Still warmer, still dry

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 1-19-2021 / DANE HICKS

The flow of water had dropped off to a trickle at numerous creek crossings in Anderson County like this one north of Welda. Warmer, dryer weather and sparse precipitation has continued a dry pattern that started more than six months ago.

La Nina weather pattern keeps county and surrounding region in mild temps, drops rain elsewhere

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Federal weather statistics show Anderson County and much of Eastern Kansas in the “Abnormally Dry” category since fall yielded only sparse rainfall in the region, but local residents could already tell that just by looking at most local ponds and creeks. Mary Knapp with the Kansas Weather Data

Library said Anderson County logged .76 of an inch of precipitation in December and Garnett only .50, norms for the month at 1.80 inches in the county and 1.90 in Garnett.

“January-to-date for Garnett is 0.54” compared to a normal of 0.69 through the 18th,” Knapp said.

Anderson County and 43 other counties in the state were named in an executive order from Governor Laura Kelly as “drought watch” counties on July 7 last year. That designation brought no effective financial or other relief to the named counties, but instead recognized those regions as having particular dry conditions. Kelly’s order may have been good luck for Anderson County in July, as several pop-up storm systems brought rain during the month totaling 6.76 inches compared to the month’s norm of 4.40.

Overall, fall weather ran a little warmer and drier than normal, as was the projection by state climatologists interviewed by the Review last August. October rainfall was nearly an inch and a half shy of the same month in 2019 and a little more off the regular October norm of 3.7 inches. Both November 2019 and 2020

Sex charges filed against Kincaid man

Mother of stepdaughter reports incident; charges include rape, sodomy

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A Kincaid man was in district court this morning facing rape, sodomy and indecent liberties charges stemming from alleged incidents late last year involving his 13 year-old stepdaughter.

Caleb Foltz, 31 of Kincaid, was set for a Zoom hearing with his legal counsel today at 10 a.m. in connection with an investigation that began December 30 after an incident the night before. He’s being held in the Anderson County Jail in lieu of bond.

Foltz

A statement by the arresting officer used to obtain an arrest warrant detailed interviews conducted with the victim, her mother and with Foltz stemming from an incident that occurred at their home the night of December 29 which was witnessed by the victim’s mother and Foltz’s wife. An argument ensued between the adults, and Foltz left their residence for the night.

According to the statement, the victim told investigators Foltz had never done anything like this before and had never done anything to make her feel uncomfortable.

In a subsequent interview the following day with Foltz, the statement

LaTurne, recovering from Covid, votes against Trump impeachment

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Kansas Second District Congressman Jake LaTurner followed suit with all but one Sunflower State congressional representative in voting against the U.S. House’s second impeachment of President Trump last week – but he had to vote by proxy due to his recent Covid diagnoses.

LaTurner

LaTurner issued a statement in advance of the vote pledging to vote against not just the impeachment measure but also on a measure that sought to invoke the 25th Amendment to remove the president from office.

Kansas’ Second District includes Anderson as well as Allen, Atchinson, Bourbon, Brown, Cherokee, Coffey, Crawford, Doniphan, Douglas, Franklin, Jackson, Jefferson, Labette, Leavenworth, Linn, Montgomery, Nemaha, Neosho, Osage, Shawnee, Wilson, and Woodson counties as well as portions of Marshall and Miami counties.

Only Democrat Congresswoman from the 3rd District Sharice Davids, representing Johnson, Wyandotte and part of Miami County, voted for the Democrat measure from Kansas. The 232 to 197 vote included 10 Republicans, Liz Cheney of Wyoming, Anthony Gonzalez of Ohio, John Katko of New York, Adam Kinzinger of Illinois, Peter Meijer of Michigan, Tom Rice of South Carolina, Fred Upton of Michigan, Jaime Herrera Beutler of Washington, Dan Newhouse of Washington, and David Valadao of California.

“The focus should be on bringing the criminals that broke into the Capitol to justice and conducting a bipartisan investigation into the security breakdown,” LaTurner said.

COCO nurses shun Covid vaccine

Number of practitioners with hesitancy about vaccine across nation surprises health industry

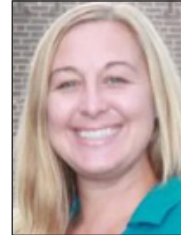

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – Nurses in the Coffey County Health Department say their county department will hire a contractor to administer the new Covid-19 vaccine, because none of them “feel comfortable” giving patients the shot.

They’re not the only ones. The move by health department administrator Lindsay Payer represents a formidable concern for vaccinations against Covid-19 – that some people, many of them health professionals across the country, are refusing to take the vaccine and are nervous about its outcomes with their patients.

“I will tell you we will have to contract staff outside of our staff to give that vaccine because my staff is not comfortable with that,” Payer told Coffey County

Payer

Commissioners at a meeting January 4. Payer said the vaccine was the product of a “new technology,” that it had only been tested on 45 people prior to release, and that the pharmaceutical companies that produced it had been exempted from liability.

County medical officer Jeff Sloyer however disputed those claims and gave the vaccine effort his endorsement, telling commissioners the drugs were tested on tens of thousands of people prior to release, including the elderly and those with pre-existing conditions. The U.S.-led

Chamber to start city wellness campaign

GARNETT – Chamber of commerce and city officials will begin a new public relations campaign this month aimed at boosting health and morale in the local area.

In December, the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce hosted a Zoom meeting with a facilitator from the Kansas Leadership Center for the purpose of virtually gathering interested local business partners and citizens on the “Kansas Beats The Virus” initiative. The outcome of this meeting is the creation of a Healthy Minds, Healthy Bodies, Healthy Spirits Lifestyle Campaign.

“As Executive Director for the Chamber and Administrative Assistant for Community Development and Tourism, I feel our local collaboration to develop this campaign focused on ‘managing self’ will not only help all of us through the Covid-19 pandemic, but we hope it creates a culture that inspires those living in Garnett and

Anderson County to manage their overall health long after the virus is no longer forefront in our everyday lives,” said GACC Director Kris Hix.

Included in the grant funded campaign is a plan to work with businesses and persons in the fields of physical health, mental health and nutrition to create some media resources and social media video clips, print media including some yard signs showing encouragement to others. Hix said the effort sought to address the fact that that Covid-19 has been difficult, not only physically to those who have contracted the virus, but everyone has dealt with the stress, isolation, limitations, the disappointment due to cancellations of activities and other issues. Mental wellness, keeping relationships, whether personal, spiritual or professional in good perspective, exercise and eating good food all play a part in the Healthy

The priestly blessing

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

In Numbers 6:24-27 the LORD delivers the priestly blessing to Moses. The three-fold, divinely inspired blessing was pronounced by the priest with uplifted hands. It moves from a generational blessing to an invocation of God's favor and presence and finally to climatic mention of the peace that comes only with God's gracious presence. The pronouncement of the blessing placed God's covenant name LORD (Yahweh) on the people. The blessing reads as follows:

*The LORD bless you and keep you;
the LORD make his face to shine upon you and be gracious to you;
the Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace.*

So shall they put my name upon the people of Israel, and I will bless them.

