Chamber organizers pull plug on 50th Christmas parade

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – After weeks of Christmas parade planning by organizers and participants as well as a number of local businesses gearing up to make the most of the event as a local kickoff for “Small Business Saturday,” Garnett Chamber of Commerce officials pulled the plug on the signature holiday event last week citing concerns over the spread of Covid-19.

It was the latest in a string of cancellations and shutdowns in the area since mid-March, when fears over the virus curtailed all but a few local events while hammering local business revenues and in some cases closing “non-essential” businesses during a weeks-long shutdown of schools and many commercial enterprises.

A statement from the GACC noted recent hikes in numbers of cases of the virus in the area, and promised to celebrate the Golden Anniversary of the Garnett parade next year. Chamber president Casey Smith said the organization had received only a few registrations for entries in the parade as of last Wednesday.

“As of November 18th, the Chamber had received very few entries to participate in the parade,” Smith said. “That same day, county officials contacted the Chamber and encouraged the board to reconsider hosting the parade.”

“It was a difficult decision to cancel the parade due to the fact that this event draws many people into Garnett and so much time and effort had already gone into planning. We

Carolers caravan set for Saturday

GARNETT – You may not be able to go to a parade in Garnett Saturday night, but a Caroler’s Caravan is going to be bringing the lights and sounds of Christmas to you.

Local organizers are inviting decorated, lighted cars, trucks, floats, motorcycles, bicycles and other vehicles to join up at the Garnett Swimming Pool parking lot at 6 p.m. Saturday, with plans to depart at 6:30 p.m. There is no set route, but plans are to criss-cross Garnett for 30-60 minutes as well as conduct drive-bys of area nursing homes.

Any decorated, lighted vehicles are welcome to take part in the event as long as they can keep pace with the caravan. Carolers will be riding as well and may make occasional caroling stops. No walking participants please.

County opts out – again

Commissioners hear more debate, but again decide against state mask mandate

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Anderson County Commissioners on Monday voted to opt out of a new mask mandate enacted by Governor Laura Kelly which would have taken affect Wednesday, but meeting attendee comments showed far more support for following the mandate than at a similar meeting in July.

Commissioners took similar action in early July, when Kelly’s first mask mandate order was amended with legislation from Republican lawmakers to allow counties the option not to participate upon an official vote of their elected leaders.

The July decision was met by near unanimous acceptance when commissioners discussed it before some 50 attendees at a regular Monday commission meeting. This time however, the debate and public comment period went some two hours before commissioners reluctantly case their votes. A show of hands revealed 14 attendees favored following the governor’s order, 26 opposed.

Commissioners Les McGhee and Jerry Howarter voted in favor of McGhee’s motion to opt out. Commissioner Dave Pracht voted in opposition.

Public comment at the meeting ran a broad gamut across myriad Covid topics, such as debate over the effectiveness of masks, authority of local businesses to require them to be worn by customers, emotional impacts on children and senior citizens and the constitutionality of the governor’s mandate. The order was backed by local medical officials, including written statements delivered by county emergency preparedness director J.D. Mersman from Dr. Wendy Belcher and SEK Health Department Director Rebecca Johnson, Anderson County Hospital CEO Rich McKain, and Dr.

Ross Kimball. McKain told commissioners he was concerned that a high volume of Covid hospitalizations would affect not just the general public health the staffing of ACH, with either Covid-positive staff or quarantines resulting from possible exposure.

“I’m advocating for the hospital as far as health care,” McKain said. “The mask mandate we feel will help the hospital because it will help protect our employees.”

The efficacy of mask wearing has been much the subject of debate since the virus arrived last spring. Data from the Kansas Department of Health and Environment shows mask use had no demonstrated benefit in counties that observed Kelly’s July mandate when compared on a per 100,000 population basis with counties which opted out, although state health officials have repeatedly said otherwise and at one time jimmied charts to reflect a standpoint not supported by data.

Garnett attorney Terry Solander said constitutional provisions required that courses of actions which restrict the rights of the public must have direct and easily demonstrated benefits. He said the case for mask wearing in stopping the spread of Covid was not that cut and dried. “The constitutional rights are pre-eminent,” Solander said “They aren’t absolute, but this particular situation suggests to me that nobody really knows or fully understands how to control it, and we are assuming masks work. If you can’t demonstrate a clear connection and a clear improvement then it is not permissible to take away somebody’s right to make their own decision.”

