Arraignment set for August 14 in equipment thefts

Seven of nine charges upheld after preliminary hearing reviews case

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - A Garnett man will be arraigned on seven felony theft charges August 14, after a day-long preliminary hearing Tuesday in a farm equipment theft case rooted in incidents the prosecution says date back more than four years.

Marvin Slyter, 59, was bound over on seven of nine initial felony theft charges in connection with the incidents, after District Magistrate Judge Kevin Kimball threw out two counts due to lack of establishment of prior location of two stolen items.

Officers recovered numerous pieces of stolen equipment at Slyter's farm and at his brother Greg Slyter's property in November 2019. Local law enforcement spent the next two years investigating the case and tracking down owners of the various equipment, some of which had altered vehicle identification numbers and other identifying marks. Slyter was finally charged in May 2022.

Anderson County Attorney Elizabeth Oliver called some 30 witnesses to testify concerning the stolen equipment, in a proceeding which blocked out most of the court's day on Tuesday.

Victims included in the initial charges included private

Opening conference set in child exploitation case

Status hearing with prosecutor, defense, judge starts process

BY DANE HICKS THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT - Prosecutors and defense lawyers will confer next week in the first of what will likely be a series of status hearings enroute to a preliminary hearing for a Garnett man accused of 18 counts of sexual exploitation of a child.

Thirty-four year-old Evan Ladewig was arrested and charged in late May after local law enforcement received a tip from Wichita police after that agency was contacted by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. NCMEC had been contacted by cloud Internet storage service Synchronoss Technologies which identified Ladewig's telephone number as the origination point for an upload of child pornography photos to the service. Ladewig was later apprehended in Garnett.

Synchronoss has actively referred other such material uploads to authorities in various locations across the United States.

Ladewig had a first appearance in Anderson County District Court on May 30.

Status conferences provide an opportunity for the court to be updated on and manage a case as both the prosecution and defense prepare to meet in court. Those conferences are pointed toward a preliminary hearing in which the court hears evidence from both sides in order to determine if enough evidence exists to pur-

God loves you, you matter to Him

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

BY DAVID BILDERBACK

In Romans 8:38-39 the Apostle Paul provides us some comforting words when he says, "For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels or demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any power, neither height or depth, nor anything else in all creation will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord." This is an all inclusive statement if we accept it. However if we don't accept it there are some choices we can make that have the potential to nullify God's love as it is expressed toward us. The following are self-induced choices that can nullify the love of God toward us.

1. Rebellion-Don't accept it into your heart, justify it or allow it to gain momentum in your life.

2. Self-righteousness-The righteousness Jesus earned by his sinless life here on earth allows us to stand before God without guilt, fear or shame. Isaiah tells us in Isa. 64:6 "all our righteous acts are like filthy rags."

3. Worshiping other gods-no matter what they may be, placing our worship of anything ahead of our worship for God violates the first two commandments.

4. Pursing evil-Everyone knows the difference between right and wrong. Do not choose to do evil.

We are plagued by the above choices because we always choose to do what our heart desires. That is why there is no lasting conversion for anyone who has not repented of their sins and received Jesus Christ as their Savior. God does not desire to diminish our life. We do that ourselves by choosing to participate in these self-induced life styles. In an effort to be in complete control of our own life we actually subject ourselves to a type of slavery or control these choices bring to our lives. If you are held captive by one or more of these choices remember God loves you, you matter to him, trust his love for you and begin a relationship with Jesus Christ today.

leagues from the Sunflower State Jake LaTurner, Tracey Mann and Ron Estes, who all supported the bill.

It was the second time since early July Davids voted against a military funding bill which contained provisions prohibiting those funds from being used for service personnel abortions or for sex change operations. Davids did not answer an email request for comment regarding her vote, but she also voted against The National Defense Authorization Act earlier in July, an $886.3 billion appropriation which set policy and funding for the Defense Department and passed on a similar party line vote, which also carried prohibitions against payment from the appropriation for abortions and sex change procedures.