Most of the time we treat this blessing as something that is outdated. However the personal pronoun "you" is mentioned six times in the text which makes it very personal to each of us. The priest did not present this as a prayer but as a way to seek God's favor upon the people. The people were aware of what would happen if God turned his face away from them. In Deuteronomy 31:17-18 God warns them when he speaks through Moses. "On that day, (the day the people forsake him) I (God) will become angry with them and forsake them, and they will be destroyed. Many disasters and difficulties will come upon them, and on that day they will ask, 'Have not these disasters come upon us because our God is not with us?' And I (God) will certainly hide my face on that day because of all their wickedness in turning to other gods."

Do you and I seek the face of God? If we do not actively seek him then the implication God must draw from that is we are not trying to seek his blessings. When the priest asks that God make his face to shine upon you we see a vivid figure of God looking favorably upon his worshippers implying that the closer we are to the face of God, the greater the blessing. When the blessing is professed to the congregation they are brought before the face of God. Can we afford not to ask God to bless our congregation and miss God's blessing, presence and peace?

HOLLOWAY

MAY 14, 1928 - JANUARY 12, 2021

William (Bill) Holloway, 92, passed away Tuesday, January 12, 2021, at Guest Home Estates, in Garnett, Kansas. He was born May 14, 1928 in Washington, Kansas, the son of Milton and Elta (McCulley) Holloway.

Holloway

He married Betty Garrison and had two daughters, Denise and Gail. During those years, he dairied, farmed, had limousin cattle, and later worked as a surge dairy repairman. When family came to town to visit, they always came out to the farm. It holds many special memories for family. He and Betty divorced and he moved to Louisiana where he started a new chapter of his life. He was always an adventurer and a bit of a rebel. As a child he had his own trap line taking his furs on a bus to the city to sell then joining the navy at an early age to hopping freights, breaking horses, hiking in Colorado with nephews and hunting and fishing with nephews, fishing in Cancun and Canada, camping in the desert, gardening, growing muscadine and making wine and his fabulous walking sticks.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Elta and Milton Holloway, daughter, Gail Holloway, sisters, Elta Mae Holloway and Annabel Meyers and brother, Milt Holloway.

He leaves behind his oldest daughter, Denise Smith and her husband Paul, sister, Ruth Colburn and husband Kenny, two brothers, Steve Holloway and wife Adelina, brother, David Holloway and wife Debra, and many dear and loving nieces and nephews.

Thank you to Good Shepherd Hospice for their care and a special thank you to the Guest Home staff for their loving care, they had become friends and family.

Cremation is planned and no services are set at this time.

You may send your condolences to the family at www.feuerbornfuneral.com

BOLTON

JUNE 22, 1989 - JANUARY 8, 2021

Samuel Bolton, age 31, of Lawrence, Kansas, passed away on Friday, January 8, 2021.

Bolton

Sam was born June 22, 1989 in Wichita, Kansas, but grew up in St. Libory, Nebraska. He was raised on his family's farm, where he loved spending time with his menagerie of animals, including dogs, cats, ducks, and cows. He had a lot of interests, but particularly enjoyed fixing things. He had a very mechanical mind and was always curious about the process on why things were the way they were. Those interests translated into fixing cars, bikes, and a deep curiosity about human anatomy. He had an abundance of childhood friends that he would romp around with on their four-wheelers - friendships that carried into adulthood and that he deeply cherished. He was also loved by his extended family, and he adored spending time with his cousins and grandparents. He was a gentle and complicated soul, but at his core, he was loyal and committed to those he loved.

In high school at Grand Island Central Catholic, Sam succeeded in football, basketball, and track. He competed at annual State competitions for the triple jump and as a center on the basketball team. He was a fierce competitor, but he mostly enjoyed being a part of a team. When it came time to go to college, Sam was deciding whether to continue to play football or pivot into a new area of interest. He was recruited heavily by some of the top schools in the country, including Yale, Northwestern, and Stanford, among others for his achievements on the football field and in the classroom. Ultimately, he decided to attend the University of Kansas as a third generation Jayhawk to study chemistry. He graduated with academic honors and as a member Phi Beta Kappa, the top national honor society.

Like many KU students, Sam loved attending football and basketball games. He was a mastermind in the sciences and spent a lot of his time serving as a teaching assistant in the chemistry department. Sam's sister, Hannah, attended KU in the class below him, and they spent most of their college days together, just like in childhood. They loved studying together and spending time with their friends at Clinton Lake. Sam helped many of Hannah's friends with a plethora of car issues and leaky faucets - that mechanical mindset gave him a leg up with any and all handyman duties (whether he wanted to or not). He thrived when helping others, and he never complained. He would do anything for his sister, and that sentiment was shared throughout their life together.

Sam is survived by his parents, Mark Bolton and Kellee (Feuerborn) Bolton, and his sister, Hannah Bolton.

He was preceded in death by his grandparents, Myron and Mary Feuerborn; grandparents, Victor and Natalie Bolton; and his lifetime best friend, AJ Sabin.

Cremation has taken place and no services are planned at this time. A private family celebration will take place at a later date. In lieu of flowers, the family is requesting donations be made to the Lawrence Humane Society Crisis Pet Retention program to keep pets with their families during financial or circumstantial hardship. Donations may be left with Feuerborn Family Funeral Service, 219 S. Oak St., Garnett, Kansas 66032 or made directly to the Lawrence Humane Society via an online donation: <https://lawrencehumane.org/donate/>

This is where she met and fell in love with her soul mate. Violet was united in marriage to Claron Eugene (Gene) Brownrigg October 18th 1959. Violet and Gene moved to Welda, Kansas shortly afterwards to begin their life together.

She had many talents, including decorating cakes, making pies, and she loved watching sports, which included the KC Chiefs, K-State Wildcats, and the Garnett Bulldogs.

But her greatest joy was books and reading. She was

“Run, Hide, Fight” and the market for conservatism

Last week the upstart conservative news service The Daily Wire released its first-ever full-length motion picture, following a plan to become a player in the usually liberal-dominated world of Hollywood movie entertainment.