Information from the Anderson County Health Department showed 35 active cases as of yesterday morning. Daily case counts had run as high as 70 in recent weeks, a staffer said.

State’s Covid survival up – 98.9 percent

TOPEKA – Data from the Kansas Department of Health and Environment shows the COVID survival rate reached a new high of 98.9% as of November 11. That’s a significant improvement over time. Early in the pandemic on April 20, the survival rate was 94.2%; it improved to 98.1% by July 6 and has been steadily improving since then.

The survival rate for kids aged 0-17 is 100%; adults aged 18-64 survive at a rate of 99.8% and the rate for adults 65-84 is 95%. The survival rate for adults over the age of 85 is 84.6%.

About 46% of the 1,215 deaths attributed to COVID have occurred in nursing homes. The survival rate outside of nursing homes is 99.4% for all ages.

The COVID demographics and many other charts and tables are in the COVID Information Center published by Kansas Policy Institute; KPI owns the Sentinel.

Counties with mask mandates have higher case growth

Kansas Governor Laura Kelly and some local health officials continue to push for more mask mandates even though the data from KDHE continues to show higher case growth in the counties that already have mandates.

Twenty-five of the state's 105 counties adopted the governor's mask mandate that went into effect on July 2. Since June 29, those counties collectively have had a 914% increase in COVID cases, while the 80 counties that rejected the mask mandate have seen cases increase by 423%.

Last month, the Sentinel exposed an attempt by researchers at the University of Kansas to justify mask mandates by understating case growth in the counties with mandates. The Lawrence Journal-World, the Kansas City Star, the Wichita Eagle, and the Kansas Reflector ran news stories touting the research and they have declined to run corrections after the Sentinel showed them how they'd been duped by the KU researchers.

The KU report may have been an attempt to rehabilitate the efficacy of mask mandates after the Sentinel caught KDHE Secretary Dr. Lee Norman trying to mislead with his own fabricated data. Even the Wall Street Journal said KDHE fudged the data.

are confident that the community and local businesses would support this decision in lieu of the rising positive COVID cases in Anderson County and surrounding areas," he said.

The parade would have been the traffic draw on Saturday night for local businesses hoping to make the most of the Small Business Saturday promotion - an annual event sponsored by American Express that keys to the theme of shopping with small businesses rather than ordering from online or brick and mortar mass merchandisers. With shutdowns and debates over mask usage hampering businesses since mid-March, local businesses have had a precarious time navigating the Covid business climate. A number around the county have simply closed and not reopened to public traffic. Sarah Hollon, owner of Fourth Street Flea Market in downtown Garnett, said the cancellation was regrettable but not make or break for her business.

"I think it's sad that it had to be cancelled," she said. "There's not much point to staying open late if there's not going to be a parade. It was just something fun."

Homebase, a business scheduling software used by a number of Kansas businesses, estimates 12 percent fewer businesses were open in Kansas on October 3 compared to March 1, and 15 percent fewer employees of those businesses working. Dave Trabert with the Kansas Public Policy Institute, said business impacts of governmental response to Covid-19 couldn't be understated and had to be measured against the legitimate threat of the virus.

"State and local officials must take a balanced approach and recognize the severe consequences of their actions," Trabert said. "At least 60,000 people in Kansas have lost their jobs and it's going to get worse as more businesses fail under constraints of mandates and business restrictions."

"The longer that state and local officials restrict activity, the worse the long term ramifications of their actions will be," Trabert said.

Anderson County Commissioners on Monday morning voted to opt out from under a new executive order from Governor Laura Kelly that would have required mask wearing in public places. The order goes into effect Wednesday.