The recent bill, HR 4366, included $317.4 billion for the DOD in Military Construction and Family Housing, Department of Veterans Affairs and related agencies. Of the total, $155.701 billion is provided as discretionary funding, and $161.740 billion is provided for mandatory programs. Of the discretionary total, $17.474 billion is for Department of Defense military construction projects, nearly $800 million above the President's Budget Request. The bill also fully funds the Department of Veterans Affairs for Fiscal Year 2024 by appropriating $137.755 billion in discretionary funding in addition to the $20.268 billion included in the Fiscal Responsibility Act of 2023 for the Cost of War Toxic Exposures Fund. It also includes a total of $471.7 million for the four related agencies

Specifically, the bill forbids the utilization of any of the funds for an abortion unless in a case of rape or incest or in which not aborting the child would cost the life of the mother.

Biden is coming for your air conditioner

We have seen a big consumer backlash in 2023 over Biden administration bureaucrats targeting gas stoves, but that could pale in comparison to the coming anger over costly air conditioning regulations.

In fact, that has already begun, making this unusually hot summer even more unpleasant for homeowners needing air conditioner repairs. And things could get downright ugly starting next summer.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) just announced a 40% production cut in 2024 for hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs), the widely used class of refrigerants being targeted for their claimed contribution to climate change. As it is, the modest 10% cut in force today has already caused many HFCs to triple in price, including HFC-410a which is used in most home air conditioners.

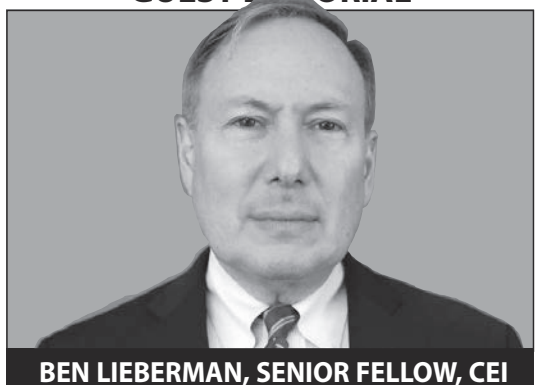

As a result, replacing refrigerant lost from a leak has cost millions of homeowners at least $150-$200 more than it used to. But next summer, stricter production quotas will be in effect, likely sending refrigerant costs through the roof — and repair costs with them.

EPA regulators are targeting new systems too. A pending rule would outlaw all but the most climate-friendly, new central air-conditioners by 2025. Doing so is strongly supported by the air conditioning equipment makers who see an opportunity to skew the market towards their pricier models.

It would be bad enough if EPA were the only federal agency that has it in for affordable air conditioning, but the Department of Energy (DOE) is just as bad. DOE has a track record for concocting energy efficiency regulations for air conditioners and other appliances that boost a homeowner's up-front cost so much that it may never get earned back in the form of energy savings.

Perhaps the worst of them, created at the end of the Obama administration and taking effect on January 1 of this year, has caused prices for new central air conditioning systems to spike by up to $1,000, according to several installers. And the agency is already in the early stages of devising an even tougher rule. Separate rulemakings also target window unit air conditioners and other categories of cooling systems.

BEN LIEBERMAN, SENIOR FELLOW, CEI

What explains the anti-homeowner tilt? Like much of the nonsense coming from Washington these days, it's based on the Energy Department's "need to confront the global climate crisis."

Indeed, beyond air conditioners and stoves, Biden's regulators are going after furnaces, incandescent light bulbs, washing machines, refrigerators, dishwashers, ceiling fans, water heaters and other home appliances.