It's a bold idea and one that confronts a problem conservatives have decried for decades – that culturally influential creative content in the film, music and entertainment world is ruled by overlords of liberalism bent on pursuing a generally anti-Christian and always Leftist agenda of social engineering. It's become one of the givens of the political debate in the U.S. – that by far the lion's share of the entertainment content that's produced, or the television, movie and music stars themselves who are churned out by this massive “woke” machine, push themes pursuant to the Left's political agenda.

So the only antidote is for traditional conservatism to contribute its own consumable content within that existing entertainment culture in hopes of gaining influence. But what we're seeing is far more than that – what's notable about The Daily Wire's production is that it's particularly indicative of the cleaving of American culture between Left and Right, and that more and more politics, is defining markets for goods and services.

Across multiple spectrums this political and ideological division in the country is becoming more apparent. It's defining some very pragmatic selections that affect not just who we vote for but also where we shop, what restaurants we go to, where we vacation, the friends we associate with both in person and online, and probably where we will work and pursue our professions in the future.

Much has been said and written about this division among our countrymen. It may not be good for national unity, but it is nonetheless happening.

“Run, Hide, Fight” isn't even an overtly partisan offering, at least to the non-Leftist eye. It's the story of a high school senior (Isabel May) who tries to thwart a foursome of school shooters at her small Midwest town's high school. What makes the “Die Hard-esque” theme conservative isn't what it says, but instead what it doesn't say. There are no forced themes of homosexuality among the characters, no pressing of racial motives, no assigned victim identity groupings except for the presence of past bullying and its possible outcomes as recalled by some of the villains. While conservatives will view it as straightforward entertainment, the Left views such omissions as blatant road signs for systemic homophobia, racism and gender reliance.

Instead the film focuses on subplots of what goes right and what goes wrong with the school staff and law enforcement's handling of every parent's nightmare – all of it lending toward the young woman's bridging of her own fears and her sense of duty to act in order to help save the lives of her fellow students.

The movie is aimed at conservatives, or at least non-Leftists. With the crescendo of American political division, conservatives are segmenting themselves into their own very definable market for not just entertainment but also travel, dining, information consumption and more.

The mass exodus of account holders from Facebook and Twitter in recent weeks after the Big Tech blackout of President Trump and other conservative account holders may be the Great Flood of support evidence. Conservatives long ago began to list “Red State Vacations” among travel options to encourage leisure travel and discretionary spending in other than liberal-dominated strongholds. Every time Leftists at the University of Kansas attack the local Christian-owned Chick-fil-A in Lawrence, its multi-lane drive-thru becomes a 15 minute wait.

America's divisions may not be so geographically as in the last Civil War, but as the political climate continues to heat up they are and will be no less distinct. ###

The 14-day increase in coronavirus has been in the 20-30 percent range in Anderson County for the past couple of weeks. Since the voters fired the commissioner who was also an anti-masker, maybe it's time to reconsider a mask policy for the county. Thank you.

One nice thing about the 2020 election is that Joe Biden's son will no longer have to work for the Chinese and the Ukrainians. Joe can give him a job in the American bureaucracy and make an honest guy out of him. Thank you.

After everything that went on how can people still believe Trump was innocent? Are you really that blind? Four people died. Please take off your blinders or share what you know about him so the rest of us will know.

Why isn't anybody calling for Kamala Harris' impeachment once she takes office? Why? For raising money to get looters and rioters out of jail so they could get right back out on the street to riot and loot. Isn't this actual insurrection? If you listen to Trump's speech in its entirety you know that not once did he say 'go breach the capitol' or harm anyone in Congress.

I am a Republican. I voted for Trump but I am totally embarrassed that I did after his behavior. I don't care what you are, Republican, Democrat, black, white, his behavior was unacceptable as a president.

I want to address three idiots in your Phone Forum. One, Biden will be president for four years at least, not Harris. You're just full of crap like most Republicans. There was no cheating, none. Fifty cases all dismissed. Crying Chuck? Again, we won. You are a threat, you sound like a communist. It was horrible what they did at the capitol and you act like it was nothing. You're an enabler and you're a threat to this company like them hillbillies were a threat. Poor snowflakes.

I was reading where the post office is blaming our magazines and catalogs for having our utility bills in them. I went up and asked them about that since I didn't get any magazines or catalogs for the last two weeks and they pulled the same BS with me then. I had a package that was 21 days late and that wasn't stuck in a magazine. Funny, today I got my utility. The post office is getting to be very incompetent. Blame everybody but themselves. Getting tiresome. Thank you.

If you people want to go to war with someone, you need to go to Wuhan China and get revenge on them. They're responsible for this freaking nightmare.

To heal, Biden should take page from Abe's playbook

When former Vice President Joe Biden is sworn in Wednesday as the 46th president of the United States, he would be wise to quote the words of President Abraham Lincoln's inaugural addresses of 1861 and 1865.

America stood on the brink of the Civil War when Lincoln became president. Now — after a bitterly contested election — our nation appears more divided now than at any time since that terrible 19th-century conflict, just a week after rioters stormed the U.S. Capitol in an attack that left five people dead.

Biden may want to use his inaugural address to take a swipe at President Trump and Republicans, as when he recently compared two Republican senators to Nazis. But Biden should take a cue from Lincoln's example.

“We are not enemies, but friends,” Lincoln said as he began his inaugural address, just weeks before the bloodiest conflict in American history began when Southern states seceded from Union. “We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection.”

Lincoln never forgot one thing: this is one nation. We're in it together, in one common enterprise. He insisted on that, through four terrible years of the Civil War. He maintained that rebelling states were still part of the United States, although they were “out of their proper practical relation with the Union.”

Many people called Lincoln foolish and incompetent. But in the end, his belief in our nation's motto — the Latin phrase “e pluribus unum” (out of many, one) — kept the United States united as one nation.

JOHN CRIBB - AUTHOR "OLD ABE"

Lincoln knew that all Americans are brothers and sisters. “My dissatisfied fellow countrymen,” he called Southerners opposed to his policies. An understatement if ever there was one, but his sentiment of brotherhood never wavered.

Lincoln — considered by historians to be one of our greatest presidents — did his best to set an example on a personal level. He put political rivals in his Cabinet, as many presidents have done. Sometimes it was rocky going, but Lincoln's patience and good sense made it work.

William Henry Seward of New York, Lincoln's chief rival for the Republican presidential nomination, began his stint as Lincoln's secretary of state thinking he could be the power behind the throne.

Lincoln disabused Seward of that notion, and the two men soon developed an easygoing companionship, sharing a fondness for a good story or joke. At the end of the Civil War, Lincoln made time to be at Seward's bedside to offer comfort when Seward was badly injured in a carriage accident.

