates. Gordon told the Review she was within her bounds as long as the comments weren't made during her paid county workday – an assertion confirmed by documents provided to the Review by Wettstein, who functions as and winced in pain as the harsh liquor washed over the back of her throat. She swallowed, her eyes still closed, and a tiny shudder shook through her that made her red curls bounce. She dabbed at the corner of her mouth with a finger, then looked at him and smiled. McKane's face held its own look of pain from watching her.

"Easy, now," he leaned a little toward her, taking the glass from her and setting it on the counter. "You've got to ride that thing home, remember."

Her eyes searched his for a second, then broadened to take in the room around them again as she stepped backward toward the door. He took a step to follow her, about to say something.

"Eat your sandwich and write your story, Michael," she said as her face stretched into the now familiar, bleary-eyed grin. "I'll see ya."

He lost sight of her beyond the door as her image crossed the windows. Soon the Harley's engine roared, and faded away. McKane eased himself back down into Sandy's chair and watched the solitary red orb of the Harley's tail light disappear down the street, the fumes of the scotch still crawling up his sinuses. He shook his head and tried to force himself back to the story, but clicked in his Internet connection to check his e-mail instead.

There was nothing from Susan.

Chapter 8

Wednesday had been a late night. It was nearly three in the morning before McKane shook off Ellie's distraction enough to plug himself back into the story, the backshop, sketched a dummy of the page one layout and left it for Judy and Ann in production and Wendell to finish out and get to press Thursday morning. He got home numb from fatigue, his mind throbbing with thoughts about how the story could have been better and how Ellie Taylor smelled like expensive perfume

Wind farm companies have targeted rural counties in the Midwest without local zoning plans in hopes of having fewer restrictions developing their projects. A similar move was made by a different company in Bourbon County last year.

"I can voice my opinion as I did, on my lunch break and after hours and expressly stated it as my personal opinion and not that of my office," Gordon told the Review. The time stamp on her facebook post was 12:40 p.m.

Valentine said he couldn't discuss specifics as to why Gordon would want to see him defeated in an election bid. He did say that over his decades in local law enforcement he had dealings with numerous individuals who would have reason to not want him to be re-elected.

County policy requires an employee to resign or take a leave of absence if that employee files to run for the post of the office holder in which he or she works. That provision is not in affect if the employee works in a different office.

and leather. He'd collapsed into bed back at the farmhouse, and it was a little after 11 a.m. by the time he pulled the truck around the corner from Hickory to Main Street to see the crowd of vehicles gathered up and down the street, pockets of people standing here and there in groups or packed in between cars, all clustering around the Sentinel office.

"Good Christ, it's been like this since I got here at a quarter till eight," Ethel Crabb's raspy voice ground out as McKane walked through the backshop doors, his pace slowing to a stop as his dark eyebrows raised high into a broad stare of inquiring bewilderment. The ringing of the telephone punctuated the end of Ethel's growl. To her right, McKane could overhear part of Sandy's conversation into the handset of her phone.

"No, we're a weekly. We just come out once a week. There wasn't a paper printed yesterday. No, just once a ..." The phone continued to ring.

"Here," Ethel's thick hand flipped a section of The Kansas City Star, turned inside out and folded to expose an article on an inside page, toward McKane. He took the paper, his eyes scanning the article as she continued.

"They got wind yesterday afternoon about the Sanchez girl, and I guess they didn't even know about the first one until they started checking down here yesterday," she folded her arms in front of her and bobbed her head slightly, matter-of-factly, seemingly impervious to the ringing telephone. "Half the article's wrong, and we've been getting calls from Topeka. Berniece also see this sort of training as being extremely important."

Various public comments over the years have noted the number of dilapidated structures in the rural areas of the county and suggested those structures could be immolated in order to give firefighters practice. Mersman said those structures can't be controlled enough to be safe, and environmental regulations make it additionally problematic.

"KDHE has set so many air regulations on smoke that it's really not feasible to burn acquired structures like we used to do," Mersman said. "All the asbestos has to be removed, shingles, anything that gives off large amounts of black smoke."

Stoddard was in and said she saw a Channel 4 van in town this morning." Sandy ended her call, pushed the pink release button on the black telephone console on her desk, grimaced, and picked up the ringing line without noticing McKane's presence. McKane raised his still sleeping eyes to the front office windows, where several pockets of people stood in groups in front of the parked cars, some looking into the office from time to time. Behind them, cars moved down the street at a snail's pace, the shadowy drivers and occupants clearly straining to see inside the paper office.

"Gary had to run a bunch of them out of the pressroom a little while ago," her voice raising with disbelief. "They were standing around in there too. I guess they were just gonna start pulling papers off the press. Then somebody calls from Phillips 66 out on the highway – wants to know when we're gonna bring their papers out 'cause they got people standing around waiting for 'em. I told em, 'hey, it's ten o'clock in the morning. We don't ever get out there 'til after lunch."

"Incredible." It was the only word that McKane could muster, his mind still groggy and easily stifled by the meele. The phone sprang to life again.

"Uh, I'll go next door and see how Gary's coming."

"If this keeps up, I'm not gonna be able to get a postal report filed by five." Ethel didn't complain much. It was a legitimate warning.

"I know. I know," McKane waved his hand in assurance and backing toward the door. "It'll slow down. If it doesn't we'll, uh, we'll figure something out."

A metal door and a ninety year-old brick wall separated the Sentinel's offices from the pressroom next door, and the odor of ink and solvents rushed to meet McKane's nose as he swung the door open into the camera room which adjoined the production area where page negatives and plates were produced for the press. An eight unit press stacked two up hulked across the back wall beyond the camera room, each holding a 1,500 pound roll of clean white newsprint like giant rolls of toilet paper.

The Sentinel's saving grace for its income statement was the printing of not just itself but also four other surrounding weekly newspapers and catalogue pages for Bell Tool Company, a New York tool wholesaler with whom one of the Knaule's had connected over cocktails fifteen years ago in order to help keep the Sentinel operation afloat financially. The room was lit by twelve-foot high plate glass windows in the front facing the street where passersby could watch the printing process at work. At the rear of the building a large garage door opened into the alley and served as a loading bay. Gary Parker, the director of the press room, moved toward McKane from somewhere at the back of the room, pointing a thumb back over his shoulder toward the open back door, the collar of his ink-stained blue work coveralls turned slightly up and his mouth wide under a thick gray moustache.

"I'm just gonna go ahead and close the back door until we're done with the run," he bellowed, used to speaking above the churning drums and whisking paper. "I already run 'em off once, and I ain't starting up if anybody else's in here. Insurance." He nodded his head. Technically, McKane outranked him, but Mac had learned not to screw with the press guys. Parker ran a good crew, and good press crews were hard to come by.

"Yeah, that's fine. Whatever you need, Gary," McKane agreed. "We can't have a bunch of people running around in here like that. It's crazy."

"Twenty-six years," Parker shook his head turning away and back to the press, where another crewman had just rung a warning bell that advanced a set of the giant paper rolls to the hum of the big electric motors. "Twenty-six years and I ain't never seen 'em coming in the back door after a newspaper."

McKane nodded, pretending more disbelief than he really felt, but Parker was already back at the press, pointing above his head into one of the press units and giving instructions to a younger man also clad in stained blue. Mac turned slowly, running his eyes down the lineup of machinery, which now sang out a crisp metallic groan as the crew advanced the winding, unbroken ribbon of giant paper to make
