When we'd have picked Perot

Election climate different than when locals chose
Perot for President in '92

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – If you believe national polls and online comment segments in conservative media like Fox News and The Daily Wire, Democrat President Joe Biden has galvanized Republicans across the country and in Kansas as a motivator seldom accomplished among the GOP in recent decades – a party that often seem to argue with each other as much as it argues with other political parties.

The election three decades ago in 1992 when Ross Perot ran for president was an example of the latter, and it brought a historic political event upon which Anderson County rode quickly – though almost unnoticed – to the top as one of the only counties in the country that would have made Perot president.

Democrat candidate Bill Clinton from traditionally conservative Arkansas was an able campaigner, but Republicans were most cranky about the broken promise from President George Bush, Sr., from his 1988 nomination acceptance speech – the iconic “Read my lips: No new taxes” pledge. Bush was barely in office a year when a looming recession, budget deficits and spending needs brought him to go back on the pledge and sign into law a “stealth budget” that left income tax rates alone but raised fees and levies. The move didn’t fool a growing swath of conservative GOP activists, or comedians like David Letterman and Dana Carvey, who relentlessly reminded the public of the faux pas. Enter Perot, a billionaire tech tycoon who’s quirky mannerisms and down-home logic resounded with conservatives who were tired of slick moderate Republicans that, like Bush, they saw as too squishy on their convictions. A June 1992 Gallup poll showed Perot leading a three-way presidential race over both Bush and Clinton, though Perot’s main appeal was among Republicans.

Traditional Republican moderates were beside themselves. Kansas Senator Bob Dole cautioned that Perot’s plans had a darker side, like the little-discussed points that Perot’s deficit-reduction approach included cuts to farm subsidies and Medicare benefits. He wanted to attack the federal budget deficit (a paltry $290 billion in 1992) with some SSI cuts and higher gasoline taxes. But popular stands like his vehemence against gun control and the outsourcing of U.S. jobs pumped the cult of personality that seemed to overshadow the negative facts of his platform

One of Perot’s strongest state organizations developed in Kansas, where the state’s mere six electoral votes and a tradition of voting for Republicans for president didn’t generate much attention from either Democrats or the GOP. Kansas Perot fans christened what became known as “the wave campaign” – supporters lining the highways to shake banners and placards at passing motorists. The head of the Kansas effort told Time Magazine they signed up 2,000 volunteers and operated three months on less than $50,000.

On election night Perot siphoned off 27 percent of the Kansas presidential vote and left Bush with 39 percent and Clinton with 34. Perot pulled a quarter of the vote in several of the state’s largest counties as well – 25 percent in Johnson County,

Beckman Motors moves forward as local Victory Auto member

Community mainstay business sells to KC area dealer franchise

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – A cornerstone business of the Garnett community got a new name and new owners last week, but its main face will still be around for a few years to help with the transition.

The deal that’s been in the works for several months came to fruition officially on October 18, when Victory Auto Group KC purchased Beckman Motors, said Kallan LaForge, who heads up a group of owners who within 8 years have established an 11-store footprint in the Kansas City region.

Under the deal, Beckman will remain with the operation for three years on a three-day-a-week basis.

“Most guys just take the money and run,” LaForge said. “We’re lucky to have Ray sticking around with us.”

“I’ll be ‘PTR’ Beckman said. “Part-time Ray.”

Over the decades – Merle Beckman started working for Pointer Motors, at the time housed in the buildings that are now the Garnett City Hall complex – in 1977, eventually purchasing the business and buying Anderson Motor Company in 1988. Ray went to work with his dad for Pointer in 1978 when he graduated high school and just before the 1979 construction of the dealership’s present U.S. Highway 59 location. He and brother Cleve partnered with Merle in the business in later years before Ray bought them both out in 2017. He said running the business without his dad brought new risks – and rewards.

“That was my biggest fear,” Beckman said. “After dad retired my biggest fear was that Cleve and I would mess it up and fail when dad wasn’t there any more. But in ‘02 and ‘03 we had our two best years.” The dealership managed 1,200 retail sales per year those two years, averaging 100 a month, he said.

“We have the most loyal customer base of any dealership in four states,” Beckman said.

Veterans event set Friday

BY CHELSEY D’ALBINI THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT – After a cancellation in 2020 due to Covid concerns and lingering fears that dropped the audience at last year’s event, Friday November 11 will see the full-on return of a nearly quarter century tradition in Anderson County.

The annual Veteran’s Day Program sponsored by the Jeffery S. Mersman Memorial VFW Post #6397 and Fuller-Thompson American Legion Post #48 will be held in the ACHS Auditorium with guest speaker Veteran Bruce Fishbach, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Mr. Fishbach served in the United States Army for a decade in the 101st Airborne Division and US Berlin Brigade, where he and his fellow soldiers witnessed the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989. Bruce is a former Department of Kansas, State VFW Commander in 2014-2015. He is also an active member at Isadore Hoehn VFW Post #7397, Lenexa, as well as many other organizations.

The Garnett event is presented with the assistance of Anderson County High School band and chorale students.

The annual veterans event pays homage to the service of military veterans on the occasion of the end of World War I, which formally ended on the “11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of 1918.” Armistice Day was renamed Veterans Day in 1954 at the urging of U.S. veterans organizations.

He volunteers as a Silver Haired Legislator in Topeka, participates in Color Guard for parades in Kincaid, Colony, Lane, Richmond, and Garnett, cooks for nearly all the VFW meetings and VFW breakfast and has been active with Legion Bingo for many years. He currently serves in several local civic organizations, including Garnett Lions Club, The 40/8 Voiture 1610, The Vietnam Veterans Association, is Vice Commander of the Jeffery S. Acceptance of Soros’ contributions questions Kelly’s ‘middle of the road’ policy assertions

has claimed she’s moderate

BY DAVID HICKS THE SENTINEL

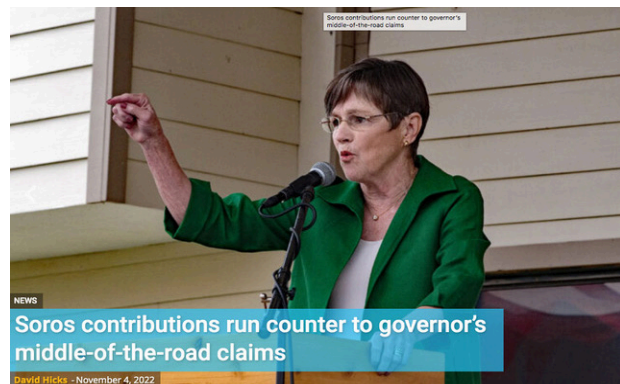

TOPEKA – Governor Laura Kelly’s acceptance of the maximum contribution from George Soros family members may have voters questioning her oft-repeated phrase this campaign season that she’s “in the middle of the road.”