Edwin Stanton had called Lincoln a “long-armed ape” and treated him harshly before the war, when they were both lawyers. Lincoln knew Stanton was the right man to run the War Department and appointed him anyway.

The two men found admiration and affection for each other. Lincoln nicknamed his irascible, hardworking secretary of war “Mars” and once remarked: “If Stanton said I was a damned fool, then I must be one, for he is nearly always right.”

In the end, Stanton was at Lincoln's deathbed and sent his friend off with the words: “Now he belongs to the ages.”

Lincoln's second inaugural address, one of the greatest speeches in American history, offers wonderful guidance for 2021. It came in early 1865, as the Civil War wound down. By then, some people in the North wanted revenge. They wanted the South on its knees.

Lincoln stunned them by calling for the opposite: genuine healing and reconciliation. In words that still resonate, he asked his fellow Americans to act “with malice toward none, with charity for all” and “to bind up the nation's wounds.”

Biden should repeat those words when extending a hand of friendship and reconciliation toward supporters of President Trump.

There is something else Lincoln knew and

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Now that this avenue is foreclosed to him, he's less of a presence, even as the political world continues to be obsessed with him (in particular, the manner of his exit from office).

It's not exactly a slow news environment. Yet, without Trump's tweets stirring the pot at all times of the day, the nation's political debate feels a little less fevered.

Twitter is Exhibit A for Marshall McLuhan's axiom that the medium is the message. There is plenty of worthy news coverage and real-time commentary on Twitter. But that's not where the emotional center of gravity is, as one would expect of a platform built for instantaneous, unfiltered reactions.

It's this aspect of Twitter that perfectly matched the president's proclivities. He found a natural home in an environment that encourages, and often rewards, snap judgements, insults, soon-to-be-forgotten pronouncements, grotesque oversimplifications and the spread of false or dubious information.

Trump wasn't careful about what he said anywhere, but he reserved his most lurid and poisonous communications for Twitter. It was the place easiest for him to, for instance, absurdly accuse Morning Joe host Joe Scarborough of murder or insult the looks of his alleged paramour Stormy Daniels.

It was a symptom of his erratic, easily distracted, and thoughtless governing style that he used Twitter as a tool of his administration. He warned foreign leaders, fired officials and made pronouncements on legislation on Twitter, often leaving allies and his own government baffled by what was supposed the line between “just a tweet” and an official order by the president of the United States.

Twitter was an especially ready forum for airing conspiracy theories. Asked prior to the election about his giving credence to the lunatic idea that Navy SEAL Team 6 had been assassinated, Trump shrugged and said it was only a retweet. In the wake of his election defeat, his Twitter feed became a nonstop source of bad information dredged up from the worst corners of the internet.

If Trump was the foremost offender, Twitter hasn't done us any favors in this period of our

Twitter and Trump helped derange our politics

Donald Trump was the president of Twitter. What radio was to Franklin Delano Roosevelt and TV was to Ronald Reagan, communicating 280 characters at a time on a social media platform that is a watchword for hyperactive inanity was to President Trump.

It is symbolically appropriate that the effective end of his power after the siege of the U.S. Capitol has coincided with the suspension of his Twitter account.

He may well get impeached a second time, but for now, the punishment that really stings is Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey deciding after sitting down with his woke colleagues that Trump must pay the ultimate price for his post-election misinformation and agitation.

This judgment is as arbitrary as Dorsey's worst critics would expect, and it will be impossible for Twitter to enforce anything resembling a consistent line following its Trump suspension (the platform didn't seem particularly exercised by all of the voices valorizing last summer's riots as an “uprising”).

But there's no doubting Dorsey's power. He has rendered the president of the United States practically mute.

Trump remains in the Oval Office and, in theory, commands the biggest megaphone on the planet. He could still make statements, hold press conferences, sit down for interviews or meet with his cabinet. In his reduced and isolated state, though, none of these options are as appealing as letting his thumbs do his work for him, one outlandish tweet at a time.

This past week I was rummaging thru a box containing artifacts that I had found while metal detecting around an old log cabin site back in 2004.

I want to share a photo of one of those artifacts and the history of this little piece of early English heritage.

If you happen to be the owner of an old hand saw, you just might find one of these slightly embedded in the wooden handle. This one pictured is a Spear & Jackson Medallion from a Spear & Jackson hand saw handle.

You all know how I love to research and here are my findings I discovered on the history of the Spear & Jackson hand saw.

In 1760, Alexander Spear & John Love formed a company in Sheffield, England called Spear & Love. In 1814, John Spear the nephew of Alexander, took on an apprentice by the name of Sam Jackson, in 1830. The partnership Spear & Jackson was formed.

Spear & Jackson were very prolific saw makers which operated out of Sheffield, England from 1830 to 1920.

Today the company has the trading name of Neill Tools Ltd

We just completed the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) 102nd Convention, virtually. It went as well as it could have, there were a few things that were a little wonky. By the way, wonky is my new favorite pandemic word and really is a good descriptor of most of what has happened because of the pandemic. But I digress, the annual meeting and convention was different, but it did bring a certain amount of normalcy in a time that is anything but normal.

It was good to hear debate on issues surfaced by our members from across the United States. I find these debates fascinating. I know, I am weird that way but often I learn about issues facing different regions I did not know about before. I also find out different regions can view the same issue very differently, and they may even be on opposite sides of the same issue. It can lead to a lot of debate and discussion, but that is what makes Farm Bureau so great. I have heard Farm Bureau described as a "big tent" organization, and I think that is a great way to describe our organization. It would be my wish that all of you could attend an AFBF convention so you could get a taste of all the types of ag, viewpoints and opinions we represent. Every commodity and method of production have a place at the table. All the policy in our book comes from grassroots members in counties in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Every piece of policy we have at the state or national level started in a county board meeting somewhere, and that is something to be proud of.

That is why I say listening to the debate and discussion from the business meeting made things seem just a little more normal. I must say my seat was more comfortable, the coffee was much better and cheaper but watching it all, by myself was not right and is something I hope we never do again. However, I could imagine myself back in that crowded convention room listening to the meeting, and that's a good thing.

We are an organization that thrives on relationships, and I miss the conversations we did not have at our usual meetings. We have a lot of catching up to do when this is all over and we return to normal.

Virtually is not how we like or prefer to get our work done, but as all of us in agriculture know, the work must be done. I am proud of the way that we adapted and overcame the challenges this pandemic threw our way; I think we made the best out of a bad situation, and I applaud all who made it happen. It was not easy or natural, but we pulled it off. Until we beat this virus, and I know we will, we will have to embrace the new virtual normal even if it is a bit wonky.