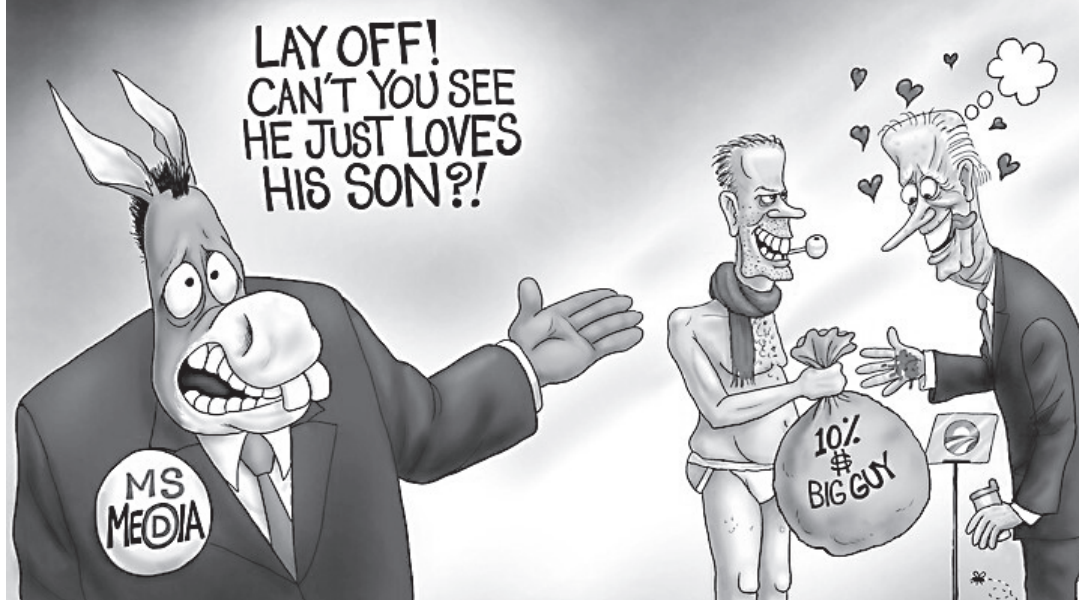

Hardly any room in your house will be spared, and each proposed new regulation asserts that the climate-related benefits help justify the extra cost. All of this meddling is bad news for consumers, but the measures targeting air conditioners will likely prove to be the worst of the bunch.

The one-two punch of both EPA and DOE aiming their red tape at air conditioners has already boosted the cost of staying cool this summer, and starting next year the homeowner pain could be every bit as unbearable as the heat.

— Ben Lieberman is a senior fellow specializing in environmental policy at the Washington, D.C.-based libertarian think tank the Competitive Enterprise Institute, and a former senior counsel on the U.S. House Committee on Energy and Commerce.

I figured it out. The aliens dropped the white house coke baggie, Biden's dog got into it that's why he started biting the (deleted) out of the staff just like Cocaine Bear. That's why the Secret Service can't say anything about it.

I have noticed something with older men around here and that means that the younger men are watching so it's going to happen with them too, when they're walking with their girlfriend or spouse or significant other, they don't walk with them they walk ahead of them, they don't hold their hand, they don't open the car door for them. They act like they're not even around. I think you all need to work on that.

Is anybody else dealing with things when you go to the doctor for a visit and you they're discussing something and then you bring up something else and they automatically say you'll have to make an appointment for that. Well, I'm there, why can't you just see me now? Why can't you just see me about it now? No, I have to inconvenience myself and pay another copay to come and ask you the same question I could ask you now. I don't understand why doctors have to be this way. If it's not because of the doctors and it's the system, I think Garnett needs a new system.

The all gender restrooms at the new (business name deleted) two restrooms and both of them are all gender restrooms. I have children, how in the world am I supposed to know which restroom to take them? I don't want to take my little girls into a restroom where a dude has been. Therefore I am banning and boycotting the new (business name deleted) as long as they're doing this and I encourage other people to join me because we don't want that kind of stuff in our town and if we don't take a stand against it our children are the ones that are going to have to deal with it. Until they can figure out there are two genders and you assign a restroom for each one, they will not have my business.

I'm just wondering why some out of town auction service is allowed to put signage in the public road right of way? I was always told that was violating state law and also city law on the city streets. Can't have anything in those ride-of-ways. But apparently we can have an out-of-town auction sign there. Thank

Just a quick line to Mesha Mainor: Take your rappers and flush them down the crappers. Thank you.

Garnett's going to make the sporting event of the year. You get more bites at a certain nursing home then you get anywhere going to the lake fishing.

Does everyone remember about a month ago the front page picture of the cornfield quoting an ag analyst who said 80% of the state's corn was fair to excellent? I wonder if that piece of work has put their box of donuts down long enough to step out of their air conditioned office to look outside? All of us farmers are waiting with anticipation for a picture in the soybean fields and analysis from this person so we know how our soybeans are doing right now in this desert. Why won't Laura Kelly give us back any of our money?