Both Jonathan Soros, scion of the liberal activist billionaire, and Jonathan’s wife, Jennifer gave the Kelly Campaign $2,000, according to the latest campaign finance reports.

George Soros’ Open Society Foundation promotes progressive agendas worldwide, focusing on climate change, economic justice, equity, and judicial reform. In the U.S., the foundation has famously funded the campaigns of progressive district attorneys, many of whom have come under criticism this election season for what critics refer to as “soft on crime” prosecutions.

After President Donald Trump’s election in 2016, George Soros, eBay founder Pierre Omidyar and others bankrolled Arabella Advisors, a Washington, D.C.-based funding apparatus for Leftist causes, which established a number of non-profit organizations to eventual-

"I had a customer that moved to New York - he still bought three different times from me."

Beckmans maintained a reputation for financial support as a donor to local community efforts and was nominated numerous times for the Garnett Area Chamber of Commerce's Business of the Year, winning that honor at least once. The small town approach to business is one that sealed the match between Beckmans and Victory, LaForge said. Hailing from Caney - a town of 1,700 people in Southeast Kansas and partnered with a group of other owners all from similar small town backgrounds, LaForge joined Victory at its first location a year after it formed in 2015. He said Victory operates by "The Golden Rule."

"Our philosophy aligns with Ray's," LaForge said. "We treat people the way we want to be treated. He said he expects the company's Internet presence to be an advantage for the Garnett dealership - Ray said Victory's Internet presence was easily 10 times Beckman's old digital footprint."

LaForge said long range plans were eventually to make the Garnett's multi-franchise location a Ford-focused dealership, and to possibly construct a new GM location near Victory's Chrysler operation in Ottawa.

A handful of other rural counties followed suit - Jefferson, Morris, Rooks and Wabunsee counties also carried the Texas billionaire. Perot received no electoral votes, but his impact on the popular vote effectively started Bill Clinton's love-it-or-hate-it presidential legacy. He would run again in 1996 with an at first vigorous then sputtering Reform Party organization. He never sought the presidency again after that, but lived to see massive growth in U.S. stocks and the economy due to tech development and the Internet; Clinton's Monica Lewinsky scandal, two Middle East Wars and conflicts in Europe, an annual U.S. budget deficit of more than $2 trillion and a federal debt over $27 trillion. Perot passed away in 2019.

PARKS

MARCH 7, 1941 - OCTOBER 31, 2022

Clyde D. Parks, age 81, of Welda, Kansas, passed away on Monday, October 31, 2022, at Parkview Heights in Garnett, Kansas.

Parks

Clyde Dean Parks was born on March 7, 1941, in Garnett, Kansas. Clyde was the second of three children born to Ross Eldon and Pansy (Ellis) Parks. He grew up on a farm southeast of Westphalia, Kansas, graduating from Welda High School with the class of 1959. Clyde then attended school at Grand Island, Nebraska where he studied accounting and bowling. Following school, he worked as an accountant for Union LP Gas in Independence, Kansas. This proved to be more than a first job, it was also where he met his future wife, Janice. Following their engagement, Clyde took a position with Sinclair Oil, in Independence, within a few months Clyde was transferred to the corporate office in Chicago, where he worked as an efficiency expert. On January 12, 1964, Clyde was united in marriage to Janice Stroble in Independence, Kansas. After three years of doing well within the company and with the arrival of their first child, Richard, Clyde and Janice made the decision to return to Kansas to pursue a life on the farm where they could raise their family. In 1967, they rented the farm that would become home for 55 years. Life on the farm saw the birth of two additional children, Kim and Rusty. Over the years, cattle were a mainstay and the farm also saw buffalo, horses, llamas, hogs, in addition to many bird dogs. Clyde and Janice worked side by side in the fields while growing the size of their farm. In 1991, a farm partnership was created with Richard, and the farm increased in size as they continued to raise wheat, soybeans, corn and milo. The farm was integral to Clyde. Even as his health declined, he still wanted to be apprised of the farm operations. Clyde also sold Hoegemeyer seed for 31 years. He embodied the idea of being a good neighbor and loved his Welda community, doing countless unknown acts to help neighbors with everything from clearing snow, harvesting crops to helping with their cattle. Clyde loved bird and deer hunting with his family and countless friends. In his later years, the only thing that pulled Clyde away from the farm was attending his grandchildren's activities.

Clyde served twenty years on the USD 365 school board, serving many years as board president. Some of his other positions included serving on the Anderson County Co-Op Board for many years, Kansas Livestock Association and reestablishment of the annual county meetings, and on the Anderson County Farm Bureau board, serving as president for several years. He was especially proud of their launch of "Day on the Farm" for area 3rd grade students. The first several years for "Day on the Farm" was at Clyde and Janice's home.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Ross and Pansy Parks; and his brother, Max Parks.

Clyde is survived by his wife, Janice Parks, of the home; three children, Richard and Jody Parks of Welda, Kim Moreland and Marcus of Louisburg, Kansas, and Russ Parks of Olathe, Kansas; six grandchildren, Izzy, Avery, Evan, Nate, Jady and Rhett; sister, Shirley Benjamin of Welda; and numerous cousins.

Funeral services were November 4, 2022, at the Feuerborn Family Funeral Service Chapel in Garnett, Kansas. Burial followed in the Welda Cemetery, Welda, Kansas. Memorial contributions may be made to the Welda Community Building or to the Anderson County FFA Scholarship and left in care of the funeral home. Condolences may be sent to the family at www.feuerbornfuneral.com

Please ourselves or please God?

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

In Matthew 22:34-40 we read. "Hearing that Jesus had silenced the Sadducee, the Pharisees got together. One of them an expert in the law, tested him with this question. Teacher, which is the greatest commandment in the Law?"

Jesus replied: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments."

Fearing Jesus because of the threat he presented to their legalistic society. The Pharisees always felt compelled to compete with Jesus. There seemed to be no limit to the extent they would go in trying to find a flaw in Jesus. However when you are competing with perfection there is no way to win. Ultimately at the resurrection Jesus proved the Pharisees to be nothing more than a legalistic cult bent on using their rules to gain power and money at the expense of others. Thus began the downfall of the Pharisees as well as the Roman empire.