Colony Christian Church - "Futile Plans"

Brant McGhee gave the Communion Meditation about the dangers of worrying. Sin makes us worry about the future, regret the past, and complicates the present. None of us know if we have a future after today. God provides for our needs, so there is no reason for us to worry about them. We should trust in the forgiveness of the past and live in the present like there's no future. So don't worry about the future so we can live the present the way God intends for us to. (Ref. Matthew 6:25-34)

Pastor Chase Riebel gave the sermon on "Futile Plans". The definition of futile is to be incapable of producing any useful result, pointless. Every day we battle something, our own personal Goliath. It may seem futile, but with God it's possible. There are 3 reasons why it's futile to fight against God. 1. God is eternal. 2. God is sovereign (owns and controls everything) 3. God is omnipotent (all powerful). God is the beginning and the end; and his plans will be finished. Thru Jesus, God created everything. But as his creation, he gave us free will and we go astray quite often. When his creation stops acknowledging God, he will abandon them to their foolish thinking. We serve the Lord when we submit to his sovereign plans. One day, all will realize how futile it was to fight against God. (Ref. Psalm 2:1-12, 90:2, 145:13; Daniel 4:34-35; Revelation 4:11, 6:15-17, 11:15-18; Job 9:4; Colossians 1:16-17; Isaiah 45:1-11; Romans 1:28-32, 2:1 & 5-8; John 1:10-12) Listen to this sermon in its entirety using your favorite podcast, on our Facebook page, or thru our website at www.colonychristianchurch.org.

What made this country great?

Politicians often make broad sweeping statements such as. We have to get back to what made this country great, without much definition of how we get there or really what they are referring to. I think a starting place is to exam some of the powerful nations who have proceeded us. If you chart the rise and fall of the great nations of the past you will see some interesting similarities. They started out in bondage to some other nation, then advanced to spiritual faith from from which they developed great courage, which pushed them to liberty from where they achieved abundance from which complacency developed which turned into apathy which led to dependence which led back into bondage. You have to wonder where we are at on this list. Maybe we are heading for the bottom third.

However, sometimes Presidential speeches are very direct and turn out to be very accurate. Hebert Hoover made the following statement. "We have overworked the word new. The practical thing if we want to make the world over is to try out the word old for awhile. Some old things made this country. The old things are slipping and if they slip too far the light will go out on America. Old virtues, old religious faith, whole truth, integrity, honor in public office, economy in government, individual liberty, willingness to sacrifice. Our greatest danger is not from invasion by foreign armies rather our greatest danger is suicide by compliance with evil."

I believe for any nation to be a nation which is true to her people she must be blessed by God. In Psalm 33:12 we read, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people he chose for his inheritance." My personal belief is what made this country great is just what Hoover said. God was not only in the church house but he was in the White House, the court house, the school house, and the family home. Slowly but surely God has been pushed out of our lives onto some sort of reservation. I find it interesting what Psalm 33:10-11 says, "The Lord foils the plans of the nations; he thwarts the purposes of the peoples. But the plans of the Lord stand firm forever, the purposes of his heart through all generations."

I believe God still has his face turned toward America waiting for her to turn back to what made her great. If we continue to ignore God someday he will turn his face away and we will truly be in for some dark days. If America is to prosper we must return God to his proper place and we will again be a blessed nation.

Why Trump shouldn't concede

Expecting Donald Trump to concede his loss of the presidency to Joe Biden is like being expected to serenade someone with "Moon River" after they just dropped a piano on your cat.

Sure, it would seem like the adult thing to do. Shake off the broken glass of the last four years, act "maturely" as my high school English teacher used to say, let bygones be bygones and just play the game. After all, Biden won fair and square (!).

Ordinarily there would be a little credence for president Trump's attitude, except for the fact that nowhere in the last four years of his presidency - not one single time - was Trump ever treated with the respect not just due a president of the United States, but even a basic carbon-based organism.

It's sort of like football coaches I've known who've had the score run up on their teams. I know of a team that was clobbered by more than 60 points on a Friday night years ago down in Missouri. If you've ever been a coach on the wrong end of an unnecessary beating like that, you know it changes your attitude about that opposing coach.

Ordinarily, the peer group for coaches, not to mention the sports regulatory authorities, would join in condemnation of behavior like that of a coach who unnecessarily brutalized another team. In Trump's case, the media - which should have demanded fair play from both sides as is its traditional charge in America - sided with the bullies.

Indeed, the disintegration of press standards and de-evolution back to the days of Yellow Journalism is rivaled only by the media's decline in audience in the social media generation. That's an issue for another day, but suffice it to say that when given the opportunity to redeem itself - a surging economy, lowest black unemployment in history, better trade deals and a Middle East peace agreement, no Trump accomplishment was ever good enough to force a reduction in the bile heaped upon him daily. Sadly for the Republic, the mainstream media has damaged itself beyond repair.