Distributions continued last week with some 88,000 Kansan's being vaccinated and about 202,000 doses distributed according to the Kansas Department of Health and Environment. Kansas has been criticized for its slow pace of vaccine distribution, but hesitance about the vaccine has been reported all over the country.

Anderson County had 71 active Covid cases the first week of January, with the number falling to 29 late last week.

vaccine was the fastest, most expensive research and roll-out of a major vaccine in U.S. history. The vaccines were not extensively tested on pregnant women, but the Centers for Disease Control says it is unlikely to pose a specific risk. The companies do, however, have liability protections under U.S. law.

In California, where the vaccine became available in late December, as many as 40 percent of the frontline personnel at some hospitals and health departments refused to take the shot. The general criticism is that they're not sure the speed of the vaccine's development gave enough time for proven trials - afterall, President Trump's effort to produce it was coined "Operation Warp Speed."

Lady Bulldogs eek out victory

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

CARBONDALE - An early lead vanished quickly en route to the Anderson County Lady Bulldogs trailing at halftime on the road last Friday against Santa Fe Trail before pulling out a thrilling 39-38 win. The Bulldogs led 19-13 after the first period but a second quarter drought that saw AC

Anderson County pulled even going into the fourth, thanks to a 9-5 advantage in the third quarter, to set up the thrilling finish. It took a Cali Foltz free throw with just 1.7 seconds left on the clock to seal the win. Foltz finished the game

Bulldog comeback falls short

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

CARBONDALE - A big early deficit was too much to overcome for the Anderson County Bulldogs boy's team on Friday night as Santa Fe Trail held on for a 62-54 win. Santa Fe Trail jumped all over the Bulldogs early, racing out to an early 20-9 advantage after the first quarter and stretched their lead to 37-20 at

ACHS continued to play well outscoring SFT 13-6 over the first 4-plus minutes of the fourth to cut the lead to 55-51. SFT would come up huge down the stretch to hold

Lady Lancers dealt lopsided defeat

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

CHETOPA - It was a struggle all evening for the Crest Lady Lancers last Friday as they were downed easily, 51-14. Crest scored just 4 points in the first and 2 in the second, causing them to look a 25-6 halftime deficit square in the face.

The third quarter was the dagger as Crest was held scoreless, Chetopa tacked on 17 points to extend their lead to 42-6 heading into the final period. Over the final 8 minutes, Crest did more than double their output of the first three quarters combined by scoring 8 points while Chetopa added

9 of their own to put the game away. Box Score Crest 4 2 0 8 - 14 Chetopa 11 14 17 9 - 51 Individual Scoring Crest - Beckmon 5, Hermreck 3, Hammond 6 Chetopa - Conrad 38, Schertz 4, Moore 6, Pierce 2

The importance of high school sports

by Grace Chen (Public School Review.com)

Athletics have been a mainstay of the high school scene for decades. Today, the field has merely expanded, encompassing an even greater variety of competitive options for male and female students alike. While many students get involved in high school athletics for sheer love of the game, there are significant benefits from these extracurricular activities as well. We have 10 ways high school sports benefit students - some of which students and parents may not even realize. Community Representation While club sports have become a popular pastime for both students and college recruiters, there is still a lot to be said for playing for your high school team. According to Unigo, students who participate in high school sports learn the benefit of representing their community on the field or court. These athletes learn the fun of team rivalries and revel in the praise of a job well done for their school. This feeling of community and the honor of representing the home team may run over into college athletics if the student advances in his sport as well. Fitness The fitness level of athletes in high school sports programs cannot be underestimated. According to a report from the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS), a 2006 study on female athletes found that when female students are given more opportunity to participate in athletics in high school, their weight and body mass improve. A 2001 survey found that students agreed they would not spend as much time in sedentary activities like watching television and playing video games if they had other options after school. Studies also suggest that student athletes are less likely to participate in unhealthy or risky behavior when they are playing sports in high school. The same report by the NFHS cited a 2002 study by the Department of Education that found students who spent no time in extracurricular activities in high school were 49 percent more likely to use drugs and 37 percent more apt to become teen parents. Just four hours in an extracurricular activity like sports each week dramatically improved those numbers. Improved Academics A survey conducted by the Minnesota State High School League in 2007 and reported by the NFHS found that the average GPA of a high school athlete was 2.84, while a student who was not involved in athletics had an average GPA of 2.68.

Vikings lose first game after long layoff

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

COUNCIL GROVE - After not playing in nearly a month, the Central Heights Vikings traveled to Council Grove and dropped their contest on Friday night 70-53. Central Heights battled tough early, trailing 15-14 after the first quarter and 33-28 at halftime. The wheels sort of fell off in the third quarter though as the host team, Council Grove, erupted offensively for 25 points in the quarter to blow open the contest and take a commanding 59-41 advantage heading into the fourth. Central Heights held a slim 12-11 advantage in the fourth but it was much too little and much too late to make a serious run. Crawford led the Vikings with 20 points, Burson chipped in with 15 points on the night. Box Score Central Heights 14 14 13 12 - 53 Council Grove 15 19 25 11 - 70 Individual Scoring Central Heights - Crawford 20, Rowan 3, Cannady 5, Peel 3, Bones 4, Schultze 3, Burson 15 Council Grove - Hula 16, Bieling 16, Buchman 3, Mansaray 2, Mills 7, Marshall 20 never forgot, something stronger than partisan divides. Biden and all presidents would do well to keep it in mind. In his Gettysburg Address, Lincoln spoke of "a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." Those ideas come straight from the Declaration of Independence, Lincoln's favorite founding document. Lincoln knew that our founding principles, more than anything else, make us one nation. They are the glue that holds us together. We sometimes fall short of those ideals, and we don't always agree about how to reach them. But they, more than anything else, unite us. From first to end, Lincoln sounded the call for unity. He closed his first inaugural address this way: "The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave, to every living heart and hearthstone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature." Tomorrow, Joe Biden will become our president at a time when it feels like we are a divided people. But as Lincoln knew, the founding principles of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution still resonate in the chorus of our Union. The spirit of "malice toward none" informs the better angels of our nature. Those principles and that spirit can make us one people, here for each other, Americans all. John Cribb is the author of the historical novel "Old Abe," published by Republic Book Publishers. Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

Lady Bulldogs roll to easy win

BY KEVIN GAINES THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - It was all Anderson County on Tuesday night as the Lady Bulldogs cruised past Prairie View 70-23. As lopsided as the final score was, it doesn't even paint a picture of the true domination the Bulldogs achieved. Midway through the first quarter, AC led 23-0. They would stretch their advantage out to 32-3 after the first quarter of play. The pace would slow slightly over the next two quarters but AC still added to their lead by scoring 16 in the second and 20 in the third while holding Prairie View to 6 and 9 points respectively in the 2nd and 3 quarters to make the score 66-18 heading into the fourth period. Neither team would do much in the final frame, PV outscored AC 5-2 to close out the night. Cali Foltz and Schmit led the way for Anderson County with 16 points. Rayna Jasper added 14 points on the night. Box Score PV 3 6 9 5 - 23 ACHS 32 16 20 2 - 70

Free program available for "Keys to Embracing Aging"

What better way to ring in the New Year than to learn how to physically and mentally embrace aging with open arms! Frontier Extension District, Marais des Cygnes Extension District and Coffey County Extension are collaborating on a program called Keys to Embracing Aging, which is a free twelve-part series designed to teach individuals health and safety behaviors that contribute to quality of life, overall wellbeing, and longevity.