Interestingly the evil one, so present within the Pharisee sect still uses a similar approach today. He likes to place things in competition with Jesus. This has become the favorite tactic of the world system today. In order to trap people today the evil one has come up with a whole catalog of things people just believe they have to have. And cheap easy money is made available to purchase these treasures. The issue is these things take our eyes off Jesus and place them on the item because we know how happy these things will make us.

What I am saying is there is a fine line between pleasing ourselves and pleasing God. So how do we find the right direction? The Bible clearly states that if we sin one time we are not qualified for heaven. Jesus tells us he is the way, and the truth, and the life. We must decide for ourselves is Jesus telling the truth?

-David Bilderback, Ministry on the Holiness of God.

Once upon a time Molly was having fun playing in the snow all day long. Of course she wanted to make a snowman but she didn't know how to make one so she asked her best friend Alex if he could teach her how to build a snowman. Alex said that he was gonna help her make a snowman.

At first Molly didn't understand it. But soon enough she was able to build a snowman. Molly said it did take forever but practice makes perfect. Alex decided to play with Molly for the rest of the day until nighttime. So they had fun and played all day. Then after they went home and took a nap. And the next day was Christmas and Molly was opening presents. Alex was opening presents too.

And after Molly and Alex were done they both made hot chocolate and after that they both went outside and built a snowman. After that they threw snowballs at each other.

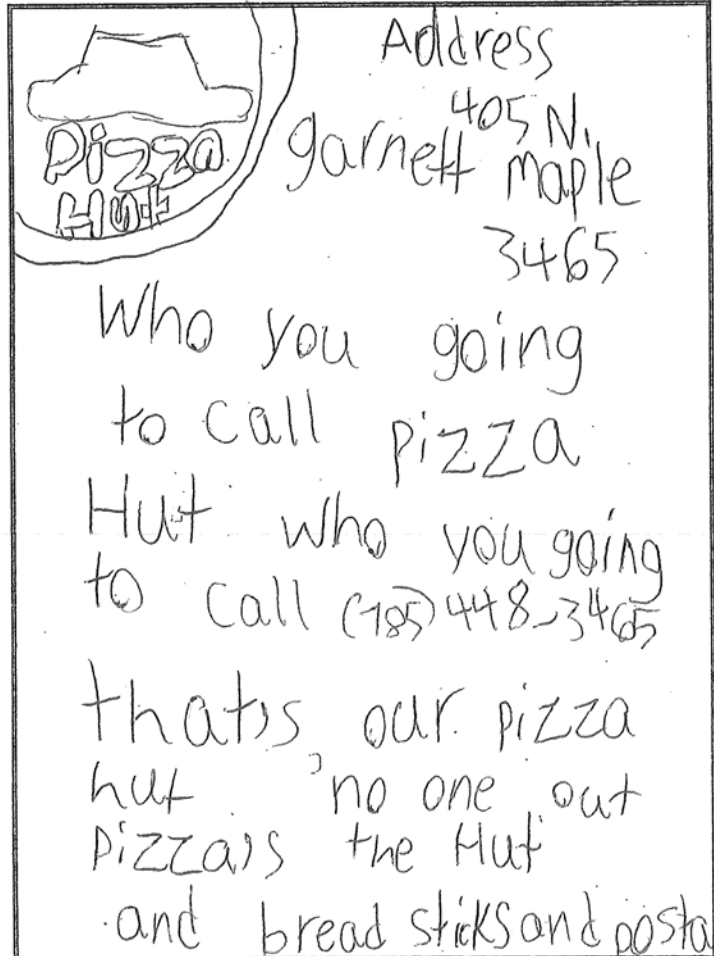

Then they went back inside to play games with their family.

They went back outside with their family to go sledding on the highest hill and they had the best day ever in their life. Then they went skiing. After that they went ice skating and then went home because it got dark and everyone went to bed. They had dreams about how fun their day was.

The next day Molly woke up and played some video games for a little bit then she went to Alex's house and they played with his toys for a long time.

Molly went home after playing with Alex and she made some pancakes, eggs and bacon. Her parents woke up and they were shocked that she made food because she had never cooked before in her life. Molly made them the same food and her food was the best food ever.

After Molly was done eating she just went back outside and make snow angels and make a Frosty snowman and made some snow ice cream. It had sugar and chocolate sauce on top but she had to it very quickly because it melts faster than regular ice cream!

Veterans Day: Five lessons to convey to children about war

BY MARCUS BROTHERTON FOX NEWS CONTRIBUTOR

Friends of mine are planning to take their children to Honolulu. They'll visit the Pearl Harbor National Memorial, the commemorative site of the attack on Dec. 7, 1941.

Since I've interviewed veterans and written about World War II, they asked me what they might teach their kids about the difficult topic of war. These are the top five lessons for the next generation that I passed on to them:

Be a peacemaker
Strive for peace with all your might. When conflicts arise, the first questions must be: Can you solve this dispute peacefully? Can you talk it out? Will sanctions and embargoes (economic restrictions placed upon a hostile country) work instead of armed conflict?

That's because the stakes of war are huge. Deadly huge. You must always strive for peace with everything you've got.

Guard against hostilities
Hostilities exist. President Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke those two powerful words within his legendary "Day of Infamy" speech to Congress, Dec. 8, 1941, one day after Pearl Harbor. America rallied to arm itself, safeguard its citizens, and take action against the hostilities that threatened.

FDR's words are as true today as 81 years ago. Hostilities exist. They just exist in different forms. The world isn't always a safe place. Regretfully, as children, you need to know that not everyone around the world loves you or your country.

Do your duty
You and your generation may need to fight. If a country or terrorist group rises up and attacks your country or another country or people group, then national (and sometimes international) defense is a must.

Think of it this way: Two kids are fighting on the playground, and you know it's best to stay out of it. But what if one child is bullied by a mean kid? You'd want to stop the bully, either by yourself or by calling a teacher to intervene.

History has shown that policies of isolationism and nonintervention (not getting involved in other people's battles), sometimes work on an international scale but at other times don't.

After the First World War, much of America adopted a live and let live stance. We'd had enough. We were determined not to get involved in a second international dispute that didn't seem to directly affect us. So when World War II broke out, we hung back at the edges at first.

Yet hindsight has shown that isolationism prolonged World War II, causing more death and destruction than it prevented. The World War II veterans I've interviewed said that when they reached Europe and the Pacific, respectively, people responded with a loud: "What took you so long?"