Kansas expected to end the fiscal year recently with something like $4.2 billion knocking around the treasury. That's a travesty.

But because of partisan bickering at the Statehouse, the governor and legislators could never agree on a package of tax cuts, which should have been their top priority this year. Politics and philosophy got in the way.

Republicans who control the Legislature wanted a "flat tax," 5.15 percent on all income above about $25,000. They passed a bill implementing that rate and system, but the governor vetoed it. Democrats claimed it gave too much benefit to "the rich."

In fact, according to recent news stories, the bulk of benefits would have gone to the top 2 percent of taxpayers, 38 percent of the cuts. However, the top 2 percent now pays 30 percent of state income taxes and that share would have dropped to 29 percent. They still would have paid a lot.

GUEST COMMENTARY

STEVE HAYNES, Haynes Publishing Co.

It's hard to see where the rich would have gotten off free, but many people believe in soaking the rich. Their average cut would have been nearly $3,100 a year.

Meantime, the lowest tax bracket, those making between $25,000 and $50,000, would have saved $65. But they don't pay much income tax as is.

Gov. Laura Kelly likened the Republican-passed plan to "former Gov. Sam Brownback's failed tax experiment." How long will Republicans be tarred with that brush? Get over it.

She preferred a one-time "refund" biased toward the low end and an early end to the sales tax on food, something that already had been agreed to. Accelerating the implementation by a year hardly qualifies as a major tax cut. Basically, she wanted to keep her hands on this revenue.

Perhaps the GOP plan could have been better constructed, but it was, to be fair, only a moderate tax cut, estimated at $318 million a year. Compared to the state's surplus and reserves, that's minimal.

Government exists to serve the taxpayers and perform needed functions, such as transportation, law enforcement and the like, not to build a big bank account. It is our money, after all, not the state's. Huge state surpluses are not defensible.

A properly constructed flat tax, exempting most low-income Kansans, would be more fair than the current progressive scheme, where only a few pay a much higher rate. Taxpayers are getting soaked when the state takes in far more than it needs.

With an estimated $1.6 billion in a "rainy day" fund and as much as $3.6 billion beyond that, Kansas needs to cut taxes. That should have been a priority for both parties; surely an agreement could have been reached.

We deserve better, and ought to tell everyone in Topeka this is a poor performance.

— Steve Haynes is the former president of Nor'West Newspapers in Oberlin, Kansas, and former president of the Kansas Press Association.

Trump and those that hate him both want his nomination

There's being fortunate in your enemies, and then there's having enemies who are helping you take the first step in your political comeback.

Donald Trump and his adversaries want profoundly different things in the long run -- Trump wants to be back in the White House; Democrats want him in an orange jumpsuit.

Yet, in the shorter term, they both are seeking the same thing -- Trump as the Republican nominee, either so he can sweep to victory (Trump's view) or be beaten again and held to account for his crimes (the Democrats' view).

The serial indictments of Trump, even if it's not their primary purpose, advance this mutual interest. With every indictment, Trump dominates media attention and rallies Republicans to his side based on charges of selective prosecution.

The routine is so predictable, it's become boring. The first indictment of a former president had some novelty, but now it feels as commonplace as a pork chop on a stick at the Iowa State Fair.

The pushback against the notion that Trump's prosecutorial pursuers know that they might as well be 'MAGA' agents is that it's too clever by half, that Trump has these legal vulnerabilities and is simply paying the price. No theories about underhanded political motivation are necessary.

It's certainly true that Trump had major exposure in the documents case, but the Alvin Bragg indictment is gossamer-thin, and we don't know yet what Special Counsel Jack Smith has next or what District Attorney Fani Willis is working with in Fulton County, Georgia.

Consider this thought experiment: If the

NATIONAL COMMENTARY

RICH LOWRY, King Features Syndicate

Justice Department and the other prosecutors knew that the indictments guaranteed a Ron DeSantis or Tim Scott nomination, would they still go through with them? If they thought they made Trump a stronger general election candidate and the favorite to beat Joe Biden, would they still pull the trigger? Or would they find some reason for forbearance when there's plenty to be said for forbearance in the first place?