Based on knowledge gained through centenarian and longevity studies, the program introduces and reinforces twelve healthy lifestyle behaviors, ranging from healthful eating, and physical, social and mental activity to personal safety, stress, and financial management. Participants will engage in challenges throughout the program to assist with developing long-term behavior change.

Beginning on February 3, 2021, the twelve individual sessions will begin virtually through Zoom. The sessions will be from 1:30 - 2:30 pm, every other Wednesday, February 3 - July 7. This will be a free program offered to any individuals that are 60 years or older and will be limited to thirty participants. To register, you can visit <http://bit.do/embracingaging> or contact Chelsea Richmond at 785-448-6826. This program is provided in coordination with the East Central Kansas Area Agency on Aging and made possible through a grant with the Kansas Department for Aging and Disability Services.

Re-Opening of the Hand Me Up Program

Over the last several months, the Anderson County Interagency Council has been working together to re-open the Hand Me Up program. The Hand Me Up program is designed to serve families in Anderson County who are pregnant or who have children.

By participating in the program, families can earn reward bucks by keeping appointments for eye exams, physicals, and prenatal appointments and by utilizing pharmacy services, getting immunizations, and participating in educational classes.

In return, participants redeem their reward bucks by purchasing items for their children who are between birth and five years of age from a community store. Items available to purchase include clothing, diapers, wipes, toys, hygiene products, etc.

The program is open to any individual or family who lives in Anderson County and wants to utilize community resources to help meet the needs of their children and family.

The Hand Me Up program is located at the First United Methodist Church in Garnett.

Due to concerns with regard to COVID, the store is currently open on Monday evenings by appointment.

Families or individuals interested in the program or who want to schedule an appointment to shop the Hand Me Up store can contact the Frontier District's office in Garnett at 785.448.6826.

Additionally, the Anderson County Interagency Council has identified several items that would be helpful to the families. These items include: new socks and undergarments between birth and size six, digital thermometers, pacifiers, sippy cups, bottles, diapers in all sizes, baby wipes, baby wash, shampoo, and lotion, and children's toothbrushes.

If an individual or organization would like to make a donation or make a monetary donation to the Hand Me Up program, they can contact the Frontier District Office in Garnett at 785.448.6826 to arrange a time to drop off donations.

Additional questions about the Hand Me Up program can be directed to Chelsea Richmond at crichmon@ksu.edu or Rebecca McFarland at rmfarla@ksu.edu.

Colony Christian Church - "Building Community Connections"

Larry Wittmer gave the Communion Meditation over understanding the prophecies of the Bible. Prophecies about Jesus abound in the Old Testament, but the prophets didn't fully understand what they were writing about. Many were confusing to them, such as: The Messiah would be a man born of a woman but also eternal, He would be exalted but also the most scarred man, and He would be a suffering servant and a mighty king that sits on the throne of David. Today the prophecies make sense. We may have times where, like the prophets, we don't understand what scripture means, but in God's perfect timing, he will reveal what he wants us to know. Until then, our job is to trust and all will turn out as God intends.

Pastor Chase Riebel gave the sermon on Building Community Connections. How often, in a crowded elevator, do you make sure not to touch anyone, speak to anyone, or make eye contact? In many respects, that is our world today, impersonal and isolated. Even in our family, at work, or at church, we may not have significant relationships. 1 Thessalonians identifies 3 key components to establishing and maintaining community. 1. Admit our need for others, 2. Cultivate deep relationships. 3. Commit to authenticity. The need for others is God given and deeply rooted in our lives. Recognizing our need for others is easiest when our car is broken down, when we're broke and can't pay the bills, or when our marriage is broken. Let's build our relationships before they're broken down. We need to care for others, share our lives with them, and love them. We must also be authentic with them. To do this, we must have deep conversations and allow ourselves to be vulnerable. Hear this and all of our sermons on our Facebook page, by using your favorite podcast app, or on our website at <http://www.colonychristianchurch.org>. ## Webinar to learn to feed birds in the winter

The Frontier Extension District is putting together a series of Horticulture webinars starting on Thursday February 4th 2021, starting at 7pm. The first meeting will cover feeding birds through the winter. Severe winter weather is not only hard on people, but can be a life and death struggle for birds. Birds, like humans, require water, shelter and food. People often think of food as the resource most lacking during cold weather. So what do we feed them? There are many different bird food mixes available, mostly because various species prefer different grains. However, there is one seed that has more universal appeal than any other: black oil sunflower. If you are new to the bird-feeding game, make sure there is a high percentage of this seed in your mix.

In this webinar you will learn about feeding birds in the winter, how many feeders you should have out, what type of feeders to use to draw a certain species, or even issues you may have while feeding birds. Make sure to sign up for the horticulture webinar series starting on February 4th as our speaker Chuck Otte, Geary County Extension Agent, who is an avid bird watcher and spent a lot of time learning how to draw different birds to his back yard. # 'Premier All-Breed Horse Exposition' is equifest of Kansas at Salina

By Frank J. Buchman

Just about everything anybody would want to know about horses is set for Salina.

It's the 24th annual Equifest of Kansas, according to Justine Staten, executive director of the Kansas Horse Council (KHC).

The "Kansas' Premier All-Breed Horse Fair & Exposition" will be at Tony's Pizza Events Center and Saline County Expo Center March 5-6-7.

"No stretch of the imagination there'll be educational and fun activities for everybody with the slightest affection for horses," Staten assured. "Equifest serves as the main fundraiser for the KHC serving all levels and interests of horse enthusiasts."

Featured clinicians are Chris Cox, Robin Groves, and Jackie Jatzlau. "We are so excited to have such a top lineup of clinicians," Staten pointed out.