Remember that war is always horrible
Triumphant iconic images of victory can offer big learning moments. Two that come to mind are Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's ticker tape parade in New York City on Nov. 10, 1945, and the monument that depicts Marines raising the flag at Iwo Jima.

Other images of war, the mixed images, even the bloody and ghoulish, can provide big learning moments too. As you grow, you'll be able to see more of how truly horrible war is.

When young soldiers go off to war, it's not like they're football players rushing onto the field for the big game. War is not a pep rally. War is vicious hell. It's to be avoided whenever possible because it's always highly destructive.

(Parents, consider watching the "Band of Brothers" miniseries with your children when they're about 13 years old. The story is triumphant, but it doesn't sugarcoat or glorify war.)

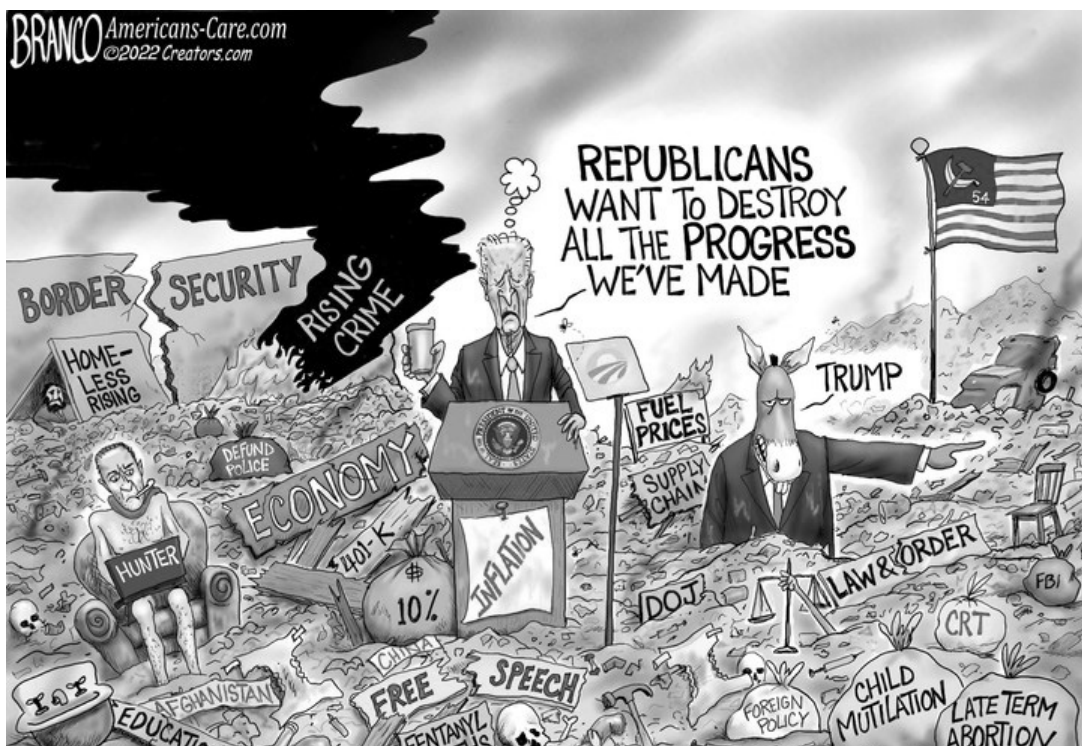

Live gratefully and purposefully
The veterans I've interviewed describe how freedom isn't the right to do whatever you want anytime you want. Rather, freedom is opportunity to do something worthwhile with your life—and this freedom comes with a great price.

In the United States, we are free from tyranny and offered much opportunity. But securing this freedom has never been easy nor cheap.

One of the greatest lessons the next generation can learn is this: If you live in a free country today, you've been given a remarkable gift, one that was bought with a price.

Because of that great price, it's up to you to do something purposeful with your life.

I'm just wondering when "Gender Queer" is going to be included on the Garnett Public Library storyboard walk along the rail trail?

The person who called the Phone Forum this week was wrong. A 'yes' vote on the amendment on the sheriffs in Kansas to preserve the way your sheriff is put into office. For all but one county in Kansas, that means with an election by the voters. A recall by the voters or a case by the attorney general is the only to remove a sheriff other than him losing an election. If you vote 'no' on it, your elected sheriff could eventually be done away with by your county commissioners and then appointed or hired by the county commissioners. The way most counties do it now gives all the voters a say, not just the county commissioners. Thank you.

So Americans can't help but notice the difference. In the Paul Pelosi hammer attack, the assault by the mentally deranged illegal immigrant BLM supporter that's being played by Democrats and their mainstream media lapdogs as an "attack on Democracy" encouraged by MAGA Republicans, the police aren't releasing any videotape of the incident. I seem to recall when Kyle Rittenhouse shot the Antifa and BLM protesters who tried to kill him in the Kenosha "attack on Democracy," there was video all over the Internet within hours. Maybe there will be video of the Pelosi situation after election day?

Hicks, I don't know where you found that picture of Hillary Clinton but it was spot on. About the funniest thing I've seen in your paper in a long time. Thank you.

The fascist Democrat Party is an existential threat to our Democracy, destroying election integrity, weaponizing government agencies against political opponents, turning public education into Democrat Party indoctrination camps, censoring information, planning to pack the supreme court, add phony Democrat states like D.C and abolish the filibuster. Consumer demand for fake meat not very juicy

In early October the news of JBS Foods, the world's largest meat processing company, getting out of the plant-based protein market caught my eye.

This story, reported by The Denver Business News noted that JBS started Planterra about two years ago. Planterra opened a processing facility in Denver, employing approximately 120 people while marketing its brand OZO.

JBS is a smart and well-funded company. They took the route of investing in what was believed to be the biggest challenger to real meat. Many companies in other industries have done the same thing. Shell Oil, for instance, bought a 44 percent interest in US solar firm Silicon Ranch in 2018.

That same year they invested $20 million dollars in an India-based renewable energy company, Husk Power Systems. Large multinational companies, whether publically traded such as Shell, or privately held such as JBS, have the resources to hedge their bets and invest in potential competition. JBS still is invested in plant-based products in both Europe and Brazil. However, JBS made the decision that plant-based protein is not the profitable venture that they first thought it might be in the US.

Other plant-based protein companies are finding out the same thing. Beyond Meat has partnered with McDonald's to create the McPlant burger.