If there wasn't actual fodder with which to attack Trump, his adversaries and their handmaidens in the press simply made it up. Obama's complicity in the Russiagate conspiracy may now never be known for sure due to lack of investigation and prosecution with Democrats in charge, but if there's that much smoke surrounding the falsities used to base FISA warrants and the entire charade of an impeachment which kept real work off Congress' desk for months, there's fire there that will now never see light of day.

The attacks on his family, as well, were unprecedented. Vulgar insinuations were made about the president and his adult daughter. His wife was insulted and minimized for her physical beauty and her foreign accent. A family gathering for the Trumps was always transposed against the cost to provide travel and secret service protection for them, and the ongoing critical issues which they were ignoring in their repose. Trump's children gave up literal private fortunes to assist him in service to the country. Now, "cancelers" in New York promise social isolation and shunning for the Trumps if and when they return to the Big Apple as continuing punishment for their sacrifices.

Yet now, people who never cut him a break as president demand that he concede "for the betterment of the country." Odd they didn't see fit to demand accountability from the gangs of thugs burning and looting the country at will over the past months. It seems "the betterment of the country" only matters when it's not going to get somebody a new flat screen TV set.

Demands for Trump to concede have nothing to do with national healing - far from it. It's another attack - another arrow of humiliation aimed at that football team which they just can't seem to punish enough.

Concede? Like hell he should. ###

Not to be rude or to start a debate, but if they can shut down non-essential businesses then I believe liquor stores should be non-essential. Then maybe kids would have a better home life or parents would go get the help they finally need. Just my opinion.

I for one will not accept another shutdown of our state of Kansas from the government. Lockdown Laura does not have the right. After all, they can't arrest all of us, just like those thugs rioting and burning those cities this year. They got away with it because there was more of them than there was the cops. I think its time we take our state back. Thank you.

The picture in the paper shows me how arrogant and ignorant people are in Garnett. We're having a spike in Covid-19 and here is at a ribbon cutting event, 14 people and two kids. One kid has a mask and one adult. The rest are standing shoulder to shoulder with no masks. This is stupid. This is how you spread it but people don't care around here. Woman with a baby, no mask. This is just irresponsible, ignorant and arrogant. You deserve what you get.

Here's a thought, the state department of transportation often gives grants to pay officer overtime to write people tickets who do not wear seat belts. This usually happens around the holidays. Maybe the state department of health should look in to doing the same thing for people who don't wear masks. After all one person refusing to wear a mask could affect many more people than one person refusing to wear a seat belt. The fine money could then be used to offset the budget shortfall caused by less income and sales tax revenue.

Now who's politicizing Covid-19?

GUEST COMMENTARY

VICTOR DAVIS HANSON - STANFORD UNIV.

Where has the coronavirus gone?

Nowhere. The pandemic has gained a second wind, even as it is mysteriously scarcer in post-election headlines. If anything, COVID-19 seems more contagious as cold temperatures arrive, people stay indoors and perhaps their vitamin D levels taper off.

Whatever one's views on the virus - whether it remains an existential threat or, contrarily, prompts overreactive lockdowns that are more harmful and maybe even deadlier than the virus itself - nothing much has changed since Election Day.

Or did viral perceptions suddenly change? The pandemic certainly no longer serves as an election lever to demagogue President Trump as a veritable killer. States such as California are under near-complete lockdown. Draconian measures will abbreviate Thanksgiving gatherings in a way unprecedented in U.S. history. Yet elites such as California Gov. Gavin Newsom and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., have violated the quarantines they have endorsed.

Following the media announcement that Joe Biden would likely become president, crowds swarmed into the streets of San Francisco and Los Angeles. They violated every state mandate requiring masks and social distancing. Authorities did nothing - just as they had done nothing during the summer-long protesting and rioting. Apparently, some outdoor gatherings were correct; others, not so much.

A similar warping of science accompanied news about the possible rollout of a COVID-19 vaccine.

Julie Kelly of the conservative website American Greatness has documented the changing narratives about the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine. Pfizer is one of five companies in line to receive massive federal funding under the Trump administration's Operation Warp Speed program to hasten mass vaccinations. Such an ambitious program is unmatched in the history of viral epidemiology. Another company in the program, Moderna, announced promising results from a clinical trial on Nov. 16.