However, probably anticipated most of all is the wall-to-wall shopping for anything to do with horses and the Western way of life. Silent auction of donated artwork, tack and horse-related specialties will be ongoing as an additional KHC fundraising.

Also on the tightly packed three-day schedule will be the second annual Legendary Kansas Horsemen's Panel along with cowboy poetry and music. Tom and Pat Seay representing Best of America by Horseback will present one of several special workshops.

The Nicodemus Buffalo Soldiers Association formed in 1995, by Commander Barrie Tomkins, plans to present re-enactments.

"Everybody anticipates the Breed Challenge," Staten said. "There'll be horses of all sizes and colors with an educational and fun review of their breed history."

Children are the future of everything horses and with that in mind the Kid's Corral is an annual attraction.

Competitions seem to highlight interests of horse enthusiasts so a number of special events are being planned. Included are state 4-H horse judging, draft teams, light horse and pony driving, ranch rodeo, horseshoeing contests, and barrel racing.

The Grand Finale of Music And Horses is an anticipated Equifest climax on Sunday.

"As a leading clinician, Chris Cox has lifetime learning from the greatest teacher of all, the horse," Staten said. Influenced by both English and Western traditions, Cox has implemented a proven style and technique applicable to all disciplines.

"With his practical, straightforward approach, Chris teaches horse people how to achieve results," Staten added.

Having successfully competed in riding and driving disciplines, Robin Groves is a two-time national champion in combined driving. She was a member of combined driving teams competing at world championships in Poland and Italy.

"Both Robin and husband Wilson compete at the advanced level in combined driving," Staten said. "They are knowledgeable in dressage, eventing, jumping, competitive trail, endurance and pleasure show driving."

Jackie Jatzlau is a two-time National Finals Rodeo (NFR) qualifier winning nearly a half million dollars barrel racing. "With her husband Lane, their kids and many horses, they have a podcast called Married With Horses," Staten said. "It connects everyone with rodeo greats and highlights key equine nutrition and helpful product information."

Training her own horses, Jatzlau gained the nickname "Wild Child" for her NFR riding style rating first place several times. Jatzlau will share her expertise in a private clinic on Thursday, March 4th, before Equifest with participants invited back for a barrel bash on Sunday.

Complete schedule and details about the Equifest of Kansas can be found at www.equifestofks.com.

Study: Obesity contributed to negative health impacts during early part of pandemic

MANHATTAN, Kan. – A Kansas State University nutrition specialist says a newly published study of early health impacts related to the COVID-19 pandemic is further testimony to the benefits of maintaining a healthy weight.

Sandy Procter said an important message from the research – which included more than 7,700 people from around the world – is that people who were considered obese experienced more negative impacts during the early stages of the pandemic.

During the early stages, when lockdowns and stay-at-home orders were more common, "those who were obese were found to be more likely to have gained weight," Procter said. "And they were more likely to report increased stress during that time."

The research, conducted by a team of international scientists, took place in April and May, 2020 and was peer-reviewed early last summer. The findings, and related articles, are published in the December issue of the journal, Obesity.

The study's data compared people who were considered normal weight, overweight or obese. One portion of a related study – also in the December issue of Obesity – concluded that obesity doubles the mortality rate in patients hospitalized with COVID-19.

"If you can recall back to the early lockdown period, I truly feel like we were all kind of suspended," Procter said. "Everything ground to a halt. Some of the initial health effects noted in COVID patients were more profound in at-risk groups that needed helpful support, especially persons with pre-existing conditions, including obesity."

For most, the lockdown period meant adjusting their daily routine, including when they sleep, go to work and, perhaps, exercise. Some did it better than others.

"There were 10% of the people in this study who found that their sleep quality improved," Procter said. "And those who found themselves without long commutes found they had more time to exercise. It was maybe a change in how they did it, but there was more time in their day for healthful activities."

Yet, she added, "some of those opportunities are not as available to everyone across the board."

"So the effect of the stress caused by the pandemic has become noticeable among different parts of the population."

The disruption in lifestyles did also provide another important reminder, according to Procter.

"If we're smart, we're going to keep a closer eye on our own self-care and realize that there may be many opportunities... to support our health," she said. "But when it comes down to it, it really has a lot to do with personal awareness of our health and the variety of factors that we can address."

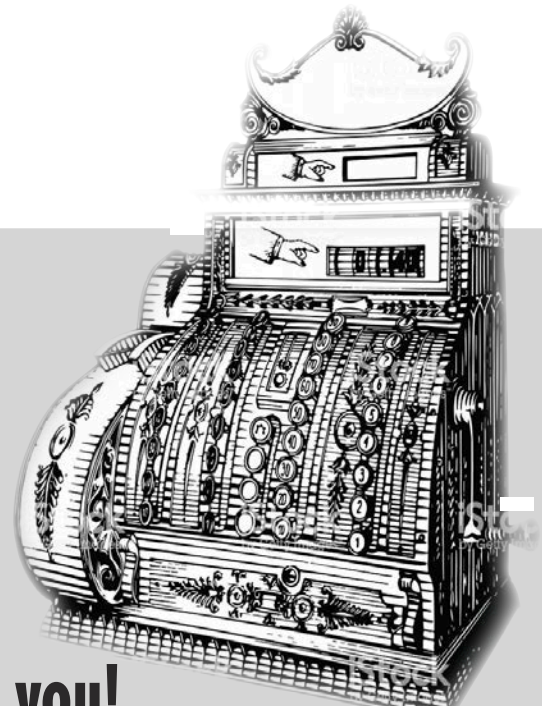

It seems to be a valid point because stress, as Procter points out, won't go away once the pandemic is in the rearview mirror. There will still be jobs to go to, school to attend, kids to take care of, and other responsibilities.

"My hope is that, ideally, the emphasis that communities are placing on having resources that support mental health and identifying situations where people are at risk – preventative health steps – will become more commonplace," Procter said, "and that there will be more resources and attention paid to those areas."

Tips for healthy living are available online from K-State Research and Extension.

Poison Ivy or Virginia Creeper?

MANHATTAN, Kan. – Most gardeners and outdoor enthusiasts have heard at least some version of the popular refrain to help them stay clear of poison ivy.

‘Leaves of three, let them be.’

The saying points out the defining feature of poison ivy; that is, three leaflets per leaf protruding from a vine and containing urushiol, an oil that causes a rash in most people.

During the growing season – typically spring and summer – poison ivy is easy to distinguish from the Virginia creeper, a vine with five leaflets. Virginia creeper does not contain urushiol and typically does not cause a rash.

“However, during the winter, distinguishing between the two vines can be more difficult because the leaves have dropped,” said Ward Upham, a horticulture expert at Kansas State University.