As reported by CNBC in July, McDonald's rolled out the addition to the menu in roughly 600 locations in February. Their study discovered a much lower demand than expected. Though the two companies did sign a three-year commitment to sell McPlant burgers in the European market.

Of the five countries in this test, Beyond Meat reported good sales in only two countries, the UK and Austria. Beyond Meat has seen its stock price go from an opening price on January 3, of $65.68 to a closing price on October 7, of $14.24.

These are only two segments of the story concerning plant-based protein. The fact is that Americans like real meat. While some people will prefer plant-based burgers to real

Just like 2016, Democracy's not on the ballot

Democracy is under threat -- the wrong candidates could win more votes than their opponents in hotly contested free and fair elections.

That's the worry of progressives insisting that "democracy is on the ballot" in the mid-terms.

This trope, repeated endlessly on the center-left, is offered as a reason why voters of conscience should cast aside their other concerns and vote Democrat up and down the ballot.

If this argument seems a touch self-serving -- indeed functionally indistinguishable from run-of-the-mill partisan salesmanship -- it's because it is.

As it happens, there is nothing in the actual behavior of Democrats to suggest that they take their own rhetoric seriously and that they believe "Stop the Steal" stalwarts running, and potentially winning, key races is indeed a national emergency.

If they really thought there were an existential threat to democracy, Democrats would be eager to ally with Republicans who don't deny the 2020 election results. Of course, Democrats are trying to defeat these candidates just as assiduously as the MAGA faithful -- in other words, it's partisanship as usual.

If Democrats believed that the pro-Trump candidates are committed to overturning our system of government, they would try to block them every step of the way. Instead, they have often promoted exactly these candidates in the GOP primaries in the (sometimes flagrantly mistaken) belief that they'd be easier to defeat in the general. One would think a national emergency calls for eschewing cynicism, not engaging in grotesque displays of it.

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

If the norms of our system are at risk, one might also think it'd be important to foster and protect them in every way possible. Not a chance. President Joe Biden was happy to unilaterally create a massive student debt forgiveness program in a shameless exercise in imperial government, and Democrats muse openly about packing the Supreme Court and ending the filibuster to remove inconvenient checks on their power.

If election denial is itself a dire threat, progressives should have made a pariah of Stacey Abrams, who denied her loss in the Georgia gubernatorial election in 2018 and spread misinformation about alleged voter suppression in a state with a model electoral system; to the contrary, they made her a national celebrity and happily repeated her dubious claims.

If the election is about protecting democracy over and above anything else, Democrats should be setting aside all their positions on hot-button issues that make Republicans reluctant to vote for them -- on abortion, climate change, guns, and so on. Naturally, they are more dug in on these issues than ever. If they have to choose between protecting democracy and advancing their pet left-wing causes, the pet left-wing causes win every time.

At the very least, if Democrats fear that MAGA candidates will try to change the 2024 election result in Congress after the fact, they should feel some urgency about passing the Electoral Count Reform Act, which attempts to tighten up the rules to prevent such gamesmanship. Democrats are bragging about passing all sorts of bills this year, yet not the one most relevant to what they say is the foremost issue of our times. Biden is promising if he gets a Democratic Congress again that the first bill he'd pursue is ... a radical pro-abortion law.

In short, democracy is not on the ballot, and not even Democrats are acting like it is. That doesn't mean that the "Stop the Steal" candidates don't present potential problems, or that election denial as such isn't corrosive. But Democrats are fooling themselves if they think they'd accept a clear Trump victory in 2024 as legitimate any more than they did in 2016.

If there were a literal referendum on democracy, it'd pass handily. As it is, though, no one is going to be convinced to vote for down-the-line Biden-supporting progressives, with all their fevered obsessions, because hypocritical, self-interested partisans say it's what we owe to our republic.

I took advantage of a couple nice afternoons and continued my latest project. It really surprises me that I find a variety of items every trip out to this site. Now with the nice rain we got, I've been committed to several projects right here at our house. Especially in those flower beds etc. I'm hoping I'm soon able to accomplish two or three metal detecting projects I've been asked to do.

Picture #1 is a nifty little pocket knife. The screws are rusted and a few spots beginning to show on the blade. I'm sorry but I forgot to research the AMERICAN KNIFE COMPANY.

Picture #2 is a very old harmonica that has really taken its toll, but what a find at this site. It is a IVY HARMONICA.

No. 779 made in Germany. This harmonica dates from the mid 1800's thru 1912. Well over 100 years old. I bet if it could talk, we would hear some very interesting stories.

Picture #3 is my very first coin at this site. As you can see it's taken a beating over the years from corrosion. It's very hard for me to tell if it's from 1883 or 1888. Oh yes, it's known as an Indian Head Penny.

The case against a former Garnett business owner will proceed. Arraigned on two charges of providing steroids - one of the instances allegedly being his teenage son. The former business owner will face at least one felony drug charge and one misdemeanor child endangerment charge, the latter stemming from the allegations that he administered the steroid to his son under the guise of "vitamins."

Bridging the generational information gap, Commissioner Preston Peine has continued to ask for detailed reports on a variety of subjects concerning the city of Garnett. He calls it "the idea of knowledge transfer" and said it's important for younger city employees and commissioners to understand, in detail, all of city operations. With the onset of the retiring Baby Boomer generation, it's possible the city could lose half of its administrators within the next few years. Peine plans to use the information to educate the next generation of city leaders so that Garnett can continue to thrive and grow while paying attention to how the city got to the point it is at. Mayor Greg Gwin said there are benefits to Peine's push to learn more about the city's systems and improve documentation.

causing massive power outages across the state, the final costs to the City of Garnett have been totaled at $67,500. Final paperwork filed with the Federal Emergency Management Agency indicated that total damage costs to the city peaked at $450,000. The federal government and FEMA will pay 75% of the cost share under the disaster policies in place. The Kansas State Government will pay about $45,000 for its 10% share leaving the $67,500 balance on the City's books. Officials on both the city and county level were lauded for their judicious record keeping and efficiency in wading through the sometimes daunting paperwork to account for the costing figures.

County crews lost control of a brush fire near Harris where it damaged a local bridge. The bridge, near the intersection of 2000 and Florida roads, just east of Harris will need to be surveyed for damage before it can be reopened. The incident happened Wednesday when brush crews were burning brush in the creek area nearby and ignited a fire on either side of the bridge. Quick wind changes eventually developed a backdraft and sucked the fire under the bridge from both sides. The testing of the bridge is vital to its safety as heat from the fire may have weakened the concrete sections of the bridge.