Pfizer CEO Albert Bourla predicted in early September that by the end of October, his company would offer a preliminary announcement concerning the safety and effectiveness of his company's vaccine. His forecast was met with apprehension on the left. Any positive assessment was seen by the left as political, validating the Trump administration's rapid response to the virus shortly before the election.

Yet on Oct. 27, a week before the election, Pfizer corrected Bourla's earlier estimate. The company claimed any such declaration would follow rather than precede the election.

"For us, the election is an artificial milestone," Bourla said. "This is going to be not a Republican vaccine or a Democrat vaccine. It will be a vaccine for the citizens of the world."

Admirable rhetoric. But a few days after the election, Pfizer abruptly announced that in mass human trials, its vaccine had proven 90 percent effective and safe after all.

Still odder than the recalibrated timing was what the company did next.

First, a Pfizer official claimed that the company had never been part of Operation Warp Speed. In an earlier press release, Pfizer had bragged about being an integral player in the multibillion-dollar federal effort to rush the vaccine into use. The day after the denial about being part of the program, a company spokesman conceded that the company is, in fact, part of Operation Warp Speed.

Second, Pfizer gave notice of its purported breakthrough not in a press conference or a communique to the sitting president. Instead, according to Biden, the company contacted his campaign's "public health advisers."

How Black Lives Matter failed the Democrats

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Black Lives Matter came up with the single most effective political slogan of the year.

While no one was likely to be overly impressed with Joe Biden's line, "Build Back Better," and Donald Trump's "Keep America Great" or "Make America Great Again, Again" didn't have the resonance of the original 2016 version, BLM broke through the clutter with a catchphrase that was memorable, pungent -- and utterly devastating to Democrats.

After a surprising Tory victory in the British parliamentary election in 1992, the pro-Tory tabloid The Sun famously boasted, "It's the Sun Wot Won It." In the same spirit, it could be said that in this year's congressional election, "It's 'Defund the Police' Wot Lost It."

Democrats have an uphill battle to take the U.S. Senate - pending two Georgia run-offs - and suffered shocking setbacks in the House that drastically diminished their majority.

All over the map, Democrats could hammer on defunding the police, which couldn't have been better designed to extract maximum political pain with zero upside.

Black Lives Matter has been a stunning success in the elite culture. It won the obeisance of almost every major institution, from corporate America to sports leagues to colleges. It created a powerful, if dishonest, narrative of systemic police racism. It got invested with nearly a holy significance, such that criticizing it is considered at least a sin and perhaps a firing offense.

Much more importantly, at least for a time after the death of George Floyd in police custody in Minneapolis, it won the goodwill of a clear majority of Americans.

To take this position of strength and use it primarily to associate your allies with a politically radioactive position requires extraordinary strategic folly and heedless ideological fanaticism. BLM had both, in ample supply.

The notion of defunding the police had been rattling around the left for a long time, but the George Floyd protests took it mainstream. BLM pushed municipalities to actually act on the proposal.

Whenever someone tried to take the edge off defunding the police by redefining it as simply reallocating some law-enforcement dollars, defenders piped up to say, No, we really mean it. The New York Times ran an op-ed against incrementalist interpretations, "Yes, We Mean Literally Abolish the Police."

Predictably, Republicans took the weapon handed to them and used it, as Democrats would have done if a voluble faction on the right called for, say, abolishing child welfare agencies.

The effectiveness of the attack now has Democrats who are otherwise loath to speak ill of BLM complaining about what its catchy slogan did to the party.

After support for BLM surged last spring, positive feelings for it have been declining. A Pew Research report showed support for BLM dropping from 67% in June to 55% in September. Only 45% of white people expressed support for the movement.

Given that BLM elevated the dumbest, most self-destructive slogan in American politics in a very long time, and an even more atrocious policy, its numbers deserve to fall further. Advocates of defunding the police argued that setting out an extreme position could have a political effect even if it had no chance of enactment.

They proved exactly right -- just not how they expected.

- Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

Old Civil War button found

As promised, here are two photos of my latest metal detector finds.

This is an 1861-1865 Civil War brass coat button. It was worn by an enlisted Civil War Infantryman. How do I know this? Note the "I" on the shield on the eagle.