It doesn't require a fine-grained understanding of Republican politics to grasp what's going on. Certainly, after the passionately pro-Trump GOP reaction to the Mar-a-Lago search, it was obvious that targeting Trump would benefit him. If there were any doubt, the Trump surge in the polls after the Bragg indictment should have removed it.

Still, Trump's pursuers have persisted.

For Trump, the Leninist logic of the worse, the better applies -- the more he's indicted and the weaker the cases, the more Republicans are inclined to believe he's the victim of a politicized justice system.

For Trump's adversaries, meanwhile, quantity trumps quality; everyone gets a piece of the action, and it increases the odds that a trial or two happens before the November 2024 election.

If the indictments boost Trump in the primaries, they hurt him in the general, and trials and guilty verdicts would presumably wound him even more.

Again, if Trump's prosecutors believed that rushing to trial would somehow boost Trump against Biden, it's hard to see them being so desperate to get him in courtrooms as soon as possible.

Of course, Trump doesn't like getting indicted more than anyone else. His denunciations of "these vicious Communists, Marxists, Fascists, and Radical Left Democrats," "THESE LUNATICS AND THUGS" who are out to get him are wholly sincere. But without the vicious Communists et al., he might well be 10 points lower in the polls, and anything that makes the primary race look more competitive is bad for him.

The legal handiwork of the "LUNATICS AND THUGS" is one of the former president's most valuable political assets.

Trump and his enemies may despise one other, but they are working toward the same immediate outcome, i.e., a high-stakes, hate-filled, Third World-ish Trump-Biden rematch with the possibility of jail for one of the contenders if he loses and intense prosecutorial scrutiny for the other if he comes up short.

And everything so far indicates that they're going to get it.

Evidence of fire at cabin site

This week's photos are of artifacts found at the old cabin site. (MN) I'm just now beginning to excavate the area where the cabin once sat. There is lots of evidence that some of the cabin was burned. In areas I dig thru there are lots of charcoal and even some unburned wood.

I haven't fully made up my mind, but I think I will take a week off and not risk the extreme heat.

MARKET..

Farmers markets are essential to the life and livelihood of millions of shoppers and tens of thousands of farmers across the United States. Farmers markets take planning, organization, and execution of dedicated individuals and community organizations. That work is harder than ever and farmers markets and the vendors who sell at them need all the support they can get.

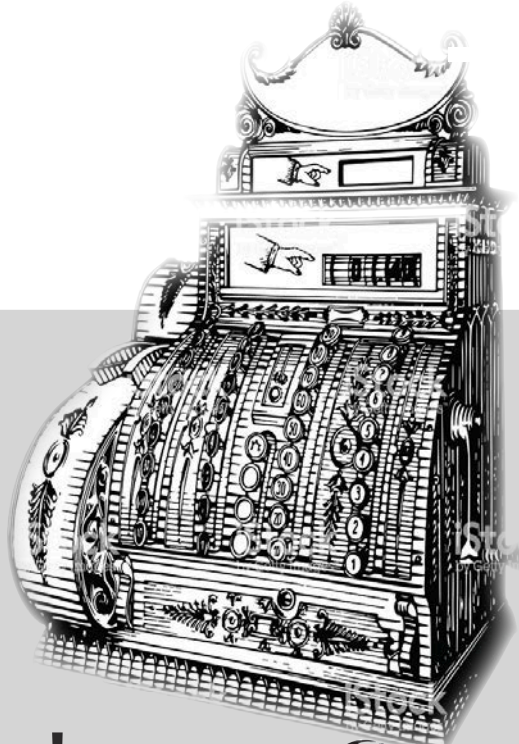

The Garnett Chamber of Commerce is proud to be a part of the Garnett Farmers Market. "It is our hope that through our efforts we can encourage these vendors to have pop-up events, such as during the holidays, and continue to support these agri-businesses to jump into a brick-and-mortar business", says Helen Norman, Chamber board member.

The Garnett Farmers' Market invites vendors and food trucks to join the market, held every Thursday evening on Main Street, between 4th and 5th Avenues, from 4:30 to 7:00 p.m. Farmers' Market Season is held annually from the first Thursday in May through the second week in October.

For more information about the Garnett Farmers' Market and how to participate, please visit: www.facebook.com/garnettfarmersmarket on Facebook or contact Rosanne Bauman (785)304-5257.