Anderson County Farmer Gail Kueser of Garnett was named a 1992 Leader of the Year for the Kansas Farm Bureau during their annual convention last week. Kueser represented the 2nd District in the awards ceremony. Kueser will join the other award winners in a trip to Washington, D.C. in March where they will have the opportunity to visit with members of Congress, U.S Department of Agriculture Officials, and the American Farm Bureau Federation staff.

The Anderson County Commission spent 30 minutes discussing the need for an additional deputy coroner in the county after learning about an incident on Sunday, in which the district coroner couldn't reach the scene until about 12:30 PM, nearly two hours after a fatal fire claimed a Kincaid resident. According to Commissioner Howard Thompson, complaints were heard from the neighboring residents due to the fact that the decedent was not removed from the scene until after the coroner's arrival. Further investigation yielded that the Deputy District Coroner for Anderson County could not be reached, so the District Coroner from Osage City had to be called in for the case. At one point each county had its own coroner. Now each judicial district has a district coroner serving instead of individual counties. Funeral homes cannot remove a decedent from an unattended scene until a coroner has released it.

Garnett Fire Department reported to a fire call at the Anderson County Co-op on East Sixth Avenue. The fire did minimal damage as the large ladder truck was able to extinguish the fire quickly per Fire Chief Gary Benjamin.

The Richmond City Water Treatment Plant are targeted for improvement in the coming spring. Funding is to come from the Small Cities Block Grant combined with the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development for the project. Cities that are to receive the funding will be required to submit full applications to HUD prior to having the funds released. Richmond is slated to receive approximately $300,000, earmarked for use in replacing the current water treatment plant filtering systems. The current water plant filtering system is old and inefficient and plans also include the construction of a new water tower.

'Youth Sunday' at Colony Christian Church Oct. 30

Whenever there is a fifth Sunday in a month, the Colony Christian Church Youth step up to lead the service and it is always encouraging to see these young believers share their faith. As you enter the sanctuary, you are greeted with eye contact by a smiling teenager. Stage fright is overcome as young musicians offer up praise to God, leading the whole congregation in worship.

This Sunday communion meditation was given by Jacob Zimmerman and Col 2:6-23 was read by Abigail Meiwees in preparation for the sermon. The book of James points out that faith without works is dead, which is why 'Youth Sunday' has such an impact in growing the faith of young believers. Our faith grows stronger as we practice what we are taught. We all must have roots that grow down deep in order to build our lives upon the solid foundation of Jesus. It is necessary that our faith be strong so that we are not captured by empty philosophies and high sounding nonsense the culture of the day demands we accept and validate. We face as many ideologies and lies today as the Colossians did when Paul wrote them. In Col 2:16-18 Paul says, "-

So do not let anyone condemn you for...or insist that.....". Instead, know and stand firm in the reality that we were dead in our sins, but Christ makes us alive and forgives all our sins when we believe in Him! Therefore, there is no condemnation for those who belong to Christ Jesus (Rom 8:1). When you are rooted in Christ and built up in Him, your faith will be strong enough to heed Paul's advice to Timothy. Don't let anyone think less of you because you are young (or old, male or female, or for any other reason). Instead, be an example to them by what you say, the way you live, how you love, and the work of your faith through reading the scripture, encouraging believers, and teaching them the truth you have been taught (1 Tim 4:12-13).

Time Change = Different commute this week, warns AAA

WICHITA, Kan. - With the end of Daylight Saving Time, Kansas motorists need to prepare for related changes during their commutes. AAA warns motorists to be prepared for sun glare during their morning commute and for earlier darkness and reduced visibility on the road during their evening commute.

"Ninety percent of drivers' reaction time is dependent upon their vision, which is severely limited at night," said AAA Kansas spokesman Shawn Steward. "Motorists should focus on night driving safety measures the moment the sun sets. It's one of the most challenging times to drive because motorist's eyes are frequently adjusting to the increasing darkness." IMG_0576.JPG

AAA recommends wearing high-quality sunglasses and adjusting the car's sun visors as needed. Late afternoon driving also presents a similar glare problem, so drivers should take the same precautions. Use of the night setting on rearview mirrors can reduce glare from headlights approaching from the rear.

The time change can disturb sleep patterns, and when combined with the earlier dusk and darkness during the evening commute, become a formula for drowsy driving and fatigue-related crashes. Sleep-deprived drivers cause traffic crashes that can lead to death and debilitating injuries on American roadways each year. Research by the AAA Foundation estimates that drowsy driving is a factor in an average of 328,000 crashes annually, including 109,000 crashes that result in injuries and 6,400 fatal crashes.

"While many will enjoy an extra hour of sleep this weekend, few commuters and motorists realize the added dangers that can come as the result of a time change - especially when they are behind the wheel," continued AAA Kansas' Steward. "Although we gain an hour of sleep, our sleep patterns are disrupted. This can result in drowsy driving episodes and it is unsafe to drive when we are feeling sleepy."

Symptoms of drowsy driving can include having trouble keeping eyes open, drifting from lanes or not remembering the last few miles driven. However, more than half of drivers involved in fatigue-related crashes experienced no symptoms before falling asleep behind the wheel.

Motorists are also urged to be more cautious of deer sightings and crashes. November and December are among the most dangerous months of the year for motor vehicle collisions with animals. A collision with a deer or other animal can put a serious dent in your vehicle, if not destroy it completely, and could result in serious injuries or fatalities.

AAA tips for drivers:
•Get plenty of rest before getting behind the wheel of a vehicle. If you do begin to feel drowsy while driving, pull over immediately and rest or call a family member, friend or 911 for assistance.
•Reduce speed and increase following distances
•Turn on your headlights to become more visible during early morning and evening hours.
•Keep vehicle headlights and windows (inside and out) clean.

•Do not use high beams when other cars or pedestrians are around.
•Yield the right of way to pedestrians in crosswalks and do not pass vehicles stopped at crosswalks.

AAA tips for pedestrians and bicyclists:

•Avoid walking in traffic where there are no sidewalks or crosswalks. If you have to walk on a road that does not have sidewalks, walk facing traffic.

•Evaluate the distance and speed of oncoming traffic before you step out into the street.

•Wear bright colors or reflective clothing if you are walking or biking near traffic at night.

•Carry a flashlight when walking in the dark.