During the Civil War, letters of the alphabet were embossed on many buttons to signify what unit they were assigned to, such as "A" Artillery, "C" Calvary, "D" Dragoon, "I" Infantry, "O" Ordinance, etc. If no letter appeared, then they were General Staff.

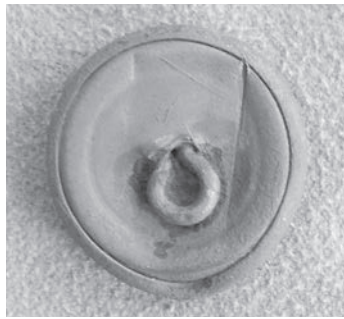

This button's top is indented as you can see. Perhaps it was ran over by a wagon or stepped on by horse, etc. When you look at the back you can see the wire soldered on hook is bent over, but still intact.

The mystery of this button, just like so many of the artifacts found is. When, how, and by whom was this old button lost in the yard of this rural homestead in Anderson County, Kansas.

Far fewer Kansans will be traveling for Thanksgiving

WICHITA - A new survey by AAA indicates that a large majority of Kansas residents will not be traveling for the Thanksgiving holiday, and 47% of those staying home say it is because of COVID-19 concerns.

"Given the recent surge in COVID-19 and the strong urging of public health officials for everyone to stay home for the holiday, the Thanksgiving travel landscape continues to change," said Shawn Steward, spokesman for AAA Kansas.

The new AAA survey provides this snapshot:
•86% of Kansas residents surveyed will be staying home for the Thanksgiving holiday. Forty-seven percent say they are not traveling because of COVID-19. The other 53% say they were not planning to travel anyway. Eighty-eight percent of Kansas residents surveyed said they perceive traveling at this time poses a risk.

Of the survey respondents still planning to travel for the Thanksgiving holiday:
•84% plan to drive
•14% plan to fly
•2% plan to travel by some 'other' mode of transportation (bus, train)

The AAA survey of 742 Kansas residents was conducted Nov. 12/13 by Public Policy Polling. The survey has a margin of error of +/- 3.6%.

What to Expect on the Roads
Of those who do still plan to travel, most will be driving to their holiday destinations so motorists should expect they'll have company on the roads.

AAA reminds those hitting the road to plan their route ahead. To minimize the number of stops along the way, pack meals, extra snacks and drinks in addition to an emergency roadside kit - including extra masks and wipes.

For Americans who make the personal decision to travel for the holiday, it is important to know the risks involved and ways to keep yourself and others safe. In addition to CDC guidance, travelers should also be aware of local and state travel restrictions, including testing requirements and quarantine orders in the states you are traveling to, through and also upon your return.

An interactive map with the latest COVID-19 related restrictions for all states can be found at TripTik.AAA.com.

HANSON...

Apparently, Pfizer had, in fact, been guided by the "artificial milestone" of the election, even if inadvertently.

Or was Pfizer trying to gain political support for its vaccine rollout from Biden, who was an overwhelming favorite in almost all the pre-election polls? Members of Biden's campaign team told Bloomberg News that Biden advisers had met with officials at companies that are working on vaccines before the election.

Why would Pfizer act in such a way?

Perhaps because skeptics Biden and running mate Kamala Harris had downplayed the notion of a Trump push to get millions of Americans vaccinated.

Weeks before the election and the expected Pfizer announcement, Biden had scoffed: "I trust vaccines. I trust scientists. But I don't trust Donald Trump." Harris demonized a potential Operation Warp Speed vaccine during a vice presidential debate: "If Donald Trump tells us to take it, I'm not taking it."

Before the election, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, derided the notion of a pre-election vaccine announcement. After the Pfizer announcement, Cuomo blasted the Trump administration, claiming it should get no credit for the speed of the vaccine development but lots of blame for a predicted slow rollout.

Irony abounds. Those who accused Trump of playing politics with the virus made him look like a relative amateur through their own machinations. Those who claimed they were guided by science proved unscientific in their partisanship.