Agriculture around the world

Glenn Brunkow, Pottawatomie County farmer and rancher

This week I will embark on one of the greatest adventures I will probably ever have in my life. I will be traveling with Kansas Farm Bureau's Casten Fellows to Uganda and Tanzania. To say I am excited would be an understatement. To also say that I am a bit apprehensive and even more nervous would also be correct. All I know for sure is this will change my perspective on the world.

Personally, I like to look for challenges or experiences that will help me grow and will stretch my view of the world. This trip should certainly do that. All I know is my own little corner of Kansas. I have been lucky enough to experience other parts of the state and the United States, and that has helped me as a person. My view of the world has changed from those experiences. I can only imagine how it will change from what will happen over the next two weeks.

I hope to pick up some ideas that will help me when I get back. I am also hopeful this trip will allow me to appreciate the blessings I have been given and, I am sure, take for granted. I also hope this trip will give me greater insight about how important the work we do on our farms and ranches is.

I hope I come home with a greater appreciation for the good work we do in Kansas Farm Bureau and in agriculture in general. I am sure most, if not all, of you feel like I do, and it is our responsibility to produce as much food and fiber as we can for a world that is in desperate need of it. I am proud of what we do, and I am proud and humbled to represent that to other nations. I also realize I do not understand other parts of the world like I should, and I hope to gain insight through the next two weeks.

This is another example of some of the opportunities I have had through Kansas Farm Bureau and an example of experiences any of you who are members could have, too. My understanding of agriculture in Kansas and the United States has grown exponentially because of these experiences and soon my global understanding will be greater also. I am telling you about this to encourage each of you to take advantage of the opportunities and expand your understanding of agriculture.

Am I nervous about the unknown of this trip? You bet I am. Am I a little worried about home and what might happen while I am gone? Without a doubt. Those are just part of the experience. The hardest part of any Farm Bureau trip is when the mailbox is still in the rearview mirror. I promise to write more about the trip in this space, but I hope this will inspire at least a few of you to take advantage of opportunities available to stretch your understanding of agriculture.

"Insight" is a weekly column published by Kansas Farm Bureau, the state's largest farm organization whose mission is to strengthen agriculture and the lives of Kansans through advocacy, education and service.

Presentation Explores the history of Letter-Writing

The Garnett Public Library will host "You've Got Mail: Exploring Letter-Writing Through Time," a presentation and discussion by Celia Daniels on Wednesday, August 9th at 10AM in the Archer Room at the library. Members of the community are invited to attend the free program. Contact the library at 785-448-3388 for more information. The program is made possible by Humanities Kansas.

Daniels

At one time, daily letter-writing bound us together. Today, ubiquitous emails, texts, and social media messages challenge this time-honored tradition. This talk weaves together a historical look at letter-writing from the pharaohs of Ancient Egypt and historical figures like Abigail Adams and Jane Austen to the intimate, everyday shared experiences between sweethearts, friends, and family members. Is letter-writing a tradition lost? Or will a renewed interest take hold again?

Celia is an independent museum consultant specializing in ethnographic collections. "You've Got Mail: Exploring Letter-Writing Through Time" is part of Humanities Kansas's Speakers Bureau, featuring humanities-based presentations designed to share stories that inspire, spark conversations that inform, and generate insights that strengthen civic engagement.

I like to go to school
 And we have to learn some rules,
 I learn a lot every day,
 and we have some time to play.

Math is my favorite book to do
 And I like history too,
 In math we learn many a number
 So we know how to measure lumber.

History is the second best
 And it is not a pest,
 I always have liked to learn
 Science is more about a fern.

Pen time is about being neat
 And I have to sit in my seat,
 In English I learn about verbs and nouns
 So I know about many different towns.

In spelling we have to learn
 some letters

And we make our score better,
 Sometimes it is kind of fun
 And I like to be done.

In recess we play Capture the Flag
 And sometime we play Help Tag,
 In the summer we play softball
 And we do not want to fall.

Peep-Around-The-Corner is another game we play
 And we played it just today,
 I think school's very fun
 And I can see the sun.

In reading we learn to read
 And we can help others in need,
 In health we learn how to eat
 And we learn not to cheat.