•Avoid distracted walking. This includes looking at your phone or listening to music. If you must listen to music, make sure it is at a low volume so you can hear danger approaching. Bicycle lights are a 'must have' item for safe night riding, especially during the winter months when it gets dark earlier.

AAA tips to help prevent a crash or to reduce damage from an animal collision •Pay attention to road signs. Yellow, diamond-shaped signs with an image of a deer indicate areas with high levels of deer activity.

•Keep your eyes moving back and forth. Continuously sweep your eyes across the road in front of you for signs of animals and movement. Animals may also be alongside the road, so make sure to look to the right and left, as well. While the most likely crash is you hitting an animal, on occasion they might also hit you by running into the side of your car.

•Be especially attentive in early morning and evening hours. Many animals, especially deer, are most active from 5-8 a.m. and 5-8 p.m. - prime commuting times for many people.

•Use high beams when there's no oncoming traffic. You can spot animals sooner. Sometimes the light reflecting off their eyes will reveal their location.

•Slow down, and watch for other deer to appear. Deer rarely travel alone, so if you see one, there are likely to be more nearby.

•Slow down around curves. It's harder to spot animals when going around curves.

•One long blast. A long blast on your horn may frighten animals away from your vehicle.

•Resist the urge to swerve: Instead, stay in your lane with both hands firmly on the wheel. Swerving away from animals can confuse them so they don't know which way to run. It can also put you in the path of oncoming vehicles or cause you to crash into something like a lamppost or a tree. If the crash is imminent take your foot off the brake: during hard braking the front end of your vehicle is pulled downward which can cause the animal to travel up over the hood towards your windshield. Letting off the brake can protect drivers from windshield strikes because the animal is more likely to be pushed to one side of the vehicle or over the top of the vehicle.

•Always wear a seatbelt. The chances of getting injured when hitting an animal are much higher if you don't have your seatbelt on.

ACHS presents Singin' in the Rain Jr., Nov 11 & 12

Anderson County High School's Drama and Music Departments are proud to present the beloved classic Singin' in the Rain Jr. with songs by Nacio Herb Brown & Arthur Freed, book by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. Performances will be held at Anderson County High School located at 1100 W. Highway 31 in Garnett.

Singin' in the Rain Jr. will run Friday, November 11 at 7:00 PM and Saturday, November 12 at 7:00 PM. Tickets are $5.00 for adults and $3.00 for students.

The "Greatest Movie Musical of All Time" is faithfully and lovingly adapted by Broadway legends Betty Comden and Adolph Green, from their original award-winning screenplay in Singin' in the Rain JR. Hilarious situations, snappy dialogue and a hit-parade score of Hollywood standards make Singin' in the Rain JR. a guaranteed good time for audience members.

Singin' in the Rain Jr. has all the makings of a Tinseltown tabloid headline — the starlet, the leading man and a love affair that could change lives and make or break careers! In silent movies, Don Lockwood (Gabe Wight) and Lina Lamont (Bailey Clawsen) are a hot item, but behind the scenes, things aren't always as they appear on the big screen! Meanwhile, Lina's squeaky voice might be the end of her career in "talking pictures" without the help of a talented young actress (Ella Reichard) to do the talking and singing for her.

Guaranteed to make you laugh, smile, and occasionally dance in your seats, this 30+ cast show will make your evening much more enjoyable. Come watch and be part of the fun!

Two Southeast Kansas women sentenced, ordered to pay restitution to Kansas Medicaid program

PARSONS - Two southeast Kansas women have been sentenced and ordered to pay restitution for their convictions for crimes against the Kansas Medicaid program, Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt said today.
Lavanda E. Duncan, 55, of Parsons, was sentenced yesterday in Labette County District Court by Judge Steve A. Stockard on one felony count of attempted making a false claim, statement or representation to the Medicaid program. Duncan was sentenced to pay $2,547.16 in restitution to the Kansas Medicaid program, and to serve 12 months of supervised probation. Duncan pleaded guilty to the charge on September 7, 2022.

An investigation found that Duncan, a Medicaid beneficiary, attempted to falsely bill the Medicaid program on behalf of her three sons who served as her personal care attendants. An investigation determined that Duncan attempted to receive payment on their behalf while her sons were incarcerated in the Labette County jail and not able to provide care.
The case was part of "Operation Keeping Them Honest," a cooperative effort between the attorney general's office and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services/Office of Inspector General to investigate fraudulent billing to Medicaid for personal care services provided in Medicaid beneficiaries' homes. This sentencing brings to a close the latest case in this joint effort to crack down on those who take advantage of these federal- and state-administered healthcare programs.

Other investigations are ongoing. The cases are being jointly investigated by federal and state authorities and prosecuted by the attorney general's Medicaid Fraud and Abuse Division. Senior Assistant Attorney General Eve Kemple of Schmidt's office prosecuted the case against Duncan.
In a second, unrelated case, Lacianna Morris, 32, of Parsons, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Stockard to pay $9,452.60 in restitution, to serve 18 months supervised probation with community corrections, and attend in-patient substance abuse treatment. She pleaded guilty on August 18, 2022, to one felony count of making a false claim to the Kansas Medicaid program and one count of forgery.

Investigators determined that Morris was working as a personal care attendant for her mother, a Medicaid beneficiary. While her mother was incarcerated, Morris submitted time sheets for payment from the Medicaid program as if she was providing care for her mother at the time.
The case was also prosecuted by Kemple of Schmidt's office.

THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW 11-8-2022 / SUBMITTED

The first annual Garnett Zombie Walk on Saturday, October 22nd, was an overwhelming success. Pictured above is Kathryn Chambers, who took her turn at one of the many booths set up on the downtown square. Activities for the day included the 5K walk-run, face painting, games, craft vendors, food and fun. Proceeds for the day went to the local Cub Scouts, which amounted to $947. Organizers would like to thank everyone from the participants, vendors, food vendors, volunteers, the county for the use of the square, the city for allowing the 5K to be run on the streets, the city crew for cones, barriers and barrels and to all the sponsors. Thanks also go out to the Anderson County Art Club which provided the awesome children games, the recreation center for providing Nerf guns and ammo, Lynn Wilson for mapping out the race, and to The Trail and Friendly Fire for their musical performance.

The Sound of Rain

Kim Baldwin, McPherson County farmer and rancher

There's something to be said about waking up to the sound of rain on a roof and thunder rumbling in the distance. Add in a dash of lightning momentarily highlighting an otherwise dark sky, and we have the start of a glorious fall day!