Poison ivy can still cause a negative reaction during the winter, so it’s important to be able to identify the vine without its’ three-leaflet clue.

“This is actually easy to identify once you know what to check,” Upham said. “Look at the aerial roots. On poison ivy, they are hair-like, but on the vine of the Virginia creeper they are more plump and about the size of a pencil lead.”

‘Leaves of three, let them be...’ Identifying poison ivy during the growing season is much easier than during the winter months.

Upham noted that urushiol can cause a rash 1 to 5 years after a plant has died. The amount of urushiol that covers the head of a pin can cause a rash in 500 people, he said.

“Poison ivy can grow as ground cover, a shrub or a vine,” he said. “Using a chainsaw on poison ivy in the winter can release sap which makes a rash more likely. This is worse on warm days where there is

Upham and his colleagues in K-State’s Department of Horticulture and Natural Resources produce a weekly Horticulture Newsletter with tips for maintaining home landscapes. The newsletter is available to view online or can be delivered by email each week.

Interested persons can also send their garden- and yard-related questions to Upham at wupham@ksu.edu, or contact your local K-State Research and Extension office.

Tips for keeping food safe during a power outage

MANHATTAN, Kan. — While much of Kansas and the Midwest have been spared so far this year from severe weather, many people well know that winter's freezing weather can descend rather quickly.

Kansas State University food scientist Karen Blakeslee said the break from cold weather is a chance for consumers to make sure they're ready to keep their food safe in the event of a power outage.

She said something that can be done now is to put an appliance thermometer in the refrigerator and freezer.

"Some appliances have built-in thermometers but if the power is out, you won't be able to read the temperature," Blakeslee said. "As long as the temperature inside the appliance stays below 40 degrees F, the food will be safe."

When a power outage occurs, consumers are best advised to keep the doors of the appliance closed as much as possible to keep cold air in.

"An unopened refrigerator will stay cold about four hours; a full freezer will hold temperature for about 48 hours," Blakeslee said. "If you have access to dry ice, add some to the freezer to keep food frozen longer. However, use caution when handling dry ice."

Storing food outside — such as in snow — can be risky and is not recommended, according to Blakeslee.

"This is due to fluctuating temperatures, physical damage due to curious pets or other animals, or contamination of the food from vehicle fumes, dust and grime," she said.

If you're not sure if food is safe, Blakeslee suggests following a familiar refrain: "When in doubt, throw it out!"

"If the appliance temperature goes above 40 F for a long period of time, some foods will be too warm and can invite the growth of bacteria that may be present," she said. "For example, if frozen raw meat thaws out, and is warm to the touch, it should not be saved."

Blakeslee pointed to a guide available online from the U.S. Food Safety and Inspection Service that outlines when to save and when to throw out potentially unsafe foods.

"While throwing out food due to an appliance failure or power outage is wasteful, it is a lot cheaper to do than paying for medical treatment due to foodborne illness," she said.

Blakeslee, who also is coordinator of K-State's Rapid Response Center for food science, publishes a monthly newsletter that addresses many food safety topics. This month's newsletter includes a link to emergency food supply tips from Ready.gov.

More information on food safety and health practices also is available through K-State Research and Extension's food safety website.

Breeding tips for fall calving cows

MANHATTAN, Kan. — While icy winter mornings can be slick for people to walk, they can also present a risk for bulls breeding fall-calving cows, said Beef Cattle Institute veterinarians Bob Larson and Brad White during a recent Cattle Chat podcast

"Cattle need to have solid ground to walk on in the wintertime, especially if they are on a natural service breeding plan," Larson said. Natural service refers to the bulls mounting the females for breeding as opposed to an artificial insemination breeding strategy.

He said a natural service plan is important not only for just the bulls, but also for the cows who are expressing estrus, or being in heat, and show that by riding on the backs of each other.

"Cattle need to be out on ground that isn't too muddy or rocky from the cycle of freezing and thawing," Larson said. "If the ground is really rough, there will be less interest in expressing estrus behavior and less interest by the bulls to be aggressive with multiple mountings."

White added that along with good ground to walk on, the cattle need to have adequate housing.

"If the cattle are in a confined and bedded area, it will allow producers to monitor for lameness issues during the winter breeding season," White said.

Bulls also need to be monitored for frostbite on the scrotum, according to White.

"On those really cold winter days where the bulls lay on the ground there is risk that the bulls could experience frostbite on the end of their scrotum, and that will have a negative effect on semen quality," he said.

Larson added: "It is important to put down some additional bedding that will provide insulation between the muddy and rocky ground and the cattle."

For those producers who follow an artificial insemination breeding program, the veterinarians reminded listeners to carefully thaw the semen chute-side and maintain it at a 95-degree temperature until it is put into the cow.

"Bull semen can be an expensive investment and so producers need to be careful that it isn't mishandled," Larson said. "It is important to make sure the semen doesn't refreeze between when it is first thawed and when the cow is inseminated with it."

Aside from the breeding logistics, the veterinarians also stressed the importance of good nutrition.

"For the fall breeding season, it is critically important to supplement cows out on dormant winter forage to make sure the nutritional needs are being met," Larson said.

Larson and White offered a checklist of strategies for successfully breeding fall calving cows:

- Maintain cows at a good body condition with a positive energy balance
- Make sure the semen is handled at the appropriate temperature for artificial insemination
- Allocate enough time for estrus detection
- Manage the housing environment
- Provide good footing for the cattle to walk on

by Jo Ann Derson

- "If you have a bunch of picture frames that don't match or ones that are nicked or have small cosmetic damages, just paint them. Choose a matching color for all, and you have a collection." — T.L. in Florida
- Kitchen tip: You can slice mushrooms in an egg slicer.
- If your sneakers are smelly, try this: Stick a sheet of fabric softener in each one. Let them set overnight, and most of them time, the smell will be gone by morning. Of course, you should rotate your tennis to help them "breathe," since wearing your shoes day after day can foster bacteria growth — meaning your sneakers will be really stinky.
- "To get sheets and towels to dry faster, try adding a tennis ball to the dryer. It bounces around inside while the cycle is going, and breaks up large items that tend to crumple into a ball." — C.L. in Illinois

MESMERIZING MATH!

The swami has discovered that if you multiply 99 by any number from 1 to 100, the product will always contain digits that total 18. Try it out: (99 x 9 = 891; 8 + 9 + 1 = 18), (99 x 4 = 396; 3 + 9 + 6 = 18).

LINK-UPS! Here's a list of 12 short words, divided into two columns. Turn them into six longer words by linking them together. To do this, draw a line from one word in the left column to one word in the right.