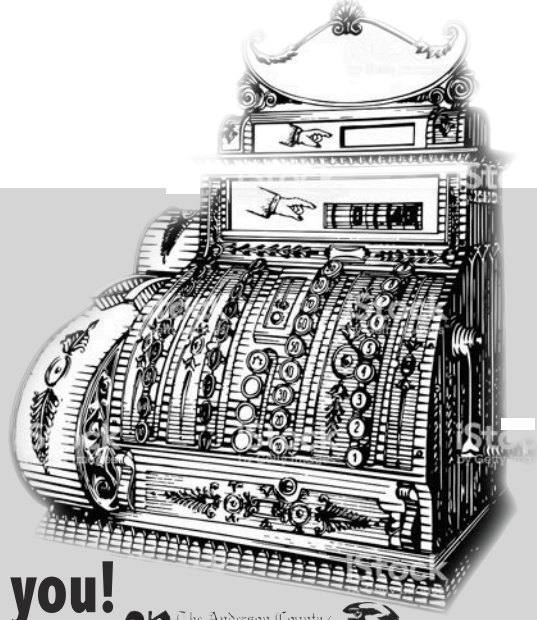

No wonder Americans remain so skeptical of the experts in general and the Washington administrative state in particular.

Small Business Saturday is this weekend — here's how to help

While major retailers are running month-long holiday deals, you should consider paying it forward and shopping small for gifts this year since your spending can make a big difference for a small business owner.

Roughly three in four (75%) small business owners have said that they need holiday spending to return to normal in order to stay in business in 2021, and almost half (46%) expressed the need for above average spending, according to the American Express Shop Small Impact study.

Thankfully, there are simple actions you can take to support local businesses, such as participating Small Business Saturday, which falls on November 28 this year.

Purchasing gifts from a local shop is more important than ever since many businesses were shuttered this year due to the coronavirus and lost sales.

In order to remain open during the pandemic, the majority (92%) of small business owners have pivoted how they do business, including:

- Selling on social: 38%

- Using a third-party platform: 28%

- Introducing curbside pickup: 46%

- Offering contactless delivery: 40%

Not only do these changes help keep their businesses afloat, but they also make your shopping experience easier and safer.

You can even help local businesses without spending anything and opting to post on social media. The study found that the majority of (78%) small business owners say that positive feedback on social media is a significant driver of business and that endorsements on social media may be worth as much as an estimated $197 billion for the U.S. small business economy.

So the next time you plan on shopping, consider visiting your local business — whether that's online, in-person or through contactless services — and sharing your experience on social media. These simple actions can help local shops bounce back and stay in business through the new year.

CELEBRATE SMALL BUSINESS SATURDAY

SATURDAY, NOV. 28

They donate financially to civic functions and volunteer their time and resources for community events and projects. They make payrolls for local workers and pay property taxes and collect all-important sales taxes for local governments. Small businesses have been the backbone of our community for generations. Join us in saluting these vital individuals and make it a point to remember:

When you're shopping, think Small Business first.

These area sponsors invite you to think Small Business first:

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 11-24-2020 / SUBMITTED

Greeley students celebrated Thanksgiving on Wednesday, November 18th with the school dinner of turkey and all the fixings. Though parents and relatives were not allowed to attend the annual tradition this year, the occasion was still festive while being safe. Seated two to a table, students enjoyed "fine dining" with white table coverings, centerpieces, servers coming to their table, and instrumental music playing. The two "Pilgrims" pictured are (left) Colton Nelson and (right) Brinnley Callahan; both are first graders in Mrs. Messick's class.

Ratliffs win many awards at Kentucky show

Ricochet Vegas (Ricochet) finished in 2nd and Ratliff Irwin Vita-ET (Irwin) finished 5th overall.

This was a very impressive showing as it has been over 40 years since someone has had 3 of the top 5 finishers overall.

The Ratliffs also won the Premier Breeder at the show and the Reserve Exhibitor Award.

Ratliff Money Vixen, another of the Ratliff's entries won the All American Milking Yearlings division.

Bulldog football players receive all-league honors

GARNETT - Senior Bo Dilliner earned Pioneer All-League honors as quarterback for the Anderson County Bulldogs this season.

On the defensive side of the ball, junior Dalton Kellerman was the only Bulldog to earn honors as he was a 2nd team selection.

Lady Lancer freshman earns 1st Team honors

COLONY - Crest freshman Kayla Hermreck earned a 1st team selection in the Three Rivers League for volleyball.