It's no secret I prefer the warm sunlight to awaken me from my slumber. But, after experiencing an incredibly hot and dry year that undoubtedly impacted our crops and attitudes, I jumped out of bed before my alarm clock went off to start my day. After all, it was raining, and it would continue to rain for the duration of the day.

It was a cold and dark morning, which required wool socks and warm coffee as we got the kids moving and prepared for school. Generally, I'm not a fan of feeling cold in the morning, but I threw on a sweatshirt and happily packed the kids' lunches and then gleefully made their breakfasts because it was raining and it would continue to rain for the remainder of the day.

After getting the kids on the bus, my husband and I decided to make a trip into town to enjoy a warm breakfast together at our local cafe. It's a tradition we haven't practiced in a while but enjoy whenever there is a morning rain.

I quickly put my hair up in a ponytail while walking out the door and cheerfully accepted that I'd probably have a bad hair day. But that didn't matter. It was raining and it would continue to rain for the rest of the day.

Oh, how this morning rain was perfectly timed! After all, we had just wrapped up our fall harvest the day before feeling tired and deflated knowing it wasn't the greatest of harvests. We gave thanks at the dinner table for the harvest we did have, asked for the rain forecast to hold, and then went to bed.

And in the cold and dark early hours of the morning, the rain indeed arrived. And it remained a steady presence for the rest of the day and into the evening.

The sun remained hidden behind the clouds and the temperature required me to keep my wool socks and sweater on all day. We enjoyed warm soup for lunch and office work that had been neglected because we haven't had an opportunity to break from fall harvest.

To others it was probably an otherwise no good, dreary and drab November day. A day that one would prefer to avoid for the sake of comfort, morale, or even style.

But for me, it turned out to be a glorious fall day! All because I awoke to the sound of rain.

Keep safety in mind when donating food

By Pat Melgares, K-State Research and Extension news service

MANHATTAN, Kan. - A Kansas State University food safety specialist says giving to food pantries, food banks or soup kitchens this time of year is appreciated, but the generosity needs to be accompanied by the gift of safety and health.

Londa Nwadike, who holds dual extension appointments with K-State and the University of Missouri, urged people to think about who will eventually receive the donated items.

"We need to think ahead of time about their nutritional needs and that the food is available to them in a way that is safe and of high quality," Nwadike said. "And that it is something that they will be happy to bring home to their families."

She urges consumers to check expiration dates prior to donating food: "Those dates can be confusing, but when we're donating food, we want to be sure the product is not past the 'best by' or 'used by' date."

According to Nwadike, infant formula product dating is regulated at the federal level, but many states - Kansas included - does not regulate other food product dating. "So, food pantries actually can put foods out after the (expiration) date if they choose to; it's okay from a regulatory perspective, and the food still may be safe," she said.

Some warning signs that a food may not be safe to eat include a can that is dented or bulging, or perhaps not intact.

"Overall, it's better not to provide canned foods that are dented," Nwadike said. "Bulging is a bad sign; do not donate those. Or, if it's rusty, that's also another bad sign."

Nwadike also discourages people from donating home-preserved foods and repackaged foods. "We just don't know what has happened from the time the food was removed from its original package and put into a smaller bag," she said. "We don't know how it was handled or if something was introduced to the original food."

As a guideline, Nwadike suggests donating shelf-stable, non-perishable goods, which not only last longer, but don't require equipment by the pantry to handle.

"Things like produce are great and people need to eat more fresh produce," Nwadike said. "But if you want to donate fresh produce to your local food bank, check with them ahead of time to make sure they are willing to accept it and can give it the care it needs to get to the final user safely and in the most nutritious way possible."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Center for Nutrition Policy and Promotion publishes a nutrition guide known as MyPlate, which can be an aid in donating healthy foods. MyPlate suggests a diet consisting of fruits, grains, vegetables and proteins.

"A can of green beans is great to donate; also think about a can of tuna packed in water, grains (such as brown rice or crackers) and evaporated milk (including non-fat dry milk)," Nwadike said.

Peanut butter is a popular protein to donate, but some people are allergic to peanuts. Nwadike said sunflower butter is a non-allergenic option. Also, she notes, consider gluten-free options.

Aside from food, Nwadike said food banks and pantries also accept donations of time and money. "If you provide cash," she said, "they are able to buy items in bulk and plan for them."

Nwadike has published a fact sheet - titled Donating Safe and Nutritious Food to Food Pantries and Soup Kitchens - that is available online.

Prepare in advance to keep holiday meals safe

By Maddy Rohr, K-State Research and Extension news service

MANHATTAN, Kan. - It is almost time for turkey, but preparing for the food-filled season should start early, says Kansas State University food scientist Karen Blakeslee.

Top of the list: Blakeslee says a safe feast starts with properly thawing and cooking meats as well as safely using kitchen tools.

Fried turkey has become popular. If considering this cooking method, Blakeslee suggests purchasing a fresh turkey 1-2 days before you plan to fry it, then refrigerating it.

She said it takes at least 24 hours to thaw 4-5 pounds of frozen turkey in the refrigerator before starting the cooking process. Plan an extra 24 hours to be sure it is completely thawed. Leave the turkey in the wrapping and place on a tray to catch any drips from thawing. For frying, it must be completely thawed to prevent hot oil splattering. Blakeslee also recommends testing that the turkey fits in the fryer and adding water to cover the turkey. If the bird is too big, cut it into smaller pieces.

To begin frying, heat oil to 350 degrees Fahrenheit and continuously monitor the oil's temperature with a thermometer. Plan to fry the turkey 3-5 minutes per pound.

Remove the turkey from the oil for about 20 minutes before carving.

"Use a food thermometer to ensure it is cooked to an internal temperature of 165 degrees F," Blakeslee said.

She said the internal temperature of the turkey should be measured in the innermost part of the thigh and wing and the thickest part of the breast. For reasons of personal preference, consumers may choose to cook poultry to higher temperatures.

Common food safety issues when preparing a turkey include not washing hands properly; not thawing the frozen turkey in a safe manner (such as on the counter at room temperature); rinsing the turkey with water before cooking (leading to cross-contamination); and letting cooked turkey set for more than two hours at room temperature.

A simpler cooking method commonly used for cooking more than one turkey is roasting them in the oven.

"Cooking two turkeys of about the same weight does not double the roasting time," Blakeslee said, who urges consumers to ensure there is enough oven space for proper heat circulation, and to measure the internal temperature of the turkey before consuming it.
